When asked, he said there is a vast majority asking for peace and resolution of the dispute and this vast majority should ignore the hawkish minority. "We will be meeting on the sidelines in the United Nations this September, though we have achieved a substantive progress at Agra and it is not relevant from where we pick up the thread." he said.

The President said if India has certain compulsions not to discuss the Kashmir dispute, Pakistan has certain national compulsions ‘to take the Kashmir dispute first’. "The time for wars has gone, as both are, nuclear powers and I being a soldier I know the results of wars, though Pakistan is certainly against those trying to disturb peace."

NO CROSS-BORDER TERRORISM

In unequivocal terms, he said there is no cross border and cross LOC terrorism, though the Kashmir freedom movement has been going on for over a decade. "We regret and deplore any kind of terrorism anywhere in the world."

To a question, he said Pakistani and Indian leadership are mature enough to sort out the issues and if they cannot then the question of third party mediation arises. "The meaning of peace is much better understood by a soldier than those who have not fought a war," he said.

He added: "The Simla Agreement was signed for 90,000 POWs and the word Kashmir was mentioned once in the Lahore Declaration, as our politicians did not dare to speak on it and they failed miserably in projecting this core issue."

President Musharraf said when Mr. Vajpayee and Mr. Jaswant Singh visit Pakistan the process will move forward, as he expressed his optimism and appealed to all to strengthen the hands of moderates in both the countries.

He told a questioner that the US administration did not pressurize for talks but it encourages both the sides for holding talks. "Justice must prevail," he emphasised, adding that there is no need for preparations.

GRATITUDE EXPRESSED

Despite provocative questions. Gen Musharraf did not speak a word about the internal affairs of the Indian administration, and expressed his gratitude for the Indian people, the government and others. He said the chairs were placed for signing the Agra Declaration on July 16 afternoon and he was scheduled to proceed to Ajmer Sharif but something went wrong and the Indians did not agree to sign the mutually-agreed declaration.

President Musharraf said he did not salute Mr. Vajpayee when he arrived on a bus at Wagah because it did not look nice to see all the Services chiefs among the political workers who would push them here and there. "So I went to the Prime Minister and told him that the Service chiefs would be present at Governor’s House when Mr. Vajpayee went there in a helicopter. There I was the first to salute him," he explained further: "What is a salute; it is just welcoming a guest."

President Musharraf said he was very much interested in addressing a Press conference at Agra but did not admit that the Indians blocked it. He expressed his complete dismay over those Pakistanis who speak against Pakistan elsewhere.
1557. Press Release issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs reacting to reports on the failure of the Agra Summit.

Islamabad, August 7, 2001.

Since the Agra Summit, a number of statements have emanated from India, including at the highest level, that present a distorted picture of negotiations held at Agra and contain remarks which are in poor taste.

The Government of Pakistan believes that misrepresentations and gratuitous observations can neither alter facts nor serve to promote the cause of normalization of relations between Pakistan and India.

Pakistan, therefore, urges India not to vitiate the atmosphere for engagement between the two countries.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1558. Summons to Pakistan High Commissioner Ashraf Jehangir Qazi to the Ministry of External Affairs by R.S. Kalha, Secretary, MEA to convey India’s strong protest at serious incidents involving Indian High Commission officials.

New Delhi, November 9, 2001.

Pakistan High Commissioner in New Delhi was summoned to the Ministry of External Affairs this morning by Shri R.S. Kalha, Secretary, MEA to convey Government of India’s strong protest about two very serious incidents of intimidation and harassment, involving officials based at the Indian High Commission at Islamabad. The incidents took place on 8th November 2001.

In the first incident, an official travelling by bus to Lahore en route to the Indian border at Wagah-Attari, with his wife and son, was accosted by an individual who introduced himself as an ISI officer. When the bus arrived at Lahore, the person demanded to see the contents of the bag being carried by the Indian official. Upon his refusal to do so, the ISI official forcibly opened the bag. He also sought to confiscate money but returned it when the Indian official threatened to report the incident to the police. Thereafter, the ISI official threatened the Indian official with dire consequences if he returned to Pakistan.
The official lodged an FIR at the Gulberg Police Station in Lahore.

The Indian High Commissioner, Shri Vijay Nambiar also personally raised this incident with the Pakistan Foreign Secretary on the evening of 8th November 2001.

The second incident involving another staff member took place at Islamabad later in the evening at around 9.00 PM (PST). The staff member accompanied by his wife was returning by taxi from a public shopping area of Islamabad when they were intercepted by at least 8 Pakistani intelligence operatives driving in a Landcruiser. The intelligence operatives dragged out both the staff member and his wife. The wife was gagged and manhandled by an operative while being dragged to one side. In the process, she sustained scratch injuries to her face. The staff member was then pulled into the Landcruiser and driven away to an unknown destination. He was released the following morning (9th November 2001), in the early hours, in a badly beaten and bruised state. An FIR has been lodged with the Kohsar Police Station in Islamabad.

Shri R.S. Kalha, Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs, conveyed Government of India’s strong condemnation of these reprehensible incidents, involving the forcible abduction, harassment and assault of High Commission officials and their family members. He also conveyed the Government’s protest in the strongest possible terms at the crude and uncivilized behaviour of Pakistan’s intelligence operatives that included the assault of the wife of one of the staff members. The Pakistan High Commissioner was also reminded of Pakistan’s obligations under the Vienna Convention of 1960 and the 1992 Bilateral Code of Conduct for Treatment of Diplomatic/Consular Personnel in India and Pakistan. Secretary, MEA also demanded that appropriate action be taken by the authorities in Pakistan against those responsible for the above incidents.

The fact that the second incident took place soon after the Indian High Commissioner had personally brought the first incident to the attention of the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, naturally raises obvious questions. These high-handed actions are in complete violation of the Vienna Convention and the Bilateral Code of Conduct for the Treatment of Diplomatic/Consular Personnel that has been agreed to by India and Pakistan. Pakistan’s regular and repeated transgressions of its obligations in this manner form a consistent pattern and raise serious questions about its attitude and approach to its commitments under international and bilateral agreements.

"At an emergency meeting today, held under the Chairmanship of the Prime Minister, the Cabinet reviewed this morning's events in Parliament.

The Cabinet strongly condemned this dastardly assault. It has been an attack not just on a building but on what is the very heart of our system of governance, on what is the symbol and the keystone of the largest democracy in the world.

By the attack, the terrorists have yet again flung a challenge at the country.

The nation accepts this challenge. We will liquidate the terrorists and their sponsors wherever they are, whoever they are - as our valiant security forces have done in this particular instance. We join the country in paying our homage to the seven personnel who have laid down their lives so that the country prevails. The first requisite for the battle is that each of us be vigilant, and that all of us remain united. The assault is yet another reminder that each of us must measure the issue we take up against this challenge that confronts the country."

[The resolution was with reference to an unsuccessful terrorist attack on the Parliament Building in the morning when almost the entire Cabinet and members of Parliament had gathered inside the building for the Parliament session. The security forces, of course foiled the attack killing all the terrorists. Unfortunately in combating the attack five members of the security staff were killed besides 18 injured.]

◆◆◆◆◆

New Delhi, December 18, 2001.

The ghastly attack on Parliament House on 13th December, 2001 has shocked the entire nation. The terrorist assault on the very bastion of our democracy was clearly aimed at wiping out the country's top political leadership. It is a tribute to our security personnel that they rose to the occasion and succeeded in averting what could have been a national catastrophe. In so doing they made the supreme sacrifice for which the country would always remain indebted to them.

It is now evident that the terrorist assault on the Parliament House was executed jointly by Pak-based and supported terrorist outfits, namely, Lashkar-e-Taiba and Jaish-e-Mohammad. These two organizations are known to derive their support and patronage from Pak ISI. The investigation so far carried out by the police shows that all the five terrorists who formed the suicide squad were Pakistani nationals. All of them were killed on the spot and their Indian associates have since been nabbed and arrested.

The investigation at this stage indicates that the five Pakistani terrorists entered the Parliament House Complex at about 11.40 A.M. in an Ambassador Car bearing registration No.DL-3CJ-1527 and moved towards Building Gate No.12 when it encountered the carcade of Vice President of India which was parked at Gate No.11. One of the members of the Parliament House Watch and Ward Staff, Shri Jagdish Prasad Yadav, became suspicious about the identity of the car and immediately ran after it. The car was forced to turn backward and in the process it hit the Vice President's car. When challenged by the security personnel present on the spot all the five terrorists jumped out of the car and started firing indiscriminately. The Delhi Police personnel attached with the Vice-President's security as also the personnel of CRPF and ITBP on duty immediately took their positions and returned the fire. It was at this point that another member of Parliament House Watch and Ward Staff, Shri Matbar Singh, sustained bullet injuries. He rushed inside Gate No.11 and closed it. An alarm was raised and all the gates in the building were immediately closed. The terrorists ran towards Gate No.12 and then to Gate No.1 of the Parliament House Building. One terrorist was shot dead by the security forces at Gate No.1 and in the process the explosives wrapped around his body exploded. The remaining four terrorists turned back and reached Gate No.9 of the Building. Three of them were gunned down there. The fifth terrorist ran towards Gate No.5 where he also was gunned down.

During the exchange of fire, four Delhi Police personnel, namely, Shri Nanak Chand, Assistant Sub-Inspector, Shri Rampal, Assistant Sub-Inspector, Shri Om Prakash, Head Constable and Shri Ghanshyam, Head Constable attached with the Vice president's security lost their lives on the spot. The other three persons who were also killed were Smt. Kamlesh Kumari, a Woman Constable of CRPF, Shri Jagdish Prasad Yadav, a Security Assistant of Watch and Ward Staff of the Parliament House, who had rushed after the terrorists' car and a civilian employee of CPWD, Shri Desh Raj, 18 other persons were injured and they were immediately rushed to Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia Hospital for medical treatment. These included Shri Matbar Singh, Security Assistant, Watch and Ward Staff of the Parliament House who later succumbed to his injuries. The scene of the crime was cordoned off and Investigation Teams including Forensic Experts and Bomb Detection Squads were pressed into service. A number of hand grenades were recovered from the site of the incident and defused. A large quantity of arms and ammunition including explosives was also recovered.

The break-through in the investigation of the case was achieved with the arrest of Syed Abdul Rehman Gilani, a Lecturer in a local College, whose interrogation led to the identification of two other accomplices, Afzal and Shaukat Hussain Guru. The wife of the latter disclosed that her husband and Afzal had in the afternoon of 13th December, 2001 left for Srinagar. This information was immediately conveyed to the J&K Police who apprehended both of them. A laptop computer and Rs.10 lakhs in cash were recovered from them. They were later brought to Delhi by a Special Team deputed for the purpose by Delhi Police.

Interrogation of the accused persons has revealed that Afzal was the main coordinator who was assigned this task by a Pakistani national, Gazi Baba of Jaish-e-Mohmmad. Afzal had earlier been trained in a camp run by Pak ISI at Muzaffarabad in Pak Occupied Kashmir. The hideouts for the five Pak terrorists were arranged by Shaukat Hussain Guru, two in Mukherjee Nagar and one in Taimarpur area in North Delhi. During the subsequent raids, the police recovered from two of these hideouts a lot of incriminating material including a large quantity of ammonium Nitrate and other ingredients used in preparing Improvised Explosive Devices; a map of Delhi; a sheet of paper carrying a map of Chankayapuri drawn in hand; and three police uniforms. In all, four persons have so far been arrested in connection with this case.

The incident once again establishes that terrorism in India is the handiwork of Pakistan-based terrorist outfits known to derive their support and sustenance from Pak ISI. The hijacking of IC-814 Flight to Kandhar, the terrorist intrusion into the Red Fort and attack on J&K Legislative Assembly complex at Srinagar on 1st October this year were master minded and executed by militant outfits at the behest of the ISI. Lashkar-e-Taiba and Jaish-e-Mohmmad in particular have been in the forefront in organizing terrorist violence in our country. The Pakistan High Commissioner in India was summoned to the Ministry of External Affairs and issued a verbal demarche demanding that Islamabad take action against the two terrorist outfits involved in the attack on the Parliament House.

Last week's attack on Parliament is undoubtedly the most audacious, and also the most alarming, act of terrorism in the nearly two-decades-long history of Pakistan-sponsored terrorism in India. This time the terrorists and their mentors across the border had the temerity to try to wipe out the entire political leadership of India, as represented in our multi-party Parliament. Naturally, it is time for all of us in this august House, and all of us in the country, to ponder why the terrorists and their backers tried to raise the stakes so high, particularly at a time when Pakistan is claiming to be a part of the international coalition against terrorism.

The only answer that satisfactorily addresses this query is that Pakistan - itself a product of the indefensible Two-Nation Theory, itself a theocratic State with an extremely tenuous tradition of democracy - is unable to reconcile itself with the reality of a secular, democratic, self-confident and steadily progressing India, whose standing in the international community is getting inexorably higher with the passage of time.

The Prime Minister in his address to the nation on the 13th December, 2001 has declared that the fight against terrorism had reached a decisive phase. The supreme sacrifice made by the security personnel who lost their lives in this incident will not be allowed to go in vain. Those behind the attack on Parliament House should know that the Indian people are united and determined to stamp out terrorism from the country.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1561. Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the attack on Indian Parliament.

Before commenting on the regrettable statement issued by the Indian Home Minister, it is necessary to reiterate that Pakistan condemned the terrorist attack on the Indian Parliament building on December 13. President Pervez Musharraf sent a message of condolence and sympathy to the Prime Minister of India.

"India has neither agreed to our suggestion for an impartial inquiry into the incident nor responded to Pakistan's request for evidence. Past experience is witness that Indian authorities, motivated by prejudice and animus, resort to totally false and unsubstantiated allegations against Pakistan. Only recently on October 3 Indians accused the Jaish Mohammad and Pakistan intelligence of engineering the so-called hijacking of an Indian airliner but later discovered that the incident was due to a false alarm.

"More infamous was the 1971 hijacking incident of the Indian Airline plane ‘Ganga’ to Lahore. Actually, it was an operation planned and executed by the Indian Intelligence with the preconceived purpose of fabricating pretence to ban Pakistani over-flights between East and West Pakistan preparatory to Indian military intervention in East Pakistan. The reprehensible episode is graphically depicted in “Inside RAW” by an India author. A Pakistan judicial inquiry reached the same conclusion. Now, as Indian authorities have once again jumped to an unwarranted conclusion, their accusations against Pakistan lack credibility.

If India really believes in its accusation, it should agree to an impartial inquiry. Its arrogation to itself of the roles of accuser as well as judge is contrary to principles of justice and inadmissible under law.

Mr. Sattar said all this when New Delhi had already rejected such sharing of evidence. But Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee softened his tone on December 19, when he said that he would continue to deal diplomatically with Pakistan, but other options were also open to him.

Together with this are several telephone calls from world capitals to both Mr. Vajpayee and President Musharraf asking them to show restraint.

Earlier on December 18 Mr. Sattar, while responding to allegations of Pakistan’s involvement in attacks, had said: “If India has the courage of its convictions and if it believes that its allegations are right, it should take the matter to the UN Security Council for impartial determination, instead of making prejudiced and biased allegations to defame the freedom struggle in Kashmir as terrorism”.

Meanwhile, a senior official in the Pakistan Foreign Office pointed out that the Musharraf Government is pleased with the position taken by the Bush regime. “India should heed to the counsel of Washington and share all the evidence it has with us. We cannot be expected to act merely on the basis of allegations,” he said.

Since the December 13 attack on the Parliament, we have seen no attempts on the part of Pakistan to initiate action against the organisations involved. India’s Foreign Secretary had, in a meeting with the Pakistan High Commissioner on December 14, elaborated on some of the steps that were required and were also mandated by international law.

In view of this complete lack of concern on the part of Pakistan and its continued promotion of cross-border terrorism, the Government of India has decided to recall its High Commissioner in Islamabad.

It has been further decided that the services of the Samjhauta Express and the bus service between Delhi and Lahore would be terminated with effect from 1st January, 2002. The extended time is being given so as to enable citizens of the two countries who have travelled recently using these services to return to their homes.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1563. Statement by External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh on terrorist attack on Parliament.

New Delhi, December 27, 2001.

Regrettably India’s serious concerns about all the ramifications of the 13th December attack on our Parliament have not been fully grasped in Pakistan. The depth of concern in India, the totality of rejection by the entire cross-section of our country’s opinion of Pakistan’s continued sponsorship of cross-border terrorism, and its promotion of terrorism as an instrument of state policy has also not been sufficiently appreciated. That is why it is doubly regrettable that attempts to dupe the international community with cosmetic half measures, non-measures, or even fictitious incidents are still being made. This is not acceptable. Terrorism can simply not be justified on any grounds, or under the any name. It must be eradicated fully. The Government of India therefore has no option but to take the following further steps: (a) the strength of the respective High Commissions in the two countries will be reduced by 50%. This is particularly important in the context of recent events, wherein the officials of the Pakistan High Commission have been involved in espionage, as well as in direct dealings with terrorist organizations. This would be implemented within 48 hours; (b) movement of the officials of the Pakistan High Commission and their families, who stay back, would be confined to the municipal limits of Delhi; (c) all over-flight facilities available to Pakistan or Pak Airlines to over-fly Indian airspace will cease or be suspended with effect from 1st January 2002. These are, once again, minimal measures that are being taken. We hope even now that the Government of Pakistan will understand the gravity of the situation and take urgent measures to curb the activities of terrorist groups. The Government of India remains ready to take such further measures as are considered necessary.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1564. Statement made by the External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh to Media.

We have received information about some actions having been taken by Pakistan authorities against the Lashkar-e-Tayyaba and Jaish-e-Mohammad including the arrest of their leaders, some other officials of these organisations, as also raids on some of the premises of these two terrorist organisations. If this information is confirmed, then it is a step forward in the correct direction. We hope that such actions against terrorist activities targeting India, including Jammu & Kashmir, would be pursued vigorously, until cross-border terrorism in our country is completely eliminated.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1565. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, January 1, 2002.

The Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office Aziz Ahmed Khan on January 1 welcomed Indian Prime Minister's new Year newspaper article expressing his willingness to resume high-level talks with Islamabad, saying that was what Pakistan had always desired, resolution of all issues including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir through peaceful negotiations across the table.

Pakistan hoped that the prevailing tension between the two countries would be contained through negotiations and peaceful means and such an opportunity existed at Kathmandu where the leaders of the two countries would attend the SAARC summit scheduled to open on Jan 4, he added.

The spokesman said it would be known soon whether the foreign ministers of the two countries would establish contact at Kathmandu as proposed by New Delhi. Pakistan had already welcomed the proposed move. It would be wrong to suggest that Islamabad was anti-India; otherwise President Musharraf would not have travelled to Agra for peace talks with the Indian Prime Minister, he said and hoped that through diplomacy the current situation could be contained should the Indian side come forward.

Maj-Gen Rashid Qureshi, DG ISPR (defence), who was also present at the press briefing, said that Pakistan would give priority to counter the military threat which was being reinforced, in its strategy to guard national borders.

He, however, declined to elaborate military preparedness to meet the offensive. India had announced deployment of its missiles but Pakistan would not want in its own security interest to say where and how many missiles the country had deployed.

Gen. Qureshi said that Pakistan's border with Afghanistan was completely sealed and Osama bin Laden would be arrested as soon as he was spotted. He said Islamabad did not give credence to conflicting reports about Osama being seen at different places in the country.

The Indian government has provided a list of 20 wanted persons to the Government of Pakistan, who it said were involved in terrorist activities, the Spokesman said.

He said that the Indian Ministry of External Affairs had given a list of 20 'wanted persons' to Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi with a request that they be arrested and handed over to India. He said the Indian government had not provided any evidence which could establish that they (the wanted persons) had been involved in terrorist activities. He said if India provided concrete evidence, the Pakistan government would take action against them.

When asked whether Pakistan would hand over Lashkar-i-Taiba chief Hafiz Saeed to India, Gen Qureshi said the Lashkar leader had been arrested for creating law and order situation.

When asked whether Pakistan would also hand over a similar list of Indian persons wanted to it, the DG ISPR said investigation was being carried out into the huge quantity of arms recently seized in Quetta. He said according to preliminary investigations, the ammunition was supposed to be used for terrorist activities and some foreign hand was involved in it. However, he made it clear that we believed in evidence and if some link was established of involvement of India in that case “we will provide a list of those persons to New Delhi”.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1566. Summary of Press Briefing by the Official Spokesperson on Pakistan.

New Delhi, January 10, 2002.

In response to questions the Spokesperson Mrs. Nirupama Rao said the following:

- Asked whether Colin Powell’s visit implied a worsening of the situation in the subcontinent and whether India felt that this visit was necessary the Spokesperson said thross border terrorism and the activities of terrorist groups operating from Pakistani soil and the territory controlled by Pakistan. She added that the Governmentat she had no official intimation about the visit. She added that the Governments which India had been touch with were well aware of the immense restraint that India had exercised in the current situation and they were also fully aware of our expectations for concrete action from Pakistan in regard to the issue of c of the United States was also aware of India’s position in this regard, and it was really Pakistan that needed to be addressed on the need for concrete meaningful action in response to - the demands made by India.

- Asked to describe the situation along the border, the Spokesperson said that she would like to use the adjective which the External Affairs Minister had used some days ago describing the situation as tense and she said that the responsibility of reducing tensions and clearing the atmosphere of tension basically rested with Pakistan.

- Asked if the bodies of the five terrorists killed in the Parliament attack had been taken back by Pakistan, the Spokesperson replied in the negative. She mentioned that the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan had been summoned day before yesterday to convey that the bodies of the Pakistani nationals, the five terrorists killed in the terrorist attack on our Parliament of December 13 be taken back because they could not be preserved beyond 10th January. She added that we had not had any meaningful, satisfactory or affirmative response from Pakistan and stated this was not a novel reaction from Pakistan since similar reactions had been received from Pakistan on earlier instances on the issue of return of the bodies of their nationals killed here in terrorist action.

- Asked what India’s expectations were regarding Gen. Musharraf’s new policy to be announced in a couple of days, the Spokesperson said that she did not want to speculate on what the President of Pakistan may or may not say in his forthcoming address. She emphasized that as far as India was concerned Pakistan needed to take concrete, serious, substantive action to deal with the demands made by India of Pakistan. She added that the complete abandonment of terrorism by Pakistan was what India wanted. She added that Pakistan should state clearly that it would not promote cross border terrorism from Pakistan or any part of the territory controlled by it.

- Asked what India’s reaction would be if Pakistan abandoned terrorism and also asked to comment about Pakistan’s propaganda about the application of the UN resolutions with regard to the Kashmir issue, the Spokesperson refused to speculate. With regard to the UN resolutions, she said that we were very clear in our minds that the path for resolution of outstanding issues between India and Pakistan had to be through bilateral dialogue between our two countries - that was our position, that had been our position and that would continue to be our position. She recalled that the UN Secretary General, when he was here last year had himself talked about the non-enforceability of those resolutions. Asked about the formation of a Kashmir Committee by Pakistan, she added that she did not want to indulge in rhetorical statements but as far as such steps were concerned, our position on the wrongful occupation by Pakistan of Indian territory in Jammu and Kashmir was well known.

- Asked about reports on the Home Minister’s visit to the US, the Spokesperson said that we had fully briefed the media in Washington on this subject. The Home Minister had expressed his satisfaction over the meetings he had held and the understanding that the United States authorities had expressed about his mission.

- Asked what the chances of the Home Minister’s meeting with President Bush were, the Spokesperson said that she had no information on that. However, she mentioned that the Home Minister would be meeting Dr. Condoleezza Rice and that he had already met Secretary of State Powell. She added that the visit had gone very well and that there was a great deal of mutual confidence in this relationship. Further substantive content had been added to our cooperation on counter terrorism, for instance, including on intelligence sharing through the discussions that had gone on between the Home Minister and the US Attorney General during this visit and this would strengthen the institutional structures that we had established to discuss these issues. She expressed the hope that the whole content of this cooperation would thus be strengthened as a result of this visit. The fact that Mr. Advani was meeting the top leadership of the US administration would impart further special meaning to this whole interaction.

- Asked to react about Home Minister having said that he was not at all hopeful about Pakistan, the Spokesperson said that our past experience with Pakistan gave us cause to be pessimistic in a sense of what was to be expected of Pakistan but having said that, she said that we would wait and see if Pakistan was prepared to go beyond what it had said so far not only in terms of words but in terms of concrete action to address the issues that were of central concern to us. Asked if the verbal denunciation of terrorism by Pakistan was significant, the Spokesperson said that if Pakistan was ready to openly denounce cross border terrorism and say that it would not promote it from now on, that would be a step in the correct direction.
Excerpts from the Address of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf to the Nation.

Islamabad, January 12, 2002.

As you would remember, ever since I assumed office, I launched a campaign to rid society of extremism, violence and terrorism and strived to project Islam in its true perspective. In my first speech on October 17, 1999, I had said and I quote; "Islam teaches tolerance, not hatred; universal brotherhood, not enmity; peace, and not violence. I have a great respect for the ulema and expect them to come forward and present Islam in its true light. I urge them to curb elements which are exploiting religion for vested interests and bringing a bad name to our faith."

After this, I initiated a number of steps in this regard. First, in the year 2000 I started interacting with the Taliban and counselled them to inculcate tolerance and bring moderation in their ways. I also told them that those terrorists who were involved in terrorist acts in Pakistan and seeking refuge in Afghanistan should be returned to us. Unfortunately, we did not succeed.

In the year 2001, I think it was January, we sealed the Pak-Afghan borders and I gave directions that no students of any madrasa (religious seminaries) should be allowed to cross into Afghanistan without relevant documents. After this, I despatched a number of delegations to meet Mullah Omer. I continued to advise them tolerance and balance. Later, on February 15, 2001, we promulgated the Anti-Weaponisation Ordinance. Through this law we launched a de-weaponisation campaign in Pakistan. On June 5, on the occasion of the Seerat Conference, I addressed ulema belonging to all schools of thought and spoke firmly to them against religious extremism.

On August 14, 2001, we finally took a very important decision to ban the Lashkar Jhangvi and the Sipah Mohammad and placed the Sipah Sahaba and the Tehrik Jafria Pakistan under observation.

In addition, on a number of occasions, I called ulema and mashaikh and held extensive consultations with them. The objective was to take them on board in our campaign against terrorism and extremism. These measures have been continuing since our government assumed office in 1999. I am explaining all this to you in great detail only because of the fact that the campaign against extremism undertaken by us from the very beginning is in our own national interest.

We are not doing this under advice or pressure from anyone. Rather, we are conscious that it is in our national interest. We are conscious that we need to rid society of extremism and this is being done right from the beginning.
This domestic reforms process was underway when a terrorist attack took place against the USA on September 11. This terrorist act led to momentous changes all over the world. We decided to join the international coalition against terrorism and in this regard I have already spoken to you on a number of occasions. We took this decision on principle and in our national interest.

We have to promote an environment of tolerance, maturity, responsibility, patience and understanding. We have to check extremism, militancy, violence and fundamentalism. We will have to forsake the atmosphere of hatred and anger. We have to stop exploitation of simple poor people of the country and not to incite them to feuds and violence. We must concern ourselves with our own country.

Pakistan comes first. We do not need to interfere and concern ourselves with others. There is no need to interfere in other countries.

Now I turn to other important issues. In my view there are three problems causing conflict and agitation in our minds. They include first the Kashmir cause, second all political disputes at the international level concerning Muslims and thirdly internal sectarian disputes and differences.

These are the three problems which create confusion in our minds. I want to lay down rules of behaviour concerning all the three.

Let us take the Kashmir cause first. Kashmir runs in our blood. No Pakistani can afford to sever links with Kashmir. The entire Pakistan and the world knows this. We will continue to extend our moral, political and diplomatic support to Kashmiris. We will never budge an inch from our principled stand on Kashmir. The Kashmir problem needs to be resolved by dialogue and peaceful means in accordance with the wishes of the Kashmiri people and the UN resolutions. We have to find the solution of this dispute. No organisation will be allowed to indulge in terrorism in the name of Kashmir. We condemn the terrorist acts of September 11, October 1 and December 13. Anyone found involved in any terrorist act would be dealt with sternly.

Strict action will be taken against any Pakistani individual, group or organisation found involved in terrorism within or outside the country. Our behaviour must always be in accordance with international norms.

On this occasion, as President of Pakistan, I want I to convey a message to Prime Minister Vajpaee: If we want to normalise relations between Pakistan and India and bring harmony to the region, the Kashmir dispute will have to be resolved peacefully through dialogue on the basis of the aspirations of the Kashmiri people. Solving the Kashmir issue is the joint responsibility of our two countries. Let me repeat some of the observations made by you, Mr. Vajpayee, some time back, and I quote: "Mindsets will have to be altered and historical baggage will have to be jettisoned. I take you on this offer. Let us start talking in this very spirit".

Now as commander of the armed forces of Pakistan, I wish to convey another message. The armed forces of Pakistan are fully prepared and deployed to meet any challenge. They will spill the last drop of their blood in the defence of their country. Let there be no attempt of crossing the border in any sector as it will be met with full force. Do not entertain any illusions on this count.

I would also like to address the international community, particularly the USA on this occasion. As I said before on a number of occasions, Pakistan rejects and condemns terrorism in all its forms and manifestation. Pakistan will not allow its territory to be used for any terrorist activity anywhere in the world. Now you must play an active role in solving the Kashmir dispute for the sake of lasting peace and harmony in the region. We should be under no illusion that the legitimate demand of the people of Kashmir can ever be suppressed without their just resolution. Kashmiris also expect that you ask India to bring an end to state terrorism and human rights violations. Let human rights organisations, Amnesty International, the international media and U.N. peacekeepers be allowed to monitor activities of the Indian forces.

Now we come to the second problem, which causes confusion in our minds and is of our particular concern. It relates to conflicts involving Muslims. Our religious leaders involve themselves in such conflicts without giving serious thought to them. I don't want to talk at length on this.

It is for the government to take a position on international issues. Individuals, organisations and political parties should restrict their activities to expression of their views. I request them to express their views on international issues in an intellectual spirit and in a civilised manner through force of argument.

Views expressed with maturity and moderation have greater convincing power. Expressing views in a threatening manner does not create any positive effect and anyone who indulges in hollow threats is taken as an unbalanced person by the world at large.

I would request that we should stop interfering in the affairs of others. First, we should attain the strength and the importance where our views carry weight when we, express them.
1568. Press Conference by Minister of External Affairs Jaswant Singh responding to the broadcast of President Musharraf the previous day.

New Delhi, January 13, 2002.

Shri Jaswant Singh: {My apologies. Good afternoon. And also my apologies to ruin your Sunday. I am sorry that I kept you away from lunch. I will make a statement. I will read it out and there will be sufficient copies which would be distributed subsequently. I will then endeavour to answer Questions.}

Statement of External Affairs Minister

The Government of India has noted that the major portion of the address of the President of Pakistan yesterday related to reforms to modernize Pakistan. We wish the people of Pakistan well in this endeavour. To the extent that these reforms have a direct nexus to external developments, we welcome them. We welcome the now declared commitment of the Government of Pakistan not to support or permit any more the use of its territory for terrorism anywhere in the world, including in the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir. This commitment must extend to the use of all territories under Pakistan’s control today. We would assess the effectiveness of this commitment only by the concrete action taken. Consequently, we expect Pakistan to cooperate with India in stopping all infiltration across the International border and the Line of Control. The Government notes the decision of the Government of Pakistan to ban the Lashkar-e-Tayyaba and the Jaish-e-Mohammad, the two terrorist organisations involved in the December 13 attack on the India Parliament. We look forward to an effective and full implementation of this measure, so that its members do not continue activities under other names. There would be a similar need to address other terrorist organisations targeting India, as also the parent organisations that spawn them. Continuing lack of action against fugitives from law about whom detailed information has been provided to Pakistan on several occasions is disappointing. It remains our expectation that the Government of Pakistan will even now act on this. The Government of India rejects entirely and categorically the comments of the President of Pakistan about the situation in the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir. The Government of India remains committed to the bilateral dialogue process with Pakistan in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Shimla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration. Should the Government of Pakistan operationalise its intention and move purposefully towards eradicating cross-border terrorism, the Government of India will respond fully, and would be prepared to resume the composite dialogue process. We reiterate our conviction that all issues between India and Pakistan can only be addressed bilaterally. There is no scope for any third party involvement.
(Ladies and Gentlemen of the press, this is what I have to say in a prepared statement. I would be happy to answer such queries and clarifications as you might have.) Question: Could you give some specific steps that you would expect as proof of their moving away ...

Shri Jaswant Singh: It is after all only yesterday that the President Gen Musharraf sahab has announced the programme of intentions that Pakistan has. We understand that it will take sometime to be operationalised on the ground. But we do expect that it shall be operationalised. When it is operationalised, you want me to illustrate how it is operationalised. I have said earlier in the statement itself, for example, by stopping all infiltration across the line of control. India is the direct victim of such cross border terrorism, which is promoted, and has been promoted all these years, from Pakistan. When you ask me, “Can you give me one example of what would India expect?; well, here is one example. Let Pakistan operationalise what the President of Pakistan has announced. Let there be no further infiltration or cross border” terrorism from across the line of control, from PoK, or any other part of Pakistan, northern areas of Pakistan; and certainly we will take full note of it. As the Prime Minister has repeatedly said, for every one step that Pakistan takes, we shall take two. Pakistan has just announced that it will take a step. We await its taking a step. Be assured, India will then not be found wanting.

Question (New York Times): I have a brief addendum to one Question and then I have another Question. One is, how long will it take to see the results, if the General is sincere? How long will you wait for him to deliver? The second is, I am curious to know as to whether you would agree with this assessment and if so, how will you react on it. It seems that there would be a terrific incentive now to the Jehadi groups to try and sabotage whatever the General is doing - if he is indeed sincere - and try and start awar and spread trouble between India and Pakistan as the best way of heading off action against them. There are tremendous fears I know amongst Americans that this could spark a war and precipitate action by India and to hit back if there is another terrorist attack against it. How do you avoid being used by the Jehadis to sabotage peace?

Shri Jaswant Singh: To the first part - “How much time?” -1 would like to give all the due time for effective implementation of the announcements made by His Excellency Gen Pervez Musharraf. The reforms that he has cited or announced, for society, polity within Pakistan will of course take a great deal of time. That is, as I have said in my statement, really Pakistan’s internal matter. We welcome those steps inasmuch as they impinge upon and have a direct nexus to external relations. On the inherent dangers of many forces within Pakistan, currently operating there, or even those that have been expelled from Afghanistan but currently present in Pakistan -I here refer to the elements of Al Qaeda and Taliban that have found place in Pakistan after being expelled from Afghanistan - India is entirely mindful that such elements within Pakistan, who have taken shelter in Pakistan - it is not for me to say with or without the knowledge of the Government of Pakistan - will attempt to distract focus and attention from the global fight against terrorism. This too, what India is endeavouring to do, is also a part of that total global address against terrorism. We are mindful of this. We are mindful of the dangers. We are mindful of the attempts that might be made by many elements within Pakistan to destabilise the situation. We are alert also in that regard.

Question (Hindustan Times): There have been repeated instances over the years of Pakistan trying to kill bilateralism to promote third-party intervention in Kashmir. From yesterday’s statement of the Pakistan President it is more than obvious that while he seeks to delink that aspect which has given a bad name to the Kashmir movement, or Kashmir struggle or whatever he calls it, he has tried to restore the same old political content to which Pakistan has been committed since partition and projected it internationally while seeking third-party intervention. How does India react to this? What is your appraisal about this? Is there a possibility of a third-party intervention at all being accepted by India in the near future or in the distant future?

Shri Jaswant Singh: I have answered that. That Pakistan should endeavour to re-state its position is, of course, not unnatural. They will. Whether it is practical position? - No, it is not a practical position. Is it workable? - No, it is not workable. Does India accept it? - No, India does not accept it. Do we accept it in the near? - No, neither in the near, nor middle nor distant future.

Question: Will President Musharraf’s speech in any way lessen the military tension on the borders between India and Pakistan?

Shri Jaswant Singh: I have answered this Question. It was asked in Hindi a little earlier. The lessening of tensions on the borders is entirely dependent on the steps that are taken inside Pakistan to operationalise what has been stated by His Excellency Gen Pervez Musharraf. We have to go not by the stated intent, but by action on the ground.

Question (AL-Jazeera): Musharraf has said that he will not surrender any Pakistanis. Does India accept this?

Shri Jaswant Singh: I have said in my statement. When you read it again you will see. Incidentally, it is not ‘Mr.’ Musharraf. It is ‘General’ Musharraf. On Gen Musharraf’s statement that he does not wish to hand over any criminals because of their nationality, I am disappointed. A great many of that list of 20 criminals and terrorists are not Pakistanis. It is our expectation that action will follow in that regard.
Question (Star News): If both sides have such perceptibly intractable positions about Kashmir, how do you think there is going to be a window for dialogue open at all?

Shri Jaswant Singh: I think only by what Prime Minister has said and which the General so kindly cited - ‘by shedding the excess baggage of history and by breaking new ground.’

Question (Star News): How will you break new ground?

Shri Jaswant Singh: By shedding excess baggage of history.

Question (All India Radio): You have given a very cautious welcome to whatever Gen Musharraf has said yesterday. Is it because you don’t trust that he will take the steps which he has promised? Or is it that you think that the fundamentalist forces in Pakistan are so strong that he would not be allowed to take those steps?

Shri Jaswant Singh: You have described what I have just announced as the Government’s position as cautious steps. I don’t think caution is bad policy. I would much rather be as a traveller that has travelled many of these padavs, many of these halts. From Lahore to Kargil, to Kandhar, to Kashmir, to Agra, to Kathmandu, I have travelled many miles in this endeavour. Therefore, I approach this journey, which will continue, cautiously, that is not unnatural.

Question: Gen Musharraf has announced certain reforms in his own country in Masjids and Madarsas. Does the Government of India think that the same kind of reforms should also be introduced in India, as there has been a lot of reports by the Intelligence Bureau about various Madarsas indulging in the same kind of activities and working as the dens of the ISI.

Shri Jaswant Singh: I have referred to the internal reforms that Gen Pervez Musharraf sahab has announced and I have welcomed them inasmuch as they have a relation with external events. I wish the people of Pakistan well in this movement towards reform. But you would appreciate that India has to take decisions about reforms within Indian society and polity including, as you say, the reforms that are necessary in regard to functioning of Madarsas and Masjids. That is entirely a decision that India has to take not in emulation of what Pakistan does or any other country does, but really quite independently by assessing independently the requirements of India.

Question: You have mentioned that there would not be any third-party mediation as Musharraf has said. With Advani in Washington and Colin Powell coming here this week, there is some third-party involvement, some kind. When Powell arrives, he is obviously concerned with the heightening of tension globally on South Asia. What kind of assurances are you going to give him? What will you be saying as a confidence-building measure? My follow up Question is, as Zhu Rongji is also coming, will the Chinese expect to play any informal role in this kind of rapprochement between India and Pakistan? Do you actually see that the continuation of improved relations with China and specifically about...

Shri Jaswant Singh: First about the impending visit of the Secretary of State. Yes, he does arrive here next week. I think it is mid-week next week. I greatly look forward to his visit. Does this amount to third-party intervention because he is arriving here and my Home Minister is to night sleeping in the sleep of peace in New York, does it amount to? - No, it doesn’t amount to... Nations will be interested in what is happening globally. If, for example, an emissary from India goes to visit West Asia and calls upon Yasser Araft; or if Shimon Perez comes here; does it mean that we are interfering in their affairs, or intervening? It doesn’t mean that at all. I have had, for example, not only Colin Powell coming here, Zhu Rongji is due to reach Agra later today, if he is not already there. And later again I will have the Foreign Minister of Russia too arriving here. These are the normal processes of consultation between countries that must take place and continue to take place. As to what I will discuss with the Secretary of State, is really much better left to until when he arrives and I do discuss with him. On India-China relations I can assure you there is movement forward. You will see for yourself on Zhu Rongji’s visit that there will be significant further movement - economic, political and in other regards. A number of agreements are to be signed. China has neither any intention nor shall it play any mediatory role in matters which involve India and Pakistan. We know that China has a special relationship with Pakistan and that they have military equipment supply relationship also. Notwithstanding all this, India remains committed to improve its relations with China. There is progress in that regard and I am confident that there will be further progress on Zhu Rongji’s visit which actually formally starts tomorrow morning.

Question (Middle-East Broadcasting Corporation): Actually, Gen Musharraf said yesterday that terrorism has no place in the Kashmir cause while India always stated that in the State of Jammu and Kashmir and elsewhere, terrorism is only because of the cross border terrorism. Now with the diplomatic offensive that India is going to undertake by sending missions all over the world, what is the Government’s position on a common ground? Is it terrorism? Is it freedom fighters? Could you please explain?

Shri Jaswant Singh: The teams will be starting very shortly. That is being handled elsewhere and, so, I do not know the details. On terrorism, the Government of India’s position has not changed. It is Pakistan that has now - and we welcome this aspect of it - dropped the advocacy of cross border, or state-sponsored terrorism in the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir. We have welcomed this step. They have also dropped this notion of freedom fight is equaling of terrorism and its equation with terrorism. We have welcomed that too. We expect that these statements shall now translate themselves into action on the ground. That action, as in response to a Question I said, really amounts to stopping any further promotion of infiltration or cross border terrorism in the Question: The same page which carried Gen Musharraf's statement today had a small item about shelling on the Kargil side of India. What do you read about that?

Shri Jaswant Singh: Well, I read shelling. It is. This is unfortunately, an extension of deliberately promoting instability through terrorism. I know that from the Pak-occupied part of Kashmir there has been heavier than normal shelling in Kargil in the last twenty-four hours, including on Kargil town. But that is not the norm and we hope that it will cease very shortly.

Question: But that was happening when President Musharraf was making that speech.

Shri Jaswant Singh: Yes, that is a part of the reality about Pakistan. That is what I mean by 'we are awaiting to reduce the gap between the statement and action'.

Question: If we conclude that India's reaction to Musharraf's speech is mixed... not very positive, would you contradict with us?

Shri Jaswant Singh: In fact, it is an extremely hazardous exercise to contradict journalists and what they decide to say. You are absolutely free to decide what you wish to decide. But as to what India has arrived at by way of reaction is what I have given. If you want to call it mixed, that is your choice, not mine. By your suggesting that I should agree with you when you call it mixed, please... I don't want to. I don't want to even comment upon it.

Question: In the last week of December, you had announced some steps against Pakistan which amount to, let me say, punitive steps which are hurting Pakistan's economy in a fundamental way.

Shri Jaswant Singh: Like?

Question: For instance, PIA's bottom-line was anyway suspect with all these different routes PIA flights will have to take. You must have seen reports about two Pakistani children who urgently need heart surgery in Bangalore. What kind of a message would India send out at this stage when Pakistan is at least making postures about reforming?

Shri Jaswant Singh: I have just answered that - please move from postures to action. You have yourself said Pakistan is making postures. That is your phrase. All that I am saying is, 'from postures, move to action'.
Question: Would you say that the indication that Pakistan is translating its words into action would be a lowering of violence in Jammu and Kashmir in the next few days?

Shri Jaswant Singh: There are some clear indices - I cite in response to a Question - curbing and eliminating cross border terrorism and promoting infiltration across the LoC. It is visible on a daily basis. It will have an immediate impact, whether it is international border, or line of control, or any of the sectors that we are referring to, whether it is 16 Corps, 15 Corps. There is not much of it in 14 Corps.

Question: Since Gen Pervez Musharraf has almost declined to hand over the 20 persons whose list Indian Government has submitted, what does the Government of India intend to do further on that matter? How would the Government of India want to pursue the matter?

Shri Jaswant Singh: I have for one, in my statement, when you get a copy of it you will see it, expressed hope that...

Question: Just hope?

Shri Jaswant Singh: Yes, we continue to hope - that Pakistan will readdress this Question. After all, a good 14 or 15 of them are criminals of Indian nationality. They are not Pakistani citizens. It is my expectation that Pakistan might re-examine this Question and re-address it more purposefully. We will continue to emphasise upon Pakistan the importance of this aspect.

Question (Times Of India): Mr. Singh, you have said that it is Pakistan that has dropped advocacy of state-sponsored terrorism. Pervez Musharraf has also said yesterday that he does not want Pakistanis to go fight battles in third countries. Insofar as it is a declared intent, do you see this as a major shift of Pakistan’s policy?

Shri Jaswant Singh: Yes, in the declaration of it, it is a major shift and we have welcomed it in the statement. What I have said is that between the declaration of intent and the implementation of what you have declared, let there be the least possible time and let there be the least possible gap. The earlier it is implemented, the earlier both India and Pakistan can move towards - what I have also said in the statement - engaging in purposeful dialogue on all issues including on Jammu and Kashmir. But we do wish to see the results of what is stated as action on the ground.

Question (Doordarshan): Did you, since yesterday after Gen Musharraf’s speech, have any talk with Gen Powell or; has there been any talk between USA and Government of India at any level besides Mr. Advani being there?

Shri Jaswant Singh: Yes. For example, I have spoken to Gen Colin Powell. If I am not mistaken I spoke to him when he called me earlier this morning. I have also been in touch with my Russian counterpart. But then, there are time differences in all that. These are routine consultations between Foreign Ministers that continue... sometime more often, and sometimes less often.

Question: As you yourself have indicated in your statement, there are other Kashmiri militants based in Pakistan-controlled ...

Shri Jaswant Singh: Let me correct this please. I am sorry I interrupted you. It has been, for example, put across by some television channels that JeM and LeT are Kashmiri organisations. They are not at all Kashmiri organisations. They are in fact Pakistani organisations. They are rooted in Pakistan. Their bases are in Pakistan and they have adopted the furthering of terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir. I have not said 'Kashmiri organisations'. I have said, 'organisations in Pakistan that are committed to spreading terror in Jammu and Kashmir'. There is a very important difference here and that difference must please be noted.

Question: But I am referring to the organisation which Gen Musharraf did not mention by name and which are well-known and based in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir. If those organisations continue to operate, but there is no evidence that they are infiltrating across the line of control, is that acceptable?

Shri Jaswant Singh: It is not a Question of my acceptance. My acceptance or rejection will follow, for example, Gen Pervez Musharraf has said repeatedly and emphatically that the writ of the State of Pakistan must run, it must not be defied or violated. If these terrorist organisations continue to operate in any part of Pakistan including in Pak-occupied Kashmir despite what Gen Pervez Musharraf has said, then before I begin even to be satisfied or dissatisfied, they are directly wide of violating or defying the instructions of the President of Pakistan and defying exactly what he has said that the writ of the State of Pakistan, Government of Pakistan must run.

Question: I know you are not in the business of speculation. Will you please tell us whether the so-called historical speech of Gen. Musharraf was because of the steps taken by India along the border? Or do you want to give the Americans any credit for that?

Shri Jaswant Singh: Speculation. It is all really in the realm of speculation. No matter what has impelled Gen Pervez Musharraf, His Excellency, to make that statement and announce all the various measures that he has announced - what is welcomeable there, we have welcomed; what is actionable there, we will act upon; what is not welcomeable, we will continue to encourage our neighbour in Pakistan to move in that direction. What we do not find as acceptable, we reject. That is what I have done in my statement. India’s position. is very clear. Let me reiterate, ladies and gentlemen, as Prime Minister has said, we are committed to dialogue; we are committed to resolving all issues bilaterally, all issues including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. We will address it purposefully and in a time-bound manner. We are waiting for what the General, His Excellency, has stated to be translated into action. As soon as we are able to assess that the action is now warranting on further steps to be taken, be assured, for every one step that Pakistan takes, India will take two.

Thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1569. Interview of former High Commissioner of India in Islamabad Vijay Nambiar with the Delhi based daily Times of India.

New Delhi, January 31, 2002.

[In the course of a turbulent 18-month stay in Islamabad, Vijay K Nambiar, India’s high commissioner to Pakistan, saw both the high of the build-up to the Agra summit, and the low to which Indo-Pak relations plummeted after December 13, 2001. Nambiar’s recall from Islamabad by the Indian government marked a dramatic escalation in tension between the two countries. He tells Rashme Sehgal that the Pakistan government needs to prove its stated commitment to reforms.]

Q: Shouldn’t the Indian high commissioner be present in Pakistan to push our demand for the extradition of 20 terrorists?

A: Communication is needed at a time like this. But we have to wait for a certain assurance that our concerns are being addressed in an adequate manner.

Q: What kind of a signal is the Indian government hoping to send to Pakistan through the troop build-up?

A: We have sent a very clear signal that cross-border terrorism is unacceptable. In the past, it was something that was being pushed up and down like a lever. We have made it very clear that the movement against jehadi groups affects us. We have also demanded that the 20 individuals who we see as criminals be brought to book. Fourteen of these are non-Pakistani and they should be handed over to us.
Q: But the Pakistani government claims it has no idea about their whereabouts?

A: These individuals have been functioning in tandem with the enemies connected with the establishment. They have been written about in the Pakistani media. Their Pakistani linkages are evident to the public. The government’s explanation, therefore, does not carry much credibility. Islamabad has to show some kind of seriousness in seeking them out. They have properties, relatives, associates—all that can be used to track them down. The Pakistani government must take these measures to restore its credibility and show its seriousness in addressing these questions.

Q: Why are they holding on to those 14 non-Pakistanis?

A: It follows a certain logic. They believe they will continue to serve as leverage. It has to do with a mindset, an attitude which believes that you use whatever lever you can take hold of in order to aggravate the political problem for us. Look at some of the statements issued by general Javed Nasser when he was head of Pakistan’s Gurudwara Prabandhak Committee. They were openly pro-Khalistani although they have no resonance anywhere in India. Obviously, they are trying to bring back some sort of support by artificially propping them against us. Handing over these terrorists would be a first step towards showing a change of attitude.

The fact is, in 1989, an agreement was reached between our home ministry and their interior department, which clearly spells out that fugitives from the law would be handed over on both sides without following cumbersome procedural requirements.

Q: How much credibility would you attribute to president Musharraf’s January 12 speech?

A: In India, it is difficult to accept his words as guarantees. We are, therefore, naturally less ecstatic than the western world. But if they are translated into action, they could provide a basis for moving away from earlier mindsets. Pakistan must take effective action against terrorist organisations and their training camps, and halt their flow of finances. If these steps are taken effectively, cross-border terrorism will be curtailed for good. But Pakistan’s Kashmir Committee has not changed its hawkish stand on Kashmir one bit? It is true that they have not changed their position on Kashmir. But if there is no terrorism, then the essential basis for communication can be established. We hope that with this recognition, the situation on the ground will also change. Only then can complex questions which have troubled our relationship be handled.

The present situation, with Jammu & Kashmir being declared the central issue by Pakistan, is no-go for us. Our entire relationship cannot be made hostage to one issue. There are larger bilateral issues including trade, people-to-people contact and cultural relationships. Our prime minister has clearly said that we must discuss all issues.

Q.: Why has the situation on the border escalated to such a dangerous extent?

A.: The level of cross-border terrorism has exhausted the patience of the Indian people. After December 13, it was being seen as an aar paar ki ladaai (fight to the finish).

Q.: What about the international fallout of this conflict?

A.: There is a larger international dimension to this conflict. We are aligned to the global coalition against terrorism and we need to take advantage of their stated position and use it in our favour. After all, we cannot have one standard of terrorism for Afghanistan and another for us. But at no point do we want outside, third party intervention in this dispute, because a third party will have its own axe to grind. This will only serve to further complicate the bilateral situation. We need patience and deliberation to resolve this problem. If Pakistan’s internal situation helps us, then that is to our advantage.

Q.: Is the increasing tension just a case of shadow-boxing on both sides?

A.: We will have to wait and see. It seems to be much more than shadow-boxing. We have to see how effective the fallout will be. If it results in extermination of terrorist organisations, then it will be a big help. If they show selectivity in clamping down on organisations, then we will have genuine reasons to doubt that their actions are meeting our concerns.

Q.: How do you react to president Musharraf’s statement that he is determined to modernise madrassas?

A.: He wants to prevent the use of madrassas for political purposes. The Pakistani president is talking about introducing a modern curriculum. He is also talking about long-term reforms that need to be undertaken. The majority of Pakistanis do seem to be standing on his side.

Q.: How has the Pakistani army reacted to these reforms?

A.: It is not for us to make a public assessment. One has to recognise that the military establishment has a certain discipline, a certain strength which must be taken into account.

Q.: Pakistan has also prepared a list of Indian terrorists that they want extradited?
A: We have to see what list they come up with.

Q: How long was your stay in Pakistan?

A: I stayed there a little over a year-and-a-half. My stay was conditioned by the political landscape in Pakistan. It was restricted by the fact that there was no parliament. Political parties were not functioning as the country was ruled by a military ruler. In that sense I did not get a full measure of the political rule there. The press, the NGOs are all working under a predetermined sub-text.

1570. Address of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf to the Joint session of the Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir Assembly.

Muzaffarabad, February 5, 2002.

President Gen Pervez Musharraf on February 5 called upon the international community to play its role for a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir issue in view of “failure of bilateralism to deliver.”

Addressing a joint sitting of the AJK (Pak-Occupied) Legislative Assembly and the AJK Council, he said: “We call upon the international community, particularly the influential countries, to play an active role in resolving Kashmir dispute because this is essential for lasting peace and harmony in the region.” The session was held to mark the Kashmir Solidarity Day which was observed throughout Pakistan and Kashmir. The term of bilateralism, the president said, was brought into negotiations by India as a farce to avoid confronting the issue.

“Unless we move forward through interaction and mediation and facilitation by the international community, bilateralism will never work, it appears. Therefore, the international community should come forward in the interest of peace in the region and mediate and facilitate a solution of the longstanding dispute.”

In the same breath, the president asked Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to accept his offer of dialogue for the peaceful settlement of the festering Kashmir problem as well as all other issues. “I also take the opportunity to call upon New Delhi to take steps to end repression in occupied Kashmir. They can make a beginning towards this end by withdrawing bulk of their forces from Kashmir, ending military operations against the Kashmiris and withdrawing draconian laws that give powers to occupation forces to act with impunity,” he said. Referring to his Jan 12 speech, Gen Musharraf said the measures taken by him were not under any pressure but purely in the interest of Pakistan to convert it into a moderate and progressive Muslim welfare state in accordance with the vision of the Quaid-i-Azam. He said his decisions had not only been welcomed in Pakistan but were also equally acclaimed by the international community.

The president, however, expressed disappointment over India’s cynical reaction and regretted that instead of responding positively to the hand of reconciliation extended by him, the Indian leadership had continued with its threatening noises. “India persists with its massive deployment of troops and military assets along the borders which have brought both countries to a position of eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation. This is brinkmanship at its most dangerous. Let it be very clear to all those in India who talk of aggression against Pakistan that we shall guard our sovereignty, honour and dignity very jealously. If a war is imposed on Pakistan, we will defend every inch of our soil with all the means at our disposal and with the last drop of our blood. Let their be no underestimation of our resolve.”

Reminding the Indian leadership of its statements that if Pakistan would take one step they would take two, the president said: “We have taken the step and we are awaiting the steps to be taken by India.” He said Indian leaders must realize that the only feasible option before the two countries was to settle their differences through peaceful means. “In order to be durable, any settlement has to be based on the principles of justice and fair play.”

He said that Pakistan wanted to live in peace with all of its neighbouring countries, particularly India, but its yearning for peace must not be taken to mean that it would agree to compromise on the principles. “This will never happen.”

Going back to his Jan 12 speech, he said banning of the groups and other steps were also directed towards bringing tolerance and peace to as well as shunning militancy and extremism from society. With the establishment of the writ of the government, he said, all external issues should be left to the state and the government. “No organization or party has a right to follow its own agenda on any external affairs,” the president said, adding such affairs could be commented upon but any final action and dealing with those was the government’s job.

“Let the government deal with all issues; with India, Kashmir, Chechnya, Palestine and anything.” Gen Musharraf appealed to the people of Pakistan to have trust in his government and in him, and assured that he would not let the nation down. He paid tributes to Kashmiris for their dauntless struggle for freedom and said their sacrifices would not go in vain. He reminded the world community of the pledge made to the Kashmiris regretting that it had not been honoured despite the passage of more than half a century.
The last thirteen years, he said, had particularly seen an intense and tragic phase in Kashmir struggle as the 700,000-strong Indian army had resorted to unprecedented suppression and human rights violation. He said the objective of the Indian repression was to force the Kashmiris to abandon their demand for self-determination, but he was sure that “the 10 million people of held Kashmir cannot be denied freedom. Their right to decide their future has not lapsed with the passage of time. "The failure of the international community to ensure the implementation of the UN resolutions has not made them any less valid.” He said India was engaged in a sinister propaganda campaign that the Kashmir freedom movement was sponsored from outside by Pakistan and that Pakistan was sponsoring a proxy war in occupied Kashmir.

India had left no stone unturned to portray it as Islamic fundamentalism and cross-border terrorism, as it wanted to hoodwink the international public opinion by playing with West’s apprehensions. “If the Kashmir freedom struggle is sponsored and orchestrated from outside then who are those 80,000 martyrs buried in the graveyards of occupied Kashmir?” He pointed out that no outside act, however powerful, could sustain a movement of such a scale and intensity for so long against the wishes of people.

The president said that the failure of the Indian military machine to crush the freedom struggle testified the strength and popularity of the indigenous character of the freedom struggle. India wanted to impose a military solution on the basis of the status quo, consolidating its occupation in defiance of the UN charter and the Security Council resolutions.

“Such attempts elsewhere in the world have not succeeded. Departure from the UN principles and Security Council resolutions has prolonged conflicts and aggravated situation,” he said. He reaffirmed the commitment of the people and the government of Pakistan to Kashmiris and said they would continue to extend full moral, political and diplomatic support to their just and noble cause.

A day earlier in a message on the occasion of the Kashmir Solidarity Day President General Pervez Musharraf had said: “I take this opportunity to once again urge the Indian leadership to sit with us at the negotiating table. Let there be no doubt that Pakistan will continue to extend full diplomatic, political and moral support to the Kashmiri people in their just struggle for their right to determine their own future.” It is unfortunate that India has reneged on its promises and is trying to mislead the world community by projecting the indigenous struggle of the Kashmiri people, as terrorism. If the people of Kashmir have been forced to take up arms against Indian occupation forces during the past decade or so, it is India which is to be blamed for this. No self-respecting people can be expected to remain unmoved while their families and friends are being killed, tortured and gang raped, their houses burnt down, their business destroyed and humiliation of the worst kind heaped upon them through the instrument of state terrorism.”
1571. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on relations with Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 5, 2002.

Ms. Rao: Good Afternoon

Question: Any reactions on Gen. Pervez Musharraf’s speech?

Answer: Our reaction is that regrettably General Pervez Musharraf has in his comments today, reverted to time worn and untenable positions on terrorism. Comments about the Indian State of Jammu & Kashmir amount to interference in the internal affairs of India. We reject them outright. We had rather hoped that General Pervez Musharraf would utilize this opportunity to reaffirm his commitment to end cross border terrorism, also about not supporting terrorism in any form. His formulations, unfortunately, have reverted to yesterday’s cliches confirming the apprehensions voiced earlier by us.

Question: He made rather strong comments in his speech, any comments?

Answer: I think, our reaction said it all and I do not need to elaborate on what we think of these issues but our statement encapsulates our position.

Question: State Terrorism at a time like this can be called inflammatory statement, any comments?

Answer: Our statement expresses our position completely, we have listened to his speech, we have seen what has been said, we have heard what has been said and our position and our reaction has been given to you.

Question: He has also called for talks in his speech?

Answer: Well, our position on that is well known. Obviously a climate has to be created that is conducive for the resumption of dialogue and we have seen absolutely no indication from Pakistan so far that suggests her willingness to provide such a conducive climate.

Question: President Musharraf has also said that Kashmir remains to be an issue of central importance, what would you say?

Answer: Well, our position has been well stated in my reaction to you just now. Our position is very clear on this issue. The State of Jammu & Kashmir is an integral and inalienable part of India and will remain so and as far as dialogue with Pakistan is concerned India has been always been the initiator of such dialogue and it is Pakistan that through its policies on cross-border terrorism and its support for infiltration into Jammu & Kashmir that has caused the deterioration of the climate in relations between the two countries.
Question: Inaudible
Answer: I would not like to go into further details as our statement has been read out to you and my reaction has been given to you and as we have said he has reverted to yesterday’s cliches. I think that is all.

Question: Does the speech raise questions about Pakistan’s sincerity?
Answer: Well, obviously a question is raised on the commitment and sincerity about fighting terrorism wherever it occurs. It raises serious questions about that commitment and Pakistan’s so called sincerity. India has always stressed the need for meaningful action from Pakistan and the need for Pakistan to walk the talk on such issues and that we have not seen happening. There has been no action on stopping cross-border terrorism, we have not seen an end to infiltration and we have seen no action on the list of 20 wanted fugitives & criminals and terrorists.

Question: He said bilateralism has not been worked out till now, is that correct?
Answer: No, that is not our view. We have always stood by the well-considered position that it is only through bilateral dialogue on the basis of the understandings enshrined in the Simla agreement and the Lahore declaration that India and Pakistan should address the outstanding issues between them.

Question: Any further diplomatic steps or dialogue for future development?
Answer: I think, I have stated our position clearly; we are awaiting the needful steps from Pakistan and we have not seen that happening. Dialogue obviously cannot resume in the absence of such meaningful action being taken in response to our demands.

Question: How long will it take?
Answer: Until such action is taken and we make our assessment that such action is being taken by Pakistan.

Question: What is it that Pakistan is not taking any action?
Answer: Well, you are asking me to speculate on all sorts of possibilities, I will not speculate on that.

Question: Would you say that you are disappointed by Mr. Musharraf’s speech of today?
Answer: Yes, our statement is a reflection of that disappointment and the views expressed in that speech would indicate that Pakistan has basically reverted to well worn and untenable positions on these issues.
Question: Would you say that Pakistan has reverted to its earlier positions? Where do you say Indo-Pak relations are headed to?

Answer: Well, as I said the statement made by Gen. Musharraf today is basically a reversion to cliches and positions expressed by Pakistan in the past and until and unless we see a change in approach and meaningful action by Pakistan, the establishment of a positive climate in relations for the resumption of dialogue on outstanding issues between the two countries becomes difficult.

Question: Two days back BSF Commandant in Jammu admitted that there is reduction of infiltration, what would you say on that?

Answer: I don’t think we see any long-term trend. That is related to certain climate-induced factors. It does not indicate and it does not suggest any change in Pakistan’s position as yet.

Question: Ms. Rao, India had started taking an diplomatic offensive steps and after the 12th January speech they have stopped that, do you think after today’s speech...?

Answer: Why do you say that we have stopped our diplomatic offensive? We have had delegations of Members of Parliament visiting various countries, we have had very high level visits to India and also our Ministers and Political leaders have been visiting other countries. We have been articulating our position in various world capitals and I think a number of countries are increasingly sensitized to Indian opinion on this issue.

Question: What I mean was any direct action against Pakistan?

Answer: No, I think I have answered that very clearly. I think India’s position has been clearly and well stated as far as the rest of the world is concerned and we have reacted to the comments made, the speech made by Gen. Musharraf today and I think that should leave you in no doubt about where we stand on this issue.

Question: Inaudible?

Answer: I am not going to make that kind of assessment at this time. We have already told you that in our opinion he has reverted to certain time worn and untenable positions on terrorism and that the comments on Jammu & Kashmir amount to interference in our internal affairs.

Question: So, Nirupama, in one sense you think that emotional ties and in the normal course on Kashmir solidarity day one would expect such heated rhetoric of this kind?
Answer: No, Satinder, what I am saying is, what he has said today basically confirms the apprehensions that we have voiced earlier about Pakistan’s position on these issues.

Question: Do you think that Gen. Musharraf’s speech was for domestic consumption?

Answer: All that is for you to decide. As far as we are concerned, those remarks amount to interference in our internal affairs.

Question: MEA’s response has been to the comment of Gen. Musharraf. You had mentioned he had reverted to time worn position. Would you reevaluate the steps you have taken in regard to Pakistan on the basis of this speech?

Answer: I think what his speech today has done is to enable us to reaffirm or to vindicate the position that we have taken, the apprehensions that we had expressed, as far as Pakistan’s commitment to fighting terrorism were concerned. We had expressed certain apprehensions and those apprehensions I believe are borne out by what he has said today.

Question: Yesterday Mr. Advani said that one of the Pakistani High Commission staff is involved in the Parliament attack, any comments?

Answer: Mr. Advani, our Home Minister has said that, and I will not comment on what he had said. I am here today to react to the statements that Pakistan has made, on the statement made by the Hon’ble Home Minister of Government of India you cannot expect me to react to that.

Question: But the Government of India has not taken action against the person concerned?

Answer: That is not for you and I to sit here and discuss. Those steps would be taken whenever considered necessary by the Government.
Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the demarche made to Pakistan regarding 20 fugitives hiding in Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 11, 2002

Ms. Rao: (The Official Spokesperson):

.. .the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan Mr. Jaleel Abbas Jelani was called in to the Ministry of External Affairs today and his attention was drawn to the list of 20 fugitives from law that had been handed over by India to Pakistan on 31st December 2001 seeking their apprehension and handing over. Further details in this regard had been provided to Pakistan on 18th January 2002. Attention was also drawn to the action of the UAE Government, which had apprehended and deported a terrorist and fugitive from law. It was reiterated that in the framework of international law and the current international consensus no support of any kind including safe haven should be provided to terrorism and to terrorists. It was regrettable therefore that Pakistan had so far taken no action to apprehend and hand over the terrorists and fugitives against most of whom there were Interpol red corner notices. If Pakistan was sincere in its recently declared commitment to fight against international terrorism, it must apprehend and hand over these persons to India. Pakistan was reminded that India awaited a response to the demarches made on 31st December 2001 and 18th January 2002.

Question: Today’s demarche was on the entire list of 20?
Answer: Yes, the entire list of 20.

Question: Was there any response from Pakistan?
Answer: The Deputy High Commissioner said that he would convey our demarche to his Government.

Question: Was this a third demarche?
Answer: Yes.

Question: Is the UNSC resolution 1373 applicable to such demarche?
Answer: Yes, because as you know 1373 is a resolution which is enforceable under Chapter VII and is mandatory for all member governments of the United Nations to take note, to take cognizance, to take action corresponding to what is stated in that resolution.

Question: You also have drawn the attention of the UAE Government’s example. But with UAE you have an extradition treaty whereas with Pakistan you have no such treaty?
Answer: No, Maya you have missed the point. With the UAE they were deported which is the sovereign right of any Government to be able to deport certain persons who are known to be criminals and fugitives. In fact I would also bring out in this connection that the authorities in Dubai took action on the basis of the information that has been provided by the Government of India in this case and they deported Aftab Ansari as an undesirable alien without insisting on going through the procedures of extradition. That is what we drew Pakistan’s attention to today in the meeting with the Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner.

Question: There are other fugitives and criminals in UAE like Anees Ibrahim, Dawood Ibrahim and Abu Salim against whom the Government of UAE have not taken any action. But this time they have deported small fry Aftab Ansari.

Answer: Well that is your own definition, whatever you call it, but I would only like to say that this is an excellent example of coordination and cooperation between two sovereign governments in dealing with the scourge of terrorism, in dealing with the apprehension of fugitives from the law and our cooperation and dialogue with the Government of UAE continue in regard to other cases that we have an interest in and on which we seek cooperation is continuing.

Question: Pakistan’s allegation that India was involved in the Pearl -Kidnapping case. Did this come up in today’s meeting?

Answer: No. Not to the best of my knowledge. But as you know we have rejected those allegations in entirety.

Question: What step would follow after this demarche?

Answer: Well, action by Pakistan, we hope. We are still awaiting action from Pakistan. We expect Pakistan to take action on the basis of what information we have provided to them. I think we have provided them with enough, with the case histories of these individuals, these fugitives and in the light of our experience with the Government of the UAE it shows that there are really no obstacles that lie in the way of Pakistan to cooperate with us on this case, on the cases of these 20. Unfortunately that cooperation has not been forthcoming.

Question: Aftab Ansari had a valid Pakistani passport? Any protest had been lodged?

Answer: Well, it is absolutely clear that this is yet another instance which proves in a conclusive way what India has been saying all along about Pakistani complicity and support for individuals and organizations and groups that have made it their sole agenda to indulge in terrorist and anti-India activity.

Thank you very much.
Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on some aspects of relations with Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 19, 2002.

Ms. Rao: Good Afternoon

There is an announcement, which I will read it out for you:

The Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan was summoned to the Ministry of External Affairs today, in the context of recent apprehension in Pakistan of Sheikh Omar Saeed in connection with the kidnapping of Wall Street journalist Daniel Pearl. It was pointed out to the Pakistani Deputy High Commissioner that Sheikh Omar Saeed would have information relevant to the hijacking of Indian Airlines aircraft IC-814 in December 1999 as well as the terrorist attacks on the State Assembly in Srinagar in October 2001 and on the Parliament in New Delhi in December 2001. The Government of Pakistan was requested to provide relevant information in this regard to the Government of India. Current international law and widespread international consensus today mandates all states to afford one another the greatest measure of assistance in connection with criminal investigations or criminal proceedings relating to terrorist acts including assistance in obtaining evidence in their possession.

Let me also add that the mandate we are referring to in this context is the specific mandate of UN Security Council Resolution 1373 which is a Chapter VII resolution and specifically mandates that such assistance should be provided.

Question: What was the Deputy High Commissioner’s response?

Answer: He said he would convey it to his government and of course he referred to the fact that their spokesmen yesterday had refuted the claim made by Sheikh Omar, to which we have said that we have our own information about this individual’s involvement in various terrorist acts and that after his release in Kandahar we know he had moved to Pakistan. His movement in Pakistan was facilitated by Pakistani agencies. He interacted with the hijackers of IC-814 and we believe he would have information on terrorist acts in India and in addition to this of course there is information implicating him in the attacks on the Srinagar Assembly and our Parliament.

Question: Is this based on the Pakistani media reports?

Answer: I said based on our own information. Of course media reports have introduced an additional saliency in this case but we have our own information.

Question: Anything on the list of 20 criminals was mentioned today?
Answer: No. What was focused on was the apprehension of Sheikh Omar.

Question: Did we ask for his extradition?

Answer: No, we asked for information. The point of emphasis here is that international law and international consensus especially in the context of UN Security Council Resolution 1373 specifically mandates such cooperation between the states in order to deal with international terrorism and to bring to justice perpetrators of such terrorist acts.

Question: Is this, the Government of India’s position that Sheikh Omar was involved in these attacks?

Answer: There is information certainly to suggest his involvement.

Question: In the past Pakistan has not been cooperating with India in such cases. Then how do we expect that they will take action?

Answer: Well, does that mean we should give up on seeking responsive behavior from Pakistan or meaningful action from Pakistan? It certainly doesn’t mean that we have given up on that.

Question: Why wouldn’t Pakistan....

Answer: Aunohita, that’s a legal issue, I don’t want to get into that. But all I would say is that the point at issue here is cooperation between countries to deal with terrorism. There is a specific international legal context involved here and there are specific principles that have been outlined in the Security Council resolution on this matter and we believe that meaningful action to deal with such issues is expected from all countries.

Question: Any independent confirmation that US have sought Omar Sheikh extradition?

Answer: No. I don’t have any specific information on that.

Question: Any comment on the new report on the Indus river treaty and that official meeting on the issue has been delayed?

Answer: Well the treaty continues to be in operation. There has been no change in that situation and such meetings of the sort which you are referring to between India and Pakistan are always determined on the basis of mutual convenience.

Question: Has India provided any information on the involvement of Omar Sheikh’s in these attacks? (to Bangladesh during the visit of its Foreign Minister Morshed Khan)

Answer: No. We mentioned it to the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan.
The information about the attack on our Parliament of December 13, that information we have been providing to Pakistan. It’s not that there is any absence of information or evidence on his involvement.

Question: Was it specific on Omar Sheikh?

Answer: Not specifically on the involvement of Omar Sheikh. I don’t believe so. I believe we referred to the recent press reports that have come out saying that he has claimed knowledge of the acts and that we would like specific information on that to be shared with us by the Pakistani authorities.

Question: Is this specific press reports or we have our own information?

Answer: We have our own information.

Question: On Indus river treaty?

Answer: The treaty continues to be in operation and meetings of the nature that you have referred will to be decided on the basis of mutual convenience between the two governments. The annual meeting was held last May. They have an annual meeting and the annual meeting of this year has not taken place so far. Dates for that will be fixed only through diplomatic channels and would be based on mutual convenience.

Ms. Rao: Aunohita coming back to your question. Here is somebody who was released at the time of the hijack. He was in prison; he was implicated for certain terrorist crimes. They were certain special circumstances as you know which led to his release and the fact is he disappeared from Kandahar and later resurfaced in Pakistan and he was facilitated entry into Pakistan obviously with the knowledge of the authorities and he has lived in Pakistan since then. Further more, there is the involvement of Jaish-e-Mohammad in the terrorist attacks on the Jammu and Kashmir State Assembly on October 1 2001 and the attack on our Parliament of December 13. The involvement of this specific individual with the JeM is well known.

Question: At the time hijack of IC-814 he was in prison? What kind of involvement does he have?

Answer: No, he was released at the time of hijack. He was a close associate of Masood Azhar, the founder of JeM and he was trained in terrorist camps in Afghanistan before he came into India. He was working on behalf, he was certainly a leading light in the terrorist network that has links with Al-Qaida and was involved in terrorist activities in India.

Question: Does he have indirect involvement with the hijack?

Answer: I am not saying that. I am saying that terrorism is the issue here. Involvement in terrorism, complicity in terrorist attacks. That is the point at issue.
Question: The attack on Jammu & Kashmir Assembly took place on October and the list of 20 criminals was given to Pakistan on December 31 2001. Any particular reason why Omar Sheikh's name was avoided?

Answer: I think I have mentioned this earlier also. The cases against him were withdrawn when he was released at the time of the hijack.

Question: inaudible

Answer: Well I will have to check on the specific circumstances, which were involved in the identification of each person on that list. I will have to check on that. But that doesn’t exempt him from the distinct terrorist profile that he possesses.
Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf expressed sorrow and dismay over the large scale communal violence in Gujarat in India. Deploring the February 27 train attack leading to the loss of more than 50 lives, he said in a statement that the incident could not provide licence for the reprehensible brutalities and violence against the Muslim community that had caused hundreds of deaths, destruction of property and desecration of Muslim religious places.

He said the measures taken by the Government of India for the protection of its Muslim minority which is the target of Hindu extremism and terrorism needed to be strengthened. He said the carnage must be brought to an end and all those responsible for the violence be arrested and punished.

The President said the violence and mayhem in India had again highlighted the dangers posed by politics of communalism and the forces of extremism and terrorism. The international community cannot afford to be complacent or take a biased view in responding to and combating this evil in whichever form it manifested and wherever it existed.

The Pakistan President was referring to the rioting in the State of Gujarat following the killing of 57 persons in the Faizabad - Ahmedabad Sabramati Express at Godhra railway station. At the media briefing on March 4, the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs when asked for her reaction to President Musharraf’s remarks said that it was a matter of concern that much of the statements that had come out of Pakistan following the unfortunate developments in Gujarat had “tended to border on exaggeration and total fabrication”, and that there was a “complete disrespect for the facts”. This she said left New Delhi with no option “except to draw the conclusion that Pakistan is seeking to drive a propagandist advantage from these developments and that is something we do not accept. There has been a consistent and a deliberate attempt to distort, to exaggerate and as I said to utilize the situation to Pakistan’s own propagandist ends.” Answering another question the Spokesperson Mrs. Nirupama Rao said that Pakistan’s reaction amounted to interference in India’s internal affairs.
1575. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on relations with Pakistan.

New Delhi, May 18, 2002.

Ms. Rao: Good Afternoon ladies and gentlemen.

You have already been informed after the meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Security by our External Affairs Minister Shri Jaswant Singh, of the decision taken to ask the Government of Pakistan to recall its High Commissioner in New Delhi and that decision has been conveyed to the Pakistan High Commission here through the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan Mr. Jalil Abbas Jilani. This matter was conveyed to Mr. Jilani by the Joint Secretary of the Pakistan Division in the Ministry of External Affairs, Mr. Arun Singh at around 1500 hrs today.

This is a significant step and the Government of India has after detailed examination of the situation decided on this measure because we have seen no diminution whatsoever in Pakistan’s support for terrorism. The rate and the figures of infiltration continue to be high. We have received reports of training camps for terrorists that continue to flourish on Pakistani territory and also in Pakistan occupied Kashmir and the attack in Kaluchak in Jammu on the 14th of May was testimony to the fact that Pakistan continues to aid and abet the process of infiltration into India and that the terrorism, cross-border terrorism is a continuing phenomenon that affects innocent people, innocent Indians, innocent men, women and children. The tragedy of Kaluchak I believed graphically illustrates that.

Question: Was any time frame being given?

Answer: We have indicated to the Pakistani High Commission that the recall of their High Commissioner should be completed within a week.

Question: In any case Ministry of External Affairs was not dealing with the High Commissioner of Pakistan. So what is the impact of this decision?

Answer: I have just said Ajay, what this development entails, what it signifies and why we have decided to take this step. I have just now explained the rationale behind it.

Question: But in any case MEA was not dealing with Mr. Qazi?

Answer: No, that is not the issue here. The issue is our conveying to Pakistan, our disappointment and our concern about the continuing lack of action by Pakistan to address our demands and our concerns and the massacre, the terrorist attack at Kaluchak has in a sense brought us to this juncture.
Question: Under what circumstances this step was taken. Has there been any precedence of such steps being taken?

Answer: I believe there was one instance where our High Commissioner was recalled from Islamabad. But I'll check the details and get back to you.

Question: Any other step being contemplated?

Answer: We will announce that as and when any further decisions are taken. But as of now this is an important step and we expect it to be followed it through.

Question: Secretary of State Mr. Powell spoke to EAM Shri Jaswant Singh few days ago. Was he told about this decision and what was transpired between them?

Answer: This is a sovereign decision of the Government of India. I don't think you should link it to conversations that may have transpired two days ago or whether it has figured in the discussions that we may have with another country. This is the sovereign decision of the Government of India and we would like to convey that this decision that has been taken on the basis of our assessment of the situation and that it is based on our considered judgment on what needs to be done. So the responsibility for it solely rests with the Government of India.

Question: Did Mr. Colin Powell give any assurances that Washington would exert pressure Islamabad?

Answer: I think you are aware of the discussions that were held during Assistant Secretary Rocca's visit here and the concerns that we have vis-a-vis Pakistan's lack of action in delivering on our demands on cross-border terrorism are well known to the Government of the United States of America and these have been reiterated to the US Administration on every occasion possible. So we have continued to convey these concerns to our interlocutors from the American side and this has been the case for almost every interaction we have had with the Americans over the last few days.

Question: Has any specific time-table been worked out for Deputy Secretary of State Mr. Armitage's visit to India?

Answer: No, there is no time-table.

Question: Has the Pakistani High Commissioner been declared persona-non-grata?

Answer: No, his recall has been asked for.

Question: Is GOI hoping that today’s decision would improve Indo-Pak relations?
Answer: No, we have reiterated our concerns, we have articulated them in ample measure on this occasion also. There can be no shying away from the fact that these terrorists who came into Jammu, to Kaluchak the other day, had infiltrated from across the border and that terrorism and cross-border terrorism which is promoted and instigated from across our border is entirely responsible for the current situation that we face and responsible also for generation of this tension.

Question: When did we downgrade the Pakistan High Commission?

Answer: On December 27, 2001 the strength of the two High Commissions were reduced by 50 per cent.

ThankYou.

1576. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, May 18, 2002.

Pakistan has decided to recall its High Commissioner Ashraf Jehangir Qazi from New Delhi after the Indian Government asked for his withdrawal amidst growing military tension between the two countries. The Pakistan Government dubbed the Indian decision as an act that would add to the tense situation between the two countries.

Foreign Office Spokesman Aziz Ahmed Khan said the Pakistan Government had noted with disappointment the decision of the Government of India to ask for the withdrawal of the High Commissioner in New Delhi. “The Pakistan Government will continue to work for the de-escalation of the tension between Pakistan and India and for complete normalization of diplomatic relations between the two countries,” Mr. Aziz Khan said. “For the sake of parity of the relationship between the two countries, the Pakistan High Commissioner is being asked to go back to Islamabad.” (The Indian Government had withdrawn its High Commissioner from Islamabad after the attack on the Indian Parliament in December 2001.)

He said Pakistan was opposed to terrorism in all its forms and it had nothing to do with the Jammu incident and added Pakistan, as a member of the international coalition against terrorism is sincerely fulfilling its obligation under the UN Security Council resolutions and would continue to do so. He called upon India to avoid levelling baseless allegations against Pakistan.

He said India’s move only heighten the tension between the two “nuclear-capable rivals by hampering the communication between them”. “When India decided to recall its High Commissioner in December we did not take a reciprocal action because we felt that our diplomatic representation at the highest level should be maintained so that tall issues with India should be resolved through dialogue and through peaceful means. Action like these add to tension whereas efforts should be to reduce tension,” he said.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Meanwhile Pakistan High Commissioner Qazi warned the same day that the tension in South Asia could further rise if India follows up his expulsion with more “negative steps” against Islamabad. My expulsion will not help alleviate the situation and we hope this step will not be followed by more negative steps which will further exacerbate the situation”, Qazi told the AFP in New Delhi adding that he would soon leave New Delhi. He rejected India’s charge that the three gun men who staged the May 14 massacre were Pakistani nationals and said the only chance of reducing the soaring the military tension was through bilateral dialogue. “The accusation that Pakistan is responsible for the incident in which the civilians lost their lives and which has been condemned by Pakistan is absolutely ridiculous,” Mr. Qazi said.

On May 22 a joint meeting of the Pakistan Cabinet and National Security Council expressed deep concern at the dangers posed to the regional and international peace by the Indian deployment of troops on Pakistan’s borders and the Line of Control as well as threatening and aggressive statements by the Indian leadership. The meeting presided over by President Pervez Musharraf stressed the need for de-escalation of tension and pull back of troops on both sides to peace time locations. According to an official announcement the Ministers and Members of the NSC supported the Government’s policy to work for defusing tension with India while remaining fully prepared and vigilant to meet any contingency resolutely and with full force. The meeting called upon the international community to impress on New Delhi the dangers inherent in the explosive situation created as a result of Indian belligerence and obduracy.
1577. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the farewell call by Pakistani High Commissioner Ashraf Jehangir Qazi on Foreign Secretary Mrs. Chokila Iyer.

New Delhi, May 22, 2002.

Ms. Rao: Good Afternoon ladies and gentlemen.

... the outgoing Pakistan High Commissioner Mr. Ashraf Jehangir Qazi made a courtesy call on the Foreign Secretary this afternoon, which lasted for half an hour. During the meeting the opportunity was utilized by Foreign Secretary Mrs. Iyer to convey our disappointment that this meeting was taking place under the present circumstances and that Pakistan's current approach towards India and its reliance on violence and terrorism is unacceptable. It was mentioned to High Commissioner Qazi that our leadership had taken several significant initiatives to put bilateral relations on a path that would lead to peace and friendship and cooperation between the two countries and that achieving this objective had been the common strand that underlined all our initiatives whether they were the composite dialogue initiatives or the Lahore and Agra Summit level meetings. We stated that once Pakistan's leadership is able to discern the obvious benefits of a peaceful and cooperative relationship with India and it gives up the path of violence then a climate conducive for good neighbourly ties could be established. But time and our experience have proved otherwise. Our feeling is that the problem lies in the basic attitude of compulsive hostility towards India that we see coming from Pakistan and its unwillingness to give up the path of violence as reflected in the continued sponsorship of cross border terrorism. It was conveyed to Mr. Qazi that the December 13 attack of the Parliament was a watershed in terms of the sentiment and the anger among our political leadership and the Indian people. The feeling today is that tolerance for terrorism has only encouraged more terrorist violence. Over the last number of days we have seen a number of statements emanating from the Pakistani side including from their High Commissioner here and it is our feeling that Pakistan is still trying to ignore the mood and the determination of this country to fight terrorism, and therefore it was felt necessary to reiterate our considered position on these issues to the Pakistan High Commissioner today. We also mentioned that it is quite clear from the response that is emanating from the international community that nobody is prepared to believe or to accept the Pakistan Government's denial of involvement in cross border terrorism in India. This is reflected in several comments appearing in the international media and as well as private and public comments emanating from different governments. There is a consensus today in the international community that the so called crackdown announced on terrorists following President Musharraf's January 12 speech has been rolled back and this roll back and the cosmetic nature of the measures announced after January 12 have been extensively discussed in various sections of the media and various quarters of international public opinion. We have seen that a large number of the terrorist cadres who were arrested have been released. Terrorist leaders reportedly under “arrest” continue to function and direct their cadres and training camps have been relocated or have been reopened. Therefore the true intentions as far as the pursuit of terrorism and terrorist strategies are concerned have become apparent to all. Similarly we find Pakistan’s argument on the lack of evidence completely untenable. The Interpol red corner notices issued against most of the individuals figuring on the list provide, we believe, the Pakistan Government with adequate basis to take actions against these criminal and terrorists. It is unfortunate that Pakistan has chosen not to act on the basis of that information and we are afraid that such obfuscatory arguments as have been used by Pakistan further indicate that country’s true intentions. It was once again conveyed that Pakistan would have to end cross border terrorism. It would be incorrect to view the current situation merely in terms of an attempt by India to, and here I will use the words used by High Commissioner Qazi, “ratchet up tensions”. It is not to be viewed in that context. Our patience with terrorism has been exhausted. Since December 13 the steps that we have taken to deal with the situation that confronts us have been measured, they have been gradual No one in India takes the possibility of war lightly. Similarly Pakistan should have no illusions about the fact that the state of Jammu and Kashmir is and will be an integral part of India. We remain committed to the path of dialogue. Pakistan’s continued sponsorship of cross border terrorism is a clear indication to us that Pakistan is not yet prepared to engage in substantive and meaningful dialogue with India or to establish normal state to state relations.

Question: Did Pakistan High Commissioner say anything to Foreign Secretary?

Answer: I don’t think there was anything new in what he had to convey to us. You have seen the ventilation of Pakistan’s opinion - and as is usual one sees this through the media - and these points were basically, all that Pakistan has had to say on the subject.

Question: When is he leaving Delhi?

Answer: He is leaving on Saturday.

Question: There is a statement from the US that it still trusts in General Musharraf. What do you have to say about that?

Answer: The basic point we have sought to make as far as the world community is concerned is that Pakistan has to realize that it cannot engage in cross border terrorism while claiming to be fighting terrorism vis-a-vis Afghanistan and we hope that in the days to come, there will be a clear enunciation of this position by the world community also.

Question: But the fact is that the US is still trusting Musharraf...

Answer: I think you will have to read the full text. There is an obvious recognition I believe and that is shared by all sections of world opinion and by a number of countries including the United States that President Musharraf of Pakistan has to do much more to tackle the issue, the scourge of cross border terrorism.

Question: State Department’s report on terrorism. Are you satisfied with the report?

Answer: As far as the tackling of the issue of terrorism is concerned the fact is that India has battled this scourge for over 2 decades now. I think the world community, every section of the world community is fully cognizant of the efforts that we have made to fight terrorism, to root out the activities of the terrorist groups, and the very legitimate struggle that we are waging against the forces of cross border terrorism. I think that is recognized whether it is in South Asia or in the region or whether it is in the world at large.

Question: You mentioned that India’s patience with terrorism has been exhausted. What will be the next step?

Answer: Well, it has been exhausted... obviously we will not be able to tell you what the next step is. But obviously the efforts that we are continuing to make, to sensitize world opinion to our case have not been exhausted. We will continue to make those efforts. But as far as the defence of our vital interests is concerned and you have heard our Prime Minister’s speech at Kupwara today, I think we have made it very clear to the world community where we stand on this issue and the fact that the whole nation is united against terrorism. Our war against terrorism is just as legitimate as any other country’s war against terrorism. There is justice, there is legitimacy in our position and I believe that the world is increasingly recognizing that. We have seen how the 12th January commitment made by the Pakistan Government has not been implemented and our assessment is that infiltration and sponsorship of terrorist acts, attempts to disrupt and sabotage the return to peace and normalcy and holding of elections in Jammu and Kashmir, these are all items on the agenda of forces arrayed against India across our border and we have to be vigilant to it and we have told the world community that we have every right to defend our interests in response to this situation. The sense of anger in this country, the unanimous resolution that was adopted by Parliament recently, they all point to this depth of opinion, to the united approach of this country to resist the forces of terrorism. As a democratic nation we cannot be expected to countenance this sort of situation indefinitely.
Question: Was there any high level contact with other countries since yesterday?

Answer: The External Affairs Minister Shri Jaswant Singh spoke to the Russian Foreign Minister Mr. Igor Ivanov last evening. The subject of the discussion as you may have guessed was the current situation along our borders, the relationship with Pakistan and we have conveyed our concerns and our perspective to the Russian side and you must have seen the press release issued by the Russian Foreign Office today which refers to that conversation. The Russian release refers to the fact that special attention was devoted to the situation in South Asia, where a sharp growth of tension has been observed lately in the wake of the actions by the terrorists based in Pakistan controlled territory.

Thank You.

---

1578. Excerpts from the speech of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee at the CICA Summit.

Almaty (Kazakhstan), June 4, 2002.

* * * * *

We have heard President Musharraf talk about tensions in South Asia and offer a dialogue between India and Pakistan.

Distinguished Delegates, in this room we recall that on January 12 the President of Pakistan had publicly made two promises—One, that Pakistan will not allow its territory to be used to promote terrorism anywhere in the world. Two, that no organisation will be allowed to indulge in terrorism in the name of Kashmir.

We have seen in the following months that cross-border infiltration has increased, violence in Jammu and Kashmir has continued unabated and terrorist camps operate unhindered across our border. On May 27, President Musharraf has again made the commitment that cross border infiltration will stop. You would agree that the past record makes us very cautious about accepting such promises unquestioningly. If we see that action on the ground correspond to the promises made by President Musharraf we will naturally take appropriate consequent steps.
As far as India–Pakistan dialogue is concerned, it is India which has always taken the initiative for it. In the space of the last four years, I have been to Lahore and invited President Musharraf to Agra. We have repeatedly said that we are willing to discuss all issues with Pakistan including Jammu and Kashmir. But for that cross-border terrorism has to end.

On June 7 the US Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage said that President Musharraf had been “quite categorical” that the infiltration across the Line of Control would be stopped permanently. He said “General Musharraf made it very clear that he was going to do everything in his power to avoid war consistent with, as he said, the national honour and dignity of Pakistan”. Speaking in Estonian capital on June 8, Armitage said that the message had been conveyed to the Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and it had “found some favour in New Delhi”. “The Indian Government noted that Gen. Musharraf made his commitment to the international community, to the USA and they will be watching to see if the actions follow the words”, he said. Responding the External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh talking to US Secretary of State Gen. Powell on the telephone described Musharraf’s pledge to end infiltration as a “step forward in the right direction”. A Statement from the External Affairs Ministry said Gen. Powell had called Mr. Singh to discuss the India–Pakistan situation. “Mr. Jaswant Singh informed Mr. Powell that India welcomes the pledge that Gen. Musharraf has given to Mr. Armitage about immediately and permanently ending the cross-border infiltration of terrorists into Jammu and Kashmir,” said the statement of MEA. “Its implementation on the ground will be carefully assessed, whereafter, as Mr. Vajpayee has already stated, India will respond appropriately and positively”, it said. “An irreversible end to infiltration requires that the infrastructure of support to cross-border terrorism within Pakistan and Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir be also dismantled. India’s commitment to lasting peace remains undiluted.” 1579. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the removal of restrictions on Pakistani aircraft over-flying Indian territory.

New Delhi, June 21, 2002.

Ms. Rao: Good Afternoon, Ladies and Gentlemen.

Question: Regarding lifting of restriction on Pakistani flights over Indian airspace...and the comments of Major General Rashid Qureshi on the subject...

Answer: No we are awaiting for an official response from the Government of Pakistan to our offer, our decision to remove the restrictions on over flights of Pakistani airlines and Pakistani civil aircraft, and we are yet to receive a response from the Government of Pakistan. I would not like to comment on the sort of comments to which you just referred. We await an official communication from the Government of Pakistan on the subject.

Question: But the Pakistan’s spokesperson have said that they have not received any notification in this regard from the Government of India?

Answer: No, I think that again there seems to be some disinformation that has been spread on this subject. Our Ministry of Civil Aviation has said very clearly that there is no notice to airmen required no NOTAM required. There was no NOTEM issued when the required. There was no NOTAM issued when the restrictions were imposed on January 1st. Similarly no NOTAM is required for the removal of these restrictions. All that the Pakistani aircraft have to do is to file for clearances for flight plans as and when they decide to resume over flights. This has been very clearly stated.

Question: (inaudible)

Answer: I think all these statement that you have referred to fall into the general class, the generic hostility that you see emanating from Pakistan and the Pakistani spokesperson on the subject. The offer we have made, the proposal we have outlined, is a genuine one and we hope Pakistan will respond to it in an appropriate manner.

Question: Would you like to comment on the Defence Minister statement that there is no infiltration?

Answer: well, the infiltration has gone down and I think the Defence Minister clearly referred to that development. But is is still too early to take those steps which I assume you are referring to when you talk since he said very clearly that military de-escalation is a long way off. There is still a lot of action that we expect from Pakistan in terms of dismantlement of the infrastructure of terrorism in terms of permanent, visible, satisfactory action on the ground in response to the pledges and assurances that the Government of Pakistan has made on the subject.

Question: is there any possibility that the leaders of the all Party Hurriyat Conference (APHC) would be allowed to go to Pakistan?

Answer: You will have to address that question to the Ministry of Home Affairs.

Question: Referring to a recent statement by the Pakistani Minister of Religious Affairs saying there is an indigenous struggle, and no terrorism, in Kashmir, and that until India discussed the issue of Kashmir, there would be no Pakistani response to the offer of resumption of over flights It is alleged that the Policy in India is against the Muslim community and the Kashmiri have every right to Jihad?

Answer: No, the other day one of our friends asked me a similar question to the effect that Pakistan had made such statement. I think there is nothing new in what you have just mentioned just now. Pakistan refuses to formulate and to articulate a serious vision for peace and reconciliation in our region What you see is the same tired, worn, rhetoric coming from various quarters of the Pakistani establishment. There is very little, genuine desire, an absence, I would say, of any genuine desire for dialogue, for reconciliation, for resolution of outstanding issue through consultation, through interaction between India and Pakistan.

Thank You.

(Text in italics is translation from Hindi text)
Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on some aspects of Relations with Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 24, 2002.

Question: Do you have any response to what Musharraf has said in his latest interviews with Newsweek and BBC?

Answer: We have seen both the interview to Newsweek as also transcript of the interview given by President General Musharraf to the BBC.

Pakistan has committed itself to fighting terrorism. This is an unambiguous and clear commitment lending itself to no other interpretations. It has been conveyed to us in categorical terms that commitments about permanently ending infiltration of terrorists across the LOC have repeatedly been given by General Musharraf. Despite some occasional verbal calisthenics by Pakistan, this is the commitment that remains, undiluted.

I have nothing more to add.

Question: Do you think that India-Pakistan relations is back to square one?

Answer: No, we want Pakistan to abide, adhere and take action on the basis of these pledges and commitments, verbal calisthenics will not do. There is no point in getting tongue-tied about this. Certain commitments and pledges were made and we expect action on those commitments to end terrorism, to end infiltration and to dismantle the infrastructure of terrorism.

Question: Who has conveyed these pledges and commitments to us?

Answer: These have been conveyed to us at the highest level during the visits of Deputy Secretary Armitage and Defence Secretary Rumsfeld. Secretary of State Colin Powell has referred to it in his public statements.

Question:

Answer: We want Pakistan to abide by those commitments. My statement makes it very clear.

Question: Do you think General Musharraf is going back from his commitments?

Answer: There is no question of going back on those commitments. These are commitments on which Pakistan must deliver if we are to see lasting peace and stability in our region, if we are to see reduction of tensions, if we are see further measures to reduce tensions.
Question: But General is very very clear in pointing out that measures taken by India is self-serving. He mentioned the removal of overflight restriction and also the positioning of Indian Naval force in high sea doesn’t bother Pakistan but was bothering Indians themselves and so India decided to withdraw. Any comments?

Answer: I don’t intend to reply to displays of irrational anger and frustration. I don’t believe that these are well considered deliberate responses of the sort that we expect to the very concrete, very forward reaching measures that we have taken to reduce tensions and obviously it is Pakistan that refuses to see the writing on the wall, it refuses to recognize the need to permanently end terrorism and it is therefore necessary for all of us who are fighting terrorism, who are engaged in this struggle against forces of terror to remind Pakistan of its commitment and to seek concrete action on the basis of the pledges made by Pakistan.

Question: You have said earlier there was a perceptible decline in infiltration. Yet Prime Minister said that infiltration has not been reduced.

Answer: I think you should see the sense of what underlies that statement. I think we are yet to see any definite trends towards permanent end to infiltration and I have said that all along. There has been some decline. We are yet to see on the ground a permanent trend that suggests that infiltration is tapering off, is coming to a definite end. We have said consistently that we have to see the situation for a longer time to see whether these trends are established.

Question: But the Defence Minister went on record to say that the infiltration has almost stopped?

Answer: No, but there again, it is true that he said that. But is this the definite trend that we can see established from now on for an indefinite period of time? We are unable to say that at the moment. July has traditionally been a month of high ingress, of high infiltration. Obviously we have to monitor the situation further in terms of what Pakistan needs to do to dismantle the infrastructure of terrorism, to literally pull the plumbing out as we have said.

Question: Musharraf has said that he did not make any such commitments to end infiltration permanently?

Answer: That is what we call verbal calisthenics. Certain pledges have been made. Certain definite commitments have been made and we have seen the statements to that effect coming from the foreign interlocutors who have interacted with President General Musharraf in recent weeks and months. It has been definitely established that these statements have been made.
Question: Do you think India needs to re-look at its policy towards Pakistan?

Answer: Let us see how the situation develops and obviously if Pakistan is unable to fulfill its pledges and is reneging on its commitments, we will have to take a closer look at what needs to be done and where we go from here.

Question: The Pakistan Foreign Office Spokesperson has said that they are considering to reciprocate India’s removal of restriction of over flight facilities?

Answer: Well, I don’t believe that we have received any official communications on this. We are awaiting an official response from Pakistan. Our decision was conveyed to them exactly two weeks ago and our offer stands.

Question: General Musharraf has said that the situation along the border is explosive and dangerous. Do you agree with that?

Answer: If there is any reason to describe that situation as explosive and dangerous, it is explosive and dangerous because of the threat of infiltration and terrorism that India faces from across the line of control and along the international border.

Question: Do you think that Verbal calisthenics as you call it is for domestic consumption in Pakistan?

Answer: That is for you to interpret. I am just pointing to the fact that pledges are pledges. I don’t believe that nations can go back on their pledges.

Ms. Rao: Let me also inform you that Foreign Secretary Straw called the EAM this afternoon. They had a conversation that lasted about 10 minutes which was focused on the current situation in the region.

Thank you.

New Delhi, July 15, 2002.

In response to a question the Official Spokesperson stated that the terrorist attack in Jammu on Saturday, July 13, 2002 was most condemnable. The Deputy Prime Minister will be making a statement in Parliament tomorrow.* Meanwhile, we have seen statements and have received messages from different countries strongly condemning the incident and reiterating the imperative need for the international community to join together to eradicate terrorism wherever it exists. The UK Foreign Secretary, the French Foreign Minister and the US Secretary of State have spoken to EAM.

* In his statement in the Lok Sabha on July 16 the Deputy Prime Minister, L.K. Advani, stated that the Government would tackle the menace (of terrorism) on its own and that it also recognised that all countries acted in their own national interest. Mr. Advani stated that the world was slowly understanding that Pakistan was the epicentre of terrorism. Mr. Advani spelled out the larger Jammu and Kashmir policy. The State, he asserted, was “not a disputed territory” and that it was in fact “an integral part of India” on which “there can be no compromise”. He also assuaged the fears expressed by the Opposition of the growing interference by Western powers, saying that there would be “no mediation” on the issue. He also rejected the demand for a trifurcation or bifurcation of the State along communal lines, but said there was need for equitable development of all regions. He defended the Government’s earlier rejection of the demand for autonomy by the State as it was for a return to the pre-1953 status; the Centre was though willing to talk about additional powers for the State. The Deputy Prime Minister claimed as an achievement the “big difference” between “Agra and Almaty” in the language emanating from Pakistan and the Western countries. Today, instead of talking about terrorists as freedom fighters, Pakistan was forced to recognise that killing of innocent people was an act of terrorism. Western nations were also beginning to see Pakistan as the “epicentre of world terrorism”. However, “their assessment” was — with which India did not agree — that “Musharraf was the best bet to stop terrorism” originating in Pakistan. Mr. Advani said that his Government had traced and smashed “154 ISI modules” and that he had increased the fund for modernisation of the State police force to Rs. 60 crores in the last two years.
Question: India has asked the US to declare Pakistan as a terrorist state and they have refused to do so. In fact they have announced multi million aid to them. What do you have to say about this?

Answer: If you listened carefully to what the Deputy Prime Minister said in Parliament day before yesterday, he had said if you want to put pressure on Pakistan, this is one way of doing it. One way of doing it would be to declare Pakistan a terrorist state. He had said it in that context. As far as India is concerned, the situation, the circumstances fully warrant Pakistan being declared as state sponsor of terrorism and this is what we have been saying consistently. There has been no change, no alteration in our approach. Of course it is up to the countries concerned to take necessary steps in this regard. That is a decision that we will have to leave to those countries. But here I am outlining what our position is on the subject and as far as the assistance being extended to Pakistan we have seen a lot of assistance extended for its ostensible support in the war against terrorism. Our views on that are well known. Our approach to this issue has been that Pakistan cannot distinguish between good terrorists and bad terrorists. It cannot distinguish between terrorism in Afghanistan and terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir. It cannot have different definitions for this subject, for this issue, because the scourge of terrorism is common to us all and there cannot be any drawing of distinctions between groups of terrorists and we are yet to see satisfactory action and steps being taken by Pakistan to end cross border terrorism, to stop infiltration. Pakistan has for whatever reason refused to deliver on the commitments, on the pledges it has made on this issue.

Question: Mr. Trubnikov also said that one of reasons why Pervez Musharraf cannot control cross border terrorism is due to terrorism in Pakistan also. What do you have to say about this?

Answer: We believe that Pakistan has the ability to stop terrorism against India, directed against India. There is no doubt in our minds that the responsibility for terrorist acts and terrorist activities over the last two decades in India is attributable mainly to the sponsorship and the support of Pakistan and forces aligned to the Pakistani state for such terrorism. So as far as we are concerned what we tell all our friends in the international community is that Pakistan needs to act and act quickly on this. Our patience is not interminable.
Question: Report in UNI on the our not sending our High Commissioner to Islamabad?

Answer: Well, the question of any roll back in the steps and measures that we had announced, any further roll back on the measures that we had announced towards the end of December last year following the attack on our Parliament on December 13 can be taken up, can be considered, only if Pakistan takes action to end infiltration, stops cross border terrorism. We have made ourselves very clear on this. The External Affairs Minister has reiterated our well considered position on this matter that it is only when Pakistan ends, permanently ends, cross border terrorism directed against India that we will take appropriate reciprocal measures.

Question: Any response from Pakistan on the removal of restriction on over flights?

Answer: There has been no response.

Question: There have been 97 attempts at infiltration in June, according to the Defence Ministry?

Answer: What it indicates is that there has been no closure so far, there has been no permanent end to infiltration, that Pakistan has not given up its ways, that Pakistan continues to sponsor, to aid, to abet terrorism, that Pakistan presides over this giant holding company of terrorism, that it is the epicenter of terrorism in our region. That is what that those figures point to.

Question: What would be the agenda of talks with Jack Straw?

Answer: Obviously, I can’t give away what our position is, what our brief is for the talks. The situation in the region will be discussed and our concerns regarding terrorism, regarding the continuance of infiltration, regarding the lack of satisfactory response or action by Pakistan will be powerfully articulated.

Question: What do wee feel about today’s decision of the US to give aid to Pakistan?

Answer: Our views in this regard will be conveyed to the Americans. We are not going to discuss this through the media.

Thank you very much.
Interview of External Affairs Minister Yashwant Sinha with the BBC.

New Delhi, September 14, 2002.

Question: It has been given out by Pakistan that infiltration into the Indian administered Kashmir has stopped.

Answer: No, that is not true. The infiltration has been continuing and it still continues.

Question: President Bush says that Pakistan has intimated America that there is no infiltration from Pakistan side.

Answer: Mr. Colin Powell told me when I met him that he would put pressure on Musharraf to stop cross border terrorism. Now, if there is no infiltration then why should Colin Powell say that he would put pressure and that is what President Bush told the Prime Minister yesterday when they met. So there is no question of putting pressure for something, which is not happening. The fact remains that it is happening. It has increased and Pakistan is directly responsible for it.

Question: President Bush while summing up yesterday said that the U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan is on a move beyond crisis management in Kashmir in order to resolve underlying problem. What is your response to that?

Answer: Very good point, I think. If we go beyond the terrorism into the root causes of terrorism, then we should go and talk to Osama Bin Laden also, to find out why he did, what he did. It is a very dangerous and slippery path to try and go into the root causes of terrorism. Terrorism is the killing of innocent people. This is bad. It is evil. There is no way in which this kind of thing can be justified in any situation. No cause in this world can justify killing of innocent people, women and children.

Question: But sooner or later you will have to enter into a political dialogue on the future of Kashmir.

Answer: Twice, we have taken the initiative. And we wanted to start a dialogue. But the dialogue could not proceed because of the obstinacy of Pakistan.

Question: General Musharraf in his speech at the General Assembly said that he had given so much but he had got nothing back from India.

Answer: He is giving so much. He is killing our people everyday. He is killing our people; only the other day a minister of Jammu and Kashmir government was killed, by the terrorists. What was his great fault? His great fault was that he was seeking re-election. His great sin was that he was addressing a political meeting, election meeting. Why was he killed? Will somebody explain? Why the minister of Jammu and Kashmir was killed.
Question: There are elections next week. What assurances can you give in view of Pakistan's contention that the elections would be rigged?

Answer: I have to give no assurance. We do not have to give any assurance to a military dictator in Pakistan about the conducting of elections in India. What kind of elections has he conducted in Pakistan? Ninety percent referendum. All rigged. He has admitted it. He has no right to speak about democracy. He has no right to speak about the conduct of elections in India. We have conducted elections over the last fifty years and the world recognizes that India is the greatest democracy. We are not going to ask for certificates about our democracy from General Musharraf.

Question: So, is there any prospect of pulling your forces back and end this stand off.

Answer: We will not. Why should we pull out forces back? And those who are advising us to pull our forces back should remember that when there was the Soviet Union, NATO had its forces eyeball to eyeball with the Soviet forces in Europe for forty long years. There is something called defensive mobilization. What we have done is defensive mobilization. That is if Pakistan were to indulge in any kind of adventure we will be there to defend our territory. And I think, that is the right that every sovereign nation enjoys in this world.

Question: So you see no prospect of the current massive mobilization.

Answer: I see a prospect. The prospect is very simple. The simplest thing that Pakistan has to do is to stop cross-border terrorism. The moment they do that, we have created a conducive atmosphere for a dialogue, for the withdrawal of forces and for moving forward. If that does not happen and Pakistan continues to indulge in violence which we have enough proof. The fact remains that Pakistan is creating violence and we cannot talk to Pakistan as long as that violence continues.
Response of Official Spokesperson to a query regarding the release of Masood Azhar in Pakistan.

New Delhi, December 14, 2002.

Shri Navtej Sarna: Good Afternoon Ladies and Gentlemen.

We have seen reports of release by an Appeals Court in Lahore of Masood Azhar, the terrorist leader of the organization Jaish-e-Mohammad which today stands banned even in Pakistan.

It is quite clear that investigation and charges against Masood Azhar have not been pursued by Pakistani authorities with any seriousness. Initially, when his detention had been claimed about a year ago, it transpired that it was not him but someone else who had been arrested. Even when he was first in prison, he was allowed contact with his cadres and to continue with his activities. Subsequently, he was conveniently placed in the comfort of detention in his own home and the Pakistani authorities even paid money to the family. This is not surprising since it is well known that it is the Pakistani State and its agencies which have been involved in the building up of the terrorist structures such as the Jaish-e-Mohammad and Lashkar-a-Toiba. As is well known, the leader of LeT Hafiz Saeed was also similarly released recently. The banned terrorist organization LeT has been allowed to continue its activities in another name, hold its annual convention and to bring out its proscribed publications.

Even while well established democratic leaders were not allowed to contest the recent manipulated elections in Pakistan, many who are linked even to banned terrorist organizations were allowed, and charges against several withdrawn at the last moment.

It is against this background that one has also seen reports of Anees Ibrahim having been spirited away to Pakistan, the well established safe haven for terrorists. Ibrahim, who had been recently detained in Dubai, had arrived there from Pakistan. He was in the list of 20 whose handing over had been sought by India, including since December last year. Pakistan had falsely claimed that none of the persons in the list were in that country. Subsequently, President Musharraf had, in his January 12 speech, disingenuously suggested that no Pakistani national would be handed over, but Indian nationals had not been given asylum. Hence the recourse to the ploy to give Pakistani nationality to such persons sought to be sheltered. The seeking and grant of such nationality also points unambiguously to the complicity of Pakistani authorities with these terrorists.

The Sikh Jatha from India that had gone to Pakistan in November also noticed the presence of three well known terrorists, whose handing over had also been sought by India. Even in their case, Pakistan had denied their presence.

It is well known that Al Qaida and Taliban remnants are today largely based in Pakistan, which is the epicenter for terrorism in the world. Any strategy which seeks to ignore Pakistan’s own involvement with and sponsorship of terrorism and focuses, even for the short term, only on the unwilling and limited support provided in search of a few of the hard core Al Qaida, will never see long term victory against the hydra-headed monster of terrorism, which with its mutating agenda, structure and motivation is able to develop capacity to strike even at far off places.

It is quite clear that Pakistan is continuing with the policy of terrorism as an instrument of its State policy, in violation of international law, and its own publicly declared commitments. Whether Pakistan has an unvarnished military dictatorship or an electoral varnish is put on it, their mindset and policies as evidenced by the putting back in circulation of Masood Azhar remain unchanged. We will, of course, continue to take the necessary steps to safeguard our national security.

Thank you.

◆◆◆◆◆
1585. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the question of definition of “terrorism”.

New Delhi, December 23,2002.

Shri Navtej Sarna: Good Evening Ladies and Gentlemen.

Question: .. .General Musharraf in an interview with Iranian Television said that Pakistan is ready to accept the definition of terrorism formulated by UN. I think there has been lot of formulations on terrorism by UN. What is your comment on that statement?-

Answer: Well, you are absolutely right. The UN Security Council has addressed the issue of terrorism and has condemned it in all its forms. In fact I can give you chapter and verse. The UN Security Council Resolution 1377 adopted by the Security Council at its 4413th meeting on 12th November 2001 had the following formulation:

“Reaffirms the unequivocal condemnation of all acts, methods and practices of terrorism as criminal and unjustifiable, regardless of their motivation, in all their forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomever committed”.

I think that’s specific enough.

Question: India and the United States have been working on counter terrorism. US have told India that it will put pressure to end terrorism. Is US working sincerely to curb Pakistan’s terrorism?

Answer: Well, India and the United States are partners in the global war against terrorism and we have also bilateral cooperation in terrorism. There is a Joint Working Group between India and the US which has been working on terrorism and on this issue we have spoken several times at several levels. A lot needs to be done to end cross border terrorism and obviously if sufficient amount has not been done by Pakistan Government otherwise we would have had an end to cross border terrorism.

Question: Our Prime Minister and EAM have spoken about double standards by west in dealing with terrorism. Any comments?

Answer: The Joint Working Group works at a functional level between the two countries. They meet regularly, they interact with each other, and they open channels for exchange for information and various other things within their mandate. However, what the statements that you are referring to are aimed to end any artificial distinction that may be made between good terrorists and bad terrorists.
Question: Do you have any reaction to President Musharraf’s statement?
Answer: Well, I don’t want to react to his statement. He has simply said that the UN Security Council should lay a definition I have given you one of the definitions that UN Security Council has given. The essential formulation is that all acts, methods and practices of terrorism have been denounced as criminal and unjustifiable regardless of their motivation, in all their forms and manifestations.

Question: Was any other issue also discussed between Arun Singh and Jilani?
Answer: Well, I understand that other issues were more of a housekeeping nature, issue of visas, issue of fishermen, etc.

Question: Was the issue of SAARC discussed?
Answer: No.

1586. Question in the Lok Sabha: “Terrorist Country Status to Pak.”
New Delhi, March 12, 2003.

Will the Minister of External Affairs be pleased to state:

(a) whether the Government have urged the US Government to declare Pakistan a terrorist State;

(b) if so, the details thereof; and

(c) if not, whether the Government propose to mount pressure on U.S. and other countries to declare Pakistan a terrorist State

The Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs (Shri Vinod Khanna):

(a) and (b) Government believes that Pakistan displays all the characteristics of a state sponsor of terrorism. It has consistently conveyed this assessment to international community, including the United States. It is for the United States Government to consider whether Pakistan meets the criteria for designation as a State sponsor of terrorism under United States laws.

(c) Government uses very opportunity to apprise” the international community of Pakistan’s continuing sponsorship of cross-border terrorism against India and Government’s firm resolve to use all appropriate means to defeat it.

........(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: He knows the procedure, but he wanted the House to be apprised once again.

Dr. Vijay Kumar Malhotra: Mr. Speaker, Sir, Pakistan has been waging shadow war against India for the last 15 years in which our 60 thousand civilians and 6 thousand army personnel have been killed. I want to ask the hon. Minister whether India has asked America that the definition of terrorism for Afghanistan and Iraq is different from the one for Pakistan?

America’s attitude towards terrorism shows that its opinion about Afghanistan and Iraq is different from its opinion about Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan is promoting terrorism. Have we held a dialogue with America in this regard?

The Minister of External Affairs (Shri Yashwant Sinha): Mr. Speaker, Sir, Hon. Member is right that India has been a victim of terrorism for the last 15-20 years and Pakistan is the source of this terrorism. As far as international community is concerned, we draw the attention of America and other nations towards this that we have sufficient proof against Pakistan than American has against the nations whom it has held responsible for terrorism. As per their rules if any nation deserves to be in such a category, it is Pakistan. We go on telling them.

Dr. Vijay Kumar Malhotra: Mr. Speaker, Sir, America has kept Pakistan in the most favoured category. It has extended financial assistance of 20 thousand crore rupees to Pakistan recently and Pakistan is spending the money received from America in waging shadow war against India. India expects friendship from America and it is supporting our barbaric enemy and biggest terrorist nation. Have we protested against this action of America.

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Mr. Speaker, Sir, as per the law of America, if America puts any nation, in the category of the State sponsor of terrorism then they take a follow up action. It includes various sanctions. And it is evident that America has not included Pakistan in such a list that is why it has not imposed sanctions on Pakistan. As regards the second part of the question, I have informed the House that we do not agree with America in this regard. We draw its attention towards this whenever we get opportunity.

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I want to draw the attention of the House towards the reply given by the hon. Minister. It has two things—it is said in (a) and (b) parts:
"Government believes that Pakistan displays all the I characteristics of a State sponsor of terrorism."

It is also said-

"...designation as a State sponsor of terrorism under United States laws."

"The question was-

"If not, whether the Government propose to mount pressure on the US and other countries to declare Pakistan as a terrorist State?"

Mr. Speaker, Sir, we want America to declare Pakistan a terrorist State. I want to ask the hon. Minister the criteria in our country to declare any nation a terrorist State? Whether there is any law in our country so that we can declare any nation a terrorist State. We have not yet been able to convince America to declare Pakistan a terrorist State. Whether the Government of India has been able to convince a single country in this world that Pakistan is involved in terrorist activities? If so, then we would like to know the name of the country.

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Mr. Speaker, Sir, as is asked in the question whether America is declaring Pakistan a terrorist State or State sponsor of terrorism or not and whether India is mounting pressure on America or not? America has its own two laws. Their law does not have the word terrorist State, it includes the word: ‘State sponsor of terrorism', where the State is the sponsor of terrorism State sponsor of terrorism.

There is a provision that if the Government of America concludes that any particular nation is supporting or sponsoring terrorism then it would declare that nation State sponsor of terrorism and take the follow up action defined in the American law i.e. impose various sanctions. Certain countries have been included in this list which have been categorized as State sponsor of terrorism under the American law but Pakistan has not been included in this list as America have formulated this law to protect their own interests. The law mainly covers the impact on American citizens and assets. If any country tends to be dangerous for America then it declares that nation terrorist State or State sponsor of terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, Sir, America is using this law wherever their own interests are directly involved. We all are aware and the House is also aware that America will not deal with Pakistan in the same way. In fact Pakistan is a stalwart ally for fight against terrorism. This America’s policy is apparently contradictory. This contradiction is there because America is concerned about their own interests, they are not bothered about other’s interests. As far as convincing other countries is concerned, India has raised the issue with international community time and again. The House is aware that during the last 12-14 months terrorist activities have increased. Many countries condemned the attack on our Parliament. It has also been accepted that Pakistan is sponsoring cross border terrorism. Those countries are mounting pressure on Pakistan to stop sponsoring terrorism but America has not taken the step of declaring Pakistan
.a State sponsor of terrorism.

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: Mr. Speaker, Sir, My original question was whether there is any law in India by which we can declare any nation a terrorist nation.
Hon. Minister may stand up and reply.

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Mr. Speaker, Sir, replies are always given by standing up.

Mr. Speaker: He knows the discipline of the House and he will stand up to reply.

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: Mr. Speaker, Sir, he keeps sitting and merely nods his head.

Dr. Vijay Kumar Malhotra: Mr. Speaker, Sir, Ministers stand up while replying and the members keep sitting while listening to them. He is standing while he is sitting.

Mr. Speaker: He is standing all the time.

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Mr. Speaker, Sir, hon. Member has asked whether there is any law in our country under which we can declare any nation a terrorist nation. There is POTA to control terrorism in our country. We can declare the organizations a terrorist organization under this law but we cannot deal with any country in this manner that is what I am saying... (Interruptions)

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: Mr. Speaker, Sir, he is urging upon other nations to declare Pakistan a terrorist State, I want to know that why cannot we formulate such a law in our country... (interruptions)

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Mr. Speaker, Sir, essential to clarify that we are doing so because America has such a law... (Interruptions)

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: Mr. Speaker, Sir, Our Government has convinced other nations to declare Pakistan a terrorist State but there is no such law in our country, Mr. Speaker, Sir, please ask his opinion...(Interruptions)

Shri Satyavrat Chaturvedi: America has granted the status of most favoured nation to Pakistan and we are asking America to declare it a terrorist State...
(Interruptions)
Mr. Speaker: Please sit down, questions are not asked like this.

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: I have asked another question also whether you have been able to convince any nation to declare Pakistan a terrorist nation. You have replied to half of the question... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Minister, there is no need to reply to this. Please ask your question. Other people have also to ask their questions.

Shri Sunder Lal Tiwari: Has the Government convinced any country in the world to declare Pakistan a terrorist state. Barring America as it does not agree but has this Government convinced any country of the world to declare a terrorist state.

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I have repeatedly said that this question pertains to America as to whether America declared Pakistan a terrorist State or not and there exists a law of this kind in America. As far as other countries are concerned, I have stated in the House that other countries and groups of countries have agreed to this... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: I am not allowing these types of questions. Please sit down.

Prof. Ummareddy Venkateswarlu: Mr. Speaker, Sir, consequent upon the attack of terrorists on the temple of our democracy, the Parliament of India, our country had sent several delegations to various other countries to apprise them of the situation and to condemn the brutal activity and the Pakistan-sponsored terrorism on this democratic institution. So, what is the response of these countries? What is the actual outcome? I would like to know whether these countries have stood by the principle of expressing solidarity with condemning such types of attacks. I also want to know whether this issue had been raised with them to express their solidarity with our country.

Shri Yashwant Sinha: As the hon. Member has pointed out, after the terrorist attack on our Parliament, a number of delegations went to various countries. The hon. Members of Parliament were either members or leaders of those delegations. These delegations went, represented the case of India, explained the enormity of the recalcitrance of Pakistan and the activities of Pakistan. It had its impact. It is in the sense that a very large number of countries, barring only a few, had openly condemned the terrorist attack on Indian Parliament.
They fully sympathised with India. As a result of the work done by those delegations, there is a far greater understanding today in the international community about India’s case vis-a-vis Pakistan. The international community has recognised that Pakistan is a sponsor of cross-border terrorism. The international community tells us that they are putting pressure; and they continue to put pressure on Pakistan to desist from it... (Interruptions)

Shri Adhir Chowdhary: Sir, Pakistan is still getting the most favoured nation status... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: No, I have not permitted him. Please do not reply to him.

Shri Prakash Paranjpe: Mr. Speaker, Sir, through you, I want to know this. When Yasser Arafat is creating terrorism in Israel, Israel never waits to get a green signal from America to attack on the residence of Yasser Arafat... (Interruptions)

Shri Suresh Kurup: This is not the proper way... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: The Minister is there to reply.

Shri Prakash Paranjpe: Let me put my question... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: The Minister is there to reply to him. If he is making a wrong statement, the Minister will correct him.

...... (Interruptions)

Shri Prakash Paranjpe: You are not my boss.

Mr. Speaker: Shri Prakash Paranjpe, do not talk to them. You please address the Chair.

Shri Prakash Paranjpe: When Yasser Arafat is making attack on Israel, Israel never waits to get the green signal from America to attack on the residence of Yasser Arafat. Why is India waiting for getting a green signal from America to attack on Pak-occupied Kashmir where training centres are there for atankawadis (terrorists)?

They are attacking our nation and we are every now and then saying that we are waiting for a green signal from America, for America to declare Pakistan a terrorist nation. When are we going to learn something from countries like Israel to say, ‘We are proud of our country and we would not tolerate anybody coming and attacking us’? We have to learn a lesson from Israel to attack Pakistan-occupied Kashmir and finish all the training centres without waiting for any green signal from America... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members, please sit down. Let the hon. Minster reply.

...... (Interruptions)
Shri S. Jaipal Reddy: Sir, I am on a point of procedure... (Interruptions) I am not on a point of order but on a point of procedure.

Mr. Speaker: Jaipal Reddyji, please sit down. ...(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri Jaipal Reddy, the hon. Member has put a question. The question is a straight question. The Minister has to reply.

........(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri Suresh Jadhav, would you please sit down?

........(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: The question has been put. If the hon. Minister thinks that this question really needs to be replied to, he can definitely reply to it. No other hon. Member is allowed to advise the hon. Minister in between.

........(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members, please sit down.

........(Interruptions)

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Please listen to my reply.

The Government of India does not think that this reference to Israel is relevant in this context; neither does the Government of India compare Pakistan with Palestine. They are in two different categories... (Interruptions) Therefore, as far as obtaining a green signal is concerned, the Government of India is not waiting—let me assert this with all the force at my command—for a green signal from anybody. The Government of India is competent to take all its decision by itself and will take them. We are fighting this scourge of terrorism. We will continue to fight this scourge of terrorism. We shall win this battle, we shall win this war and we shall take whatever steps are necessary to fight terrorism.

........(Interruptions)

Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi: Sir, would you please allow me to ask one question?... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: The last question on this would be by Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi. I have already given half-an-hour for this Question because of its importance.

........(Interruptions)

Shri Basu Deb Acharia: Sir, he has referred to Yasser Arafat as a terrorist. That should be expunged... (Interruptions)

Shri Mohan Rawale: Where did he refer it”?

Shri Basu Deb Acharia: He has compared it ...(Interruptions)
Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members, please sit down. ...(Interruptions)

Shri Basu Deb Acharia: Sir, how can he compare like that? It should be expunged. He has compared Yasser Arafat with terrorists. That should be expunged... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: I have announced that Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi’s question would be the last supplementary on this Question.

..........(Interruptions)

Shri Prakash Paranjpe: I have referred to Israel; I have not referred to Yasser Arafat. I had said that we should learn from Israel; I did not refer to Yasser Arafat. He is misleading the House... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi, are you putting your question or not?

..........(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri Prakash Paranjpe, please sit down.

..........(Interruptions)

Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi: Please allow me to put the question...(Interruptions)

Before I put this supplementary through you, my humble appeal to you on behalf of our Party is that Yasser Arafat is a friendly nation’s leader, who is dear to India. Normally, it is a convention of Parliament that the name of the Head of the State of any country, which is friendly to our nation, is not taken in a derogatory fashion. So, it should be expunged from the record. That is my appeal.... (Interruptions)

My supplementary to the hon. Minister is that since the hon. Minister has confessed that the United States considers the threat perception of terrorist limited to the interests of the American people and not beyond that, the global alliance, which was initiated by the Head of the State of the United States, supported by U.K., made it clear in the first declaration meeting that it will uproot the last base of the terrorists, wherever it may be in the world. In that context, I think, the Government of India’s confession today is that they have totally failed diplomatically to project the matter in the international community.

However, my straight question to the hon. Minister is that since the overwhelming people of Pakistan and India are opposed to terrorism, it is the regime of Pakistan, which is operating it. But still there are opportunities to exchange the social, intellectual and other organisations of Pakistan to isolate the terrorists in their own homeland against the regime. Why I say because I have a reason to say.
The other day, a Member of Parliament of Pakistan, Shri Imran Khan made a statement in India... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri P.R, Dasmunsi, please put your straight question.

........(Interruptions)

Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi: He mentioned that it is a goodwill link between the two nations. I would like to know the Governments through their diplomatic efforts, shall build up a campaign within Pakistan also that the; people of Pakistan reject terrorism and restore friendship between India and Pakistan, as it was in the past, because there are such people in Pakistan also. I would like to know whether diplomatic channels have overcome that... interruption

Dr. Vijay Kumar Malhotra: Is it the Congress Party’s policy which he has stated?... (Interruptions)

If it is the policy of Congress, they should initiate a dialogue with Pakistan as per their Party’s policy... (Interruptions)

Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi: The Congress Party believes that still there are people in Pakistan who are opposed to terrorism. They are not our enemies. Even an MP of Pakistan came to India and stated why to encourage all these things... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri P.R. Dasmunsi, please let him reply.

........ (Interruptions)

Shri Ram Nagina Mishra: Mr. Speaker, Sir, their party men also rejoice. When there are jubilations in Pakistan. It is their Policy... (Interruptions)

Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi: Now, your Government has failed. The Minister has confessed it... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Let the Minister reply. ...(Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri P.R. Dasmunsi, you cannot go on replying to each and every Member. The Minister is replying to your question. Please sit down.

........ (Interruptions)

Shri Yashwant Sinha: As far as the question of confession is concerned, let me clarify that I made no confession and I only stated the facts. So, there is no question of the Government of India making a confession or the Minister making a confession.

We are talking about Pakistan declared a terrorist State only in the context of the American law on this subject and, therefore, this question has arisen. Otherwise, the question will not arise... (Interruptions)
Secondly, as far as the failure of the Government of India on the diplomatic front is concerned, I most humbly submit for the consideration of the hon. Member that, as we are all aware, State-sponsored terrorism from Pakistan has been going on for almost 20 years against India—first in Punjab and then in Jammu and Kashmir... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Please listen to the Minister. (Interruptions)

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Various Governments have been in power there... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: You do not take disadvantage of the Chair.

......... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri P.R. Dasmunsi, please sit down. I have not permitted you.

......... (Interruptions)

Shri Priya Ranjan Dasmunsi: No, Sir. I would like to place it on record that Shrimati Indira Gandhi...

Mr. Speaker: Only the statement of Minister will go on record and nothing else will go on record.

......... (Interruptions)

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Is he condemning his own Government about diplomatic failure?.. (Interruptions) I would like to say that as far as diplomatic failure or success or diplomatic achievements are concerned, in the last five years, we have had more achievements on the diplomatic front to our credit than any Government in the past... (Interruptions) The third issue... (Interruptions)

Mr. Speaker: Shri P.R. Dasmunsi, I have not permitted you to speak. Whatever he says will not go on record.

......... (Interruptions)

Shri Yashwant Sinha: Shri P.R. Dasmunsi, you are the Chief Whip of your Party and you do not know how to... (Interruptions)

As far as the people of Pakistan are concerned, let me say that the people of India have no ill will towards the people of Pakistan. We want the friendliest of relationship with Pakistan, provided Pakistan learns to behave like a responsible member of the international community. That is the bottom line... (Interruptions)

Shri Basu Deb Acharia: Sir, what about expunction of remarks?

Mr. Speaker: Such type of remarks, which are contradictory to the policy we have adopted, will be removed from the record.

✦✦✦✦✦
Pakistan on April 21 expressed high hopes for early resumption of talks with India following statements by Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee during his weekend visit to Kashmir, and said it expected to hear officially more from New Delhi in a couple of days in this regard.

Foreign Office Spokesman Aziz Ahmad Khan, answering questions at his weekly news briefing, said Pakistan believed negotiations could succeed only when they were held without preconditions.

He said Mr. Vajpayee’s statement was a positive one after a long time from New Delhi and hoped that it would be followed by some more positive steps.

Pakistan, he recalled, had already welcomed Mr. Vajpayee’s statement and said it was welcomed because Islamabad had always insisted that issues could only be resolved through negotiations and not through use of force or threat to use force.

Islamabad, he said, had not been found wanting in taking initiatives to invite the Indian prime ministers to Pakistan for negotiations. He recalled that one such initiative was demonstrated at the Kathmandu SAARC summit when President Pervez Musharraf went up to Mr. Vajpayee and shook hands with him, inviting him to resume talks.

The spokesman said the anticipated talks which could be held at any level and anywhere according to New Delhi’s suggestion, would be all “encompassing” with discussions on all subjects, including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir.

In reply to a question, Mr. Aziz Khan said Pakistan would not shy away from adopting the SAARC route for talks on some of bilateral political issues in case it was recommended by the SAARC forum.

The spokesman re-asserted that no cross-border armed incursions were being made from Pakistan and said if there was any misperception that could be removed only if, as suggested repeatedly by Pakistan, India agreed to employment of reinforced UN or neutral observers in Kashmir. The observers, he added, could probe and verify allegations about cross-border movements.

He said Pakistan had no chemical weapons as it adhered to the United Nations Convention against manufacture and use of such weapons apart from signing an agreement with India in 1992 to this effect. Though India, he said, continued clandestinely its chemical weapons programme even after that agreement but added it had abandoned it now.

The spokesman described as totally baseless and fictitious recent reports that there had been a border clash with Afghanistan. He said some unidentified “vested interests” apparently sought to create mischief and misunderstanding between Kabul and Islamabad.

He recalled that Pakistan was a signatory to the Bonn agreement on Afghanistan and remained committed to it. Islamabad, he said, employed 50,000-60,000 troops in the tribal territory adjoining Afghanistan and had rounded up some 450 terrorists as a member of international coalition working towards restoration to peace and reconstruction of war-ravaged Afghanistan.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1588. Statement by Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee in the Lok Sabha on his two-day visit to Jammu & Kashmir.
New Delhi, April 22, 2003

I went to Jammu & Kashmir on a two-day visit on April 18-19, 2003.

I had five programmes in Srinagar. The first had to do with the Foundation Stone laying ceremony for modernization of Srinagar Airport. This project would double the capacity of the airport. We would like international air services to start from Srinagar.

The second programme related to the National Highway Development Project.
Under this, work on a four-lane highway from Srinagar to Kanuyakumari was launched. The newly elected Chief Minister of Jammu & Kashmir, Shri Mufti Mohammed Sayeed, had been insisting that work on this project in the Kashmir Valley should start as early as possible.

In my public rally, I congratulated the people of Kashmir on participating in the Assembly elections in large numbers. They exercised their franchise defying the threat of bullets. I assured them, “We have come here to share your pain and suffering. Whatever complaints you have, try to address them collectively.
Knock on the doors of Delhi. Delhi will never close its doors for you. The doors of our heart will also remain open for you”.

I assured the people of Jammu & Kashmir that we wish to resolve all issues –
POLITICAL RELATIONS: 1990-2007

Prime Minister during his two-day visit to Srinagar told a crowded press conference on April 19 that he was "waiting for a reply from Pakistan for his offer of friendship made at a public meeting yesterday." (He had the previous day on April 18 told a public meeting that the gun was no solution to any problem made a call for friendship with Pakistan but said "it should be extended from both sides.") Mr Vajpayee said his Government had made efforts to build a harmonious relationship with Pakistan. "As Prime Minister of the country I wanted to have friendly relations with our neighbours and I went to Lahore, but it was returned with Kargil. We still continued and invited General Pervez Musharraf to Agra but again failed," said Mr. Vajpayee. "We are again extending a hand of friendship but hands should be extended from both the sides. Both sides should resolve that we need to live together in peace.

My last programme was about the start of work on the construction of Udhampur-Srinagar- Baramulla railway line. It is our resolve to ensure that train services start in Kashmir Valley before August 15, 2007.

Unemployment is the greatest problem facing the youth of Jammu & Kashmir. We have decided to facilitate creation of one lakh opportunities for employment and self-employment over the next two years. For this, a special Task Force would be set up with representatives from the Central Government, State Government industry, commerce, banking and financial institutions. The Task Force will present its report by June 30 and implementation would commence from August 15 this year.

At a press conference before returning to Delhi, I expressed the hope that a new beginning can take place between India and Pakistan. I said that we have extended our hand of friendship. Let us see how Pakistan responds to this. Stopping cross-border infiltration and destruction of terrorist infrastructure can open the doors for talks. Talks can take place on all issues, including that of Jammu & Kashmir.

Thank You

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1. Prime Minister during his two-day visit to Srinagar told a crowded press conference on April 19 that he was "waiting for a reply from Pakistan for his offer of friendship made at a public meeting yesterday." (He had the previous day on April 18 told a public meeting that the gun was no solution to any problem made a call for friendship with Pakistan but said "it should be extended from both sides.") Mr Vajpayee said his Government had made efforts to build a harmonious relationship with Pakistan. "As Prime Minister of the country I wanted to have friendly relations with our neighbours and I went to Lahore, but it was returned with Kargil. We still continued and invited General Pervez Musharraf to Agra but again failed," said Mr. Vajpayee. "We are again extending a hand of friendship but hands should be extended from both the sides. Both sides should decide to live together. We have everything which makes us to have good relations," Mr. Vajpayee said. Mr. Vajpayee repeated the conditions for resuming talks with Pakistan and said that unless cross-border terrorism was stopped and training camps for militants dismantled, there could be no meaningful talks. "We want to tread the path of friendship but a lot depends on Pakistan's response. I reiterate that only talks can resolve all the issues." Repeatedly referring to his desire for friendship with Pakistan, the Prime Minister gave the impression that he did not backtrack from his offer of talks. Terrorism, he said, could not be tolerated and only when it stopped could an atmosphere for talks be created. Talks could be held on all the issues including Kashmir, he said adding "let us make an honest effort in this direction".
Media briefing by Official Spokesperson on Pakistan.

New Delhi, May 21, 2003.

Question: (Pakistan) Prime Minister Jamali has stated that India should tackle terrorists in its territory. Any comment on that?

Answer: I have not seen this particular statement. But without reacting to that India is determined to fight terrorism and we have been doing so. The problem that we have been facing is that of cross border terrorism.

Question: Prime Minister Jamali also said that Pakistan do not have control on all terrorists. Any comments?

Answer: I don’t want get into that at this stage. But our External Affairs Minister has responded to a similar question in London when he said that 500 Al-Qaeda, Taliban, etc have been handed over to US and that speaks for itself.

Question: Foreign Minister of Pakistan has said that if Pakistan cannot control terrorist infiltration then India can help… (inaudible)

Answer: I wouldn’t like to second guess what the Foreign Minister has said and what he had in his mind when he said that. But I can explain to you. This issue usually comes up when Pakistan talks about bringing in international monitors. In that situation we have told them that there is nobody better who knows this terrain than India and Pakistan. So there is a possibility of joint monitoring in case there is sufficient amount of confidence can be built.

Question: Anything on CMAG? Pakistan has been kept out from the Commonwealth. What happened to Zimbabwe?

Answer: I have here the entire statement that was issued by CMAG. I can read out the paragraph regarding Zimbabwe. CMAG received an update from the Secretary-General on recent developments in Zimbabwe. The Group noted the Commonwealth Statement on Zimbabwe of 16 March 2003, and the Secretary-General’s Report to the ‘Troika’ subsequently circulated by the Chairperson-in-Office to all Commonwealth Heads of Government. CMAG maintained the decision taken at its last meeting to keep Zimbabwe on its agenda.

Question: Any reaction to Pakistan being kept out of Commonwealth?

Answer: External Affairs Minister has said in London that he has nothing to add to the statement that CMAG has issued.

Question: So India agrees with the CMAG decision?
Answer: You have seen that there is the CMAG statement, which is taken out by all countries. India was one of them.

Question: Any dates for the resumption of India-Pakistan dialogue?

Answer: We had made two proposals. We had taken action on two points. We have already announced our High Commissioner and on Civil Aviation links we have asked for clarification. That’s where matters stand. I really see no use in going over this everyday asking if there are any dates. You know the steps that have been outlined, you know the possibilities of movement, you know that we would need positive responses.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1590. Press Conference of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf on return from his four-country 20-day tour.

The president reassured the nation that he had made no clandestine deal with any world power on the “core” issue of Kashmir or Pakistan's nuclear assets during his visits abroad. Kashmir, he said, was still the “core issue”, and no breakthrough was possible without addressing it first and there could be no compromise on the country’s nuclear programme. “Nobody has asked us to change our Kashmir policy or end our nuclear programme. There is no compromise and there will be no compromise on Kashmir and nuclear assets,” he said. He said the leaders of the four countries he visited wanted a peaceful Kashmir settlement through talks between Pakistan and India while willing to facilitate movement in that direction. “Pakistan want normalization of relations with India and would like to solve all outstanding issues through negotiations,” he said and claimed a better understanding of Pakistan’s position on Kashmir.

The world leaders he met, the general said, were worried about terrorism, spread of narcotics trade, and non-proliferation of nuclear assets. “We too want all this. Pakistanis should understand they are part of this uni-polar world and cannot live in a vacuum,” he said. The president spoke at length about his visit to the US, the UK, Germany and France, and the issues he discussed with the world leaders. He said he had not embarked on this visit with a begging bowl in his hands. The aim of the visit was to project four things: (i) Pakistan as a progressive Islamic state, (ii) the improved law and order situation in the country, (iii) removal of misconception of the secret agencies’ role in Afghanistan

Answer: You have seen that there is the CMAG statement, which is taken out by all countries. India was one of them.

Question: Any dates for the resumption of India-Pakistan dialogue?

Answer: We had made two proposals. We had taken action on two points. We have already announced our High Commissioner and on Civil Aviation links we have asked for clarification. That’s where matters stand. I really see no use in going over this everyday asking if there are any dates. You know the steps that have been outlined, you know the possibilities of movement, you know that we would need positive responses.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1590. Press Conference of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf on return from his four-country 20-day tour.

The president reassured the nation that he had made no clandestine deal with any world power on the “core” issue of Kashmir or Pakistan's nuclear assets during his visits abroad. Kashmir, he said, was still the “core issue”, and no breakthrough was possible without addressing it first and there could be no compromise on the country’s nuclear programme. “Nobody has asked us to change our Kashmir policy or end our nuclear programme. There is no compromise and there will be no compromise on Kashmir and nuclear assets,” he said. He said the leaders of the four countries he visited wanted a peaceful Kashmir settlement through talks between Pakistan and India while willing to facilitate movement in that direction. “Pakistan want normalization of relations with India and would like to solve all outstanding issues through negotiations,” he said and claimed a better understanding of Pakistan’s position on Kashmir.

The world leaders he met, the general said, were worried about terrorism, spread of narcotics trade, and non-proliferation of nuclear assets. “We too want all this. Pakistanis should understand they are part of this uni-polar world and cannot live in a vacuum,” he said. The president spoke at length about his visit to the US, the UK, Germany and France, and the issues he discussed with the world leaders. He said he had not embarked on this visit with a begging bowl in his hands. The aim of the visit was to project four things: (i) Pakistan as a progressive Islamic state, (ii) the improved law and order situation in the country, (iii) removal of misconception of the secret agencies’ role in Afghanistan and Kashmir, and (iv) informing investors that Pakistan provided an ideal opportunity for investment.

Gen Musharraf said he achieved all the objectives of his visit, but felt “belittled” when a gory incident in Quetta took place at the fag end of his visit. He said none of the leaders he met had asked him to change in Pakistan’s stance on Kashmir. They, in fact, acknowledged that Kashmir was the main issue between Pakistan and India, and all the leaders he met wanted to facilitate the talks on Kashmir. “I am not the one who wants to hide anything and I would tell what I discussed with these leaders,” he insisted. He said every country had certain national interests which could not be compromised and Kashmir was one of them. “There is no room for compromise on such issues and no leader has the right to make any deal on them. There is the Kashmir cause, we want a peaceful resolution of this dispute but we cannot give it up and no body would ask to do so,” he added.

“But the bottom line is both Pakistan and India have to decide the matter.” He said that no roadmap was discussed for the solution of Kashmir issue.

NUCLEAR ASSETS: The president said none of the leaders had asked him to roll back Pakistan’s nuclear programme. He said he told the world why Pakistan had developed the nuclear programme. “We live in a region where we need it for our security. The world leaders only want that Pakistan should not proliferate its nuclear technology. We too are against proliferation of nuclear technology,” he said.
1591. Interaction of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf with members of the Indian Parliament on a visit to Pakistan.

Islamabad, August 12, 2003.

While interacting with a visiting group of members of Indian Parliament and a group of senior editors and writers, President Pervez Musharraf offered to facilitate a ceasefire inside what he called “occupied” Kashmir if India reduces its troops in the territory, stops atrocities against innocent Kashmiris and allows political activities and free travel. He agreed with one of the Indian parliamentarians belonging to Kashmir that the people of Kashmir had suffered a lot over the last so many years and therefore needed a respite while India and Pakistan sorted out their problems over Kashmir.

The president called for a ceasefire on a reciprocal basis inside Kashmir during the intervening period as India and Pakistan took to its logical conclusion the ongoing peace process which, he said, was yet to start at the official level.

He said a ceasefire could be established on the LoC immediately with the two governments ordered their troops to stop firing at each other, but “what is happening inside Kashmir is not under our control, it is not possible to stop it from here because we do not have a whistle which we can blow from here and things start happening in ‘Indian-held Kashmir’.”

The President maintained that violent incidents taking place in “occupied” Kashmir could only be stopped completely if a ceasefire was established on a reciprocal basis. Answering a query, Gen Musharraf said there was no government-sponsored terrorism on the LoC or across the LoC. “Whatever is happening in Kashmir is a freedom struggle.”

He said no one should assume that since elections had been held in Kashmir and a government opposed to the last one was in the saddle there was, therefore, no Kashmir crisis. He said on its part Pakistan and he himself would like to see increased people-to-people interaction between the two countries, and would like to welcome more such delegations from India, but despite a lot of talk about the peace process, no official-level talks had so far been held between Islamabad and New Delhi.

The president said there was a suspicion in Pakistan that all this talk about peace process was nothing more than an eyewash and that India had no intention of talking to Pakistan on substantive issues.

He expressed the hope that India would soon agree to at least a foreign secretary-level meeting so that the peace process would get going in right earnest.
He said any delay in the start of official talks would strengthen the hands of extremist elements, who might not be in favour of a dialogue process.

President Musharraf said it was unrealistic to expect two countries, one bigger and more powerful and the other smaller and weaker, to sit across the table and resolve their disputes bilaterally.

In this context, he urged India to show magnanimity while dealing with Pakistan as according to him when a bigger and more powerful country concedes something to a smaller and weaker country, it is regarded as a magnanimous gesture while such gestures on the part of the latter would be considered as a show of weakness. Still, he did not appear to be ruling out completely the possibility of using bilateral negotiations for resolving the Kashmir issue.

Gen Musharraf recalled that at Agra he had stated clearly that Pakistan on its part was prepared to go beyond its historically stated position and said the offer was still open and in fact according to him the need of the hour was to look forward and not to go back into history except to learn lessons from past mistakes. He said it was India which had become a stumbling block in the way of SAARC graduating into a truly vibrant economic bloc and again it was India which had stopped over-flights. Pakistan wanted to clear these hurdles and move ahead, but without official-level talks all this, he explained, was not possible.

He reiterated his proposal for amending the SAARC Charter to include in it a mechanism for collective issue resolution.

When he was asked to lift the ban in Pakistan on Indian TV programmes, the president said the media of the two countries indulged in vicious propaganda against each other and unless that was stopped, he thought such a move would only prove to be counterproductive. He referred to a report in an Indian magazine which had alleged that the Gwadar port would serve as a Chinese naval base, and categorically refuted it. He said he was not averse to free movement of media persons between the two countries but asked: “How many of our journalists have been allowed to interview Indian leaders? I have on my part rarely refused to give interviews to Indian journalists.”

In his opening remarks, the president said India and Pakistan should address all issues with sincerity of purpose for the betterment of their people. “We want peace and I want peace. We do not want war. We have had enough of war. We are looking for peace through a process of dialogue, as civilized nations which we both are.” He assured the Indian parliamentarians that they would not find sincerity lacking in Pakistan.

“We want peace and Pakistan will not be lagging behind in initiatives for peace.”
1592. Media briefing by Official Spokesperson on observations by Pakistani President.

New Delhi, August 12, 2003.

Question: Gen. Musharraf has said that there should be cease fire along the LoC and Kashmir valley*……. Any comment?

Answer: We have seen the comments of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf made to visiting Indian Parliamentarians, journalists and others in the context of meeting organized by SAFMA.

There is nothing new in these suggestions. They have not been found effective in the past because Pakistan has continued to sponsor terrorism directed against India and provided support to cross border infiltration. Once this is stopped and Pakistani aided terrorist stop crossing the LOC, the level of firing would naturally go down.

Similarly, there is nothing to prevent the Pakistan aided terrorists to stop their activities inside J&K. Once these activities stop, there would inevitably be a change in the necessary measures required to be taken by the security forces.

We are also disappointed by the suggestions emanating from the Pakistani leadership that they had done all that they could to stop cross border infiltration and terrorism. The facts point to continuing Pakistani support through funding, training, indoctrination, launch and guidance.

Instead of propagandist statements, Pakistan should take effective and long-term oriented measures to dismantle the infrastructure of support to terrorism.

Question: Gen. Musharraf also said that India should not continue to live in past and look forward……

Answer: We are talking of going ahead. In fact Prime Minister Vajpayee’s initiative is also all about moving ahead. But as far as the reaction is concerned I have given you a reaction to some specific suggestions that were made in his statement.

* On August 12 President Musharraf in his interaction with the Indian Members of Parliament, editors, and others of the SAFMA who called on him offered immediate ceasefire on the LOC and showed his willingness to facilitate it in the valley if India reciprocated by releasing Kashmiri prisoners allowing free movement of Kashmiri leaders, reducing forces and ending military operations. Elaborating on the offer of facilitation of a ceasefire in the valley, he said no guarantee was possible since it was not in his control. However influence of various elements could be used to persuade the “freedom fighters” to respond if India assured to reciprocate by taking appropriate measures.
On August 8, 2003 Official spokesperson had said that “a decision has been taken as a very special case and in view of Prime Minister Vajpayee's initiative to release Munir. You may have seen some reports. Efforts are on to have him sent back to Pakistan by Tuesday. He is expected to be in Delhi before that and consular access will be given to the Pakistani High Commission.” There were some other questions:

Question: Is this a part of humanitarian gesture on the GOI’s part?

Answer: People to people contact is a very important part of the process that we are following step-by-step. With the intention of keeping up the momentum generated by Prime Minister's initiative, this decision has been taken.

Question: In response to question in Parliament, it was said that Pakistan has proposed on July 24 for talks on resumption of railway links. Any confirmation?

Answer: The proposal has been received and it is being examined.

Question: There was a report that EAM briefed the MPs who were to visit Pakistan. What was the briefing about?

Answer: I am not party to that briefing. It was essentially a briefing that was given at the request of the delegation. These people are going there in their individual capacities at the invitation of an NGO. The delegation is composed of several MPs as well as people from the media. From what I understand the visit is from August 9-13 and the meetings to be held on 10 and 11.

Question: Was the briefing on dos and don'ts?

Answer: Well as I said, I was not there and some media personnel were there and so it is already in public knowledge what the briefing was about.
1593. Response of Official Spokesperson to Pakistani allegation of terrorist camps in India.

New Delhi, August 19, 2003.

Question: Any reaction to the Pakistani Spokesperson’s statement that there were 55 terrorist training camps in India?

Answer: This is one more figment of Pakistan’s imagination. One would have chosen not to comment on this absurd allegation, but for the mindset it reveals. It is a mindset that thinks of stopping at nothing to make a propaganda point.

The more Pakistan makes such wild allegation, the less we and the international community believe that it is serious in dealing with its responsibility to end cross-border terrorism against India. We would again wish to underline that Pakistan should think, act and speak responsibly to make full use of the opportunity offered by Prime Minister Vajpayee’s initiative to improve relations between India and Pakistan, an objective to which Pakistan’s government should show as much commitment as its people seem to have begun to show.

* * * * *

Question: Pakistan Government has proposed for talks on Samjhauta'. Any progress?

Answer: The Government of India has received the proposal. As you know we are following a calibrated, step-by-step approach in the matter and each step will be taken keeping in view the success generated by the previous step as well as the confidence that exist between the two sides and we are looking forward to the technical level talks on civil aviation next week.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

---

1. The suspended train service that ran between the two countries.
1594. Statement by Official Spokesperson in response to a question on India’s efforts to cooperate with Pakistan to eradicate terrorism.

New Delhi, September 18, 2003.

We are amused, disappointed but not surprised by refusal of Pakistan to cooperate with us to eradicate scourge of terrorism.

It is indeed amusing to find the representative of a military regime pretend to speak of alleged repression and so-called State terrorism elsewhere.

It is not surprising because it has been clear right from the beginning that, in dealing with international terrorism, Pakistan is a part of the problem and cannot a part of any effective solution. While providing some cooperation against some terrorists, avowedly under pressure and threats, it has attempted to be selective and piecemeal in such cooperation, and protect its “assets” to the extent it could. Terrorists, including those linked to or supportive of the Al Qaida, continue to find safe haven and support in Pakistan. Pakistan also continues to assess terrorism as an instrument of leverage in its dealing with India. Many, including analysts in the western media, has questioned Pakistan’s intentions and commitment.

It is disappointing because it is clear that Pakistan has still not fully absorbed the lessons of its own past mistakes. Its policy against India have not only completely failed to move towards its preferred objectives, but has in fact rebounded negatively on Pakistan itself. If Pakistan is to move towards moderation and a progressive society, as General Musharraf claims as his objective, it has to give up using fundamentalism, terrorism and subversion against other countries.

We remain ready to cooperate with Pakistan should it eventually choose the right course for itself.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

* The Spokesperson Navtej Sarna was referring to the briefing of Pakistan Foreign Office Spokesperson Masood Khan on September 15 in which the latter described as “ridiculous and ludicrous” the proposal of the External Affairs Minister, Yashwant Sinha, for India-Pakistan co-operation in fighting terrorism. Masood Khan, said that Islamabad could not be a party to “Indian terrorism” and asked New Delhi to “withdraw and roll back aggression” from Kashmir. The Pakistani Spokesperson was responding to the proposal of External Affairs Minister Mr. Sinha to the Pakistani newspaper the News asking Pakistan to join India in the fight against terrorism. Mr. Khan said that the Joint India-U.S. exercises in Ladakh would have no effect on the status of Kashmir as a disputed territory. He reiterated Pakistan’s position that the Kashmir issue had to be resolved in line with the wishes of the Kashmiri people. He denied remarks attributed to the Foreign Minister, Khurshid Kasuri, about a joint SAARC force to combat terrorism.
Press conference of External Affairs Minister Yashwant Sinha on the suggestions made to Pakistan for normalization of relations.

New Delhi, October 22, 2003.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: Friends, good afternoon. As you are aware, the Cabinet Committee on Security met this morning. Among other things, we discussed the progress of the Prime Minister’s peace initiative with Pakistan. After the discussion, the Cabinet Committee has approved a number of new steps, which we have already conveyed to Pakistan. The Pakistan High Commissioner was asked to meet the Foreign Secretary this afternoon. He met the Foreign Secretary at 3:15 p.m. What I am going to tell you is something that has already been conveyed to the High Commissioner to the Government of Pakistan. We have made a number of suggestions to Pakistan.

The first is, the next round of the technical level discussion for resumption of civil aviation. You are aware that we could not reach an agreement in the first round, which was held in Islamabad. That meeting ended with the promise that the two sides will meet again. We propose to hold these talks once again, and the Director-General Civil Aviation will get in touch with his Pakistani counterpart to fix the dates for this meeting.

India is keen, though it is not a sign of our weakness mind you, that civil aviation links should be restored along with overflights, overflying rights over the air space of each country. We are keen because we feel that it is in the interest of the people of India and Pakistan that this should happen. I would also like to make it absolutely clear that there is no question of India giving any guarantees to Pakistan. So, this is the first step, resumption of talks for civil aviation.

The second is, we have offered to Pakistan to hold technical level discussions for the resumption of rail link. At the same time it has also been conveyed to Pakistan that the resumption of rail link will be undertaken after the successful completion of the technical level talks with regard to civil aviation.

The third is, we have decided to resume bilateral sporting encounters. This includes cricket also.

Fourth, in order to further benefit the people in both the countries, we propose the holding of visa camps by the respective High Commission in different cities through a mutually agreed arrangement for the cities as well as the frequency of such camps. Details in this regard can be worked out through the diplomatic channels.

Five, senior citizens – which means persons of 65 years of age and above – would henceforth be permitted to cross Wagah checkpoint on foot. At the moment our policy is restricted to crossings by groups. We are extending this facility to individuals but restricting it to senior citizens to begin with. Anyone who travels by bus is free to cross.

We have also proposed to increase the capacity of Delhi-Lahore-Delhi bus service by running more buses in convoys on the already agreed days. The Delhi Transport Corporation, which I happened to chair at one time, would follow up on this with the Pakistan Tourism Development Corporation.

We have proposed establishment of links between the Coast Guards of the two countries. Such links, we have suggested, could be on the pattern of the existing link between the DGMOs (Directors General of Military Operations), and could be established between their respective headquarters. Flag meetings could also be held at sea before and after the fishing season. Details could initially be tied up through diplomatic channels and subsequently followed up by the Indian Coast Guards and Pakistan Maritime Security Agency.

We have proposed to Pakistan the non-arrest by either side of fishermen of the other country within a certain band on the sea. Details of the band on the sea again could be worked out through diplomatic channels.

Government of India would provide free medical treatment to a second batch of 20 children from Pakistan. You are aware of the fact that after baby Noor’s case we had announced that we would make this facility available to 20 children from Pakistan which will include medical treatment in India. Sixteen children have come to India. They have undergone treatment. They have either gone back or have undertaken treatment and recuperating, or waiting for treatment. Our Mission in Islamabad informs us that they have received a very large number of applications. Therefore, we have decided that we make 20 more slots available under this category.

After all these steps are taken and the work of the Missions expands, we will be ready to look at further accretion to the strength of the two Missions - in Islamabad and Delhi. As you are aware, we have recently suggested increasing the strength by eight, which Pakistan has accepted. We are in the process of implementing it. We are prepared to increase it by another number to be mutually agreed upon once, as I said, as a result of all these steps the work increases.

We propose to go beyond the transportation links by air, road and rail. Therefore, we have proposed to Pakistan that we could consider a ferry service between Mumbai and Karachi. We will await the response of Pakistan.

1. It may be recalled that the announcement to facilitate and fund the treatment of Pakistani children in Indian hospitals, was first made on July 24, 2003 taking into account the popular response to Baby Noor’s case.
Finally, but very importantly, we have proposed to Pakistan the start of two new bus services – one between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad, and the other either a bus or rail link between Khokrapar and Munabao, in Sindh and Rajasthan.

These are the steps which have been decided upon by the Cabinet Committee on Security and conveyed to Pakistan. We will await their response².

Our war against terrorism, especially cross-border terrorism, will continue. There will be no let up in dealing with terrorists who dare to infiltrate into India.

Thank you.

QUESTION: What is the change in ambience that you have proposed a long list of radical suggestions? Is there something happening behind the scenes which we do not know? Secondly, you had mentioned sometime ago that there were to be talks at the SAARC level between the officials in Kathmandu. Can you tell us something about the results of those deliberations?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: As far as the SAARC is concerned, I will ask the Foreign Secretary to tell you what happened in Kathmandu.

2. The Pakistan Government made its response to the Indian proposals on October 29 and also made some fresh proposals of its own. The main points in Pakistan’s reply to India’s 22 October proposals with regard to CBMs were:
   1. Welcomes Srinagar-Muzaffarabad bus proposal in principle. Wants check points along the way to be manned by UN officials and people should move with UN documents.
   2. Sustained and serious dialogue needed.
   3. India has proposed date on technical-level talks for resumption of air links. Pakistan agrees to talks in first week of December.
   4. Resumption of Samjhauta Express because bulk of traffic through rail, so we believe it will serve India’s purpose of people-to-people contact.
   5. No link between talks on resumption of air and rail links.
   6. Welcome resumption of sporting ties.
   7. Welcome (novel) idea of visa camps in various cities. But problem is how to implement? Pakistan wants restoration of number of staff in embassy to pre-December 2001 levels.
   8. Senior citizens welcome to cross border on foot.
   9. Instead of increase in frequency of Delhi-Lahore bus, Pakistan says it is better to resume Samjhauta Express because it will spare people a torturous 14-hour bus journey. India should have courage to restore rail links.
   10. Pakistan proposes bus service between Amritsar and Lahore.
   11. Work with India on release of fishermen arrested by both sides, on humanitarian grounds.
   12. Heart institutes in Karachi and Punjab province have offered to treat some poor Indian children.
   13. Mumbai-Karachi ship: Issue can come up when the composite dialogue is resumed.
   14. Rail between Sindh and Munabao: Issue can come up when the composite dialogue is resumed.
As far as the first part of your question is concerned, I am not aware of anything happening behind your back or my back or somebody else's back. We have been saying from day one, from 18th April to be precise, that India is very serious about its peace process with Pakistan, that the offer made by Prime Minister Vajpayee on 18th of April in Srinagar is a very serious and sincere offer of friendship with Pakistan, and that we will work overtime to make this initiative succeed. Now, the steps that we have taken so far are not inconsequential. There are a number of steps which have been taken so far and they have clearly created a groundswell of support for the Prime Minister's initiative at the level of people in both the countries. Therefore, we are interested in expanding people-to-people contacts. Many of the steps that I have listed here will facilitate people-to-people contacts. We are hoping that as a result of these steps that we have announced today and conveyed to Pakistan, Pakistan, we hope, will be persuaded to give up the path of confrontation, the path of violence, the path of cross-border terrorism and come to the negotiating table in a spirit which is necessary to sustain those negotiations and that dialogue.

QUESTION: You said in the beginning that you follow the peace process step-by-step and each step you take would be in response to the step taken on the other side. What is this in response to? What steps Pakistan has taken that enabled you to make these gestures?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: We have moved step-by-step since April 18. As you are aware, and as I mentioned just now, a number of steps have been taken. We felt that a stage had been reached where we could announce a number of steps all together and wait for the response of Pakistan with respect to all of them. So, I would not say there is a radical departure from the policy that we have been following. It is only that some of these steps have been pending for sometime and we are announcing them today.

QUESTION: Did the CCS meeting discuss the issue of cross-border terrorism? What do you have to say on infiltration?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: With regard to infiltration I would like to say that we have no evidence with us to enable us to come to the conclusion that

---

Pakistan also made some fresh proposals:

1. It will offer 100 scholarships to Kashmiri children to take graduation and post-graduation courses in Pakistan
2. Will offer treatment to aged Kashmiris
3. Help widows and victims of rape (which, Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary Riaz Khokar alleged, occurred due to the action of security forces). Wants UN agencies to identify such people.

Khokar said if India was sincere about bridging the gap between Kashmiris separated by the Line of Control, it would allow Kashmiris to accept the offers Pakistan has made.
there has been a reduction in infiltration, or there has been any effort at curbing infiltration. That is the reason why I said right in the beginning when I spoke about the steps that our fight against cross-border terrorism would continue in the same way in which it has been going on. That means, we will continue our fight with full responsibility and strength.

QUESTION: You have listed 12 proposals that you made to Pakistan. Did you consider one more suggestion, the 13th one, that there should a mutual total clamp down on hawkish statements coming from either side? I say this because this vitiates the atmosphere on both sides.

Secondly, there is a statement that resumption of Samjhauta will be done only after successful completion of technical level talks on resumption of civil aviation links and you have also said that there will be no guarantees. Pakistan has been harping on guarantees. Do you not think that this situation has sort of got stuck here?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: That is why we would need a dialogue. That is what dialogue is all about. You talk; when you feel that there is a stalemate, you talk about the stalemate.

As far as the first part of your question is concerned about the hawkish statements, this is a part of the Shimla Accord that both sides will desist from making such statements. So, all that we have to do is to go back to Shimla. This is not an issue which came up. I think I will go back to the earlier question which Amit had asked and we have not answered, that is on the SAARC. I think the Foreign Secretary would like to answer that.

FOREIGN SECRETARY: The SAARC meeting was held and it was fairly successful. There were two items on the agenda essentially – one to consider further the framework agreement for free trade arrangement within SAARC. There all the issues have not been resolved and another meeting would be necessary. But the feedback that we got from our delegation was that in terms of Pakistan’s own position, this was positive. Some issues were raised by Bangladesh and those issues have to be sorted out. Then we have also said that on the margins of this meeting of SAFTA, India and Pakistan could bilaterally complete their 4th round of SAPTA negotiations with regard to preferential tariff lines to be exchanged. There Pakistan has offered 250 tariff lines. They have assured us, and our delegation is satisfied, that the earlier problem of some of these items being on the negative list would no longer be a problem. Also, since preferential tariffs offered to one country become automatically available to the others, whatever Pakistan has offered to other countries and not yet to India would become available to India too. All in all, there was positive movement at Kathmandu.
QUESTION: ...Inaudible...

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: I suppose whatever the nature of Government or governance, people in authority have to respond to popular will, people's wishes. We will continue to hope that the support that we see at the level of the people of Pakistan for peace and friendship with Pakistan will ultimately get reflected in the corridors of power also.

QUESTION: On all the suggestions or proposals that India has made, the most interesting, if I may say so, is the proposed bus link between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad. Would you mind clarifying whether this service would be restricted to the people of Kashmir on either side or it shall be open to all Indians and all Pakistanis?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: It depends. As I said, we will await in principle response of Pakistan.

QUESTION: How does it sit with our claim of the territory which is occupied by Pakistan?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: It does not in any way affect our claim.

QUESTION: The Government had been saying that normalization of relations with Pakistan would depend on cessation of cross-border terrorism. Still you have come out with a series of offers. How do you reconcile these two positions?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: I must explain what our policy is. I think we should have clarity with regard to this. One is the normalization process. That is, try and normalize as far as possible and go back to a situation where your relationship is normal. In a broad sense, go back to the position that obtained before the attack on Parliament on the 13th of December. Most of the steps that I mentioned here are part of that normalization process. Then there is the question of dialogue between India and Pakistan. That is a different issue.

When we talked about cross-border terrorism and dialogue what we were saying was that with Pakistan things are not going to be sorted out in one round of talks that would start at 3 o'clock and by 5 o'clock in the afternoon you have wrapped up everything. Considering the complexity of those issues in the composite dialogue framework, dialogue will have to be sustained over a period of time if you want the dialogue to produce results. You cannot have a sustained, meaningful and productive dialogue if cross-border terrorism is going on at the same time. Therefore, that is the position that we continue to hold. We continue to tell Pakistan about this that no meaningful, productive and sustained dialogue can take place with Pakistan if they carry on with cross-border terrorism as an instrument of state policy. So, this distinction has to be clearly understood.
QUESTION: If the steps that you have announced right now are accepted by Pakistan and implemented by both the countries, do you expect both the countries to resume bilateral talks during the SAARC Summit?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: I would like to clarify the position here. SAARC is a multilateral process consisting of seven countries. We must be able to make a distinction between a multilateral process and a bilateral process. A multilateral process taking place even on Pakistani soil does not become a bilateral process only because it is taking place in Pakistan. Therefore, participation by India in SAARC should not be linked with bilateral talks at any level with Pakistan until and unless the necessary conditions are created for such a dialogue. We have also said right from the beginning that there is no question of a summit level dialogue as the starting point of the dialogue process. We will have to prepare for the summit; we will have to begin the dialogue process at some other level. This kind of a question is repeatedly asked as to whether there will be a summit meeting in Pakistan when the Prime Minister goes to Islamabad. The answer clearly is ‘no’ because it is a multilateral process for which he will go to Islamabad. Therefore, if you want to take advantage of their presence, they were both present in New York, they were both present earlier in Kuala Lumpur, and they were both present in Almaty. So, the presence is not the most important thing.

QUESTION: Another important decision that was taken in today’s CCS meeting is that the DPM will talk to the Hurriyat Conference. What is the reason behind taking that decision now? It has been a long standing demand of theirs but it was not acceded to earlier.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: This decision was taken because we wish to talk to them. The DPM will talk to them but the decision also is that there is no question of changing the negotiator from our side, N.N. Vohra.

QUESTION: Pakistan has repeatedly said that unless the core issue of Kashmir is settled there is no use of talks and that nothing will come out of it. Today, the CCS took a decision that the Deputy Prime Minister will talk to the Hurriyat Conference. Is it building some kind of an atmosphere there?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: Talking to the Hurriyat is our internal process. It has nothing to do with our relationship with Pakistan. Also, Pakistan has on its own decided that Jammu and Kashmir is the core issue. I have responded by saying where is the agreement between the two countries that any issue is the core issue. You cannot unilaterally decide this is the core issue. We have between us an agreement with regard to the issues in the composite dialogue process. That is the only understanding that subsists apart from Shimla and Lahore. So, I do not think it is open to any country to say unilaterally that this is the core issue.

QUESTION: …Inaudible…

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: We have recently made a proposal to Pakistan that we could increase the staffers by eight. Pakistan agreed to that. That process of eight of our people going there and eight of their people coming here is on. With the arrival of those eight people there would be some relief. In the meanwhile we will see what would be the reaction of Pakistan to this. If we move forward with success and if the work of the two Missions moves forward, then we would put forward this proposal – I am making it clear now – that the number of staff in both the Missions could be increased.

QUESTION: Before the Agra Summit, we have made the proposal of resumption of rail link between Khokrapar and Munabao and bus link between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad. About the Srinagar-Muzaffarabad bus link, can you tell us the point at which the bus will cross the Line of Control?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: Before the Agra Summit, these proposals were made. It is a reiteration of those two proposals. As far as the details are concerned, I am sorry I will not be able to fill you on the details because all these details have to be worked out.

QUESTION: The affixing of entry and exit stamps by the customs at the point on LoC where the bus would pass, would it not lead to a position …

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: These are all matters of detail which will have to be worked out but the LOC is an existing reality.

QUESTION: You have just said that the issues between India and Pakistan can be resolved with a sustained dialogue. India has given enough evidence from its side with regard to the presence of Dawood Ibrahim in Pakistan. Pakistan on the other hand has kept on refuting it. In these circumstances, what relevance do you see of a sustained dialogue?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: The relevance that we see is that in the history that we have known, good has always won over the evil. We will keep on working with that hope.

QUESTION: As part of the normalization process, are you are also considering allowing the High Commissioner and other people in the Pakistani Mission here to go beyond Delhi city or are they still confined to Delhi?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: If we had taken a view on that I would have announced it. There is no decision as such.
QUESTION: In what context would the talks with Hurriyat take place?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: In the same context in which Shri Vohra was appointed as the representative of Government of India. Talks will take place under the terms of reference given to Shri Vohra.

QUESTION: If there is not going to be any change in the Central Government’s interlocutor in Kashmir, why is the DPM going to talk to Hurriyat? Is there a message which is sought to be conveyed?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: You can come to your own conclusions. Both are the decisions of the Cabinet Committee that Mr. Vohra will not be changed and that Mr. Advani will talk to the Hurriyat.

QUESTION: You have made a number of suggestions. Some of them are quite radical like the one on ferry service. On what proposals do you think there would be a positive response from Pakistan? You said that multilateral process is different from the bilateral one. Is it possible that we might resume contacts at some level, at Joint Secretary or Foreign Secretary level, if the response is positive from Pakistan?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: These are, as I mentioned to you, a part of the process of normalization of the relationship. We will expect that Pakistan will respond positively on all the dozen suggestions that we have made. Not only it will respond positively but wherever we have to hold further talks those talks will also be successful. That will be our hope. It is in this hope that we are announcing and conveying these steps. As far as the dialogue is concerned, I have already stated our position very clearly that that is not possible unless we see evidence on the ground that cross-border terrorism is being brought to an end.

(Text in italics is a translation from Hindi)
1596. Pakistan’s Response to the Indian offer of talks for normalisation of relations.

Islamabad, October 22 and 29, 2003.

Oct 22: In an immediate response to the Indian announcement, a Foreign Ministry statement said on October 22 “These (proposals) will receive serious consideration by Pakistan.” But it hastened to add that Pakistan regretted exclusion of the offer of a composite dialogue in the Indian proposals and said: “We are disappointed that while making these proposals, India has simultaneously reiterated its rejection of Pakistan’s offer to resume substantive and sustained dialogue to resolve all issues notably the Jammu and Kashmir.” The statement added: “Pakistan’s response to any proposal that is substantive and unconditional and genuinely designed to improve relations will, as always, be positive.” It added: “We hope that India will reconsider its position on the resumption of the composite talks as some of the proposals made by India today are already integral to the composite dialogue process.”

However the Pakistani spokesman added in parenthesis “these measures appear to have been prompted by pressure on India from the international community, for going too slow on the peace process”.

On October 29, Pakistan Foreign Office came out with a detailed response to the Indian proposals.

Foreign Secretary Riaz Khokhar told a press conference that Pakistan had decided to respond positively to the Indian proposals along with some of its own steps. However, he pointed out, Pakistan felt disappointed that New Delhi had rejected Islamabad’s suggestion for resuming a comprehensive, sustained dialogue. He said Pakistan still hoped that the proposed reciprocal steps would lead to the resumption of dialogue and help de-escalate the situation in occupied Kashmir.

Referring to the Indian proposal of introducing a bus service between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad, the Foreign Secretary said that could be welcome provided there were checkpoints manned by the United Nations and Kashmiri passengers carried UN travel papers.

Besides, Pakistan offered medical aid and assistance to Kashmiri victims of violence and rape, and to widows from the Valley. The secretary said international humanitarian bodies could be associated with the implementation of this proposal. Pakistan, he said, was offering scholarships for 100 Kashmiri students for studies in graduate and post-graduate courses in professional institutions.
Pakistan, the Foreign Secretary said, accepted the proposals pertaining to the resumption of the Samjhota Express between Lahore and Delhi, sports ties, visa camps with provision of necessary infrastructure and staff, land border crossing by people in the age group of 65 and above, and setting up of a hotline between Pakistan’s maritime agency and Indian coast guards to ensure humanitarian and expeditious assistance to arrested fishermen of either country.

About the Indian suggestions for Mumbai-Karachi ferry service and opening a land route between Munabao and Khokhrapar, the Foreign Secretary said these issues should better be left for consideration at negotiations whenever the two sides decided to resume dialogue.

Answering questions, he said the talks on the CBMs had a long history. He said progress and development in both countries had suffered a great deal because of confrontation for the last 55 years, mainly owing to the Kashmir dispute. Hence, he maintained, Pakistan had been insisting on negotiations on the Kashmir dispute along with other substantive issues. Mr. Khokhar said India might have floated the CBMs as a public relations activity or a “tactical move”, but Pakistan had responded to them seriously and sincerely.

He emphasized that the Kashmir issue could never be set aside because it was the heart of the problem between the two countries and the only way to resolve it was by holding negotiations. Asked for comments on statements of war by some Indian ministers, the Foreign Secretary said talking about war was most irresponsible.

Though Pakistan was ready to face any eventuality, it did not want to talk in terms of war. Rather it wanted dialogue to find a solution to the problems, he stressed.

In reply to a question about involving the United Nations in the proposed Srinagar-Muzaffarabad bus service, he said the suggestion was perfectly in order while considering travel facilities between the divided parts of a disputed territory which was on the UN agenda.

He said India was possibly amenable to a third party’s role in facilitating talks between the two countries as, he pointed out, the US had been talking to both Islamabad and New Delhi on contentious issues. He hoped that well-wishers of the two sides would continue to extend their support for a peaceful settlement of disputes.

In reply to a question about India’s stand that dialogue cannot be resumed because Pakistan had not done enough to prevent infiltration from across the Line of Control, Mr. Khokhar said Islamabad had done its utmost and now the ball was in India’s court. Let India seal its borders to prevent any unwanted incursions, he added.
We have seen the statement on India-Pakistan relations, made by the Prime Minister of Pakistan in his address yesterday. We welcome the decision of the Government of Pakistan to work for expanding the communication links proposed by us on October 22. We now propose immediate technical level talks for early implementation of these proposals.

We also welcome the announcement by the Prime Minister of Pakistan of a unilateral ceasefire with effect from the holy occasion of Eid. We will respond positively to this initiative. However, in order to establish a full ceasefire on a durable basis, there must be an end to infiltration from across the Line of Control.

1. The Pakistan Prime Minister, Zafarullah Khan Jamali, on November 23 said Pakistani troops were ready to observe a ceasefire along the Line of Control (LoC) from Id, falling on November 26. He said this in his address to the people of Pakistan on the occasion of the completion of one year of his Government. Significantly he also revived the proposals on a bus service between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad, capital of Pak-occupied Kashmir (PoK) and bus or train link between Sindh and Rajasthan and said that Pakistan was ready for discussions with India on them. The ceasefire announcement made by Mr. Jamali assumes significance, as Pakistan is to host the SAARC Summit in the first week of January and has been urging the Prime Minister, Atal Bhari Vajpayee, to utilise the occasion for revival of the stalled Indo-Pakistan dialogue. Since August Pakistan has mooted the ceasefire proposal twice but there is a difference in the manner it has been portrayed now and in the past. The proposal made by President Musharraf, was conditional and was subject to acceptance by India. New Delhi rejected it as a non-starter on the ground that it cannot let its guard on the LoC down when there is no let-up in infiltration. Mr. Jamali now seemed to suggest that Pakistan would observe a ceasefire irrespective of the Indian position. Mr. Jamali said Pakistan was ready for talks on the re-opening of the Khokhrapar-Monabao route that remained closed since the 1965 war. When India mooted the proposal in October Pakistan said that it could be discussed as part of the composite dialogue. The Pakistan Premier said his country was willing to start a bus service between Muzaffarabad and Srinagar. In response to the Indian proposal earlier Islamabad had said the service was possible only if U.N. personnel manned the check posts and people on either side were allowed to travel with U.N. documents. Mr. Jamali invited India to initiate talks on the modalities and other related matters for starting the bus service and offered to host a meeting in this regard. To facilitate issuance of visas, he proposed that both Pakistani and Indian high commissions, after mutual agreement, should look into the possibilities of opening visa camps. Jamali also conveyed his willingness to on the resumption of air links between the two countries and said negotiations between the two civil aviation authorities were extremely important. He hoped that these negotiations would lead to the revival of air links between Lahore-Delhi, Karachi-Mumbai and Karachi-Delhi. Mr. Jamali also re-floated Pakistan's proposal of reviving the Samjatha Express, saying, “we think that a decision in this regard should be reached by the end of this year”. Similarly, he said, Pakistan was also ready for talks on starting a ferry service between Karachi and Mumbai. He also proposed that the Interior Ministries of Pakistan and India should find ways to resolve the problems of prisoners jailed in each other’s countries.
To take this process further, we also propose a ceasefire along the AGPL (Actual Ground Position Line) in Siachen.

Question: The statement says we will respond positively to this initiative….

Answer: It says we will respond positively and in order to establish a full ceasefire on a durable basis there must be an end to infiltration from the across the LoC.

Question: The ceasefire is with effect from Eid. Will we also ceasefire from the same day?

Answer: I am not sure as to when what comes into effect. But we will respond positively.

Thank you.

1598. Announcement by Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf agreeing to the resumption of overflights between India and Pakistan.

President Gen Pervez Musharraf on November 30th agreed to the resumption of overflights with India, and proposed a four-stage approach for the settlement of the Kashmir issue.

Information Minister Shaikh Rashid Ahmed told newsmen that President Musharraf had taken a unilateral decision to allow the overflight facility to India as a goodwill gesture. Modalities for resuming overflights would be worked out at the experts’ meeting to be held in New Delhi.

Mr Ahmed said the announcement was made by the President at a meeting with the members of the Young Presidents Organization of both Pakistani and Indian chapters. “As a gesture of goodwill, Pakistan will agree to the resumption of overflights with India at the talks being held in Delhi next week,” the president told the Indian visitors. He said let the flight of Indian delegates be the first from here after the resumption of air links.

During his three-hour interaction with the participants of the meeting, he said the confidence building measures announced by Pakistan and India recently should be a starting point of the peace process. The initiative must be taken to its culmination in the interest of peace and development of South Asia, he stressed.

Elaborating his approach for the resolution of the Kashmir issue, Gen Musharraf said at the first stage the two countries should start a dialogue. At the second stage, they shall accept the importance and centrality of the dispute. Then they should eliminate the solutions unacceptable to Pakistan, India and the people of Kashmir. At the final stage, they should go for a solution acceptable to all — Pakistan, India and the Kashmiris.

“This is Pakistan’s approach and it is flexible, we have to move step by step,” he said. Pakistan was sincere in its efforts for peace in the region and it wanted peace with honour, dignity and sovereign equality, as is the right of all nations.

He emphasized that both countries needed to move beyond their stated positions for the resolution of the Kashmir dispute. “Pakistan wants a composite approach for resolution of all issues, including Kashmir.

“We must go beyond stated positions, because Kashmir cannot be rolled under the carpet and India, being a bigger partner in the region, must show flexibility and magnanimity,” he said.

India, he observed, was also faced with religious extremism and had militant organizations and said that just as acts of extremism were condemnable in Pakistan so should be the killing of Muslims in Gujarat. He said there was a need to curb obscurantism and extremism as they retarded development.

In reply to a question about the alleged cross-border infiltration, the president said the uprising in the occupied Kashmir was indigenous which had started in the wake of suppression. “We must understand the realities and move forward to a dialogue.”

He asked the participants to “give confidence to leadership in New Delhi to adopt a bold stance for a win-win situation for both countries.”

He regretted that despite the intellectual quality of the peopleof the region, South Asia remained backward due to the conflict between India and Pakistan.

“Therefore, for the sake of the people of region, we have to go for socio-economic development of the region and change the environment. Forget the past and look to future.”

The president pointed out that a lot of determination was required on both sides to carry forward the recent CBMs to achieve peace, harmony and development.
Referring to his theory of ‘enlightened moderation’, the president said all should contribute their bit to execute the strategy for making the world a safer place; through rejection of extremism by the Muslim world and resolution of political disputes involving Muslims by the West, particularly the US, with justice.

In reply to a question, he said democracy in Pakistan could not become sustainable as people were not empowered at the grass roots. He informed the gathering about the introduction of the local government system and expressed the hope that it would bring about a silent revolution in the country.

He said there was no clash between Islam and democracy. Islam, he explained, stood for democracy, human rights and for dealing with issues through consensus.

He told a questioner that Islamabad favoured a pipeline project for transporting gas to India from Iran through Pakistan.

[Shaikh Rashid Ahmed and Foreign Minister Khurshid Mehmood Kasuri also attended the brunch.]

◆◆◆◆◆

1599. Memorandum of Understanding between India and Pakistan Civil Aviation officials to discuss matters relating to Air Links between the two countries.

New Delhi, December 1, 2003.

The Civil Aviation delegations representing the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan met in New Delhi on 1\textsuperscript{st} December, 2003 to discuss matters relating to the resumption of air links between the two countries and over flights into the air space over each other’s territory. The talks were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere. The list of delegations is given at Appendix ‘A’.

2. After extensive discussions, the following decisions were taken:

(i) It was agreed to restore status-quo-ante obtaining prior to January, 2002. For this purpose, both countries agreed to open their respective air spaces for over flights for the airlines of both countries. The designated airlines of the Government of India and Government Pakistan shall be entitled to operate scheduled air services to/from each other’s territory in accordance with sub-paragraph (ii) of this Memorandum of Understanding.

(ii) The Pakistan delegation requested that the restriction on the type of aircraft to be operated by the designated airlines of both sides may be removed, the frequencies may be increased to a mutually agreed number and third destination may be added in either country. The Indian delegation agreed that, with the expected improvement in the travel environment and in order to encourage the end-to-end traffic between the two countries, the designated airlines of both sides shall be entitled to operate five frequencies per week on Karachi-Mumbai-Karachi route, three frequencies per week on Karachi-Mumbai-Karachi route, three frequencies on Karachi-Delhi-Karachi route and four frequencies per week on Lahore-Delhi-Lahore route with an aircraft not exceeding the capacity of B-747.

4. Both delegations also agreed to meet periodically to review developments in the field of civil aviation.

Done at New Delhi on 1st December, 2003.

Sd/ Satendra Singh (Leader of the Indian Delegation)
Sd/ (Major Gen. Mohammed Ashraf Chaudhry)
(Sd/ Leader of the Pakistan delegation)

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1600. Joint India-Pakistan press statement issued after consultations between Prime Minister of India and President of Pakistan.

The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India met during the SAARC summit in Islamabad.

The Indian Prime Minister while expressing satisfaction over the successful conclusion of the SAARC summit appreciated the excellent arrangements made by the host country.

Both leaders welcomed the recent steps towards normalisation of relations between the two countries and expressed the hope that the positive trends set by the CBMs would be consolidated.

Prime Minister Vajpayee said that in order to take forward and sustain the dialogue process, violence, hostility and terrorism must be prevented. President Musharraf reassured Prime Minister Vajpayee that he will not permit any territory under Pakistan’s control to be used to support terrorism in any manner. President Musharraf emphasised that a sustained and productive dialogue addressing all issues would lead to positive results.

To carry the process of normalisation forward, the president of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India agreed to commence the process of the composite dialogue in February 2004. The two leaders are confident that the resumption of the composite dialogue will lead to peaceful settlement of all bilateral issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, to the satisfaction of both sides.

The two leaders agreed that constructive dialogue would promote progress towards the common objective of peace, security and economic development for our peoples and for future generations.

◆◆◆◆◆
Pakistan said on Monday it remained optimistic as well as confident about the peace process with India and made it clear that there would be no compromise on aspirations of the Kashmiri people.

In his weekly briefing, the Foreign Office spokesman Masood Khan described the Jan 5 Musharraf - Vajpayee meeting as a historic moment "when ice was broken and the way paved for a dialogue."

Terming it a giant step he declared: “We remain upbeat and optimistic about the process that has started.” “In 2002 and 2003 we were on the cusp of despondency and despair but now we have a glimmer of hope of resolving all issues including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir,” he maintained.

The Foreign Office spokesman said the dates, venue, agenda and level of the composite dialogue would be worked out through diplomatic channels. However, he did not specify when.

The spokesman refused to indulge in any sort of speculation about the agenda or level of the composite dialogue that the two countries had agreed to hold next month.

Responding to a question, he said Pakistan would make a specific proposal regarding the structure and the level at which the composite dialogue should proceed. While noting that the two sides were working together to arrive at certain decisions he did not give any definite timeline.

He said Pakistan was hopeful that the composite dialogue next month would ultimately lead to resolution of all outstanding issues between the two countries, including the dispute of Jammu and Kashmir.

When asked to identify the less contentious issues and if these would be addressed first, the spokesman said: “Let us not speculate how the process starts. We have to have an optimistic mindset and look towards the future with confidence.”

Mr Khan disagreed with the notion that the Jan 6 Islamabad Joint Statement was part of a secret deal or signalled a change in Pakistan’s stated position on Kashmir. The aspirations of Kashmiris remain paramount and would never be compromised, he emphasised.

The spokesman was evasive when asked why Pakistan had withdrawn from its earlier position of allowing the Srinagar-Muzzafarabad bus service under the UN travel documents.

The spokesman was equally vehement in knocking down the insinuation that it was pressure from some foreign powers, particularly the US, that had led to the recent breakthrough in Pakistan-India relations.

“There was no pressure. It was the statesmanship and wisdom of the two leaders that led to the peace process, the spokesman said. Pointing to the direct and indirect US engagement with India and Pakistan on this matter, he said it could at best be called facilitation.

He said given that both India and Pakistan were nuclear-armed neighbours, the US and other countries had a legitimate interest in restoration of peace, security and stability in South Asia.

Asked if a formal invitation would be extended to Indian Deputy Prime Minister L.K. Advani to visit Pakistan, the spokesman said that no decision had been taken in this regard yet.

He termed reports about Mr. Advani travelling to Pakistan to discuss modalities of an extradition treaty as incorrect, saying: “Nothing of the sort is happening now.”

In reply to a question, the spokesman emphasised that the Additional Protocol to the Saarc Regional Convention on Suppression of Terrorism simply updated and supplemented the existing convention in the light of 9/11 terrorist attacks in the US. The spokesman said a decision on the ratification of the Additional Protocol and some related aspects would be taken after further consultations.

The Foreign Office spokesman said the operation last week against suspected foreign terrorists in Wana, South Waziristan tribal agency bordering Afghanistan, was not launched under the US pressure.

“It was based on our own determination and intelligence reports that some foreign terrorists were hiding there,” he insisted. “All decisions we take are driven by our national interest,” he categorically stated.

He said Pakistan was providing logistical support to the Americans as part of their continuing cooperation in the war against terrorism. This included permission to the Americans to use Pakistani airspace, he added.

In reply to a question, the spokesman said there was no information yet available on the number, nationalities and identities of the alleged foreign terrorists.

The spokesman disagreed with a view that the reform agenda for the Madressahs was US-dictated and being funded by the US government. He said the measures being taken for integration of Madressahs were initiated by Pakistan authorities. The funding Pakistan was getting from the US government was for education and not specific to reforms in Madressahs, he said.

Responding to a question the spokesman said Pukhtoonistan was a non-issue. “It is dead and buried and it only exists in the books of history,” he said.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1602. Joint Statement issued at the end of the meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

The Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India met in Islamabad on February 18, 2004.

2. They reviewed and endorsed the agreement worked out at the Director General/Joint Secretary level meetings on February 16-17 on the modalities and timeframe for discussions on all subjects on the agenda of the Composite Dialogue.

3. Both sides agreed that they would approach the composite dialogue with the sincere desire to discuss and arrive at a peaceful settlement of all bilateral issues, including Jammu & Kashmir, to the satisfaction of both sides. They reiterated their commitment to promote progress towards the common objective of peace, security and economic development for their peoples and for future generations.

4. They agreed to the following schedule of meetings:
   i. Foreign Secretaries would meet in May/June 2004 for talks on Peace and Security including CBMs; and Jammu & Kashmir.

---

* When the talks were in progress on the first day (February 16) as a gesture of friendship to the people of Pakistan it was announced in New Delhi that:

“Government of India have decided to release and repatriate 4 Pakistani civilians detained in Gujarat and 4 Pakistani boys who were detained at Faridkot Juvenile Detention Center and this will take place on the February 17, 2004. The civilians were granted consular access on May 19, 2003 and travel documents were then issued to them on 12th January. As regards the boys, there were 8 boys in all and consular access was granted on October 3, 2003. Out of these 8 boys, one boy has already been repatriated on November 14, 2003 and travel documents for 4 others have now been issued by the Pakistani High Commission and they are expected to be repatriated tomorrow. Nationality of 3 other boys including a boy aged 10 years has not yet been confirmed by the Pakistani authorities.”
ii. Talks on Siachen; Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Terrorism and Drug Trafficking; Economic and Commercial Cooperation; and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields would be held at the already agreed levels, in July 2004.

5. The following technical level meetings would be held earlier:
   a. Meeting between Director General Pakistan Rangers and Inspector General Border Security Force in March / April 2004;
   b. Expert level talks on Nuclear CBMs in the latter half of May 2004;
   c. Committee on Drug Trafficking and Smuggling in June 2004.

6. They reviewed the existing links between the Directors General Military Operations of Pakistan and India and agreed to consider further strengthening these contacts.

7. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan and the External Affairs Minister of India would meet in August 2004 to review overall progress. This would be preceded by a one day meeting of the Foreign Secretaries.

◆◆◆◆◆

1603. Excerpts from the Speech of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf at the India Today Conclave-- 2004 (relayed through Satellite)

President Pervez Musharraf said on March 13 'that India and Pakistan must bury the past for a prosperous future and called for a just resolution of the core Kashmir dispute to begin a new chapter in their troubled history. "Kashmir is the central issue that awaits just and durable settlement," he said while addressing the "INDIA TODAY Conclave" via satellite from Islamabad on the theme of future of Pakistan-India Relations.

The President said: "This is a moment of hope and optimism. Let us nurture it carefully and make the process of engagement (between Pakistan and India) irreversible." "India and Pakistan must bury the past and chart a new roadmap for peace," the President said, adding peoples of the two countries desired peace and were fed up of confrontation.
Referring to the chequered history of the two countries, he said Pakistan and India had lost half a century in mutual squabbles. "Let us face it," he said and recalled the two countries had fought wars, tested nuclear weapons and had remained engaged in hot confrontation, making the region "most dangerous flashpoint in the world".

He said at the centre of this was the spiraling vortex of Pakistan-India animosity that had bedeviled "their ties for over half a century." "If Pakistan and India could settle Kashmir in accordance with aspirations of Kashmiris, a new chapter in our troubled history could begin." This, he said, was only possible if all parties were sincere in their quest for a just and durable peace through a solution acceptable to all.

President Musharraf said he would not speak about the political and legal history of Kashmir as it was well recorded and documented in the archives and resolutions of the UN. Emphasising the centrality of the Kashmir dispute, Gen Musharraf said: "Let's be pragmatic. Let us learn to accept hard facts ... and resolve it (Kashmir issue) in an equitable and honourable manner acceptable to India, Pakistan and Kashmiris.'

He alluded to his four-point process whereby talks commence; centrality of Kashmir dispute is accepted; all solutions not acceptable to either of the three parties are taken off the table and of the remaining option the one deemed most feasible and acceptable is chosen. "I believe nothing could be fairer than that." Gen. Musharraf said a solution would emerge if all sides were mindful of the problem: "If all parties, specially Kashmiris are given the opportunity to have their due say and are associated with a credible, sincere and serious quest for a final settlement between Pakistan and India." The President said that the joint statement issued in Islamabad provided a good framework for a relationship of harmony and mutual respect. He said the confidence building measures (CBMs) already initiated had generated tremendous goodwill, adding foreign secretary level talks had further inched the dialogue process forward. "The composite dialogue scheduled for May/June this year should augur well for our future relationship," he said.

However, the President cautioned: "There is a simultaneity/linkage between CBMs and the composite dialogue. CBMs cannot outstrip the dialogue process on all substantive issues including Kashmir." He reiterated that "the Kashmir dispute can never be sidelined or ignored" and "stressed the two countries "must move forward towards its resolution in tandem with CBMs."

He underlined that "sooner or later Kashmiris must join the peace process on Kashmir to make a solution practicable." The President, however, cautioned about the extremists on both sides who, he said, would try to derail the process.
"We must not be deterred from our path and be prepared to deal with them with an iron hand. In fact in our own supreme interests, we must negotiate peace boldly as if there are no detracting extremists, and we must also deal with all extremists as if there is no peace initiative."

He gave the assurance that Pakistan was determined "to take two steps forward if India takes one step and chooses to embark on a realistic quest for a just and durable peace with Pakistan on the basis of sovereign equality." He said India would find Pakistan sincere and responsive, if it desired genuine improvement in relations. "We are mindful of the difficulties posed by rigid mindsets. We must persevere." But he warned if there was no movement towards a solution, everything would slide back to square one.

President Musharraf listed a number of benefits, which the two countries would have once there is peace in the region. He said the market size would expand to $1.2 billion (equal to that of China) opening vistas of trading opportunities within the region. Foreign direct investment presently stagnating at $3 billion could increase manifold. The natural gas from Iran and Central Asia could become available to the region bringing down energy costs by at least 50 per cent. India might be the maximum gainer. He said the region had a vast treasure of tourist attractions and the two countries could benefit from combined regional tours.

President Musharraf said with the reduction in defence expenditure, funds would be made available for social sectors and poverty reduction. Through mutual sports, India and Pakistan could regain the lost glory, in hockey and cricket.

He said progress on dialogue towards serious resolution of disputes should "set us thinking on other more substantive CBMs." "Why can't our defence expenditure be cut down? It certainly can. Pakistan is not in an arms race. We maintain a quantified force level based on a perceived threat, and a strategy of minimum deterrence."

President Musharraf said: "With the enhancement of firepower of weapons we are already reducing the strength of our Army by 50,000. We had kept our defence budget frozen for the past four years. India has to review its own strategy because your defence force levels are not based on threat but on power projection."

He also pointed at the latest multi-billion dollar acquisitions by India and noted the vastly enhanced budgetary allocations to defence. The President however said: "In any case, Pakistan will remain amenable to mutual, proportional reduction of forces." He said the present time was ideal for resolution of all disputes and ushering in an era of peace, harmony and prosperity. "The peoples of our countries want it, the influential business community is eagerly looking forward to it, the media favours it."

He said the leaders on both sides had to be sincere to develop confidence and trust in each other. "They have to be flexible enough to reach mutually acceptable solutions to previously intractable disputes and bold enough to bulldoze all opposition and risks en route to peace," Gen Musharraf said: "We have to show enough maturity to be able to resolve disputes bilaterally within a reasonable time limit." He said: "It is only our failure which then invites third party mediation, facilitation, involvement or encouragement."

The USA being the sole superpower in a uni-polar world had a responsibility for bringing a just peace for the future generations. "Their involvement in resolution of the thorny Kashmir dispute could be of value if we get stuck ourselves." The President said: "As responsible nuclear weapon- states, we must demonstrate to the world that we have the courage and conviction to settle our problems in a civilized manner. We must demonstrate the courage and wisdom to write a new chapter of peaceful co-existence and mutually beneficial cooperation." He said there was distinct warmth in sentiments in Pakistan and India to engage constructively. He said respect for basic principles of inter-state conduct, developing relations based on sovereign equality were the safe and sure foundation within which Pakistan-India relations could thrive and prosper.

President Musharraf said: "We in Pakistan look forward to sustaining the present positive momentum in our relations with India. This is a moment of hope and optimism. Let us nurture it carefully and make the process of engagement irreversible. Let us draw a balance between the vast opportunities that exist for mutual gains and the hazards of falling back to self-generated hatred and despair."

He said Pakistan and India must lead South Asia to new horizons of economic development. The roadmap delineated for the composite talks must be filled with other pointers and time lines for joint endeavours to resolve differences and disputes. It should not take long to fashion together a roadmap to progress and prosperity, reinforcing and utilising the talent and "genius of our peoples, using our resources optimally."

He also shared his global vision with reference to the war on terrorism and the need to address Muslims’ concerns with justice. The President also spoke about his vision of "enlightened moderation" to bring peace to the world. He also underlined the role Pakistan was playing in the fight against international terrorism. He said Pakistan was actively fighting against the Al-Qaeda along its western borders. "We will not allow the Al-Qaeda to maintain sanctuaries in Pakistan," he added.
At the end the President entertained questions from the audience belonging to industry, media, business and different walks of life.

Replying to a question about the stress on the centrality of the Kashmir dispute in India-Pakistan ties, Gen Musharraf said no leader in Pakistan could sideline the Kashmir dispute. This is the reality, he said, adding, the two countries could not move forward on CBMs without making progress on the Kashmir issue. "We cannot sprint on the CBMs while moving at a snail's pace on the dialogue process, there has to be simultaneity." Similarly, he said real progress in trade and economic ties was linked to the settlement of all outstanding issues.

To another question he said Pakistani businessmen were capable enough to be competitive with their Indian counterparts. The President said there was tremendous scope for enhancing two-way trade and economic ties but added, there was need to resolve political disputes. "We have to remove the environment of suspicion first and move forward to resolve disputes."

Asked about the difference in Agra and Islamabad, he replied Pakistan had now been accepted as a party concerned in the Kashmir dispute. He said there was a deep desire for peace among Pakistanis with India and they wanted a harmonious relationship. He said there were a handful of extremists in Pakistan as there were in India but added, this small minority should not be a hindrance in the way peace process.

He said Pakistan was pursuing the peace process with sincerity and would adhere to the joint statement in letter and spirit. He said Sino-Indian ties could not be compared with Pakistan-India relations as the two countries had fought more than one war and the LoC was a recognised disputed boundary by the UN. He, however, made it clear that there was an indigenous freedom struggle being waged in Kashmir. About greater interaction between the media of Pakistan and India, he said there was more openness on the part of Pakistan in allowing Indian media in Pakistan. He expressed concern that the Indian media was promoting some negative tendencies and asked them to show more maturity and encourage better understanding and closer relations.

He said: "There is democracy in Pakistan, elections have been held and the next elections will be held in 2007." The President said that human rights situation was better in Pakistan as compared to India. Similarly, he said freedom of media and speech was also better in Pakistan than the India.

◆◆◆◆◆
We have carefully examined the comments made by the Pakistan President General Pervez Musharraf yesterday.

The language of the January 6 Islamabad Joint Press Statement is clear and unambiguous. It delineates how the process has to be sustained and taken forward. Violence, hostility and terrorism must be prevented. The President of Pakistan had reassured the Prime Minister of India that he would not permit the territory under Pakistan’s control to be used to support terrorism in any manner. There is no reference to any so-called central or core issue, but to addressing all bilateral issues, including Jammu and Kashmir.

Any unilateral interpretation of the Joint Press Statement is not conducive to building trust, or taking the process forward; nor is public rhetoric, which is also contrary to the understandings and restraints observed since January.

Double standards in describing the violent attack on him as terrorism, but on the J&K Assembly in October 2001, and on the present Chief Minister recently, as a “freedom fight” are clearly not tenable.

The reality of the vast goodwill among the people of the two countries, clearly manifested today, and being further consolidated through the CBMs, needs to be acknowledged and built upon. Contrary efforts would not be in keeping with the sentiments of the people in both the countries.

India is determined to continue with the process initiated by the Prime Minister in April last year, and on the basis of the framework agreed upon.
1605. Statement by Official Spokesperson regarding US proposal to designate Pakistan as a major Non-NATO ally.

We have seen the statement made in Islamabad by the US Secretary of State on March 18 on a prospective notification to the US Congress to designate Pakistan as a major non-NATO ally for the purposes of military-to-military relations.

The Secretary of State was in India just two days before this statement was made in Islamabad. While he was in India, there was much emphasis on India-US strategic partnership. It is disappointing that he did not share with us this decision of the United States Government.

We are studying the details of this decision, which has significant implications for India-US relations. We are in touch with the US Government in this regard.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1. On March 23 the Official Spokesperson was asked some further questions on this subject. They are:

Question: There are two major things. Somebody has written that Mr. Sinha has spoken to Mr. Powell who has offered an apology. The second is that Bush has said that they have offered that India can also have the same status.

Answer: To answer your first question. We have seen that report in one of the newspapers today. It is not an accurate characterization of the conversation that took place between the Minister and Secretary Powell. It is correct that US Secretary of State Powell telephoned EAM on March 21 and he had been trying to reach EAM since March 19 but EAM had not been able to receive his calls as he was engaged in campaigning. Secretary Powell referred to the way in which the US announcement about designating Pakistan as a major non-NATO Ally had emerged and said that their intention had not been to spring a surprise on India. As far as your second question is concerned I have seen remarks ascribed to the White House Spokesman. In response to that I can say that we have not given any consideration to that kind of relationship with the United States.

Question: There were speculations in the government corridors that India could consider joining NATO.

Answer: I am not going to comment on speculations of which I am not aware.

Question: There was also talk about India, US and Israel forming a strategic alliance.

Answer: Let us not mix issues. That issue has been explained to you on several occasions. The context in which that statement was made in the context of democracies and democracies fighting terrorism.

Question: But we are not averse to such a status.

Answer: I said we have not given any consideration to that kind of relationship with the United States.

Question: Have we been proposed any time frame?

Answer: I have no information to add to that. I have seen the remarks that you have seen.
Joint statement issued at the end of the meeting between Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

The Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met in New Delhi on 27-28 June 2004 to resume the Composite Dialogue. They discussed ‘Peace and Security including CBMs’ and ‘Jammu and Kashmir’. The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere, and with the objective of taking the process forward.

1. They reiterated their commitment to the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, and their determination to implement the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit.

2. Both sides expressed satisfaction over the ongoing process of dialogue and confidence building between the two countries. They approved the measures recommended by the Expert level meeting on Nuclear CBMs in New Delhi on 19-20 June 2004. They agreed to conclude an Agreement on pre-notification of flight testing of missiles, and entrusted the Experts to work towards finalizing the draft Agreement. Both sides reaffirmed the elements in the Joint Statement of 20th June on the need to promote a stable environment of peace and security, recognizing the nuclear capabilities of each other constituting a factor for stability, working towards strategic stability, and the call for regular working level meetings to be held among all the nuclear powers to discuss issues of common concern. The two sides proposed a comprehensive framework for conventional CBMs aimed at initiating and enhancing communication, coordination and interaction. These would be discussed further.

3. Recalling the reassurance contained in the Joint Press Statement of January 6, 2004, they exchanged views on carrying the process forward in an atmosphere free from terrorism and violence.

4. The Foreign Secretaries reiterated the hope that the dialogue will lead to peaceful settlement of all bilateral issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, to the satisfaction of both sides. They held detailed exchange of views on Jammu & Kashmir and agreed to continue the sustained and serious dialogue to find a peaceful negotiated final settlement.

5. It was agreed that the strengths of the respective High Commissions would be restored immediately to the original level of 110; it was also agreed in

---

1. Elaborating the term “final settlement” MEA Spokesperson Navtej Sarna said: "The idea is that both the countries are now engaged in a process, in a composite dialogue, in which there are several subjects and Jammu and Kashmir is one of them and both countries are committed to resolving all these issues bilaterally and peacefully. Taking questions after reading out the Joint Statement, Mr. Sarna said that terrorism was discussed in today’s meeting as it was part of earlier statements and discussions. “It was underscored that terrorism is not good for the region, it is not good for India, it is not good for Pakistan and we must work together to remove this scourge from our principle to re-establish India's Consulate General in Karachi and Pakistan's Consulate General in Mumbai. Modalities would be worked out by the two Governments. All apprehended fishermen in each other's custody would be immediately released and a mechanism put in place for the return of unintentionally transgressing fishermen and their boats from the high seas without apprehending them. Steps would be initiated for early release of civilian prisoners.

7. The Foreign Secretaries also agreed that the meetings of the remaining six subjects of the Composite Dialogue on Siachen, Wullar Barrage/ Tulbul Navigation Project, Sir Creek, Terrorism and Drug Trafficking, Economic and Commercial Cooperation, and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields, would take place between the third week of July and the first half of August 2004.

8. The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan conveyed invitations from the President of Pakistan to the President and Prime Minister of India, and to Smt. Sonia Gandhi.

9. The Foreign Secretaries will meet again in the third week of August to review progress achieved in the Composite Dialogue and prepare for the meeting of the Foreign Ministers which will immediately follow.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

midst..."Asked if the issue of "terrorist infrastructure" in Pakistan was specifically raised, he said that it was a long discussion. "I am not going to go into the diplomatic give and take of the discussions. I have given you a broad idea of what was discussed. Let me retain the confidentiality of diplomatic exchanges." On the problem that confronted the Srinagar – Muzaffarabad bus service, Mr. Sarna clarified that the proposal was still on the table. "This was not a technical level meeting, so we did not go into the technicalities of each of the proposals. Those proposals on which there was immediate agreement, the Foreign Secretaries have agreed to, the rest of the proposals are on the table."

"We hope this process will move forward. There will be technical level meetings not only on this (the Srinagar – Muzaffarabad bus) but other subjects that may require them, and those will be correct fora for working out these details." When asked if India was concerned about Pakistan Foreign Secretary Riaz Khokhar’s meetings with the Kashmiri separatists, the Spokesman answered with the question: "Have you seen any expression of concern?" On the “plans” of some Kashmiri separatists to visit Pakistan in the near future and New Delhi’s views on the issue, Mr. Sarna said: “the Government of India is a very wide body and I am not the Spokesman for the entire Government of India.” When asked the extent of flexibility shown by each side on Kashmir, Sarna said the mood was constructive. "The exchanges have been extensive and so we have to move forward. This is the beginning of a process."

The process of sustained dialogue was carried forward when the External Affairs Minister met his Pakistani counterpart in Jakarta on the sidelines of the 11th annual meeting of the Association of South East Asian Nations Regional Forum (ARF) on July 2. In his brief remarks to journalists in Jakarta Mr. Singh said “one has to be realistic” about India – Pakistan dialogue process and that he would not look at it from the perspective of being “optimistic or pessimistic".
Media reaction and Official Statement of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the meeting between President Pervez Musharraf and External Affairs Minister Natwar Singh.

President General Pervez Musharraf told Indian External Affairs Minister Natwar Singh during a meeting on July 23 that tangible engagement was essential for resolving the Kashmir dispute.

The focus of the 90-minute meeting, held in the President's camp office at Rawalpindi, was on the need for tangible engagement towards the settlement of the Kashmir issue, though other bilateral issues also came under discussion.

Gen Musharraf was said to have reiterated the pointed statement he had made the day before that without any progress towards the settlement of the core issue of Kashmir, no headway on confidence-building measures was possible.

"The president was very clear that the two sides have to go by the principle of simultaneity and that progress cannot be made in one area while in the other it is kept on hold," media quoted unnamed officials for President to tell Mr. Singh.

While the president did not push for any specific timeframe on Kashmir, he emphasized that progress on the issue could not be left open-ended. His contention was that at least some process of discussion on possible solutions ought to be initiated.

It was underlined that the aspirations of the Kashmiris had to be taken into account and any solution would have to be acceptable to them as well. The Indian minister is reported to have given no assurances on the issue. He maintained that the Indian government could not rush into things because it also had to take along its coalition partners. His message was that 'we have to be patient'.

Mr. Singh had raised the issue of cross-LoC infiltration and militant training camps. The president reminded him that major steps had already been taken to address these concerns. In fact, he said, the Pakistani government was being criticized for taking unilateral steps without India taking any reciprocal measures, the media said.

According to a statement issued by the foreign office, the President while expressing commitment to making the composite dialogue process a success, emphasized the need for simultaneous progress on all issues, and most notably on the central issue of Jammu and Kashmir.
"It was important to address this issue with sincerity with a view to reaching a final settlement that accorded fully with the legitimate aspirations of the Kashmiris within a 'reasonable' timeframe," it said, adding: "It was also important to provide 'comfort' to the Kashmiris as they had the most important stake in the success of the process."

"Mr Natwar Singh expressed his appreciation for the welcome and hospitality extended to him and his delegation, and satisfaction at the successful conclusion of the Saarc ministerial meeting," according to the statement.

Before boarding the plane for New Delhi, Mr Singh said he had found the attitude of the Pakistani leadership 'constructive and positive' and described his discussions with the president as 'warm, frank and realistic'.

Reading out from a three-page 'departure statement', he said India and Pakistan were committed to discussing and settling all bilateral issues, including that of Jammu and Kashmir, "to the satisfaction of both sides".

He made three references to Jammu and Kashmir, but none to the Kashmiris. He said he had conveyed to him (president) his government's intention to carry on a sustained and steady dialogue with Pakistan. "We reviewed significant aspects of our relations. Both sides reiterated the importance of continuing the dialogue process in an atmosphere free of violence" he elaborated.

Reacting to the above statement of Pakistan Foreign Ministry, Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs said in New Delhi on July 24 that "we are disappointed at the tone and substance of some of the comments made in the press release" and added it did not "reflect the comprehensiveness of the discussions".
Joint press statement issued at the end of India-Pakistan talks on Terrorism and Drug Trafficking.

Within the framework of the Composite Dialogue process between Pakistan and India, resumed pursuant to the January 6 Joint Press Statement, talks on Terrorism and Drug Trafficking were held in Islamabad on August 10-11, 2004. The Pakistani delegation was led by Mr. Tariq Mahmud, Secretary, Ministry of Interior while the Indian delegation was led by Mr. Dhirendra Singh, Home Secretary.

Frank and candid discussions were held in a constructive and cordial atmosphere aimed at taking the process forward. Both sides reaffirmed their determination to combat terrorism and emphasized the need for complete elimination of this menace.

They assessed as positive the increasing cooperation and information sharing between Narcotics Control Authorities of the two countries and agreed to work towards an MOU to institutionalize cooperation in this area, and to designate nodal officials in their respective High Commissions to liaise on drug control issues.

The Indian Home Secretary called on the Minister of Interior, Makdoom Syed Faisal Saleh Hayat.

It was agreed to continue the discussions.
1609. Joint statement issued at the end of talks between the Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 8, 2004.

External Affairs Minister of India, H.E. Shri. K. Natwar Singh and Foreign Minister of Pakistan, H.E. Mr. Khurshid M. Kasuri, met in New Delhi on September 5 and 6, 2004 to review status of the Composite Dialogue. Their meeting was preceded by a meeting between the Foreign Secretary of India Shri Shyam Saran and Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Mr. Riaz H. Khokhar on September 4, 2004. The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere.

2. They reiterated their commitment to the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, and their determination to implement the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit.

3. The Foreign Ministers expressed satisfaction at the progress made so far, and positively assessed the developments in bilateral relations over the past year.

4. Recalling the reassurance contained in the Joint Press Statement of January 6, 2004, they exchanged views on carrying the process forward in an atmosphere free from terrorism and violence.

5. The Ministers held detailed and substantive discussions and reiterated the confidence that the Composite Dialogue will lead to peaceful settlement of all bilateral issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, to the satisfaction of both sides. They agreed to continue with the serious and sustained dialogue to find a peaceful negotiated final settlement. They expressed their determination to take the process forward.

6. The wide ranging proposals on confidence building, promotion of friendly exchanges, and enhancing trade and economic cooperation, made by both the sides, were examined and it was agreed that these would be discussed further.

7. The Ministers agreed on the following:
   (a) Expert level meetings on Conventional and Nuclear CBMs, inter alia, to discuss the draft agreement on advance notification of missile tests;
   (b) Meeting between railway authorities on the Munnabao - Khokhrapar rail link;
   (c) Biannual meeting between Indian Border Security Force (BSF) and Pakistan Rangers in October 2004;
Meeting between Narcotics Control Authorities, including for finalisation of an MOU in October/November 2004;

Meeting between the Indian Coast Guards and the Pakistan Maritime Security Agency in November 2004 to, inter alia, discuss the Memorandum of Understanding for establishing communication link between them;

Establishment of Committee of Experts to consider issues related to trade;

On Siachen, the outcome of the August 2004 meeting of Defence Secretaries would be implemented;

Joint Survey of the boundary pillars in the horizontal segment (blue dotted line) of the international boundary in the Sir Creek area;

Meeting on all issues related to commencement of a bus service between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad;

Add a new category of Tourist Visa in the visa regime between the two countries, and to promote group tourism;

Set up a mechanism to deal with the issue of civilian prisoners and fishermen, effectively and speedily;

Further measures for facilitation of visits to religious shrines, and upkeep of historical sites;

Enhanced interaction and exchanges among the respective Foreign Offices, including study tours of young diplomats/probationers to each other’s country.

They recognized the importance of availability and access to energy resources in the region around South Asia. The Ministers of Petroleum/Gas could meet to discuss the issue in its multifarious dimensions.

1. The question of hassle-free visa for journalists had come up at another function on September 7. The Indian External Affairs Minister taking the initiative, which was reciprocated by the Pakistani Foreign Minister, announced that “free visa” would be issued to Pakistani journalists by India. He said “Mr. Dixit (National Security Advisor) and I will persuade the Home Minister to go along with us”. “There should be no problem in allowing Pakistani journalists to move freely”, said Mr. Natwar Singh.

2. Separately in an interview to the daily the Hindu on September 8 Mr.Kasuri proposed a joint working group of India, Pakistan and Iran to discuss the plans for an oil-gas pipeline running through the three countries. He said the feed-back from India on his proposal was positive. He hoped an early meeting between the Petroleum Ministers of the two countries to take the proposal further.
9. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan met the National Security Adviser, Mr. J.N. Dixit, and also called on Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, during his stay in India.

10. The two sides agreed to the continuation of high level meetings and visits, including:
   (a) a meeting between President Musharraf and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh in New York on the margins of UNGA later in September 2004;
   (b) a visit by Pakistan's Prime Minister to India as Chairperson of SAARC;
   (c) a meeting between the Prime Minister of India and Pakistan's Prime Minister in Dhaka, in January 2005, on the margins of the SAARC Summit.

11. It was also agreed that the two Foreign Secretaries would meet in December 2004 to discuss overall progress, as well as subjects of Peace and Security including CBMs, and Jammu and Kashmir, in the Composite Dialogue. They would also work out the schedule of meetings on the other six subjects, i.e. Siachen; Wullar Barrage/ Tulbul Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Terrorism and Drug Trafficking; Economic and Commercial Cooperation; and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields, under the Composite Dialogue.

12. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan invited the External Affairs Minister of India to visit Pakistan. The invitation was accepted and the dates would be worked out through diplomatic channels.

3. A press report quoting a source in the Prime Minister's Office said: "A lot of plain-speaking marked the meeting." The focus of the discussion was the coming meeting between Dr. Manmohan Singh and the Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf. Dr. Singh was said to have impressed upon Mr. Kasuri the need to create an environment to take the dialogue process forward, the source said. Dr. Singh said that he had many friends in Pakistan and specifically mentioned the new Premier Shaukat Aziz, in this context. When Mr. Kasuri referred to a possible oil-gas pipeline running through Pakistan into India, Dr. Singh said all these were good ideas, but said the pipeline was not a standalone project. It had to be seen in the wider context of the economic relations between the two countries.

4. The possibility of a meeting had been confirmed by Prime Minister himself at his press conference on September 4. When asked about the agenda, Dr. Manmohan Singh had said: "I will be meeting him for the first time. It will be an exercise in mutual comprehension."

5. The US Secretary of State reacting to the talks said on September 7 that Kashmir is a "very difficult issue" which will take time to resolve and that India and Pakistan know that the issue would have to be dealt with. However, he said that he was pleased that the two countries were entering into a dialogue is a "positive" way. "Both Ministers [Natwar Singh and Khurshid Mehmood Kasuri] recognize that Kashmir is an issue among many issues that have to be dealt with between the two nations. I am pleased that they are actually talking to one another at this level and many other levels and that the environment for positive discussions has improved so greatly over the last year and a half, two years," he said recalling the concern at one time of a major conflict between the two countries.
1610. Press Stakeout of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Pervez Musharraf.

President Musharraf: I would like to read the agreement that we have reached.

"President Musharraf and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had one hour meeting this morning. Their discussions were held in a constructive and frank spirit. They welcomed the opportunity of making each other’s acquaintance during the first meeting.

Both leaders reiterated their commitment to continue the bilateral dialogue to restore normalcy and cooperation between India and Pakistan.

They agreed that confidence building measures (CBMs) of all categories under

1. The media report described the atmosphere as relaxed and added that the tone was set by President Musharraf who presented Dr. Manmohan Singh a painting of the school in “Gah” village (now in Pakistan) his native place and where he had his initial schooling. On his part the Prime Minister recited two Urdu couplets which he read out to Gen. Musharraf when he had telephoned to congratulate Dr. Singh on assuming the office of the Prime Minister. The thrust of the couplets was that it was incumbent on the two leaders to seize the historic moment to bring peace to the region. At the outset, Dr. Singh assured Gen. Musharraf that he remained personally committed to the dialogue process. The mood at the press stake suggested that the interaction which included a one-on-one between them, had gone on rather well. The original idea was that they would meet for 15 minutes before the delegations joined them; however, it appears that the two leaders hit it off rather well and their interaction got extended to an hour-long “essay in mutual comprehension”. According to an Indian official the meeting can be said to “mark a significant step forward” and the Indian side entertained sufficient “confidence” that difficulties to peace would be overcome. Officials said the two leaders discussed the Jammu and Kashmir problem and it was natural to infer that the question of cross-border terrorism must have figured in the talks. On return to New Delhi on September 27 the Prime Minister said: “I met President Musharraf and I am glad to report that talks with him were very good...we agreed to carry forward the composite dialogue process. It augurs well for India – Pakistan relations.” Referring to reports regarding absence of “cross-border terrorism” in the India – Pakistan statement of September 24, the External Affairs Minister K. Natwar Singh told journalists in London on October 1 that “cross-border terrorism” must end if Pakistan wanted the peace process to continue. The Minister said that the fact that the “January 6 statement” was specifically mentioned at the meeting meant that terrorism was indeed discussed. “We told Pakistan if you really want the dialogue to go on, terrorism has to stop”, said Mr. Singh. “The fact is that in both areas we have done a great deal of work,” he said pointing out that as many as eight meetings had been held with Pakistan “in all areas and at all levels.” India had proposed a comprehensive package of confidence-building measures and efforts to carry the dialogue forward would continue. Adding that the Centre was comfortable with Musharraf’s UN speech, Mr. Singh said the Pakistani President’s statement that “he is not unifocal” was an indication how the dialogue was progressing. The Minister said that India was hopeful of having good trade ties with Pakistan. He cited China’s example and said that trade with that country was slated to touch ten billion dollars this year. In a related move in a meeting with leader of the Opposition L.K. Advani on October 1, Dr. Manmohan Singh is believed to have told the latter that he took up the issue of cross-border terrorism with Musharraf in a forceful manner. He said there was no dilution on the Centre’s part on this issue.
discussion between the two governments should be implemented keeping in mind practical possibilities. They also addressed the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and agreed that possible options for a peaceful, negotiated settlement of the issue should be explored in a sincere spirit and purposeful manner. In the spirit of the Islamabad joint press statement of January 6, 2004, they agreed that CBMs will contribute to generating an atmosphere of trust and mutual understanding so necessary for the well being of the peoples of both countries.

The possibility of a gas pipeline via Pakistan to India was also discussed. It was felt that such a project could contribute to the welfare and prosperity of the people of both countries and should be considered in the larger context of expanding trade and economic relations between India and Pakistan.

That is all as far as the statement is concerned. I would like to say that the Prime Minister gave me an honour of (by) allowing me to read this text out. I hope that this augurs well for the future of Indo-Pakistan relations. Thank you very much.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh: Ladies and Gentlemen, before I embarked on this journey people asked me - what were your expectations of meeting with President Musharraf. I said to them before I left Delhi that this is an essay in mutual comprehension. Today I have had the privilege of meeting him. We had one-to-one, an hour-long discussion and the outcome of that meeting President has very kindly read out to you. I sincerely believe that today is a historic day. We have made a new beginning and I feel confident that despite the difficulties on the way, I and President Musharraf will together work and succeed in writing a new chapter in the history of our two countries.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
Excerpts from the remarks of Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf.

Solution to the Kashmir problem can be found by debating different options such as identifying, demilitarising and changing the status of seven regions composing both parts of the disputed territory, said President General Pervez Musharraf.

He was addressing an Iftar-dinner hosted by Information Minister Sheikh Rashid Ahmad. Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz, several federal ministers, chief ministers of Sindh and Balochistan, renowned figures of the twin cities and senior journalists of both print and electronic media were also present.

President Musharraf said: "We want plebiscite in Kashmir, while they (Indians) want the LoC to be made permanent border." He said if both sides continued to stick to their stands, the dispute would persist for 100 years without any solution in sight.

Explaining his option for progress towards the Kashmir solution, the president said two regions of the territory in dispute were the AJK and Northern Areas and five regions were under Indian occupation. One of these five regions is linked to AJK because of its Muslim population and common casts of residents. Another region inhabits Balti-speaking Shia Muslims and is closed to the Northern Areas. Jammu is the third region that has Hindu majority. The fourth region comprised Kashmir valley that is Srinagar and its surrounding areas. This region is inhabited by the Muslims. The fifth region under Indian occupation has Buddhist majority.

He said for progress towards the Kashmir solution, these regions were to be identified, demilitarised and their status was to be changed. He said he believed that the Kashmiris would support this option as they would get authority.

President Musharraf said India, because of its secular facade, was opposed to division of the territory on religious basis. But, he said, the beauty of this option for Kashmir solution was that the same regions emerge even if you consider geography or ethnicity as the basis of division.

He said he was giving food for thought to the media that the option based on seven regions should be debated. He said by reading and listening to the views of people and experts he would judge what solution the masses desired. This, he said, was a way to achieve consensus on the issue. He said he would then talk to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh keeping in view the people’s opinion.
The president said the world now believed that Pakistan was contributing to the stability of Afghanistan. The past perception of Pakistan's involvement in terrorist activities in Afghanistan has gone, he said.

He said he had also removed the world's misgiving that Pakistan was instrumental in nuclear proliferation by wisely handling the issue of Dr AQ Khan and other scientists. He said Pakistan was no more considered a rogue state, as alleged earlier by the world at large.

Musharraf said he had also successfully dispelled the impression of country's involvement in cross-border terrorism in the context of Kashmir. He said not only the world had given up levelling this charge but the Indians also did not dare to repeat it in his presence. He said the Indians know that whenever they referred to cross-border terrorism, he would retaliate by pointing out human rights violations in Kashmir by the Indian military.

Despite these achievements, the president regretted, he could not yet remove the image of Pakistanis as a militant, terrorist society. He said the media was also to share the blame for this failure. He said those who support militants or terrorists should not be given wide and favourable coverage by newspapers and TV channels.

* * * * *

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Next day responding to the proposals, the Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs said in New Delhi: “Naturally, we have heard those comments. We do not believe the Jammu and Kashmir is a subject on which discussions can be held through media.”
Press briefing by Foreign Secretary Shyam Saran on the visit of Prime Minister of Pakistan Mr. Shaukat Aziz.

New Delhi, November 24, 2004.

(The text in italics is free translation from Hindi)

Official Spokesperson: Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen. It gives me great pleasure to welcome Foreign Secretary for this afternoon’s briefing. He is accompanied by India’s High Commissioner to Pakistan Mr. Shiv Shankar Menon and Joint Secretary (PAI) Mr. Arun Singh. Without further ado I will request FS to kindly address you.

Foreign Secretary: Thank you very much for being present here this afternoon. I would like to just give you a brief account of the meetings that were held today between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz of Pakistan. To begin with, there was a 45-minute restricted meeting with only a few aides present on each side. And thereafter we had a one-hour delegation-to-delegation level meeting. This was followed by a lunch hosted by the Prime Minister in honour of the visiting Prime Minister.

In the talks there was a very wide ranging exchange of views. This exchange took place in a very friendly and a very constructive atmosphere. As you know the Prime Minister of Pakistan is visiting India in his capacity as Chairman of SAARC. As it would be expected SAARC was an important item therefore on the agenda of the talks. Both sides agreed that SAARC had not really lived up to its potential and that there was a needed for us to work together in order to realize this potential. Prime Minister in his presentation concerning SAARC related issues mentioned several proposals that India has put forward for consideration at the forthcoming SAARC summit in Dhaka. These include the Poverty Alleviation Fund amounting to about USD 100 million which has been announced by India for use in various collaborative projects in countries other than India. We have also recommended an Infrastructure Fund, the total of which would be something like USD 10 billion. The Fund is to be utilized for several infrastructure projects involving collaborative ventures. For example, regional road network, energy network, communications network - these are the kind of things which could be taken up under the Infrastructure Fund.

Prime Minister mentioned our proposal for setting up a High Economic Council which would include Ministers of Finance, Commerce, may be representatives of Planning Commissions essentially to give shape to our vision of a South Asia Economic Union and the steps that we would need to take in order to fulfill that collective destiny that we all accepted.

Another SAARC related issues which was mentioned by us was the problem of HIV/AIDS and the need for common efforts on the part of all countries of the region to deal with this challenge. In this connection, as you know, India has certain experience in terms of HIV/AIDS drugs and treatment. So, this is an area where we can also make a contribution. In addition, Prime Minister also mentioned certain other areas like the possibility of pooling our resources together in terms of our energy requirements, the setting up of some kind of regional energy grid which could be considered by the countries of the region. The possibility of considering a proposal for food security among all countries of the region. So, as you can see, a number of rather important initiatives were mentioned by the Prime Minister in connection with how to energize the SAARC process.

Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz welcomed these proposals. In fact he stated that Pakistan supported these proposals. He had some ideas of his own to offer. He mentioned, for example, that we need to strengthen the mechanisms of SAARC, in particular the Secretariat itself. He also mentioned that we need to be conscious of the need to make our SAARC meetings much more productive, that we have a fairly long calendar of such meetings, we move from event to event, but we need to make our meetings shorter and perhaps more productive. These were ideas which Prime Minister Manmohan Singh welcomed and said we could certainly work together in realizing these objectives.

There was discussion about SAFTA, the importance of SAFTA and how to take this process forward. Prime Minister followed this up by mentioning the vision that we have of taking South Asia towards a Customs Union and then final a South Asia Economic Union. So, as you can see, on SAARC related issues a number of very substantive ideas were discussed. As I said, there was a general agreement that the SAARC process had really not lived up to the expectations that we have had and it is time now to energize the entire process and that India and Pakistan were committed to taking this process forward.

On bilateral issues, there was an exchange of views on all the different issues which are there on the bilateral agenda. There was satisfaction that the dialogue process was moving forward. There was a commitment from both sides to take this process forward. On our side Prime Minister said that we are committed to addressing all the different items of the bilateral agenda including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and that we were prepared to do this in a very serious, in a very purposeful manner, in a manner that is oriented towards seeking constructively solutions to the problems that we are confronting. Towards the conclusion of our meeting there was a very gracious invitation extended to Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to pay a visit to Pakistan which was very warmly accepted. The dates for this visit would be worked out through diplomatic channels.
All in all this has been a very important and significant visit, coming as it does on the eve of the Dhaka Summit where we need to take the SAARC process forward. It has also given us an opportunity to make a review of our bilateral relations even though the focus of the visit was SAARC. As you know we are embarked on the second round of the Composite Dialogue and there was a commitment on both sides to approach this second round with all seriousness. Also, a mention was made that we would be following the second round of the Composite Dialogue with a meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries which is likely to take place before the end of the year. There would be a chance for another meeting at the leadership level at Dhaka Summit and External Affairs Minister Shri Natwar Singh is also scheduled to visit Pakistan some time in February next year. So, the process is very much set for the next several months. We are convinced that this path on which we both have decided to walk together will yield results in the future.

Question: I have two questions. The first is that the first round of the Composite Dialogue Process has been completed. From all the issues that have come up till the present visit of Mr. Shaukat Aziz, what are the issues about which we can be optimistic? Secondly, Mr Aziz has said that the Oil pipeline will be constructed irrespective of whether India wants it or not. Does it indicate an impasse since India has somewhat seen it in conjunction with the MFN status or the normalization of business relations?

Answer: As far as the Composite Dialogue is concerned, it is normal that on some issues we have moved forward and on some issues more time will be needed. This is very fair. On the issues on which we have not been able to make that much progress, we will take up those issues in the present round and we will try to make progress on those issues as well. But, broadly speaking we can say that on all these CBMs and bilateral issues we have achieved progress in the last few months. This should also be recognized. This is a long haul and I would like to emphasize that both sides are keen to move forward. As far as the issue of gas pipeline is concerned Prime Minister has shared with you his views on this.

Question: Can you elaborate as to what proposals, if any, were put forward on Kashmir by Pakistan and if Prime Minister Manmohan Singh raised the issue of terrorist infrastructure that exists in Pakistan with his Pakistani counterpart?

Answer: Prime Minister very clearly recalled the assurance contained in the January 6th Joint Statement between India and Pakistan, specifically referring to the assurance given by Pakistan that no territory under the control of Pakistan would be utilized for any cross border terrorism. This was conveyed by Prime Minister to his counterpart. It was also conveyed that India is committed to resolving all outstanding issues between India and Pakistan including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and we are ready to move ahead in a very serious and purposeful manner.

Question: Did Pakistan give any specific formulation on Kashmir?

Answer: No, there was no specific formulation given on Kashmir. As far as the reference to President Musharraf's proposals or so called proposals – I do not know whether they are proposals – what was mentioned, I think was clarified by Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz himself saying that these were really ideas put forward essentially for debate within Pakistan.

Question: Anything on the bus service from Srinagar to Muzaffarabad?

Answer: This matter was touched upon and it was agreed that this was a proposal which should be implemented as early as possible. You may be aware that there is a technical level meeting on this issue which is probably going to take place on December 7 – 8 this year where there will be an effort made by both sides to resolve any pending issues and operationalize the bus service as early as possible.

Question: Did the Indian side express its concerns over repeated statements that come from Pakistan each time such type of important meetings take place?

Answer: No, we do not believe that we need to react to each and every statement that comes across the border.

Question: On the bus service the technical level talks are scheduled but the Prime Minister of Pakistan told us a short while ago that the issue of travel documents remains open. I would like to know what is India's position on the passport and visa issues? My second question is that Hurriyat leaders met the Pakistani Prime Minister yesterday. They want to visit Pakistan to meet the Pakistani leadership there, what is the Government of India's position on that?

Answer: As far as the bus service is concerned I think that I stated very clearly that there is going to be a technical level meeting on December 7-8 and precisely the sort of matters that you are talking about will be discussed at the meeting and hopefully we will come to a satisfactory conclusion. As far as the role of the Hurriyat is concerned, we have an elected government in Jammu and Kashmir. The Government has expressed its willingness to talk to all shades of opinion in Jammu and Kashmir including those who are not from amongst the elected representatives in the state of Jammu and Kashmir. That remains the position of the Government of India. As far as travel to Pakistan is concerned, as and when these requests are made to the Government of India these requests will be considered.

Question: Are there any security concerns regarding Srinagar – Muzaffarabad bus service?
Answer: There would be a number of concerns like the question of procedures, question of security, question of documents. As I said these are precisely the sort of issues which we need to clarify and to work out and which we will do when we meet on December 7-8.

Question: You had given 70 to 71 proposals to Pakistan and some progress was made on these earlier. Has there been any progress on these issues during this visit?

Answer: Let me clarify again that this is a visit by Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz in his capacity as Chairman of SAARC. But, we have taken advantage of his visit also to revisit and review bilateral relations. This is not a negotiating session between the Pakistani delegation and the Indian delegation. For negotiations on various bilateral issues there is a mechanism within the Composite Dialogue and that particular mechanism is at work. We are not discussing specific issues with a view to finding common ground at this particular meeting. This is a meeting between two Prime Ministers. They are not negotiating on the nitty-gritty issues. There was an overall review. There was satisfaction that relations had gone forward. There was a common commitment to take these relations forward on the basis that we have already agreed. What is that basis? The basis is that we move ahead with our Composite Dialogue, try and find common ground, not put aside the issue of Jammu and Kashmir - as we said we are ready to talk about this issue as well - and bring a new climate to our bilateral relations.

Question: I have two questions. On the bus service, is India open to the idea of travel on Passports without visa? Secondly, did the Prime Minister recall his statement in Srinagar on no redrawing of boundaries?

Answer: I think I have made myself very clear as far as the bus service is concerned. The kind of issues you are raising are precisely the issues that we hope to discuss and sort out in the technical level meeting that we have. So for me to say ‘is there going to be a passport without a visa or is there going to be a visa without a passport’... There are a number of ideas which are there on the table and I am sure perhaps there will be more ideas put on the table when we have the technical level meeting. So, why not wait? What is important is that this is an initiative that India has taken and we are very keen to see operationalized as early as possible. We will approach the technical level talks in a very constructive spirit, in a spirit of trying to get over whatever hurdles there may be so that something which, I think, is important to both the people of India as well as the people of Pakistan can be operationalized as early as possible.

As far as your second question is concerned, Prime Minister mentioned that what he had said in Srinagar was no different from what he had said to President Musharraf in New York.

Question: Were any trade related issues discussed?

Answer: Yes, Prime Minister said that he was very keen that there should be greater economic and commercial linkages between the two countries. I am happy to tell you that it was agreed between the two Prime Ministers that we should have banking relations and we have agreed that we could have reciprocal setting up of banks in each others country and the Central Banks of the two countries will perhaps be taking this particular idea forward.\(^1\)

Question: You just mentioned that Prime Minister told Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz what he had said in Srinagar was no different from what he had told President Musharraf in New York. What did he say?

Answer: In discussing the issue of Jammu and Kashmir, Prime Minister mentioned that we have a very consistent and a very constructive stand on approaching the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. He recalled what he had mentioned to President Musharraf in New York.

Question: What exactly did he say?

Answer: Well, the Indian position is that we have a certain approach with regards to Jammu and Kashmir. What is that approach? That approach is that this is a complex issue. This is an issue, which has perhaps a considerable amount of emotion involved on either side. If we wish to try and seek an understanding on this question there is a need for building a degree of trust and confidence on both sides. How do we build that trust and confidence? How do we increase and expand the constituency of peace both on the Indian side and the Pakistani side? What is positive is that there is today, and this was something that was agreed by both Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz, that there is a new mood amongst the people of both countries. People of both countries want peace. They want to take friendly relations between the two countries forward. So, why not try and expand that area of peace and friendship between the two countries so that it becomes easier to deal with this complex issue. In the way we look at it, the confidence building process is not a deflection from the Jammu and Kashmir issue. In fact, it is integral to seeking a solution to the complex problem of Jammu and Kashmir.

So, that is the approach that we have adopted and in terms of how this is to be brought about, Prime Minister had mentioned this publicly that we obviously

---

1. On the day Prime Minister Aziz arrived in New Delhi, the Indian Commerce Minister Kamal Nath on a visit to Islamabad to attend the two-day SAARC Commerce Ministers' Conference had a meeting with Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf when it was decided cannot look at another division of the country on the basis of religion. We are not looking at territorial solutions. Ours is a people centered approach. We are looking at how we can somehow ameliorate the negative consequences of the lines which have been put on the map, try to bring people together. After all, what is the Srinagar – Muzaffarabad bus service about? This is also to bring people together. So, the affinities that are there on either side of the LoC or either side of the international boundary, those affinities should be allowed to expand. We should be able to build upon that. That is the approach that we have.

Question: Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz reiterated the old Pakistani line that there should be progress in other areas in tandem with progress on Kashmir. Does that not retard the confidence in the whole Composite Dialogue process?

Answer: We are moving in tandem. After all, what is the Composite Dialogue all about?

Question: Do you think that Pakistan is committed to take forward the process of Composite Dialogue? In the New York interaction Prime Minister Manmohan Singh had talked about out of the box solution. Is that a proposition that is still considered viable?

Answer: Prime Minister has stated before and I think he has stated again that we are willing to look at various kinds of options there might be. But, these to set up a Joint Study Group on Economic Cooperation between the two countries. The Joint Study Group will examine the possibilities of further preferential trade arrangements between India and Pakistan on goods and services as well as investment. It would also have sub-groups to look at possibilities in various areas. The JSG will be headed by the Commerce Secretaries of the two countries.

---

Meanwhile Indian Ministry of Commerce in a press release issued on November 28 expected buoyancy in India – Pakistan trade during the financial year 2004-05. The press release said: “Bilateral trade between India and Pakistan is showing a very buoyant trend during the current financial year (2004-05), Shri Kamal Nath, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry has indicated. According to the available bilateral trade data for the first four months of this fiscal (April to July) India’s exports to Pakistan have shown a record 328 per cent increase, having gone up to US $ 167.38 million from US $ 39.10 million during the corresponding months of last year 2003-04. Imports from Pakistan are estimated at US $ 18.98 million as against US $ 25.31 million during the same period last year, but are expected to pick up during the remaining months of this fiscal year. Thus the total two-way trade between India and Pakistan during April – July of this year has trebled in four months, rising to US $ 186.36 million as against US $ 84.41 million during April-July 2003. Total trade between India and Pakistan stood at US $ 344.29 million in full year 2003-04, US $ 251.01 million in 2002-03, US $ 208.77 million in 2001-02 and US $ 250.35 million in 2000-01. If the present growth trend continues, the total trade between India and Pakistan may cross US $ 500 million during the current financial year 2004-05.”
options must be based on ground realities. So, how do we move forward? We move forward in a measured fashion as I just now spelt out for you that we regard the process of confidence building as not separate from dealing with the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. To our mind they are in fact linked together.

Question: Pakistan Prime Minister’s statements suggest that Pakistan is fully now committed to the Composite Dialogue…

Answer: I do not wish to interpret what the Pakistani position is. As long as there is a commitment to carrying this process forward – and that seems to be the case at this point of time. I mentioned to you that till February we have a number of agreed high-level meetings that we are looking at. We have no reason to believe that this process will not continue and move forward.

Official Spokesperson: I think we will have to leave it there. Thank you very much ladies and gentlemen.

◆◆◆◆◆
1613. Joint statement issued at the end of the talks between Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

The Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India met in Islamabad on 27 – 28 December 2004 to review overall progress, commence the next round of the Composite Dialogue and discuss the issues of Peace and Security including CBMs, and Jammu and Kashmir. Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Mr. Riaz H. Khokhar, led the Pakistan delegation while the Indian delegation was led by Foreign Secretary Mr. Shyam Saran. The talks were held in a frank, cordial and constructive atmosphere.

2. Recalling the solemn and categoric reassurance contained in the Joint Press Statement of 6th January, they expressed their determination to carry the process forward.

3. On the issue of Peace and Security including CBMs, the two Foreign Secretaries, inter-alia reviewed the progress made during the meetings of Experts on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs. Building upon the existing contacts between DG MOs, they agreed to promote regular contacts at local level at designated places and explore further CBMs along the international boundary and the LoC. They discussed and narrowed further their differences on the draft agreement on pre-notification of flight testing of ballistic missiles, and agreed to work towards its early finalization.

1. The EAM Natwar Singh had on December 22 told the Rajya Sabha that there was “no drift in India’s Pakistan’s policy” and that the dialogue process with Pakistan was on track. Sounding optimistic but frank he said “even modest progress is worthy of respect.” The Foreign Secretary Shyam Saran when he arrived in Islamabad on December 25 gave the focus of the talks had said: “This time the main focus during my talks with my counterpart in Islamabad would be on building mutual trust in the fields of nuclear and conventional arms and countering narcotics trafficking.” While in Peshawar on a short visit on the same day, he told the media there that both the sides were approaching the talks with an “open mind”. He was candid enough to tell the journalists that good relations between the two countries would help economic cooperation in South Asia as a whole. At the end of the first day of the meeting the Indian Foreign Secretary told the media in Islamabad that he sought to put at rest apprehensions on the Pakistani side that India was putting premium on CBMs to sideline Kashmir. He told the Pakistani side that India was ready for a “serious and sustained dialogue” on Kashmir. At the same time he reminded about the “fundamental assurance” given by Gen. Musharraf in January 2004 about not allowing Pakistani soil for anti-India activities and emphasized that implementation of the promise was critical to take forward the process. To questions Shyam Saran said that the “phenomena of cross-border terrorism” have not ceased. He added that there could be no instant solutions particularly to complex issues such as Jammu and Kashmir given the sentiments of people in both the countries. He maintained that sustained and serious engagement was the only way forward for resolution of differences.
4. Both sides discussed the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and agreed to carry forward the process in the light of the Joint Statement issued after the meeting between President of Pakistan General Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh in New York on September 24, 2004.

5. The meetings on the other six subjects under the Composite Dialogue, i.e. Siachen, Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project, Sir Creek, Terrorism & Drug Trafficking, Economic & Commercial Cooperation and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields would be held on mutually agreed dates between April and June 2005.

6. The two sides also agreed that technical meetings including the Joint Study Group on Trade matters headed by the Commerce Secretaries, Indian Coast Guards and Pakistan Maritime Agency, Pakistan Rangers and Border Security Force of India, Expert level dialogue on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs, technical level meeting on bus service between/through Amritsar and Lahore, meeting between the Narcotics Control Authorities would be held between January and June 2005.

7. They also discussed issues related to apprehended fishermen, civilian prisoners and missing defence personnel. It was inter-alia agreed that:
   (i) Immediate notification would be provided to the respective High Commissions through the Foreign Ministries of arrested Pakistani/Indian nationals;
   (ii) Consular access would be provided within three months of apprehension;
   (iii) Repatriation would be done immediately after completion of sentence and nationality verification;
   (iv) A mechanism would be introduced for early repatriation, without sentencing of inadvertent crossers;
   (v) A similar mechanism would be established for early release, without sentencing of those under 16 apprehended by either side.

8. The Foreign Secretaries of the two countries would meet in New Delhi to review the overall progress in the Composite Dialogue in July-August 2005.

9. The Foreign Ministers and the Prime Ministers of the two countries would meet during the SAARC Summit in Dhaka in January 2005. The External Affairs Minister of India Mr. K. Natwar Singh would visit Islamabad in February 2005 for bilateral discussions.

10. The Foreign Secretary of India called on Prime Minster Shaukat Aziz and Foreign Minister Khurshid M. Kasuri of Pakistan during the course of his visit to Islamabad.
1614.  Suo Motu statement in the Rajya Sabha by External Affairs Minister K. Natwar Singh on his visit to Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 4, 2005.

I visited Pakistan from February 15 to 17 2005. It was the first visit of an Indian Foreign Minister to Pakistan in almost 16 years. I met President Musharraf, Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz, and held extensive discussions with my counterpart, Foreign Minister Khurshid M. Kasuri.

During my visit, agreement was reached with Pakistan to commence a bus service between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad. Honourable members would recall that the proposal for the Srinagar - Muzaffarabad bus was first announced on October 22, 2003 by Shri Yashwant Sinha, the then External Affairs Minister.

Agreement was also reached on starting a bus service between Lahore and Amritsar, including to religious places such as Nankana Sahib. Pakistan also agreed to work towards the early restoration of the Khokrapar-Munnabao rail link. These links would significantly enhance people-to-people contacts, which have provided palpable support to the present process.

The Srinagar Muzaffarabad bus service is expected to commence on 7 April 2005. Dates for the Amritsar-Lahore bus service and the Khokrapar-Munnabao rail link will also be finalized.

On the Srinagar-Muzaffarabad bus service, let me clarify that all Indian and Pakistani nationals would be permitted to use this route across the LoC. Each side will designate its authority for receiving application forms for travel and for issue of travel permits at the checkpoint. On the Indian side, the designated authority is the Regional Passport Officer, Srinagar. The procedure adopted is without prejudice to our stated position on the issue of Jammu & Kashmir. The display of mutual flexibility has enabled the two sides to take a significant step in responding to humanitarian considerations, particularly the opportunity for divided families to meet each other with relative ease and convenience.

We have also agreed to look at a pipeline through Pakistan subject to satisfaction of our concerns related to security and assured supplies. This would also contribute to widening of our economic inter-linkages.

During my visit to Islamabad, following additional agreements were reached:

(i) Between now and July, agreements will be finalized on Pre-notification of Missile Tests, MOU between Indian Coastguards and Pakistan’s Maritime Security Agency, and MOU between Narcotics Control Authorities.
(ii) Discussion would be initiated on agreements on reducing Risk of Nuclear Accidents or Unauthorized Use of Nuclear Weapons and Preventing Incidents at Sea.

(iii) Further measures to alleviate the situation of civilian prisoners and apprehended fishermen would be taken. I impressed upon the Foreign Minister of Pakistan the need to release the apprehended fishermen along with their boats, and to expedite their return.

(iv) It was agreed to continue with efforts for early re-establishment of our respective Consulates General in Karachi and Mumbai.

The issue of Baglihar Hydroelectric Power Project in J&K was raised by Pakistani leaders. We pointed out to them that the project was fully in consonance with the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960, to which we remain committed. I also conveyed that the last round of bilateral technical discussions had registered progress in our view, and if the discussion had been continued there could have been even greater convergence of views. While expressing our willingness to return to bilateral discussions, I said that Pakistan's reference to the World Bank to seek the services of a neutral expert was premature. Members are aware that the project is of great significance for the economic development of J&K, and we intend to continue with the project.

On my way back, I visited Lahore where I addressed a group of media persons and prominent citizens at a meeting organised through SAFMA (South Asia Free Media Association). I called on the Governor of Punjab, Lt. Gen. (rtd) Khalid Maqbool, while the Chief Minister Chaudhary Pervez Elahi graciously hosted a lunch for me. At the lunch, I had a useful discussion with Chaudhary Shujaat Hussain, President of Pakistan Muslim League.

The atmosphere in all these meetings was relaxed, friendly and positive, with emphasis on commonalities, and importance of people to people contacts.

My visit took place in the overall context of improving bilateral relations with Pakistan. We intend to impart further momentum to the present process.

As Honourable Members are aware, significant developments have taken place in India-Pakistan relations since April 2003. Relations have been restored at the level of High Commissioners, transport and communication links have resumed, one round of the Composite Dialogue has been completed. A series of technical level and Composite Dialogue related meetings have been held on schedule. Another round was initiated during the Foreign Secretary level talks in December 2004 in Islamabad.

People to people exchanges are taking place across the spectrum in large numbers. There has been a resumption of visits by pilgrim groups. Our High Commission is currently issuing close to 7,000 visas per month. This month, we expect to issue an additional 8,000 visas, over and above this number to cater to the requirements of those coming to watch the India- Pakistan cricket series in India.

The ceasefire has held for more than a year. The bilateral process has been given impetus through maintenance of high level contacts: PM met President Musharraf in New York in September 2004; Pakistan PM Shaukat Aziz visited New Delhi on November 23-24, 2004.

Some progress has also been achieved on the humanitarian issue of fishermen and civilian detainees. During the Foreign Secretary level talks in December 2004, it was inter-alia agreed that both sides would give consular access to all prisoners under their custody. Following the visit, Pakistan has provided consular access to approximately 100 civilian prisoners and 650 fishermen in January and February 2005. We are continuing to press Pakistan on the issue of 54 missing defense personnel.

On the Sir Creek issue, a Joint Survey of the boundary pillars in the horizontal segment of the International Boundary in the Sir Creek area has also been successfully concluded in January 2005.

Thus meaningful progress has been achieved and the Government intends to continue with the present process in an atmosphere free from terrorism and violence. Government have made it clear that the process is critically dependent on the fulfillment of January 6, 2004 commitment of President Musharraf not to permit any territory under Pakistan’s control to be used to support terrorism in any manner.
1615. Joint statement issued at the end of talks between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President of Pakistan Pervez Musharraf.

New Delhi, April 18, 2005.

1. The President of Pakistan, His Excellency General Pervez Musharraf and Begum Sehba Musharraf visited New Delhi as guests of the Prime Minister of India and Shrimati Gursharan Kaur on 16 to 18 April 2005.

2. While in New Delhi, the President of Pakistan called on the President of India. He also had a meeting with the Prime Minister of India, who hosted a dinner in his honour. The President also watched the last one-day international cricket match between India and Pakistan.

3. The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India used the opportunity provided by the visit to review progress in Pakistan-India relations. They assessed positively the progress that had been made so far through confidence building, people-to-people contacts and enhancing areas of interactions and determined to build on the momentum already achieved.

4. They reaffirmed the commitments made in the Joint Press Statement of January 6, 2004 and the Joint Statement issued after their meeting in New York on September 24, 2004 and expressed satisfaction on the progress in the peace process and the improvement of relations between the two countries that has since been realized.

5. Conscious of the historic opportunity created by the improved environment in relations and the overwhelming desire of the peoples of the two countries for durable peace and recognizing their responsibility to continue to move forward towards that objective, the two leaders had substantive talks on all issues. They determined that the peace process was now irreversible.

6. In this spirit the two leaders addressed the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and agreed to continue these discussions in a sincere and purposeful and forward-looking manner for a final settlement. They were satisfied with the discussions and expressed their determination to work together to carry forward the process and to bring the benefit of peace to their people.

7. They also agreed to pursue further measures to enhance interaction and cooperation across the LoC including agreed meeting points for divided families, trade, pilgrimages and cultural interaction.

8. They condemned attempts to disrupt the Srinagar - Muzaffarabad bus service and welcomed its successful operationalisation. The two leaders pledged that they would not allow terrorism to impede the peace process.
9. They decided to increase the frequency of the bus service and also decided that trucks would be allowed to use this route to promote trade. They also agreed to operationalise additional routes including that between Poonch and Rawalakot. They also look forward to early start of the bus service between Amritsar and Lahore and to religious places such as Nankana Sahib.

10. They agreed to re-establish the Khokhrapar - Munnabao route by 1st January 2006.

11. They agreed that the Consulates General of the two countries in Mumbai and Karachi respectively would be opened before the end of the current year.

12. They endorsed the decisions taken in the meeting of Foreign Secretaries of the two countries on 27-28 December 2004, and the Foreign Minister on 15-17 February 2005, on the schedule of meetings later in the year, the agreements to be worked upon through these meetings and the measures to be taken to alleviate the situation of prisoners.

13. On the issues of Sir Creek and Siachen, they instructed that the existing institutional mechanisms should convene discussions immediately with a view to finding mutually acceptable solutions to both issues expeditiously.

14. It was agreed that the Ministers of Petroleum and Natural Gas would meet in May to explore cooperation in the sector including on the issue of pipelines.

15. Both leaders agreed that enhanced economic and commercial cooperation would contribute to the well-being of the peoples of the two countries and bring a higher level of prosperity for the region. The two leading economies of South Asia should work together for the greater prosperity of the region.

16. The leaders decided to reactivate the Joint Economic Commission as early as possible. They also agreed that the Joint Business Council should meet soon.

---

1. It may be mentioned that on the sidelines of the summit between the two leaders, the Commerce Ministers of India and Pakistan also met on April 17 and decided to set up a Joint Business Council to facilitate interaction amongst business and to strengthen economic ties and promote trade. The Indian Commerce Minister told the media that it was agreed between Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and President Musharraf that all hindrances must be removed and non-tariff barriers dismantled as soon as possible to have a meaningful “open door” policy on trade between the two countries.
17. The President of Pakistan conveyed his gratitude for the hospitality provided during the visit and invited the Prime Minister to visit Pakistan. The invitation was accepted in principle. Mutually agreed dates would be worked out through diplomatic channels.

2. The Joint Statement evoked all-round welcome from across the political spectrum with the Congress Party lauding the Government for having the confidence to “push through the confidence building measures and bring about a paradigm shift in relations between the two countries”. The Congress Spokesperson Anand Sharma said that the Congress Party had consistently maintained that dialogue should continue irrespective of any situation that might prevail in either country. “We said so at a time when bilateral relations had hit a low and there was a snapping of people-to-people contact,” said Anand Sharma. The Joint Statement, he said was unequivocal in stating that the peace process was irreversible and shall not be held hostage to any act of terrorism or weakened by it. The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) felt happy that a process initiated by its government had borne fruits. The Left parties said the meeting reflected the strong desire by both countries to move forward in their efforts to normalize relations. The Communist Party of India (Marxist) general secretary Prakash Karat said his party welcomed the outcome of the talks and wanted the India – Pakistan dialogue process to be carried forward. Describing the talks as “positive development”, the Communist Party of India Secretary D. Raja said it was good that the leaders of both the countries realized that the peace process was irreversible and the only way to solve problems was through strengthening the CBMs, diversified people-to-people contacts and economic cooperation. “The CPI hopes both countries will carry forward the peace process through dialogue as no military conflict will be able to resolve the problematic issues,” said D. Raja cautioning India and Pakistan of U.S maneuvers to drag the two nations into an arms race with each other.
New Delhi, April 20, 2005.

The President of Pakistan, General Pervez Musharraf visited India from April 16-18, 2005. I had invited him to the cricket match in New Delhi and we used the opportunity of his presence here to hold substantive discussions on a wide range of bilateral issues. We also issued a Joint Statement, which takes stock of our relations and outlines the ideas and activities agreed upon between us to move our bilateral relationship forward. A copy of the Joint Statement is placed on the Table of the House.

During our talks, President Musharraf and I reviewed the progress made in our bilateral relations. We assessed positively the progress that had been made through confidence building measures, people-to-people contacts and enhancing areas of interactions and expressed our determination to build on the momentum already achieved. I also conveyed to President Musharraf the great importance we attach to enhanced bilateral economic and commercial cooperation. I underlined the need to multiply beneficial linkages of trade and transit, including the gas pipeline. We agreed that greater cooperation between the two largest economies of South Asia would not only contribute to the well being of the peoples of the two countries but also bring a higher level of prosperity for the entire region.

We agreed on several forward looking measures to increase interaction between the countries, among them being the restoration of the rail link between Khokhrapar and Munnabao. Each of these are reflected in the Joint Statement.

Earlier this month, we started the Srinagar - Muzaffarabad bus service despite terrorist threats and a dastardly suicide attack on the Srinagar Tourist Reception Centre. The courage and determination of our peoples and the condemnation by our Governments as contained in the Joint Statement, of attempts to disrupt this important initiative, give us confidence for its continued and successful operation with even greater frequency in the future. I am convinced the bus service has tapped a latent reservoir of public support for greater people to people contact, especially among people living on either side of the Line of Control.

The issue of Jammu and Kashmir was also discussed in a positive atmosphere. I emphasized that while the redrawing of boundaries was not possible, all measures that could bring the peoples on both sides together, including increased transportation linkages to facilitate greater traffic of people and trade across the border and the Line of Control, would help the process and create an atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence. President Musharraf and I agreed to continue our discussions in a sincere, purposeful and forward-looking manner. We have agreed to work together to carry forward the process and to bring the benefit of peace to people of our two countries, and in particular, the people of Jammu and Kashmir.

President Musharraf stressed the importance of addressing the Jammu and Kashmir issue. However, he also agreed that the confidence building process between the two countries had made significant progress. We both felt that this process would contribute to promoting a general sense of trust and understanding in our two countries, which in turn, would be conducive to creating the environment for a just, fair and mutually acceptable solution to all outstanding issues. Consequently, we agreed to pursue further measures to enhance interaction and cooperation across the LoC including agreed meeting points for divided families, trade, pilgrimages and cultural interaction.

The Joint Statement specifically re-affirmed the commitments made in the Joint Press Statement of January 6, 2004, and the Joint Statement issued after the meeting of the Indian Prime Minister and the Pakistani President in New York on September 24, 2004. This re-affirmation addressed our concerns relating to terrorism from across the border. The Joint Statement also contained a pledge that terrorism would not be allowed to impede the peace process. It also underlines the importance of the peace process and the degree of improvement in relations between the two countries.

While I am satisfied with the progress achieved in our talks during the visit, we should remain conscious of the difficulties ahead. The difficult issues that divide us have bedeviled relations between India and Pakistan for far too long to hope for an immediate resolution. The threat to the peace process from extremist forces and terrorist organizations has not been eliminated. Therefore, I mentioned to President Musharraf that the whole process of serious and sustained dialogue hinges on building atmosphere of trust and confidence, free from violence and terror. We look forward to Pakistan implementing their assurances in letter and spirit.

As Hon’ble Members are aware, the past year has been quite a remarkable one for our relations with Pakistan. The two countries successfully concluded one round of the Composite Dialogue and have already commenced the next round. Diplomatic and other links have been normalized and restored to the pre-December 13, 2001 level. People-to-people exchanges are taking place across the spectrum in overwhelming numbers. The ceasefire being observed along the international border, the Line of Control and the Actual Ground Position Line in Siachen has, with the exception of a few stray incidents, held since November 2003.
India is committed to peace and friendship with Pakistan. We sincerely seek a cooperative and constructive relationship with Pakistan. I was heartened to see that this desire is reciprocated by the Pakistan side, and that there is considerable popular support for an improved relationship in both countries. To create such a durable cooperative and constructive relationship, we need to invest in the ongoing process of engagement and confidence building and ensure that recent positive trends are sustained. We have chalked out a detailed schedule and agenda for the round of the composite dialogue that has commenced. We believe that persistent and purposeful engagement will show us the way to peace and enable us to fulfill the promise of friendship and cooperation that we have made to our people."

1. On way to Jakarta to participate in the Bandung Golden Jubilee conference, Prime Minister told the journalists (April 22) accompanying him on board the special aircraft that if the process of allowing increased interaction between the people of Jammu and Kashmir was to continue, it would "create a climate conducive to the final settlement" of the "territorial dispute" in the divided state. He said the visit of President Musharraf and also of the Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao had yielded “solid results”. Asked for his opinion on Gen. Musharraf’s call for soft borders in J & K, Dr. Singh said he himself had been saying that India and Pakistan have to look at the Kashmir problem in a “different perspective”. He said: “Territorial disputes are never easy to resolve overnight. They take time. But there is a lot we can do together, focusing on the interests of the people, creating an environment where the people of Jammu and Kashmir on both sides of the line of Control can lead a life of dignity and self-respect. And we can create an environment of freer trade, freer movement.” He said “I really believe that if this process is allowed to go forward, it will create a climate conducive to the final settlement. But I really do not know today, it is a process, I cannot lay down a timetable – where will it lead us, when will it – but I am convinced that this is a way of looking at the problem which creates a situation where there are no losers or winners. The only gainers are the people of J & K and the prospects of reconciliation between the people of India and the people of Pakistan.” He added for good measure that “improvement in Pakistan – India relations is uppermost in my mind, and I am glad that this desire has been reciprocated by President Musharraf.” He added that it was his “sincere desire to work with the President of Pakistan to carry forward this process in the months that lie ahead.”
Joint press statement issued at the end of Home Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 30, 2005.

The second round of Home Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan on Terrorism and Drug Trafficking, as a part of the ongoing Composite Dialogue process, were held in New Delhi on August 29-30, 2005. The Indian delegation was led by Shri V.K. Duggal, Union Home Secretary while the Pakistani delegation was led by Syed Kamal Shah, Secretary, Ministry of Interior.

The talks were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere and the deliberations were frank and forthright. Both sides reiterated their commitment to combat terrorism and re-emphasised the need for effective steps for the complete elimination of this menace.

Both sides underlined the need for cooperation between the Central Bureau of Investigation and the Federal Investigation Agency and agreed that experts from both sides would meet at mutually convenient dates in the near future, to work out modalities for the implementation of the arrangement for cooperation between the two agencies agreed earlier.

Both sides agreed to implement the decisions arrived at by the Foreign Secretaries in December 2004 on prisoners and reiterated their commitment to provide immediate notification of arrests made by either side, provide consular access to all persons within three months of arrest and release prisoners immediately after completion of sentence and nationality verification. They also

1. Explaining the context of this formulation, it was pointed out that the CBI and the FAI could now seek each other’s help in criminal cases on the basis of a prior arrangement. Such arrangements it was pointed out were internationally accepted. The CBI and FAI would now assist each other in case of a request made by each side. The Home Secretary V.K Duggal told reporters that the “utmost understanding” had been shown by the two sides of each other’s concerns. The agreement was a “fairly substantive move forward” an achievement in itself. “All other related issues pertaining to terrorism were also discussed”, he said and added Mr. Shah had promised to look into India’s concerns once he returned to Islamabad.

However, before the visit, the Home Secretary Duggal told journalists in New Delhi that India would seek the deportation of underworld don Dawood Ibrahim from Pakistan during the talks. “We will seek the deportation of all those who are involved in terrorists activities against India and are wanted in this country for serious crimes and terrorism-related activities and are based in Pakistan,” Home Secretary said. Asked specifically if Dawood decaired a global terrorist by the United States figures on the list of those whose deportation is being sought by India, he said “we will ask for all those who are wanted in India so that they can face the due process of law in this country”. On whether new names of terrorists and criminals have been added to the list of 20 wanted men given to Pakistan by India during the NDA rule, Mr. Duggal said the list to be given during the Home Secretaries talks comprises of nearly 30 names. (He did not spell out the names on the list.)
agreed to release on 12 September, 2005 all fishermen and civilian prisoners who have completed their sentence and whose national status has been confirmed.

Both sides noted with satisfaction the continuing cooperation and exchange of information between narcotics control agencies of both countries and agreed that the Memorandum of Understanding between them will be finalised and signed shortly.

The MOU aims at having a regular institutional mechanism in place to intensify mutual cooperation and liaison on drug control matters.

The Pakistan Interior Secretary and members of his delegation called on the Home Minister, Government of India, Shri Shivraj V. Patil. The two sides agreed to continue the discussions within the framework of the Composite Dialogue Process.
The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Mr. Riaz Mohammad Khan and the Foreign Secretary of India Mr. Shyam Saran met in Islamabad on September 1, 2005 to review the progress of the second round of the composite dialogue comprising Peace and Security including CBMs; Jammu and Kashmir; Siachen; Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Terrorism and Drug Trafficking; Economic and Commercial Cooperation and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields. The talks were held in a cordial, constructive and friendly atmosphere.

2. The Foreign Secretaries reviewed the progress made so far and assessed the developments in bilateral relations since the last review meeting of the Composite Dialogue held in September 2004. The Foreign Secretaries expressed satisfaction over the positive developments during the current round of the composite dialogue. They also reaffirmed the important outcomes of the discussions between President Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh reflected in the 18th April, 2005 Joint Statement.

3. The Foreign Secretaries reviewed the work of their experts who discussed Nuclear and Conventional CBMs and have contributed to a better understanding of each other’s concerns. They welcomed the continuation of the ceasefire and commended the finalization of the Agreement on Pre-Notification of Ballistic Missile Tests. They recommended that the Agreement on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles and the MOU on establishing communication links between the Pakistan Maritime Security Agency and the Indian Coast Guard be signed during the forthcoming Ministerial Level Review Meeting on 3-5 October, 2005 at Islamabad.

4. The Foreign Secretaries welcomed the commencement of the Srinagar-

1. Asked at a news conference about Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's recent remarks that attempts by Pakistan to combat violence and cross border terrorism were “half-hearted” the Foreign Secretary said India welcomed the assurances by Gen. Musharraf that various measures were being taken to fight terrorism. It was conveyed that terrorism and extremism posed a danger to Pakistan too. Saran said India had hoped that “these commitments are, in fact, implemented. I, of course, drew attention to the fact that on the ground infiltration and violence still continue, and it is our hope that this would subside.” He recalled that both Gen. Musharraf and Dr. Singh agreed that terrorism must be confronted and not allowed to impede the peace process. “I return confident that the composite dialogue is proceeding in a satisfactory manner and has proved to be a very useful instrument in bridging differences between the two countries,” Shyam Saran said.
Muzaffarabad Bus Service and agreed to hold a technical level meeting as soon as possible on the early operationalization of Poonch-Rawalakot Bus Service and a truck service for trade on the Srinagar-Muzaffarabad route. They agreed on further discussions on meeting points across LoC for divided families to ensure early implementation.

5. The Foreign Secretaries reiterated the importance of enhancing mutually beneficial economic cooperation and friendly exchanges. They noted that technical meetings would be held in September 2005 to review the bilateral Air Services Agreement and the Shipping Protocol. Technical experts will finalize the modalities for operationlisation of the Lahore-Amritsar and Nankana Sahib – Amritsar bus services during September 2005. They agreed that the 1988 Cultural Exchange Programme Agreement should be revised. The Foreign Secretaries noted the decision to expand the 1974 Bilateral Protocol on Visits to Religious Shrines to increase the number of pilgrims and add new sites in both countries. In addition, it was agreed to undertake an updating of the 1974 Visa Agreement.

6. The two Foreign Secretaries agreed on the need to improve, on humanitarian grounds, the existing mechanism for expeditious disposal of consular issues related to prisoners, fishermen and inadvertent line crossers of either side. They also agreed to implement the understanding reached in this regard during the Foreign Secretaries level talks in December 2004 and Home/Interior Secretaries talks in August 2005. In this regard, the need for revision of the 1982 Protocol on Consular access was agreed upon. The Foreign Secretaries welcomed the decision to release all prisoners on 12th September 2005 whose nationality was confirmed and who have completed their sentences.

7. The Foreign Secretaries recalled the decision taken in April 2005 by President General Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to revive the India-Pakistan Joint Commission. They recommended that a meeting of the Joint Commission be held during the visit of External Affairs Minister, Mr. K. Natwar Singh to Pakistan on October 3-5, 2005.

8. The Foreign Secretaries agreed on the following schedule for third round of Composite Dialogue:

— The Foreign Secretaries would meet in January 2006 in New Delhi to launch the next round of the Composite Dialogue.
— The next round of the Composite Dialogue meetings on the other six subjects will be held between January and July 2006.
— All technical level meetings would be concluded by April 2006.

9. The Indian Foreign Secretary Mr. Shyam Saran paid a courtesy call on President Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz.

◆◆◆◆◆
Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Pervez Musharraf met in New York on September 14, 2005 and reviewed progress in their relations since they last met in New Delhi on April 18, 2005. The two leaders referred to the earlier statements of January 6, 2004 and April 18, 2005 and reiterated their pledge that they would not allow terrorism to impede the peace process.

They reaffirmed their commitment to the decisions taken at their meeting in New Delhi and agreed to expedite their implementation. They also welcomed the progress made within the framework of the composite dialogue, including promotion of trade and economic relations, people to people contacts and confidence building measures. They also welcomed the recent release of prisoners on both sides and agreed to continue this process on a humanitarian basis.

They expressed their commitment to ensure a peaceful settlement of all pending issues including Jammu and Kashmir to the satisfaction of both sides. They agreed that possible options for a peaceful, negotiated settlement in this regard should continue to be pursued in a sincere spirit and purposeful manner.

---

1. Three days before the above meeting in New York, Prime Minister told journalists accompanying him on board the special flight from New Delhi that he continued to “trust” the Pakistani leader and he believed that he could do “business” with the General. “I have not changed my views”, he said. Asked about his Independence Day observations that Pakistan’s efforts to curb terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir were “half hearted,” the Prime Minister noted that Pakistan had taken “some steps” and it was “too early for me to say” (whether promises made have been kept). He repeated his earlier formulations that “we cannot change border but we can work to make borders irrelevant.”

2. Foreign Secretary later told the journalists that the joint statement should not be seen as a setback to the peace process. “We are not in the business of event making,” he cautioned. He said it was unrealistic to arouse “expectations of spectacular outcomes” every time the President of Pakistan and Prime Minister met. There cannot be breakthrough every two months. “It is a process that must be deepened and this process had to contend with legacies and complications” accumulated over the decades. The talks according to Foreign Secretary were marked by “frankness and candour” but were conducted in “a spirit of taking the relationship forward.” While underscoring that it was a “pleasant encounter” between President Musharraf and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, he suggested that the Indian leader had done some plain-talking on the question of continued violence and terror in Jammu and Kashmir. Dr. Singh told Gen. Musharraf that he would need to “answer credibly to the people of India” whether or not the peace process was yielding results on the ground (in terms of terrorist activities). Dr. Singh suggested to the General that according to the Indian assessment there had been a “spurt” in the violence in June and July and that beyond these “ebbs and flows” a “trend” was yet to emerge that would enable India to reach a “conclusion” (that Pakistan had done enough to control terror). However, Saran pointed out that New Delhi’s view was that though the two countries still had many differences, it would take a positive view of the latest round of Manmohan – Musharraf interaction as a contributory development that would deepen the composite dialogue process. “We look forward to the third round of the composite dialogue in January 2006” he said. The Prime Minister had told President Bush a day earlier that “our belief is that Pakistan still controls the flow of terror and they must stop it for any realistic progress.”
Although unlike previous years, he did not directly ask other nations to separate terrorism from legitimate national struggles, the President did urge them to “understand and address the motives behind terrorist acts.” “These may not justify terrorism; but they explain it,” he said, adding, “to eliminate terrorist violence, we will need to eliminate it in the minds of potential terrorists.”

He said that no religion sanctioned terrorism and the motives of terrorists were always political. Explaining his strategy of countering terrorism with enlightened moderation, he said: “We need to redress political and economic injustices” to defeat terrorism. The president said his strategy could help eliminate terrorism and hoped that a commission formed by the UN Secretary-General to suggest means for avoiding a conflict of civilizations would consider his theory.

Addressing the issue of nuclear proliferation, he said Islamabad believed that weapons of mass destruction must not fall in the hands of terrorists. “To prevent this, we must aim to eliminate both the terrorists as well as the weapons of mass destruction.” Ruling out the use of nuclear weapons for settling disputes, Gen Musharraf said: “The catastrophic consequences of a nuclear war make it imperative to prevent one from ever taking place.”

He said both the proliferation and the perpetual possession of nuclear weapons posed an unacceptable global danger and the international community must evolve a new consensus to achieve disarmament and non-proliferation.

◆◆◆◆◆
Joint statement issued at the end of the visit of External Affairs Minister K. Natwar Singh to Pakistan.

Islamabad, October 4, 2005.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Khurshid M. Kasuri and the Indian External Affairs Minister, Shri K. Natwar Singh met in Islamabad on 3 October 2005 for a review meeting on the progress of the second round of the Composite Dialogue comprising Peace & Security including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir; Siachen; Wullar Barrage/Tulbal Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Terrorism & Drug Trafficking; Economic & Commercial Cooperation and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in various fields. The plenary meeting of the revived Pakistan-India Joint Commission was also held in Islamabad on 04 October 2005. The meeting was convened pursuant to the decision taken by President General Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh in their Joint Statement issued on 18 April 2005. The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere.

2. The Ministers held detailed and substantive discussions on the whole range of issues within the framework of the Composite Dialogue process and expressed satisfaction over the progress in the Composite Dialogue since their last review meeting in September 2004. They recalled the outcome of the discussions between the President of Pakistan and Prime Minister of India reflected in the Joint Statements of 6 January 2004, 24 September 2004, 18 April 2005 and 14 September 2005. The Ministers reiterated that possible options for a peaceful, negotiated settlement of the issue of Jammu and Kashmir should be explored in a sincere, purposeful and forward-looking manner. The Ministers reaffirmed their determination not to allow terrorism to impede the peace process. They resolved to carry forward the peace process and to maintain its momentum.

3. The Ministers expressed satisfaction over developments that have taken place over the last one year, including the smooth operation of the Muzaffarabad-Srinagar bus service.

4. The two Ministers endorsed the recommendations made by the Foreign Secretaries as reflected in the Joint Statement of the 02 September 2005. It was agreed that Expert level meetings will be held by the end of this year to finalize modalities for the meeting points of the divided families across the LoC and to initiate a truck service on Muzaffarabad-Srinagar route.

5. The two Ministers:
   a. welcomed the agreement to operationalize the Lahore-Amritsar bus service in November, 2005;
b. agreed that a meeting of experts would be held in Islamabad on 25-26 October, 2005 to start the Nankana Sahib-Amritsar bus service at an early date;

c. agreed that a meeting at the technical level would take place before the end of the year to discuss arrangements for operationalizing the Rawalakot-Poonch bus service as early as possible;

d. agreed that a technical level meeting would take place before December 2005 to discuss modalities for starting truck service on Muzaffarabad-Srinagar route for trade in permitted goods; and

e. welcomed the release of prisoners and fishermen by Pakistan and India. They agreed that the understanding reached between the Interior Secretaries on exchange of prisoners and fishermen would be implemented in letter and spirit including immediate notification of arrests by either side, consular access to all persons within three months of arrest, release of prisoners on completion of sentence and verification of national status, and early release of inadvertent crossers across the LoC. The Indian side handed over a draft of an agreement on consular access.

6. The two sides exchanged ideas on the Siachen issue and agreed to continue their discussions so as to arrive at a common understanding before commencement of the next round of the Composite Dialogue in January next year¹.

7. The two sides also exchanged ideas on the Sir Creek issue, taking into account the joint survey of the horizontal section of the boundary in the area. Without prejudice to each other’s position, they agreed to undertake a similar joint survey of the Sir Creek itself, and to consider options for the delimitation of their maritime boundary. They agreed that the joint survey should commence

¹ Speaking to journalists in Karachi the next day Minister Natwar Singh said “there is no deadline for Siachen, but we hope the talks will move forward.” He said “on some issues there can be no hurry. On some others, there is speedy movement.” On October 3 Foreign Secretary Shyam Saran briefing journalists in Islamabad after the talks had said that while so far there was no agreement between the two sides on the modalities for demilitarization of Siachen Glacier, efforts were on to find ways and means to promote progress on the subject. Saran recalled that during the April visit of President Musharraf to India both sides had agreed that Siachen and Sir Creek should be addressed on a “priority basis” and the quest by the two Foreign Secretaries towards resolution of the two was in line with the understanding. There is an agreement in principle by the two sides to move troops from the Siachen Glacier in accordance with the 1989 understanding. But there was no forward movement on this understanding due to difference on its interpretation. While insisted that withdrawal of troops would have to be preceded by certification of existing positions under the control of both sides, Pakistan argued that before the end of the year and its report will be considered in the next round of the Composite Dialogue. Ideas relating to the delimitation of the maritime boundary would also be addressed in the Composite Dialogue with a view to its early resolution.

8. The two Ministers reiterated their commitment to the Iran-Pakistan-India gas pipeline project and agreed that this would contribute significantly to the prosperity and development of their countries.

9. The two Ministers also welcomed the signing of the following:
   a) Agreement on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles.
   b) Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on Establishment of a Communication Link between the Pakistan Maritime Security Agency and the Indian Coast Guards.

10. The Indian side presented drafts for consideration proposing amendments to the existing agreements on visa, visits to religious shrines and new proposals for a Cultural Exchange Programme. The two sides agreed to pursue these matters under the Composite Dialogue framework.

11. The two sides reaffirmed their commitment to maintain the integrity of the Composite Dialogue.

12. The two Ministers expressed satisfaction at the revival of the Joint Commission and hoped that the Joint Commission would contribute significantly in strengthening the mutually beneficial relations and cooperation between the two countries. The two sides decided to restructure and streamline the work of the Joint Commission in the light of developments that have taken place since its last meeting in 1989.

13. In this context, the two sides had a meaningful and constructive exchange of ideas on restructuring the Joint Commission and subjects to be considered the demilitarization had to be unconditional. Meanwhile Chief of the Army Staff General J.J. Singh on October 21 told journalists that some sort of acceptance of present (troop) position was essential for the next step (of creating a demilitarized zone). “There should be some sort of documented acceptance of present position in whatever form. If there is an understanding of this requirement by the other side, progress can be made.”

1. According to media reports the project also figured in the bilateral discussions between EAM and Pakistani Foreign Minister Khurshid Mahmud Kasuri as well as at Singh’s meeting with Pakistani Prime Minister. In the course of the discussions India pointed to the Pakistani leadership that it had recently appointed an expert to look into the ‘economic viability’ of the pipeline. It may be recalled that Foreign Secretary Shyam Saran in his press conference on October 3 had said that the Indian vote on the Iran resolution in Vienna had nothing to do with the pipeline project and the economic viability of the project would be the sole criterion for New Delhi in deciding on it.
under its purview. The understandings reached would form the guidelines for the future work plan for the Joint Commission. The next meeting of the Joint Commission will be preceded by technical level working groups on Agriculture, Health, Science & Technology, Information, Education, I.T. & Telecommunication, Environment and Tourism.

14. The External Affairs Minister of India invited the Foreign Minister of Pakistan to visit India. The invitation was accepted and dates would be finalized through diplomatic channels.

15. The External Affairs Minister of India also paid courtesy calls on President General Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz.

◆◆◆◆◆
New Delhi, October 25, 2005.

Question: There is a curfew in Gilgit and there are reports that Pakistani forces are acting against the local population. Any comment on that?

Answer: Yes, we have noted with concern reports in the Pakistan media about a curfew being imposed in Gilgit and action taken by Pakistani forces against the people in that region. There is a history of sectarian conflict in Gilgit and Baltistan regions of Jammu and Kashmir and of severe repressive measures being taken against legitimate protests and demonstrations. We hope that Pakistani forces will act with utmost restraint and observe international human rights standards. We will keep the situation under close watch.

---

1. This was one of the few occasions when India had spoken out on what it believed was an issue of human rights on the Pakistani side of the LoC. In the “clashes” between the Pakistani forces and Shia students at least 10 persons including two security personnel were killed. According to media reports as people of Pakistan occupied Kashmir grappled with the tragedy caused by the earthquake, Gilgit was reeling under sectarian trouble. The area, which was under curfew was given relaxation for eight hours on October 24 following some improvement in the situation. The curfew was eased 11 days after tension gripped the town in the wake of the clashes between the security forces and students on October 13. The media reports said that the security forces had set up pickets to monitor the situation. There was a cautious movement in traffic as people came out to buy daily necessities. Gilgit had witnessed several incidents of sectarian violence since the beginning of 2005. In June three persons were killed in the town as security forces opened fire on a vehicle violating curfew.
1623. Response of Official Spokesperson to questions on Pakistan Foreign Ministry spokesperson’s remarks about self governance on both sides of the Line of Control.

New Delhi, November 21, 2005.

During the meeting between PM Dr. Manmohan Singh and PM of Pak Shaukat Aziz in Dhaka the latter had conveyed that in seeking a resolution on the Jammu and Kashmir issue the two countries could inter alia explore ideas such as self governance and demilitarisation. No proposal regarding so-called “self governance” was provided to which a response was expected.

Our PM had conveyed that J&K already enjoyed autonomy under the Indian constitution and had in place a popular government elected through free and fair elections. However, there was clearly a lack of autonomy in POK and there had been no popular elections in Gilgit and Baltistan to determine the wishes and aspirations of the people.

PM had also reiterated that there would be no question of redeployment of security forces by India while cross border terrorism and infiltration continued and there was no cessation of acts of terrorist violence.

1. MOS was responding to President Musharraf’s remarks at the inauguration of the conference that India’s donation could be the resolution of Kashmir issue in the context of the earthquake.

2. The Spokesperson was referring to his Pakistani counterpart’s remarks to journalists in Islamabad that the Pakistani Prime Minister had during the course of his meeting with Prime Minister Manmohan Singh in Dhaka mooted the idea of “self-governance and demilitarization” on both sides of the LOC. However, despite repeated queries of journalists, Pakistani Spokesperson did not and could not give any details of the said proposal. According to media reports when the Minister of State E. Ahamed called on Pakistani Prime Minister during his visit to Islamabad in connection with the donors’ conference for quake relief, Aziz again referred to his undefined proposal, which left India wondering how to react in vacuum.
The seventh round of Director General Level Talks between the Counter Narcotics Agencies of Pakistan and India was held at Rawalpindi on 1-2 December 2005. The Pakistan Delegation was led by Major General Syed Khalid Amir Jaffrey, Director General, Anti Narcotics Force, Government of Pakistan and the Indian delegation was led by Mr. K.C. Verma, Director General, Narcotics Control Bureau, Government of India.

The talks were held in a cordial atmosphere. The two sides recognized the efforts of both the countries in fighting drug trafficking and appreciated the need for furthering their efforts through enhanced mutual co-operation. Detailed discussions took place on drug supply and demand reduction. There was convergence of views on issues of mutual concern and the two sides reaffirmed their resolve for regular exchange of information on drug related issues. Realizing the region’s sensitivity to transit-trafficking of drugs, both sides emphasized their deep commitment for forging closer co-operation between their Drug Law Enforcement Agencies.

To enhance co-operation between the two countries and to give proper direction and substance to this co-operation, a draft Memorandum of Understanding was discussed and agreed upon, in principle, for signature on a mutually convenient date shortly.

The leader of the Indian delegation paid a courtesy call on the Hon’ble Minister for Narcotics Control Mr. Ghous Bux Khan Maher. Mr. K.C. Verma thanked the Government of Pakistan for extending a warm welcome to him and his delegation.

The two sides agreed to continue these talks in future as well.
1625. Reaction of Official Spokesperson to a question on unrest in Balochistan (Pakistan).

New Delhi, December 27, 2005.

In response to a question on Balochistan the Official Spokesperson said:

The Government of India has been watching with concern the spiralling violence in Balochistan and the heavy military action, including the use of helicopter gunships and jet fighters by the Government of Pakistan to quell it. We hope that the Government of Pakistan will exercise restraint and take recourse to peaceful discussions to address the grievances of the people of Balochistan.¹

---

¹ The Spokesman was reacting to Pakistan’s own media reports of large scale Baluch protests in Pakistan and disproportionate use of violence by the Pakistani army which killed according to reports “dozens of people”. According to reports more than 50 people had been killed and more than 100 injured in Balochistan violence. When the journalists asked Navtej Sarna to react to Pakistani charge of describing Indian reaction as “interference” in Pakistan’s internal affairs, he refused to be drawn into any controversy on this issue and said, “I think I have made the point I had to.” However on December 30 an unnamed official source briefing the media denied there was anything untoward or provocative in the External Affairs Ministry’s recent statement on the situation in Balochistan. “There is a certain serious situation that has been developing in Balochistan and when (the Government was) asked for its views, (it) gave a restrained answer.”

Once again on January 1, 2006 official sources were at pains to clarify that notwithstanding Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf terming as “intriguing” India’s comments on Balochistan, there was nothing wrong in reacting to the “serious situation” in the neighbouring country, particularly when it waves “red rags” at India virtually on daily basis. India insisted that the statement by the MEA spokesperson was “nothing unusual or extraordinary”. “Why there should be inhibition on our side to say something on what is happening in our neighbourhood? A serious situation has been developing in Balochistan and when a reaction was sought, MEA spokesperson gave it,” a senior government official said responding to Pakistan’s objection. New Delhi insisted that the reaction it gave was “quite restrained and reasonable” and did not mark any departure from its policy on Pakistan. Officials in New Delhi said India’s comment on happenings in Balochistan was not unjustified since Pakistan also keeps on talking about the situation in Jammu and Kashmir although “no human rights violations” are taking place there from the government side unlike in Balochistan.

Islamabad, December 27, 2005.

When attention was drawn to a statement by the spokesman of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs commenting on law and order situation in Baluchistan alleging violence and military action in the province, the spokesperson rejected the Indian statement as unwarranted and baseless. Suggesting that the statement was tantamount to meddling in internal affairs, the spokesperson stated that India often shows an unacceptable proclivity to interfere in internal affairs of its neighbours. Such tendency is contrary to efforts aimed at building an environment of trust, peace and stability in South Asia. The statement is all the more surprising from the spokesman of India, a country that has long tried to suppress the freedom struggle of the Kashmiri people and has a record of systematic and serious human rights violation in the Indian occupied Jammu and Kashmir. The heavy handed methods and use of force by India to quell the ongoing unrest especially in the North East of the country and the widespread violence afflicting many of its parts are well known and need no comment. We are also intrigued by this provocative statement at this time when the two countries are engaged in the peace process to address all issues including the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. The statement tends to vitiate the current atmosphere of improved relations that accords with the wishes of the peoples of the two countries.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1627. Initial reaction of Official Spokesperson to remarks made by President Musharraf.

New Delhi, January 7, 2006.

Question: Do you have a reaction to President Musharraf’s interview in which he has said that if India withdraws troops from Kupwara, Srinagar it will help fight insurgency?

Official Spokesperson: Have you seen the interview.

Question: Part of it...

Official Spokesperson: That is the whole point. We have not yet seen the entire interview and I think a full assessment and a full reaction can only come after we have seen the entire interview. Nevertheless, there have been some agency reports as well as excerpts which we have seen on the TV channels and on the basis of what one has seen so far I think it is possible to give some initial reaction on some of the elements which seem to be contained in the interview. But I must say that a full assessment can only be done once the full interview has been played.

On the basis of what one has seen so far I think I am in a position to make some comments.

Firstly, we have heard remarks made by President on demilitarization, and this time, about three specific cities in Jammu and Kashmir. I would like to say here first of all, that any demilitarization or redeployment of security forces within the territory of India is a sovereign decision of the Government of India and cannot be dictated by any foreign government. Such decisions are based on our assessment of the security situation prevailing in any particular part of the country. As long as the security situation in Jammu and Kashmir and indeed in other parts of the country is adversely affected by the phenomenon of cross-border terrorism and violence perpetrated by Pakistan-based terrorist groups, the Government of India will fulfill its responsibility to safeguard the lives and security of its citizens.

1. President Musharraf said in his interview to an Indian news channel actually telecast on January 8 that if India agreed to withdraw troops from Srinagar, Kupwara and Baramulla to the “outskirts”, there would be no militancy in the Kashmir valley. He complained of a non-response attitude from India towards Pakistan’s idea for resolving the Kashmir issue. He reiterated his “formula” of dividing J & K into seven regions. The formulation envisaged the identification of regions in Jammu and Kashmir and Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir and their administration with joint control by India and Pakistan. This formulation already articulated by him in 2004, at the time of Ramadan, was not only criticized in India but in Pakistan too.
On the issue of the three specific towns or cities I think there seems to be some hint or a statement within the interview that there is a quid pro quo here that if the towns of Srinagar, Kupwara and Baramullah are demilitarized, then President Musharraf would ensure that there is no “militancy” there. What we are talking about here is “terrorism” and not mere militancy. Pakistan President has repeatedly given solemn assurances that no part of the territory under Pakistan’s control would be used for any cross-border terrorism against India. The implementation of this commitment is unconditional. Pakistan should implement forthwith its solemn commitments in this regard so that the peace process between the two countries can make progress and the two countries can live in peace and friendship as good neighbors.

Our aim should be to establish peace and tranquility all along the India-Pakistan border and all along the LOC so that there is no need for the two countries to deploy troops in proximity to one another. A complete cessation of cross-border terrorism as well as the permanent dismantling of the infrastructure of terrorism would contribute to an early realization of this aim.

The other issue that we have seen in the excerpts being talked about is references to self-governance. On this, India had already conveyed its response in the meeting between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz in Dhaka on the sidelines of the SAARC ‘Summit. Our Prime Minister had conveyed that Jammu and Kashmir already enjoyed autonomy under the Indian Constitution and had in place a popular government elected through free and fair elections. However, there was clearly a lack of autonomy in POK and there had been no popular elections in Gilgit and Baltistan to determine the wishes and aspirations of the people. Against this background, I think it ought to be clear that concepts such as joint control or joint management over Jammu and Kashmir, which is an integral part of India, cannot be the basis of a settlement of the issue of Jammu and Kashmir.

So, I think these are some initial reactions which we thought we would share with you tonight on the basis of what we have heard so far, while we wait to see the full interview.

Question: There is some comment by interior Minister on Balochistan that India is funding...

Official Spokesperson: As far as any allegations about India’s interference in Balochistan are concerned I would like to categorically reject these allegations as being utterly baseless and false.

Question: In the same interview President Musharraf has said that he would invite Prime Minister to attend a Cricket match?
Official Spokesperson: We have seen that excerpt but I do not have any response to share with you tonight.

Question: Do you think such grand statements on TV complicates sensitive peace process which is ongoing and there is a plan?

Official Spokesperson: Let me not characterize this interview in any such terms. Let us, as I said, wait to see the entire interview. I have tried to share with you our positions on some of the issues which have come out in the excerpts so far. Thank you.

1628. Joint Statement issued at the end of India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary level talks.

New Delhi, January 18, 2006.

1. The Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met in New Delhi on 17-18 January 2006 to commence the third round of talks under the India-Pakistan Composite Dialogue framework. Foreign Secretary of India Shri Shyam Saran led the Indian delegation while the Pakistan delegation was led by Foreign Secretary Mr. Riaz Mohammad Khan. They discussed issues related to ‘Peace and Security including CBMs’ and ‘Jammu and Kashmir’. The talks were held in a cordial atmosphere and were constructive.

2. The two Foreign Secretaries assessed the developments in bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction at the progress made during the Composite Dialogue process. The two sides reaffirmed their commitment to move forward the peace process in a meaningful way during the third round. They recalled the outcome of the discussions between the President of Pakistan and Prime Minister of India reflected in the Joint Statements of 6 January 2004, 24 September 2004, 18 April 2005 and 14 September 2005. Recalling the Joint Statement of 4 October 2005 issued at the conclusion of meeting of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan and the Minister for External Affairs of India, the two sides reiterated their resolve to carry forward the peace process and maintain its momentum.

3. On the issue of Peace and Security including CBMs, the two Foreign Secretaries reviewed and assessed positively the progress made during the meetings of experts on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs. The two Foreign Secretaries, with the objective of promoting a stable environment of peace and security, agreed to mandate the two experts groups to continue consultations on security concepts and nuclear doctrines to develop measures for confidence building in the nuclear and conventional fields aimed at avoidance of conflict, including, inter alia, consideration of the following:

(i) Continue discussions with a view to finalising an agreement on “Reducing Risk of Nuclear Accidents or Unauthorised Use of Nuclear Weapons”, on which a draft has been presented by India;

(ii) Conclusion of an agreement on prevention of incidents at sea in order to ensure safety of navigation by naval vessels, and aircraft belonging to the two sides. The Pakistani side indicated that they will present a draft of such an agreement;

(iii) Elaborating, consistent with its intent, the agreement reached on no development of new posts and defence works along the LoC. The Indian side handed over proposed elements;

(iv) Modalities for the conduct of already agreed monthly flag meetings between local commanders at the selected sectors. Both sides handed over suggested modalities.

4. The two Foreign Secretaries had a detailed exchange of views on Jammu & Kashmir and agreed to continue the sustained dialogue in a purposeful and forward looking manner to find a peaceful and negotiated final settlement.

5. The Foreign Secretaries noted with satisfaction the opening of the five crossing points across the Line of Control, and hoped that the process of promoting greater interaction between the divided families would get further impetus. They reiterated their commitment to start a bus service between Poonch and Rawalakot and a truck service on Muzaffarabad-Srinagar route for trade in permitted goods as soon as the infrastructure damaged during the October 2005 earthquake is restored.

6. The two Foreign Secretaries recalled their decision of 2004 regarding provision of consular access to all civilian prisoners and fishermen and their early repatriation on humanitarian grounds.

7. Both sides reiterated their resolve to simultaneously reopen their respective Consulates General in Mumbai and Karachi and to facilitate the process.

8. Both sides discussed the schedule of meetings, including technical level meetings, under the Composite Dialogue framework. The Foreign Secretaries and Foreign Ministers will meet thereafter to review the third round of the Composite Dialogue.

9. Both sides also agreed to hold early meetings of the technical level working groups of the Joint Commission on Agriculture, Health, Science & Technology, Information, Education, I.T. & Telecommunication, Environment and Tourism so that they can report their progress to the Joint Commission.

10. The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan called on Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri E. Ahmed during the course of his visit to New Delhi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1629. Joint Statement issued on the conclusion of the 2nd Round of Technical Level Talks between Central Bureau of Investigation (India)-Federal Investigation Agency (Pakistan).

New Delhi, March 22, 2006.

1. The second round of Central Bureau of Investigation (India) - Federal Investigation Agency (Pakistan) Technical Level Talks was held on March 21 and 22, 2006 at CBI Head quarters, New Delhi. The CBI (India) delegation was led by Mr. Vijay Shanker, Director, CBI, while the FIA (Pakistan) delegation was led by Mr. Tariq Parvez, Director General, FIA.

2. The talks were held after a gap of almost 17 years following a decision during the Home Secretary Level talks in New Delhi in August, 2005. The deliberations were constructive and were held in a cordial atmosphere. Both sides identified areas of mutual interest and agreed to work out the modalities of cooperation.

3. A Joint Study Group will be set up to decide upon the modalities of future cooperation in the areas of human trafficking, counterfeit currency and illegal immigration. It was also agreed by both sides to designate an officer each as the nodal point to pursue cooperation between CBI and FIA in these areas.

4. A decision was also taken to have periodical meetings at short intervals between the Interpol nodal points. All efforts will be made by both sides for expeditious disposal of pending Interpol references.

5. It was agreed that the two agencies will explore possible avenues of professional training and share experience in various fields of criminal investigation.

6. Director, CBI accepted an invitation from DG, FIA to visit Pakistan with his team of senior officers by the end of this year.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1630. Joint Statement on the Third Round of the Pakistan-India Interior/ Home Secretary talks on Terrorism and Drugs Trafficking.

1. The Third Round of the Pakistan-India Interior/ Home Secretary talks on Terrorism and Drugs Trafficking under the Composite Dialogue was held in Islamabad on 30-31 May 2006. The Pakistan delegation was led by Syed Kamal Shah, Secretary Ministry of Interior, Government of Pakistan, and the Indian delegation was headed by Mr. V. K. Duggal, Home Secretary, Government of India.

2. The talks were held in a frank, candid and cordial atmosphere.

3. Both sides reiterated their commitment to fight terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and re-emphasized the need for effective steps for the complete elimination of this menace. They also underlined the need to pursue effective and sustained action against the terrorists.

4. Both sides welcomed the release of fishermen by each other on the eve of these talks. They also agreed to release the remaining fishermen by 30 June 2006.

5. Both sides agreed that fishermen and civilian prisoners, who have completed their prison sentences and have been granted consular access and whose national status has been verified, would be released by 30 June 2006.

1. After the meeting the Indian Home Secretary V. K. Duggal told the journalists that the two sides were making “step-by-step” progress. “If one is looking at step-by-step progress, it is a yes. The issues are fairly complicated. But if you are looking at whether the talks were successful, yes, we have moved a few steps forward. We spent three hours on all the issues and there is a movement forward,” he said. Commenting on the talks, Duggal said: “the friendship and understanding” between the two countries and the efforts towards peace represented a “sincere commitment” on the part of the leadership on both sides to resolve all issues through “the path of dialogue and discussion.” Informally officials who were in the meeting told the media that “Pakistan has agreed to go through the list with all its seriousness”. In turn the Pakistan delegation handed over a list of 58 of its fugitives whom it wants traced by India. As far as the Indian list is concerned, it was handed over to Pakistan almost two years ago. As early as January 7, the Home Secretary Duggal had said in Amritsar that “India will reiterate its demand for the extradition of 20 persons named in a list of ‘fugitives’ submitted to the Government of Pakistan more than two years ago,” and this demand would be raised “at the Home Secretary level talks scheduled this March and April at Islamabad.”

2. At the beginning of the month, after the dastardly terrorist attacks in Doda and Udhampur districts in J & K on the night of April 30 in which 35 people were killed, the High Commissioner Shivshankar Menon had cautioned Pakistan about India’s concern at the
In addition, they also agreed to exchange lists of civilian prisoners by 15 June 2006 to facilitate consular access by 31 July 2006 and subsequent release. They also agreed to the early release of inadvertent crossers, minors, senior citizens and disabled persons, who are not involved in any specific cases.

6. It was also decided to ensure implementation of an earlier decision arrived at the second round of talks in August 2005 for immediate notification of prisoners, grant of consular access within three months, and immediate repatriation on confirmation of national status/completion of sentence. Both also agreed on the need to ensure humane treatment of prisoners.

7. Both sides noted with satisfaction the exchange of information between the Anti Narcotics Force of Pakistan and Narcotics Control Bureau of India. In this regard, they agreed to the early finalization and signing of the MoU between the narcotics control agencies of the two countries.

8. Both sides appreciated the progress made at the meeting between the Federal Investigation Agency of Pakistan and the Central Bureau of Investigation of India in March, 2006. They agreed on the need to take measures to check human trafficking, illegal immigration and counterfeit currency.

9. The two sides agreed to continue discussions within the framework of the Composite Dialogue.

10. The Home Secretary of India and members of his delegation paid a courtesy call on H.E. Mr. Aftab Ahmad Khan Sherpao, Minister for Interior, Government of Pakistan.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

menace of terrorism. Speaking to the Supreme Court Bar Association in Lahore on 2nd May Menon said: “Despite some variations in infiltration patterns, terrorist training, communications and support continue, waxing waning with the seasons and the political climate.” Though the Pakistan Foreign Office had described the terrorist attack as “unfortunate act of terrorism”, the Spokesperson Ms. Tasneem Aslam declined to answer questions on whether Pakistani based terror outfits were involved. In his address Menon said borders between India and Pakistan cannot be redrawn but “the two sides could work towards making them just lines on a map” so that the people on both sides should be able to move more freely and trade with one and another. “Naturally this assumes that firm control is kept on terrorism, as had been agreed upon between President Musharraf and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. Terrorism is an enemy of civilized societies everywhere and this is increasingly recognized in both our societies,” Mr. Menon said. He regretted that the earthquake relief had resulted in the rehabilitation of the terrorist organizations in Pakistan. High Commissioner said Pakistan’s view that the resolution of the Kashmir issue was essential for any other peace measures to have any meaning was an extreme and partial view.

Islamabad, June 28, 2006.

Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs

P.R. No.230/2006 Date: 28/06/2006

In response to a question about the approval of a draft bill on the US-India civilian nuclear cooperation agreement by the US House of Representatives’ International Relations Committee, the Spokesperson said that Pakistan’s position, especially our concerns on the agreement are well-known. We have cautioned the international community about the consequences of this agreement for the shared objectives of stability in South Asia and a strong global non-proliferation regime. We have already stated that the objective of strategic stability in South Asia and the global non-proliferation regime would have been better served if the United States had considered a package approach for Pakistan and India, the two non-NPT Nuclear Weapons States, with a view to preventing a nuclear arms race in the region and promoting restraints while ensuring that the legitimate needs of both countries for civilian nuclear power generation are met. Pakistan does not accept any discriminatory treatment. While we will continue to act with responsibility in maintaining minimum credible deterrence and to avoid an arms race, we will remain fully committed to our security requirements and the needs of our economic development which demand growth in the energy sector including civilian nuclear power generation.

New Delhi, July 11, 2006.

The Government of India (GOI) has decided to extend US$ 25 million as earthquake relief assistance to the Government of Islamic Republic of Pakistan (GOP). The two Governments have agreed to utilize this assistance in the following manner:

(i) GOP will source materials from India, as may be required for relief operations, subject to their availability in India and the rules and regulations pertaining to their export at the time of procurement. However, the total cost of construction materials, including their freight charges, will not exceed US$ 25 million. GOP may utilize the sum before 31 March 2007. GOP would provide a breakup of the materials they require to GOI.

(ii) While sourcing these materials from India, GOP will follow its own procurement procedures and will select the supplier(s), in consultation with GOI.

(iii) GOI will pay to the Indian supplier(s) the CIF value of the materials procured by GOP under this MOU. In this regard, the Government of India will specify the payment procedure as early as possible, in consultation with the GOP.

(iv) GOP will either pay or exempt payment of duties and taxes relating to import of any commodity under this MOU.

(v) The export of goods from India and their import into Pakistan shall take place through normal channels subject to the laws and regulations in force in both countries. The terms and conditions including price and quality shall be settled between the exporters in India and the importers in Pakistan through GOP.

(vi) Any dispute or difference arising out of or in connection with this MOU shall be settled amicably through diplomatic channels.

(vii) This MOU will come into force on the date of its signing and will expire on 31 March 2007.

Signed on July 11, 2006 at New Delhi

Authorized Representative of the Government of India

(Shyam Saran)
Foreign Secretary
Government of India

Authorized Representative of the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

(Aziz Ahmad Khan)
High Commissioner
Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

◆◆◆◆◆
1633. Reaction of Official Spokesperson to remarks attributed to the Foreign Minister of Pakistan concerning the terrorist bomb blasts which took place in Mumbai.

New Delhi, July 12, 2006.

Official Spokesperson: Good Evening. We have seen press reports of remarks attributed to Mr. Khursheed Mahmood Kasuri, Foreign Minister of Pakistan, concerning the terrorist bomb blasts which took place in Mumbai on July 11. We find it appalling that Foreign Minister Kasuri should seek to link this blatant and inhuman act of terror against innocent men, women and children to the so called lack of resolution of disputes between India and Pakistan. His remarks appear to suggest that Pakistan will cooperate with India against the scourge of cross-border terrorism and terrorist violence only if such so called disputes are resolved. Terrorism cannot be tolerated on any grounds whatsoever, and no cause justifies the murder of innocent people. We would hope that the Government of Pakistan rejects any such linkage and joins hands together with India to defeat the forces of terrorism, based on an ideology of extremism and violence. We would urge Pakistan to take urgent steps to dismantle the infrastructure of terrorism on the territory under its control, act resolutely against groups and individuals, who are responsible for terrorist violence and fulfill its solemn commitments enshrined in the India-Pakistan Joint Press Statement of January 6, 2004.

Question: Are the Foreign Secretary Level talks still on track?
Official Spokesperson: I do not have any announcement on the dates as yet.

Question: Will this have an impact on the CBMs?
Official Spokesperson: I think I have given you a detailed enough briefing. Any interpretation is yours.

Question: Are these talks scheduled for July 21?
Official Spokesperson: As I said, I don’t have any announcement regarding the dates.

Question: As far as the statement is concerned, on the Mumbai blasts, you have spoken again of the need for the dismantling of the infrastructure of terrorism. Does India believe that the infrastructure of terrorism in Pakistan is related to the carnage in Mumbai?
Official Spokesperson: On the specific operations regarding yesterday, the relevant agencies are doing their work and no doubt the results will be made available.
1634. Statement by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Mumbai Bomb blasts.

Pakistan rejects the rehash of baseless allegations made by the Indian Ministry of External Affairs’ Spokesman while commenting on the President’s offer to help in the Mumbai blasts investigations on the basis of concrete evidence. The fact that after ten days of the Mumbai blasts, the Indian Spokesman has little to say other than to mention Daud Ibrahim or Hizbul Mujahideen Chief demonstrates that there was nothing to warrant the irresponsible act of finger-pointing at Pakistan immediately after the Mumbai attack. This has become a routine with India. On earlier occasions, similar Indian accusations were belied by independent enquiries such as in the case of Chittisinghpura incident of March 2000 and the December 2001 attack on the Indian Parliament which exposed involvement of elements internal to India.

Since the resumption of Composite Dialogue in 2004, at the Interior/Home Secretaries talks, both sides have handed over to each other lists of wanted persons. We have further given evidence of terrorist infrastructure on the Indian soil that operates against Pakistan. While we have yet to get any response from the Indian side, we have pointed out that the Indian list included persons who are either not in Pakistan or some of those who had been associated with the Kashmiri freedom struggle including the chief of a well-known Kashmiri political party that has representation and offices in Jammu and Kashmir as well as in Europe and the United States. To link these lists, which have been exchanged every year, to our serious offer to help with investigations of Mumbai terrorist attack establishes the paucity of substance in Indian allegations.

Similarly repetition of familiar conjectures and allegations about training camps and infrastructure does not lend them any credence. The fact that there is no terrorist infrastructure in Azad Kashmir became fully known to the international community with the opening of the entire area along the LoC to international NGOs and relief teams as well as NATO and other foreign contingents after the October earthquake.

Pakistan’s actions in the fight against international terrorism are well-known to and appreciated by the international community.
1635. Reaction of Official Spokesperson to the remarks of Pakistani President Prevez Musharraf for proof of Pakistani involvement in the Mumbai bomb blasts.

New Delhi, July 21, 2006.

Question: Can I ask you for a response on the statement made by President Musharraf last night? He had asked India for proof....

Official Spokesperson: We have seen the remarks made by President Musharraf in his address on television yesterday. We are disappointed at Pakistan's continuing denial of the presence of and failure to take action against jihadi groups threatening to operate against India from Pakistan and Pakistan occupied Kashmir. President Musharraf's offer to help in investigations in the Mumbai blasts if evidence is provided to him gives us no cause for satisfaction in view of Pakistan's refusal to cooperate in the past, most recently at the Home Secretary level talks in May this year, when substantial evidence was provided to Pakistan of the presence of terrorist groups and fugitives. Nevertheless, in view of President Musharraf's assurance, we will continue to provide to Pakistani authorities all available evidence and await practical action on their part.

Let me add that India remains committed to the dialogue process with Pakistan but this can be sustained and can yield results only if Pakistan acts against terrorist groups operating from territory under its control, in accordance with its solemn commitments enshrined given in the Joint Press Statement of January 6, 2004.

Question: Has there been any formal contact with Pakistan after the blasts?

Official Spokesperson: I do not know what you mean by formal contact. You know that there were talks that were scheduled to be held and they did not take place.

Question: I want to ask if the peace process with Pakistan will go on or it has been rescheduled?

Official Spokesperson: As I have told you we remain committed to the peace process which can take place and yield results only if Pakistan acts against the terrorist groups operating from territories under its control.

Question: You are not convinced by President's Musharraf's

Official Spokesperson: If Pakistan really wants to convince the people of India that we are working together with India against terrorism then it can take some action immediately and they can. For example, the self-styled chief of Hezbul Mujahideen, Syed Salahuddin, who is freely roaming about in Pakistan and PoK and has appeared on the same stage as many Ministers of the Federal Government, should be arrested and handed over to India. Instead of their saying that Jamaat-Ul-Dawa is being kept under close watch, the organization should be banned and its leader should be arrested. Besides that of course, Dawood Ibrahim, who has been listed in the UN Security Council’s 1267 Committee as an individual associated with the Al Qaeda, should be apprehended and deported to India. If Pakistan takes action to implement the directives of the UN Security Council, then it will give credibility to its assertion that it is willing to fight terror.

Question: Are these not preconditions?

Official Spokesperson: I did not say that. I was asked a question what it would take to convince us. I have listed here some examples of practical actions which will add credibility to Pakistan’s claim that they are willing to fight terror together with India.

Question: In the context of Mumbai blasts, Pakistan has asked us to provide evidence. Have we provided any fresh evidence?

---

1. It may be recalled that Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh concerned about the source of terrorism had said on July 15 when traveling on board the Air India flight taking him to St. Petersburg for the G-8 summit, that “There has to be firm commitment that Pakistan’s territory will not be used to promote acts of terrorism against India, and that commitment has to be backed by action on the ground.” While stating that he has not spoken to President Pervez Musharraf since Tuesday’s blasts in Mumbai, but links have been established at every level. “India and Pakistan have to establish new pathways to establish friendly relations,” Dr Singh said. “Both countries need peace, stability and need to be free of terror to realise their potential.” All this could not move forward, the prime minister declared, if terror, aided and abetted by outside, continued to take the lives of innocent citizens as it did in Mumbai and Jammu and Kashmir the previous week. “Both India and Pakistan have an obligation to work together, but in a democracy, there is a limitation on what a leadership can do if the terrorists are having a free time,” he said. “President Musharraf is the president of Pakistan and we have to deal with people in government. In all these matters, it is a learning process and I would not like to use harsh words,” Dr Singh added. “Therefore, it is the solemn obligation of Pakistan to honour the commitment it made in January 2004 that Pakistani territory would not be used for aiding and abetting terrorism in India,” he said. “The terror acts in Mumbai were on a massive scale, and could not have been accomplished without external involvement,” Dr Singh pointed out. In the meantime the serial blasts in Mumbai and Srinagar figured in the Union Cabinet meeting which passed a resolution condemning the outrageous terror attacks and asserted that nothing would deter the government from its firm policy to fight the menace till it is wiped out. The meeting, chaired by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, was briefed on the incidents and the investigations underway to unravel the conspiracy. Security agencies are suspecting Pakistan-based Lashker-e-Toiba and Students Islamic Movement of India (SIMI) to be behind the terror attacks in Mumbai. Meeting for the first time after deadly attacks, the Cabinet observed a two-minute silence and passed a resolution, affirming that terrorists and their acts “will never be allowed” to Official Spokesperson: This claim that provide us evidence and we will cooperate gives us no cause for satisfaction because in the past when we have provided evidence, there has been no practical action on Pakistan’s part.

Question: After the blasts why does not India take stronger action? Why the dialogue process? You know they are backed by Pakistan Official Spokesperson: Yes, we have had the Mumbai blasts. The Government of India is fully looking into the entire situation. We are also looking at all the implications in political and security terms and we are taking considered action step-by-step.

Question: As far as India is concerned, we do not have an extradition treaty with Kenya. How do we Official Spokesperson: I don’t even have a confirmation of the arrest that you check the country’s march to economic growth and prosperity. The meeting lauded the spirit of the people of Mumbai and Jammu and Kashmir which “demonstrated very emphatically that terrorism cannot succeed.” The Cabinet expressed “profound sense of shock and outrage at the series of blasts in Mumbai and Srinagar” which resulted in “heavy loss of life and suffering,” said the resolution passed at the meeting. “It (Cabinet) condemns in the strongest terms the senseless, inhuman and dastardly attack by terrorists on tourists and the innocent people of this country,” it said. The resolution emphasised the government’s “strong commitment to combat terrorism in all its forms” and said “nothing will deter us from our firm policy to fight this menace till it is wiped out. “Despite these provocations from Pakistan and lack of sufficient trust in the Pakistani credentials, Prime Minister continued to look at the situation with optimism and hoped that Pakistan would cooperate in controlling terrorist attacks from its territory. Therefore when he spoke to journalists in Bhubaneswar on August 28 he said he was not averse to meeting Gen. Musharraf at the NAM Summit in Havana in September. But he added for good measure that peace process could not move forward until Pakistan took firm measures to tackle terrorism. “It all depends on what Pakistan is willing to do to check terrorism in the region.” Observing that terrorism was a big problem for Pakistan too, he said India would not hold talks with Pakistan till it took concrete steps to deal with the menace.

Meanwhile on August 3, Indian High Commissioner in Islamabad Shivshankar Menon said in Islamabad that while New Delhi wanted Pakistan to take action against “elements” that Indian investigators have linked to several terrorist attacks prior to the Mumbai blasts, it did not mean the two countries must “stop doing business” with each other. “Frankly, they are as much a threat to you as they are to us. We have common interest in dealing with this. We are not saying because of this we must stop doing business, No, not at all. What we should do is to make it harder and harder for these groups to work and to shrink the space within which they can operate and this primarily is the responsibility of the Government of Pakistan. Between the two governments, we hope we work our way through this”, he said. Mr. Menon was responding to questions from business community after he addressed them on “Indian Economy and Pakistan” at the Islamabad Chambers of Commerce and Industry.
are mentioning. I have checked with our High Commission there and they have said that they will come back to us. If we have confirmation, then we will get into the process of how to get a certain person back. I would not like to jump steps. Thank you.

1636. Response of Official Spokesperson to questions on the killing of Nawab Akbar Khan Bugti, the Baloch leader.
New Delhi, August 28, 2006.

The unfortunate killing of the veteran Baloch leader, Nawab Akbar Khan Bugti, is a tragic loss to the people of Balochistan and Pakistan. This and the heavy casualties in the continuing military operations in Balochistan underline the need for peaceful dialogue to address the grievances and aspirations of people of Balochistan. Military force can never solve political problems.

Nawab Akbar Khan Bugti played a prominent role in Pakistani politics for over four decades. His death leaves a vacuum that will be difficult to fill.

1. The Spokesperson was referring to the violence which had gripped Balochistan in which Pakistan military was heavily involved. The Baloch leader was killed in the military operations in the Bhambore Hills of Kohlu in Balochistan where he had been hiding with several other Bugti tribesmen. According to reports at least forty other died with him.
1637. Reaction of the Official Spokesperson of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the comments of the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on the situation in Baluchistan.

Islamabad, August 28, 2006.

Strongly rejecting the statement of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs Spokesman on the situation in Balochistan, the spokesperson said that the statement is not only against the well-established norms of interstate relations but also a blatant interference in the internal affairs of a neighbouring country. India’s purported concern for the peoples of other countries is ill-advised especially when India remains afflicted with several insurgencies including in Arunachal Pradesh, Assam, Manipur, Meghalaya, Mizoram, Nagaland, Tripura, Bundel Khand, Gorkhaland, Bodoland and Khaplang, which are being suppressed by force. Instead of oppression and use of force, India should politically address grievances and aspirations of the peoples of these areas. India should focus on putting its own house in order rather than commenting on the internal affairs of other countries.

1638. Extracts relevant to Pakistan from Prime Minister’s interaction with media on board the Special Air India flight to Brazil.

September 11, 2006.

Q1. On the impact of terrorism on Indo-Pak relations
PM. Our position is quite clear. Terrorism today constitutes a threat for both countries. And therefore I believe consistent with the January 2004 statement, consistent with the September 2004 joint statement, consistent with the April 2005 statement that I and President Musharraf signed, it is incumbent on us to work together in a manner that inspires confidence that both of us are very serious about tackling the menace of terrorism. That’s the minimum I feel our two governments, our two systems should commit to achieve.

Q2. Structure or agenda for meeting with President Musharraf PM. We will be discussing all aspects of the relationship between our two countries. India is not afraid of any discussion.
Q3. Trust Pakistan

PM. There is a problem of trust deficit between our two countries. And we have to take that on board. We have to take adequate precautions and General Musharraf, he is the President of Pakistan and we have to deal with whoever is in power in Pakistan. And I have always said that the destinies of the two countries are very strongly inter-linked and full development of the sub-continent cannot be realized unless there is reconciliation between India and Pakistan.

—On meeting Musharraf in Havana

PM. I will share with General Musharraf our perceptions of what’s the role of external elements in promoting terrorism in our country. We will have an exchange of views on all issues particularly the commitment of Pakistan to not allow Pakistan territory and that includes parts of Jammu & Kashmir which is in their occupation to mount terrorist attacks against India.

Q19. On Indo-Pak talks no progress has been made.

PM. I don’t see from recent meetings that’s correct. I think we have moved very considerably over the last two years. Transportation routes have been opened up not only between the two parts of Jammu & Kashmir but also between our Punjab and their Punjab. Amritsar and Nankana Sahib, Munnabao and Kokrapar. Also two years ago, you could not say we would allow Hurriyat people travel freely wherever they wanted to go. They have been going on all directions. It’s an unprecedented development. People of both countries including the two-parts of Jammu & Kashmir are meeting frequently to discuss possibilities of cooperation. So I don’t know if it’s correct to say that no progress has been made. We have been discussing various issues at part of the composite dialogue. We can and we should move forward. But this terrorism will surely act as a damper. I have said more than once that I can’t carry the Indian public opinion with me if terrorist acts continue to plague our polity. Whatever, be the cause of that puts a damper on Indo-Pak relations. Whether in Mumbai or elsewhere if these events take place that certainly vitiates the climate.

Q20. Terrorism and peace moves, how do you reconcile both?

PM. As far as India’s concerned, I think, we’ve given them substantial amount of evidence. But as far as the past is concerned, Pakistan sponsored terrorism has certainly been a fact of life. And the fact that Prime Minister Vajpayee and President Musharraf signed the joint statement in 2004 was in a way a tacit recognition of the ground realities and their solemn agreement to move forward in the reverse direction. But it is also true that incidents take place in Pakistan also. That Pakistan is also a victim of terrorism. These groups, whether it's Lakhsar-e-Toiba or Jaish-e-Mohammad, they can -act autonomously also. But our experience has always been in the past there has been, I would not use strong words, but our worry has been that Pakistan government has not done enough to control these elements.

Q23. Democracy in Pakistan

PM. The general belief is democracy is good for Indian people and is good for the people of the world. But what system prevails in Pakistan is for the people of the Pakistan to decide.

1639. Joint Statement on talks between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Pakistani President Gen. Pervez Musharraf in Havana (Cuba).

Havana, September 16, 2006.

1. President General Pervez Musharraf and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh had a cordial, frank and detailed exchange of views on all aspects of India-Pakistan relations. Desirous of carrying forward the dialogue process, the leaders reiterated their commitments and determination to implement the Joint Statements of January 6, 2004, September 24, 2004, April 18, 2005 and September 14, 2005.

2. The leaders agreed that the peace process must be maintained and its success was important for both countries and the future of the entire region. In this context, they directed their Foreign Secretaries to resume the composite dialogue at the earliest possible.

3. The two leaders met in the aftermath of the Mumbai blasts. They strongly condemned all acts of terrorism and agreed that terrorism is a scourge that needs to be effectively dealt with. They decided to put in place an India-Pakistan anti-terrorism institutional mechanism to identify and implement counter-terrorism initiatives and investigations.

4. The leaders decided to continue the joint search for mutually acceptable options for a peaceful negotiated settlement of all issues between India and Pakistan, including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir, in a sincere and purposeful manner. On the Jammu and Kashmir issue, there have been useful discussions. There is a need to build on convergences and narrow down divergences.

5. The two leaders also directed the Foreign Secretaries on the following:
   - The Foreign Secretaries should meet shortly in New Delhi to continue the composite dialogue.
   - To arrange consultations for early solution of the Siachen issue.
   - Experts should meet immediately to agree on coordinates for joint survey of Sir Creek and adjoining area, without prejudice to each other’s position on the issue. The Survey should commence in November 2006. The experts should start discussions on the maritime boundary.
   - The two sides will facilitate implementation of agreements and understandings already reached on LOC-related CBMs, including bus services, crossing points and truck service.

6. The President of Pakistan renewed his invitation to the Prime Minister of India to visit Pakistan. Thanking the President, the Prime Minister indicated that he looked forward to a purposeful visit at a time to be determined through diplomatic channels.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1640. Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary-Designate

Shivshankar Menon after Prime Minister’s Meeting with Pakistani President.

Havana, September, 18, 2006.

QUESTION: ...(Inaudible)... as with any discussion between the Prime Minister and President Musharraf on the fact that Pakistan has reached ...(inaudible)...

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I think the difficulty here is when you talk of terrorism, it is not just that there is one kind of terrorism and it is not that all terrorism is organized or run by one or two organizations. After all Pakistan Government has suffered from terrorism. You have seen attacks on Pakistan

---

1. He formally took over as Foreign Secretary on October 1, 2006.
civilians, on Pakistani leaders by terrorists. You have seen the same thing in India. Now depending on the nature of the problem that we are dealing with, we have different ways of dealing with. Some of them within India we deal with ourselves. Somebody mentioned Malegaon. That is our own. First we will check, we will do our own investigation and we will decide. If there is something with cross border links that we think the Government of Pakistan can help us with, we will take it up in the mechanism. Other problems we will deal with through other ways. I think you are trying to say that all terrorism has to be dealt with in the same way because all terrorism has one source or one root. That would be the implication of what you are saying. I am saying all this is possible at the same time, that it is a multi-faceted problem and we will use different means to deal with it depending on where it comes from. So, these are not mutually exclusive, as I said to Manoj. To your second question, no, not that I know of.

QUESTION: Sorry to take the topic away from Pakistan. In the discussions with Venezuelan President, did the issue of Venezuelan bid for the membership of Security Council come up because India is still noncommittal, I believe, about supporting Venezuela.

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: No, it did not come up. Not that I know of.

QUESTION: Mr. Menon, you were involved last time when threads were to be picked up in ties with Pakistan with the bus service and the situation that led to the January 2004 statement. Again you are also watching this. What was the toughest bit of trying to pick up things once again with Pakistan this time?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: Actually I think we are learning to work with each other. It is much easier. When we did 2004, we had almost no experience of really doing a hard negotiation together, I think, both to them and for us. It is much harder when you are not quite sure what to expect. I think as we have gone through the process one of the big gains of the process from my point of view is that we have learned to live and work with each other. In that sense it is much quicker, just the physical fact of the production of the joint statement was much easier. I think that is when we say that the atmosphere of the relationship has changed and is very different from what it was in 2003 say, I think that is one of the advantages. What we would like to see is that happening across a range of sectors. The more contacts we can develop the more we can learn about each other, the more comfortable we can be with each other as societies, as economies. That is something we would like the whole process to result in. But which is the hard part? Actually it is getting easier. I hope the Pakistanis can say the same.

QUESTION: Going back to the anti-terrorism mechanism, even if you cannot specify the mechanism with Pakistan, can you give us an idea as to what kind of mechanism we have with other countries?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: KC is the expert. Let him tell you.

ADDITIONAL SECRETARY: (International Organizations), SHRI K.C. SINGH: We have got 23 Joint Working Groups on counter terrorism with 23 countries and two regional organizations - one is with EU and the other one is with BIMSTEC. BIMSTEC is the Bay of Bengal group of countries which has Bangladesh, India, Myanmar, Sri Lanka and Thailand. We try holding meetings at least once a year. With some of them even there is a need being felt to hold it more often.

Generally the format that we follow is we exchange views on our assessment of the region in which we are and the country gives us their assessment, and see how we can do some capacity-building and how we can do institutional link ups between agencies which can exchange information and set up contacts. So, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs creates the getting together of the different institutions and they put them in touch with each other because we do not want to be the nodal point for everything. Once you create the links, then it becomes easier because they talk to each other.

QUESTION: So, the model is more or less the same with the Joint Working Groups that you have with other countries. Then, would you be following the same model with Pakistan?

Does that include the intelligence sharing?

SHRI K.C. SINGH: We do that with various countries, yes. But the levels will vary, of course, based on the level of comfort with each country.

I am only describing what we have. What we have in mind for Pakistan, FS Designate will tell.

QUESTION: After a lot of painstaking effort we do come up with some joint statement and then the result is dialogue. But some major incident or something like that derails the process. What guarantee can there be that this process can itself be insulated?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: We are trying through this to prevent major incidents. As you know, terrorism makes it very difficult for us, especially events like Mumbai and so on would make it very difficult for us, because public opinion in India finds it very hard to understand how we can carry on with the dialogue process if terrorist incidents in India have links into Pakistan. So, what we are trying by doing all this, by setting up this institutional mechanism, by talking to Pakistan, by working together, by our own national measures, is to prevent such incidents. And our goal remains to eliminate terrorism. How much success we will have, we have to see. But there cannot be any guarantees in this. I do not think anybody can guarantee the future in these things. But what we can do is we will make our best effort to try and ensure that the hypothetical eventuality that you have mentioned does not happen.

QUESTION: I have two questions please - the first about Pakistan and the next about Cuba. ... (Inaudible)...the idea of trust deficit. Has that been surmounted? Is there a feeling that there is sincere and earnest interest on behalf of the Pakistani President?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I think we are working at eliminating the trust deficit. That would be the best way to put it. But we have been working at it for sometime and we intend to keep working at it.

QUESTION: The Indian Prime Minister would be meeting Fidel Castro and conveying Indian Government's position on what is happening in Cuba in terms of the transition, ... (Inaudible)...

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I think right now he is meeting with the acting President. I really have nothing for you on that yet. I think what we do is, we will probably brief you on Cuba, on all the questions that you have mentioned altogether, after that.

QUESTION: The Joint Press Statement talks about a peaceful negotiated settlement on all issues between India and Pakistan. The statement could have stopped there, but it goes on to say, 'including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir'. Was it necessary, diplomatically speaking?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I think it is something we have said since July 1972. It is one of those India-Pakistan mantras. But we also mean it. Ultimately, if you want to have good neighbourly relations, you have to address all the issues between you, and that includes Jammu and Kashmir. It is nothing new. It is something we have accepted and we have been trying to do for many years.

QUESTION: You can see that this agreement about terror mechanism is very difficult to digest. Do you think it would be difficult to sell in India? Do you foresee any resistance, any opposition, and any allegation of a sell out?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I did not hear anybody saying it is difficult to digest. I heard people asking what it is, what does it mean, is it new, etc. These are legitimate questions. I think naturally everybody in India would be interested to know for the simple reason that, as I said, terrorist incidents make it very difficult to continue business as usual especially if they are linked into Pakistan. I think that is a legitimate interest. But I do not think it is difficult to digest. In fact we are offering here, we think we have found out, one more way of trying to deal with this problem.

QUESTION: Do you see ISI and RAW working together as a result of this?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I keep saying I do not want to prejudge the future. Here, it has not even met. We have just set it a job. I am not going to say what it will result in. I cannot say it today. I know what we wanted to do and that we have spelt out quite clearly.

QUESTION: At least tell us whose idea it was.

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: It is now both our ideas. But now it belongs to both of us. It is in a Joint Press Statement. Do not forget that it is ‘joint’.

QUESTION: Could you tell us whether the question of nuclear security between the two countries came up during the talks?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: It did not.

QUESTION: It is our old experience that every time in Washington or in the General Assembly in New York, General Musharraf makes promises on Terrorism; the same thing is repeated as you said. By token of the same experience can one not say that later they get free or buy more weapons from them. Are we not learning from the old experience? We give him a chance and clear him saying that he is also against terrorism, and he is in the same boat as we are.

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: As I said, we are trying to see whether certain forms of terrorism can be dealt with through this mechanism. That is what we are trying to do. We are not here in this, trying to allocate blame, responsibility, prejudge. Not at all! What we are seeing is, ‘Can we do something about it or not?’ And I think that is our responsibility.

I do not think any responsible Government of India can say, ‘Nahinjee. Nothing we can do here. Forget it.’ We have to try our best and find every possible way of dealing with terrorism. It is a terrible thing the way it affects our people. And that is what we are trying. I am not saying, ‘Oh! This is going to do this. It is going to achieve that. It is going change the world’. No. But if we can cut down terrorism in India in any small way, it is worth it. It is an achievement. And I think every Indian will say so.

QUESTION: Will it help him?
FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I am an Indian, I am interested in cutting down on terrorism in India. That is the goal. If we can do that, it is worth it. I do not see how anybody can quarrel with that. That is the goal of this. That is why we have tried something new here.

QUESTION: How often this interaction meeting will be there?

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: We have not done all that kind of modalities. We have not done that yet.

We have not done schedule of meetings, when they will be meeting, all that we have not done.

QUESTION: Can Siachen and Sir Creek be resolved this year? The language seems very kind of forward-looking in the sense that it seems you have set the specific date November for Sir Creek...

FOREIGN SECRETARY DESIGNATE: I think we have said for some time that we think it is doable. I think you would remember last year a/so Prime Minister said that these are ‘doable’. We will certainly try our best to see whether we can do it. But I do not want to set a date. I do not want to say by this year, by November, by December, by January, because that I think actually complicates the process of finding a settlement and finding a solution.

(Text in italics is translated from Hindi)

◆◆◆◆◆
1641. Response of Official Spokesperson to questions regarding press reports and statements on the scope of the proposed India-Pakistan anti-terrorism institutional mechanism.

New Delhi, September 27, 2006.

The anti-terrorism institutional mechanism\textsuperscript{1} agreed to between India and Pakistan in Havana is clearly mandated by the September 16 Joint Statement to identify and implement counter-terrorism initiatives and investigations. There is no doubt in our minds as to what constitutes terrorism and it is clear that the group is mandated to address all forms of terrorism.

\begin{itemize}
\item \end{itemize}

\textsuperscript{1} On July 24 speaking in Nanital the Prime Minister defending the proposed anti-terrorism mechanism with Pakistan said its objective was to "test" how Islamabad would fulfil its responsibility towards fighting terrorism. He maintained there was no change in government's policy in regard to terrorism. New Delhi had maintained that for the dialogue to move forward, Pakistan must ensure that its soil was not being used to spread terrorism in India. Responding to questions over the charge by former Prime Minister on the joint mechanism Dr. Singh said: "Nukta Chini (criticism) was not right and our approach against terrorism has not changed." He said "misapprehensions" being spread in various quarters over the proposal were "baseless". He admitted to a "trust deficit" in relations with Pakistan but said things cannot stand still. The Foreign Secretary Shivshankar Menon after taking over as Foreign Secretary on October 1 said that India would use the anti-terrorism mechanism about which there was an agreement to seek Pakistani action on the evidence unearthed by the Police that the ISI Directorate was allegedly responsible for the July 11 serial train blasts in Mumbai. "We will take the issue up with Pakistan in view of the new evidence", Menon said. "We will judge them not by their immediate reaction of verbal statements but by what they actually do about terrorism," he maintained. "It seems to me logical that the mechanism has to deal with this kind of evidence", the new Foreign Secretary asserted.
Joint Press Statement issued at the end of India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary Level Talks.

New Delhi, November 15, 2006.

1. The Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met in New Delhi on November 14-15, 2006. Shri Shivshankar Menon, Foreign Secretary of India led the Indian delegation while the Pakistan delegation was led by Foreign Secretary Mr. Riaz Mohammad Khan. They reviewed the progress in the third round of the Composite Dialogue encompassing talks on Peace and Security including CBMs; Jammu and Kashmir; Siachen; Wullar Barrage/Tulbal Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Terrorism and Drug Trafficking; Economic and Commercial Cooperation and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields. The talks were held in a friendly and positive atmosphere.

2. They exchanged views on the issue of Jammu and Kashmir in the spirit of the Havana Joint Press Statement to hold purposeful discussions and to build on convergences and narrow down divergences. They agreed to fully implement measures to enhance interaction and cooperation across the LoC including the early operationalisation of truck service for trade on agreed items.

3. In pursuance of the Havana Joint Press Statement, they discussed terrorism and the need to effectively deal with it. They agreed to set up a 3-member anti-terror mechanism to be headed by Additional Secretary (International Organizations) from the Ministry of External Affairs of India and the Additional Secretary (UN&EC) from Pakistan’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Its mandate would be to consider counter terrorism measures, including through the regular and timely sharing of information.

4. The two Foreign Secretaries exchanged views on Siachen.

5. Both sides also agreed to hold a meeting of experts on 22-23 December 2006 to decide on the coordinates for joint survey of Sir Creek and adjoining areas, without prejudice to each other’s position, as well as to simultaneously conduct discussions on the Maritime Boundary. The joint survey shall be completed by February 2007.

6. The agreement on “Reducing the Risk from Accidents relating to Nuclear Weapons” was initialed by the two sides. They agreed on its early signing. They expressed satisfaction over the implementation of the “Agreement on Pre-Notification of the Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles”.

7. They welcomed the inauguration on November 14 of the hotline between the Pakistan Maritime Agency and the Indian Coast Guard.
8. On humanitarian grounds, all fishermen and prisoners of the other country, whose national status stands confirmed and who have completed their sentences, would be released by 25th December, 2006.

9. They reviewed the progress made towards the revision of the 1982 Protocol on Consular Access and expressed the hope that the Protocol will result in expeditious disposal of consular issues related to prisoners and fishermen of both sides. They also agreed to examine the release of prisoners of the other country who are detained on minor charges.

10. They also agreed to promote friendly exchanges between the two countries. They agreed on the need for an early finalization of an updated visa agreement between the two countries. In addition, it was agreed to expand the list of shrines under the 1974 Bilateral Protocol on Visits to Religious Shrines.

11. The Foreign Secretaries reiterated the importance of enhancing mutually beneficial economic cooperation.

12. Both sides reiterated their keenness to see their respective Consulates General in Mumbai and Karachi reopened quickly.

14. The Foreign Secretaries agreed to meet in February 2007 in Islamabad to launch the next round of the Composite Dialogue.

15. The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan called on the External Affairs Minister, Shri Pranab Mukherjee during the course of his visit.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf has for the first time said that Pakistan is prepared to give up its claim on Kashmir, if India accepts a four-point proposal for resolving the dispute. This is being seen as a possible major breakthrough on the Kashmir problem. Speaking to NDTV's Prannoy Roy, General Musharraf said Pakistan is also ready to give up its old demand for a plebiscite in Kashmir and will also forget all the UN resolutions under the four-point solution.

Dr Prannoy Roy: This is not your solution. It’s just an interim position and then from there the direct solution will come. Is this the final solution or is this the interim negotiating position?

General Musharraf: My view is that it is easier said than done. I mean it’s not as simple as put in across four stages or four aspects of it. This could be left for trial for five years, 10 years, 15 years and then we can get together again to see its efficacy, if it is functional, well. If there are some modifications required again.

Dr Prannoy Roy: Finally in this solution, Pakistan is giving up its claim to Kashmir? You are letting them self govern and you have no claim on Kashmir in this picture.

General Musharraf: We are at the moment, both India and Pakistan, on the same position as we were since 1948.

But we both, I am saying, we both ought to be prepared to give up all that we have been saying. And this includes all this. If we reach an agreement where we are giving self-governance, yes indeed, that is it.

Dr Prannoy Roy: So you are prepared to give up your claim to Kashmir?

General Musharraf: We will have to, yes, if this solution comes up.

Demand for Plebiscite

President Musharraf also makes it clear that if the four-point solution is agreed upon, Pakistan will give up on the UN resolutions and its long-standing demand for a plebiscite.

Pakistan giving up its claim on Kashmir would be a historic turnaround and is based on the four-point solution for Kashmir.

India has refused to re-draw the boundaries of Kashmir or give away any territory, while Pakistan refused to accept the Line of Control as the international border.

Under the four point solution, these two basic conditions are not changed.

The solution says:

- Kashmir will have the same borders but people will be allowed to move freely back and forth in the region
- The region will have self-governance or autonomy, but not independence
- Troops will be withdrawn from the region in a staggered manner
- A joint supervision mechanism will be set up, with India, Pakistan and Kashmir represented

Dr Prannoy Roy: One thing in your solution. I will just be very clear so that the people of India can know this clearly. You are being, in a way, extremely bold, because it means that you are giving up plebiscite and giving up the UN resolution?

General Musharraf: Again there is little bit of, one is giving up that clearly and I say, yes I am giving up. There is a provision in that, I am not giving up at all. But one is prepared to give up, in case India leaves its stated position also.

Dr Prannoy Roy: Right. If this formula is agreed to you, you will give that up, basically.

General Musharraf: Both sides, listen, I believe when you are negotiating and you go for peace, it means what? It means compromise. Otherwise you can’t have and you can’t go for a solution of a problem.

What do you mean by compromise? Compromise can never take place if you don’t step back. Compromise inherently means stepping back by both sides. So inherently, both sides have to give up their positions and step back. If one of us is not prepared to step back, we will not reach a solution.

Dr Prannoy Roy: If India does accepts this, you will step back and give up those demands.

General Musharraf: Yes, we will have to.

Independence for Kashmir

The Pakistani President also made it clear that once Pakistan gives up its claim to Kashmir, the four-point solution is not a negotiating step towards getting independence for Kashmir.
He added categorically that self-governance or autonomy is not the first step to Kashmir’s independence.

Dr Prannoy Roy: When you talk about self governance of Kashmir, we won’t go into the details that we will leave the bureaucrats and...

General Musharraf: Yes, legal side legal...

Dr Prannoy Roy: Are you then saying, no independence for Kashmir?

General Musharraf: Yes, we are against independence.

Dr Prannoy Roy: You are against independence?

General Musharraf: Absolutely, and so is India.

◆◆◆◆◆

---

1644. Joint Press Interaction of External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee with Foreign Minister of Pakistan Khurshid Mahmood Kasuri during his visit to Islamabad.

Islamabad, January 14, 2007.

Mr. Khurshid Mahmood Kasuri: It gives me great pleasure to welcome the Indian Foreign Minister Pranab Mukherjee and giving me an opportunity to reciprocate the hospitality that he showed to me and my wife during my private visit to Delhi. Today, we had a long and productive session; first we had a one to one; then we had informal delegation level discussion and a short formal session in which the Excellency handed over to me an invitation.

It is great pleasure to receive Mr. Pranab Mukherjee in Pakistan. We had useful exchange of views in cordial and constructive atmosphere. H.E Mr. Pranab Mukherjee’s visit has provided a good opportunity to review the status of our bilateral relations. It is matter of satisfaction to note the overall improvement in relations between the two countries. Mr. Pranab Mukherjee called on the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan. He also delivered letters to the Prime Minister and myself to attended the 14th SAARC Summit to be held in New Delhi. We reviewed the progress on all issues on the agenda of composite dialogue framework. We also took certain decisions. I would request H.E Mr. Pranab Mukherjee to read out these decisions for you.

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: I would like to express my gratitude for extending very warm hospitality to me and to the members of my delegation. I would also like to apologize to all of you ladies and gentlemen for keeping you waiting for quite some time but this speaks that we had engaged in discussions. I had the privilege of calling on the President and the Prime Minister. I handed over the letter of our Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh to Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz, inviting him to attend the 14th SAARC Summit scheduled to be held in Delhi on 3rd and 4th April. I also had the opportunity of handing over invitation to H.E Foreign Minister Kasuri to attend the SAARC Council of Ministers meeting as it will be 14th SAARC Summit meeting and it would be 28th SAARC Council of Ministers meeting scheduled to be held one day before the Summit begins. We had a very fruitful and useful discussion. It was held in the most cordial atmosphere. We exchanged our views freely and frankly. As I have told you of having the privilege of calling on the President and the Prime Minister. Both of them received me very warmly. Since my arrival in Islamabad, though it is my first visit, I never had the feeling that I was outside of my atmosphere or place, the hospitality is such. As he mentioned that we had the privilege of reviewing the Composite Dialogue. The review took place in Delhi last year when the two Foreign Secretaries met in last November. We also had detailed review and after detailed discussion on certain issues, we have come to certain decisions which I am reading for you:

• I have invited the Foreign Minister to come to Delhi in connection with the meeting of Joint Commission which will be held in New Delhi in February 2007. Foreign Minister has kindly accepted my invitation. This is not related to SAARC.

• We agreed to establish a committee on prisoners comprising retired judges of the superior judiciary to visit jails in the two countries and propose steps to ensure humane treatment and expedite release of prisoners who have complete their prison terms.

• We have agreed to expedite the Liberalization of the Visa Regime and agreed to complete the work in February 2007.

• Several agreements which are near or close to finalization will be concluded during the February visit of Foreign Minister Kasuri. These will include:a) The Agreement on Reducing the Risk from Accidents relating to Nuclear Weapons etc., b) Speedy return of inadvertent Line Crossers, c) Prevention of incidents at Sea.

• On Siachen, we discussed the issue and decided that the officials will meet at an early date to address the issue.

• We agreed to facilitate movement of diplomats to Noida and Gurgaun in India and Taxila and Hasan Abdal in Pakistan. Procedures for this will be worked out.
• We agreed that the first meeting of the Joint Anti-terrorism Mechanism takes place before end of March 2007.

• Regarding Sir Creek, the officials concerned will be directed to expedite their work. The joint survey of Sir Creek will begin on 15th January 2007.

• We have decided to launch the Fourth Round of Composite Dialogue (and that) would be held on 13-14 March, 2007.

Once again, I take this opportunity for thanking Kasuri for extending hospitality to me and the members of delegation.

Question: Will India fulfill its commitment in handing over Jinnah House to Pakistan? How close you are after today’s discussion on an agreement on Siachen?

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: I am fully aware of the sentiments of the people of Pakistan in regard to Jinnah House. I respect the sentiments. We are fully aware of the issue and we will resolve the issue as expeditiously as possible.

In response to your second question, we have discussed this issue several times, discussions have taken place. It would be difficult for me to give you the exact time frame but we have decided to instruct the official concerned to expedite the process.

Question: There is a general perception that if there is forward movement on Joint Mechanism on Terror, this will facilitate Premier Manmohan Singh to visit your country? How optimist are you? If there is no support of the people, it becomes difficult to take it forward.

Mr. Khurshid Kasuri: I disagree with you. If the people did not support the peace process, it would have finished long ago. If there have been bomb blasts in India and Pakistan, accusing fingers have been pointed at each other. My own impression is that there is a strong support for the peace process notwithstanding the reservation the people in both countries have regarding each other. And that is the reason why we are going to launch the Fourth round of Pak-India composite dialogue. Regarding the anti-terror mechanism, this is in the interest of both the countries; Pakistan and India have suffered at the hands of terrorists. India has been voicing its concerns regarding certain people. We have also been voicing our concerns regarding certain regions and the people. We do not wish to queer the pitch or the atmosphere by going into the details. It is to say, we recognize India’s sensitivities and hopefully India recognizes our sensitivities. If we are not serious, the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India would not have agreed to the creation of Joint anti-terror mechanism in Havana. And if we were not serious, we would not have fixed the date for first meeting of anti-terror mechanism meeting.

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: I will start from what my friend H.E. Foreign Minister has said that the very establishment of anti-terror mechanism is the outcome of the joint statement issued by Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh and the President Musharraf at Havana. Thereafter at the Foreign Secretary level meeting in Delhi in November, the actual composition and the institution was worked out. Now we have decided and giving them a date by which they have to meet. Surely, when they will meet, they will work out the mechanism and we have decided to make this experiment fruitful so that this become an effective instrument to combat terrorism. Terrorism is friend of nobody and it is the biggest menace in the post-Cold War era and most of the countries recognize that it requires strong determination to combat terrorism and concerted efforts of the international community as a whole. Prime Minister has accepted the invitation and a suitable date will be fixed mutually through the diplomatic channels.

Question: Prime Minister desired friendship with Pakistan. Do you think without solution of Kashmir, there can be lasting friendship between the two countries?

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: To have enduring peace and friendship between Pakistan and India is absolutely necessary. Of course, there are issues which ought to be resolved. And serious efforts are to be made to resolve these issues. The composite dialogue is leading towards resolving the issues. I do not think these two ideas are contradictory to each other rather they are complementary to each other. Problem resolution and institutional arrangements of ensuring peace are the two sides of the same coin and we are trying to attempt that.

---

1. On January 14 External Affairs Minister met some leaders of Pakistan for an informal breakfast meeting where he told them that the borders were not up for negotiations. But India was prepared to discuss all ideas towards the resolution of the Kashmir issue. He said India and Pakistan must learn from Europe that had set aside differences to forge a successful economic union. The Pakistani leaders expressed support for the peace process but wanted speedier progress on the resolution of the Kashmir dispute.

Mr. Mukherjee’s response was that if Europe could have put the bitterness of war behind for economic and trade cooperation in the European Union, he was hopeful that India and Pakistan would also resolve their differences for an enduring peace. He emphasized that India was in favour of a step-by-step approach to the resolution of the longstanding issues including Kashmir. EAM also gave the example of cooperation between the two countries in the aftermath of the 2005 earthquake and said that such cooperation should become routine. Responding to the question on the Musharraf proposals on Kashmir Mr. Mukherjee reiterated Prime Minister Mannmohan Singh’s statement that India was ready to consider all ideas but there would be no change in the borders. Those present at the meeting were: President of the ruling Muslim League (Qua) Chaudhary Shujaat Hussain, Leader of the Opposition and head of the Jamaat-e-Ulema Islami Maulana Fazur Rehman, Parliamentary leader of the Pakistan People’s Party Makhudum Amin Fahim, President of the Awani National Party Asfandyar Wali Khan, and deputy convener of the Muttahida Qaumi Movement Farooq Sattar.
Question: Time frame for Kashmir problem…. Musharraf proposals….?

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: You have answered your own questions when you referred that problem is existing for the last 60 years. In these 60 years, several attempts have been made starting from Simla agreement in 1972 to latest Havana declaration by the statesmen of the two countries. Unfortunately, we have not been able to resolve this issue. It is difficult to give a time frame because talks are going on. In respect of the proposals of President Musharraf, you have read the response given by the Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh that all these issues should be discussed and we are ready to consider each and every idea to find a solution.

Mr. Khurshid Kasuri: In addition to what H.E. has said, we have never in the past 60 years, have such a sustained discussion on Jammu and Kashmir as we have this time. And it is no secret that it is being discussed at various levels. The very fact that the Prime Minister of India made those positive statements should be a reflection the way this matter is progressing.

Question: Musharraf said there should be joint control. What is India’s reaction?

Mr Kasuri, can you give us more details about your discussion on Siachen?

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: So far my response to first question is concerned; I have already mentioned that the Prime Minister has given his views in Amritsar. Any idea of resolving the issues could be considered, examined and an attempt to be made to find a solution.

Mr. Khurshid Kasuri: On Siachen, let me say here although I was accused by media both in India and Pakistan of being overly enthusiastic, I will repeat what I have said there. Given the political will, it can be resolved in days. Lot of work has been done. H.E. Mukherjee and I are aware what work has been done. Today, we had a discussion and we agreed that the officials meet early. Some things are there I cannot go into details publicly. I told him that if the intention was to find where the troops were, we could find means and ways to meet India’s concerns. But we have to go and let the officials meet. Their meeting is necessary for a comprehensive plan (that) Foreign Secretary of Pakistan handed over to India during his last visit. That is a package. It does meet the concerns of the two sides. Package in our opinion takes into consideration the concerns of the two sides. Today, we reviewed that. If India’s concerns are where the troops are, means and ways can be found.

Question: ISI sponsoring the insurgency…?

Mr. Pranab Mukherjee: It is the responsibility of any government to take appropriate steps to prevent insurgency and the government of India is doing the same. So far the involvement of certain agencies are concerned, we are aware of it and we have brought it to the notice of appropriate authorities.
Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the blasts in Delhi-Attari Express train.

New Delhi, February 19, 2007.

Official Spokesperson: Good afternoon everybody. We have a statement, some of which has already been conveyed to you earlier on during the day, but to put it all together...

“Government of India strongly condemns the blasts in Train No. 4001 Delhi-Attari Express (link train of Samjhauta Express) at around midnight of 18-19 February 2007. Two of the 16 coaches caught fire. At least 64 people were killed in the fire and several others injured. The cause of the fire is being investigated. Our immediate priority is to deal with the humanitarian consequences of the tragedy. The injured have been taken to hospitals in Panipat and in Delhi. The dead include a number of Pakistanis, many of them burnt beyond recognition. They are being identified with the help of the Pakistani authorities. A team of officials from Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi is on its way, and possibly already there now in Panipat.

The passport numbers of the passengers in the unreserved coaches affected by the explosions have been sent to Pakistani authorities for assistance in identification of the dead. Visas will be issued to relatives of the dead and injured by the High Commission of India in Islamabad, which will set up a visa camp in Lahore for this purpose. We will also arrange for their travel from Attari/Wagah to Panipat and to Delhi. Two officials from Pakistan Railways are also expected to come to Attari to assist the passengers who have by now reached Attari.

We convey our heartfelt condolences to the victims of this gruesome tragedy. Government will make every effort to bring to justice the perpetrators of this heinous act.”

As you can see this is a developing situation and we may have updates later, which we will keep giving you. I am not really in a position to take too many questions after what I have said.

Question: Are you seeing it as a terrorist attack? Are you calling it a terrorist attack?

Official Spokesperson: Well there has been an explosion and it has resulted in a gruesome tragedy. I think you do not need any more classifications.

Question: How many of them are Pakistani nationals?
Official Spokesperson: Unfortunately, we do not have that break up. It is very difficult to ascertain, the entire process is being carried out in cooperation with Pakistani authorities. We have supplied the passport numbers of the passengers who were in the affected bogies. There are attempts to try and identify the bodies.

Question: Were both bogies unreserved?

Official Spokesperson: So I understand, but I am subject to correction. You might like to also check with Railway authorities.

Question: Has there been any change in schedule as far as Mr. Kasuri’s visit is concerned?

Official Spokesperson: Well for that we are putting up a separate press release. I can tell you that the visit takes place from 20 to 23 February 2007 for the fifth meeting of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission which will be held on the 21st February 2007. As far as the Joint Commission is concerned, six of the eight technical-level Joint Working Groups have already met on 2006. The remaining two, Education and Information, will meet on 20 February 2007. An Agreement on “Reducing the Risk from Accidents relating to Nuclear Weapons” will also be signed between the two countries on 21 February 2007.

Question: Have there been any contacts with the Pakistani authorities? Has Mr. Menon spoken to his counterpart?

Official Spokesperson: I am not aware of any such contact. I do know that at the operational level, Pakistani High Commission officials were facilitated in travelling to Panipat.

Question: How many of them travelled?

Official Spokesperson: Four, I understand, from your own channels.

Question: Mr. Sarna, the Pakistani Foreign Office spokesperson Tasnim Aslam has said that it was up to Indian authorities to provide security on this train to their passengers. Any response to that?

Official Spokesperson: I do not think this is the time for searching for headlines and I am not even sure as to whether your quotation is quite correct. It is a tremendous humanitarian tragedy. Let us keep our eye on that, let us try and bring succour to those who are injured and to the kin of those who are dead.

Thank you.
Press Release of the Ministry of External Affairs on the phone call received by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh from Pakistani Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz on the bomb blast on the Samjhauta Express train.

New Delhi, February 19, 2007.

The Prime Minister received a phone call from Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz of Pakistan this evening in connection with the bomb blast on the Samjhauta Express late last night soon after it left Delhi. The Prime Minister declared India’s abhorrence for this heinous terrorist act and reaffirmed our commitment to doing everything possible to ensure that its perpetrators are punished. The focus at this time is on the humanitarian aspect; the Prime Minister conveyed his condolences for the Pakistani victims of this tragedy, and indicated the steps taken to provide all possible assistance for the injured and bereaved.

1. While India promised Pakistan full investigations into the incident and even offered to share the findings with Pakistan, the Pakistan National Assembly passed a resolution asking for a joint investigation. External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee on February 21 ruled out a joint investigation. Addressing a joint press conference with Pakistan Foreign Minister Khursheed Mehmood Kasuri, he said, “as per the law of the land, the probe will be conducted by India and the results shared with Pakistan.” Reiterating India’s promise that the Sunday carnage perpetrators would be brought to book, he said the “basic objective” of the anti-terror mechanism, scheduled to meet in Islamabad on March 6, was to both share and act on the information passed on between the two nations. He hoped that meeting would be “meaningful.” Describing the blasts as a “horrendous tragedy,” Mr. Kasuri said the incident underlined the need for cooperation between Islamabad and New Delhi. He confirmed that the results of the Indian probe into the Samjhauta Express attack would be shared with Pakistan on March 6.
Joint Press Interaction by External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan Khurshid Mehmood Kasuri.

New Delhi, February 21, 2007.

External Affairs Minister (Shri Pranab Mukherjee) : Good afternoon. I would like to once again welcome His Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan and his distinguished delegation who are visiting India for the 5th meeting of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission, which concluded a little while ago. As you know, this meeting took place two days after a gruesome tragedy that struck the Delhi-Attari express that links up with the Samjhauta Express. We strongly condemn the blasts in which at least 68 innocent lives were lost and several other persons were injured. We convey our heartfelt condolences to the victims. All efforts are being made to identify the dead bodies and to give succour to the bereaved families. Government of India will make every effort to bring to justice the perpetrators of this heinous act.

The holding of the Joint Commission meeting as scheduled is a reaffirmation of the commitment of both India and Pakistan to the dialogue process. At its 4th meeting in October 2005, the Joint Commission had constituted 8 technical level Joint Working Groups on Agriculture, Health, Science & Technology, Information, Environment, Tourism, Education, and I.T. & Telecommunications. Six of these Working Groups had met in 2006 and the remaining two, on Education and Information, met yesterday. We complimented the leaders of the Working Groups from both sides for their commendable effort in identifying areas of cooperation. Their reports were presented at the Joint Commission and discussed. A summary of the deliberations of the Working Groups is being circulated separately. I am confident that the Joint Commission’s deliberations will lead to greater bilateral cooperation and provide a structural basis for improving the relations between our two countries.

In addition to discussions under the Joint Commission, you have also witnessed the signing this morning of the Agreement between India and Pakistan on “Reducing the Risk from Accidents Relating to Nuclear Weapons”.

In my meeting with the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, we also reviewed the progress in our bilateral relations since we last met in Islamabad on 13 January 2007. We are happy to note that the joint survey of Sir Creek is progressing smoothly and that the Thar Express resumed service on 17 February. We hope that the meeting of the Joint Anti-Terror Mechanism in Islamabad on 6 March will be meaningful and the fourth round of the Composite Dialogue to be launched by the Foreign Secretaries in Islamabad on 13-14 March will promote bilateral relations further.
Today, I have also handed over to my distinguished guest, the Pakistan Foreign Minister, a list of the relatives of Indian Prisoners of War who would like to visit Pakistan in April 2007. You would recall that Pakistan had agreed to receive them during my visit to Islamabad last month.

May I now invite my distinguished guest, Foreign Minister Kasuri, to make a brief statement after which we can take a few questions. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan (Shri Khurshid Mehmood Kausri):

Thank you, Excellency.

First of all, I would like to thank my colleague His Excellency the External Affairs Minister and also the Government of India for the hospitality that my delegation and I have received since our arrival here. Unfortunately, our arrival and the meeting of the Joint Commission were preceded by that horrendous tragedy that struck passengers who were traveling from Delhi to Attari on their way to Lahore. There are no words strong enough to condemn this act of heinous crime. Of course, it has underlined the need for cooperation further more. I have no doubt that the meeting of the antiterror mechanism which is supposed to meet in Islamabad will take cognizance of this. The Prime Minister of India in a telephone call to the Prime Minister of Pakistan had said that he would share the results of the investigations and I am sure that when the anti-terror mechanism meets in Islamabad, this will be a very high item on their agenda. Our hearts go out to those who suffered and the relatives of those who died.

I would like to take this opportunity to place on record our appreciation for the services of the doctors. I personally visited the hospital yesterday and the doctors were really taking very good care of the patients. Unfortunately, one of those people died yesterday and another one is in a very critical condition. I would simply say that the Government of Pakistan has made all the arrangements for the relatives to travel here and the Government of India has promised and is extending support to those who would like to come here to either identify the dead bodies or to meet with those who are injured. The Government of Pakistan has also arranged for those people who have been grievously injured – actually some people have 40 per cent burns on their bodies – and we made arrangements for those who can travel to be taken to Pakistan.

As you know, the purpose of this meeting was to attend this Joint Commission – this is the fifth one. This is another sign of increasing cooperation between Pakistan and India. We examined the possibilities of cooperation in the areas of Education, Information, IT and Telecom, Health, Agriculture, Tourism, Science and Technology, and Environment. I am happy to say that the co-chairs of these various groups were able to identify areas of cooperation. I suggested that for the next meeting of the Commission, these meetings should have taken place much earlier so that when my colleague and I meet we can witness greater progress. Considering the devotion of the co-chairs and other members, I feel that that will be the case.

I did utilize this opportunity to discuss other matters with my distinguished colleague. You remember that when we were in Islamabad we had agreed to various measures. One of those was regarding the conditions of prisoners. We tried to rise above our partisan considerations today purely from the point of view of human right because it really is very important that we address the issue of human rights. Last time, when His Excellency Mr. Pranab Mukherjee was in Islamabad I had suggested, in fact he had agreed, that we would nominate retired judges of supreme judiciary so that they have the capacity and the training to rise above all considerations and only think in humanitarian terms. I have handed over the names of four judges from Pakistan to my distinguished colleague today, who also has some names in his mind. In fact he was telling me that it is only a matter of a few days, he has been working on it the way I was working on this.

Once this is done by both the sides, I think, that will be one major step by Pakistan and India to think at a higher level. Regardless of whether the prisoner is a Pakistani or an Indian, in the first instance he is a human being. There are certain norms to which all human beings are entitled and I think the bringing in of the judges of the higher judiciary in both Pakistan and India will definitely provide relief to prisoners, whether they are undertrials, because the judges will be allowed to visit prisons in each other's country or to help facilitate the early release of those who have completed their sentences.

We discussed many other matters when we were alone. The purpose is to further the peace process. Thank you very much for providing me with this opportunity. I look forward to the interaction with you.

Indian Media (Ms. Nidhi Razdan, NDTV): Mr. Kasuri, yesterday the Pakistan National Assembly passed a resolution asking for a joint investigation into this blast on the train. Did you formally request India for a joint investigation today? Mr. Mukherjee, did India share whatever leads our investigators already have with the Pakistani delegation today?

Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan: As I have already said in my opening remarks, the Prime Minister of India spoke to the Prime Minister of Pakistan and assured him that the results of the investigation will be shared. The Joint Mechanism is meeting in Islamabad on 6th March and I have no doubt that they will take cognizance of this. I think I would rest my case and let my colleague answer the rest of the question.
External Affairs Minister: In fact, as per the law of the land the investigation is to be carried on by India. We will carry on the investigations and, as I have mentioned in my introductory remarks, the perpetrators of this heinous crime will be brought to book. But we have established the Joint Mechanism to deal with terrorism, which is meeting on 6th of March. One of the basic objectives of establishing this institutional mechanism is to share information and to act on that information. Therefore, it is appropriate that by that time whatever information will be available in respect of this case will be shared with the Pakistani authorities as we have shared with them in respect of certain other cases too.

Pakistani Media (Mr. Liaquat Ali, APP): My question is addressed to the Indian Foreign Minister. As Indian Prime Minister has on many occasions expressed a desire to make Siachen region as a mountain of peace, Pakistan

1. The Pakistan Foreign Office issued the following press release on the statement of Mr. Kasuri:

"The Foreign Minister thanked the Minister for External Affairs for the warm hospitality given to his delegation during their visit to India. He also reciprocated the External Affairs Minister’s comments on the Samjhauta Express blast calling it a heinous crime in which both Pakistanis and Indians were victims. The Foreign Minister stated that the Samjhauta Express terrorist attack would be on the agenda of the Joint Anti-Terror Meeting scheduled to be held in Islamabad on 6 March. The Foreign Minister appreciated the assistance provided by the Indian Government in facilitating the relatives of the victims of the terrorist attacks to visit India in order to identify the bodies as well as to be with the injured. He also placed on record the appreciation of the Government of Pakistan for the services provided by the doctors in the Indian hospitals where Pakistani victims were being treated for extensive burns and injuries. Referring to the Fifth Joint Commission meeting, the Foreign Minister stated that it was evident of the increasing cooperation between Pakistan and India. He said the co-chairs of the eight sub-Groups of the Joint Commission were able to identify areas of cooperation in the fields of agriculture, environment, education, health, information technology, information, science and technology, and tourism. The Foreign Minister pointed out that the subsequent meetings of the sub-Groups should take place well before the next Joint Commission meeting as back-to-back meetings did not achieve the desired objectives. Referring to the one-to-one meeting that the two Foreign Ministers had, the Foreign Minister said that among other issues, he also discussed the release of prisoners who have completed their sentences. The Foreign Minister pointed out that this was a humanitarian issue and as had been agreed during the visit of External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee to Islamabad, a committee of retired Judges would be set up. The Foreign Minister said that he had handed over names of four Judges to the External Affairs Minister and hoped that India would also reciprocate soon."

The Spokesperson of the Pakistani Foreign Office in her briefing in Islamabad on February 26 when asked whether India was willing to share with Pakistan any information on the Samjhota train tragedy, the Spokesperson said: "We assume that India is conducting investigations. We have been assured by the Indian Prime Minister first in his telephone call to our Prime Minister and subsequently when our Foreign Minister met him in New Delhi that he was determined to go to the bottom of this terrorist attack and that India would share the results of the investigations with Pakistan.

Addressing presspersons on February 21 Mr. Mukherjee confirmed that “various proposals” on resolving the Siachen dispute were received from Pakistan and these were being considered by New Delhi. "We are ready to discuss each and every proposal."
has given so many proposals to Indian Government, the response from Indian Government is still awaited. What are your comments on this?

External Affairs Minister: Various proposals have been received and as Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh responded, all these proposals are being considered and we are ready to discuss each and every proposal. The resumption of dialogue under the Composite Dialogue format is going to start the fourth round of discussion. The process has begun with the Foreign Secretaries level talks last November. Therefore, the various suggestions which are coming will be considered.

Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan: Excuse me, there is one decision we had taken last time. I would just like to say that on this issue we have both agreed that DGMOs would meet. This decision was announced in Islamabad. We have suggested certain dates and I spoke to His Excellency about that. As soon as the dates are agreed, we will be very happy for that meeting to take place.

India Media (Mr. Amit Baruah, The Hindu): My question is to both the Ministers.

One of the issues that is being discussed is to have a tourism visa. But given the scale of what has happened on Sunday, what are the steps that are going to be taken by both Governments to protect the lives of innocent passengers who are using cross-border means of transport?

My question to Mr. Kasuri is what is the occasion for the DGMOs to meet on Siachen given that the Composite Dialogue process is on? What will the DGMOs be discussing when they talk on Siachen?

External Affairs Minister: So far as the question of liberalization of visa including the tourist visa is concerned, we had some discussions during my visit to Islamabad and discussions with the Minister. We have received the draft from Pakistan and we are examining it. We want to liberalize the visa and encourage tourism. The Joint Working Group also made certain recommendations.

In respect of discussions between the DGMOs, as you are aware, we had several rounds of discussions – if I remember correctly, nine rounds of discussions - on Siachen. The discussions have taken place both at the civil and military levels. One round of discussion took place at the military level. It was suggested that our officials will be meeting, and officials include both civil and military, and it was suggested that a meeting will take place between the DGMO of India and at the appropriate level of Pakistan Armed Forces. Dates will be sorted out later.

Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan: Let me take the second part first and then I will come to the one on tourists and what we need to do about protecting tourists from each other’s countries.

I did, as I said, utilize the opportunity of discussing all aspects of the Composite Dialogue because it would be a pity if we wasted an opportunity. So, we discussed Kashmir, Siachen, and Sir Creek. I do not think I have to add to what His Excellency has said about DGMOs. I think the question is answered. We had agreed to a date. I spoke to His Excellency and we are waiting for India to respond.

You asked me about steps being taken to protect tourists. I agree with you entirely - the spirit of the question is very positive – that if we wish to promote tourism, we will have to take steps to protect tourists from each other’s countries. I did suggest to my worthy colleague today that since the Railways is being used as a mass means of communication and it is by far the largest means of communication, maybe we need the railway authorities also to interact with each other - Pakistani Railways and Indian Railways - to learn from this experience and prevent a tragedy of this nature occurring in either country. So, I think a meeting of the Railway officials would be useful. But I am sure that when the anti-terror mechanism meets they will also have an opportunity to look at that. In order to sustain this process, we must ensure that the safety of visitors from each other’s countries is to be maximum possible safeguarded.

Pakistani Media (Mr. Shamim Farooq, PTV): My question is to Mr. Pranab Mukherjee. Haryana Police Chief says that Lashkar-e-Tayyiba is involved in the Samjhauta Express blast. Similar accusation was made when Bombay blasts occurred but nothing came out later on. Your comments.

External Affairs Minister: You know that the investigation is in process and it would not be possible to conjecture anything unless the process is complete. That is why I said that when the anti-terror mechanism meets whatever information will be available till then will be shared with Pakistani authorities.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

---

1648. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the first meeting of the India-Pakistan Anti-Terrorism Mechanism.

Islamabad, March 7, 2007.

Official Spokesperson: Good afternoon everyone. You may have seen the Joint Statement that has been issued in Islamabad. I will read it out to you.

“In pursuance of the decision taken during meeting between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India in Havana, Cuba on 16 September, 2006, the first meeting of the Anti-Terrorism Mechanism was held in Islamabad on 6th March, 2007. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Tariq Osman Hyder, Additional Secretary (UN&EC), Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Indian delegation was headed by Mr. K.C. Singh, Additional Secretary (IO), Ministry of External Affairs of India.

The two sides discussed the parameters of the Anti-Terrorism Mechanism and agreed that specific information will be exchanged through the Mechanism for (i) Helping investigations on either side related to terrorist acts and (ii) Prevention of violence and terrorist acts in the two countries.

It was also agreed that while the Anti-Terrorism Mechanism would meet on a quarterly basis, any information which is required to be conveyed on priority basis would be immediately conveyed through the respective Heads of the Mechanism.”

So this is essentially it. The meeting spilled over from the sixth (of March) and carried on for part of the seventh. This is the result.
Question: How do you plan to prevent violence?

Official Spokesperson: The essential idea behind is to exchange information which leads to a mechanism which can jointly end terrorism. So that is the purpose of talking of prevention of violence and terrorist acts in the two countries by tightening the net.

Question: There have been a lot of reports in Pakistani papers that Pakistan has presented evidence on the alleged Indian role in Balochistan and also the operation of Indian Consulates in Afghanistan. Would you like to comment?

Official Spokesperson: Well, I would not like to comment on what has been presented because that we have not seen. We will certainly see what they have presented. I am glad you used the word ‘alleged’ because India has nothing to do with the developments in Balochistan. As far as the Indian Consulates in Afghanistan are concerned, they have nothing to do with the developments in Balochistan. They are working in very close cooperation with the government and people of Afghanistan to help in the reconstruction of Afghanistan and complete the other bilateral work which is wholly and completely supported and appreciated by the people of Afghanistan.

Question: I understand that five or six names of people who have red corner notices against them were handed over to the Pakistani side. Could you elaborate?

Official Spokesperson: I cannot go into details of what has been exchanged. Yes, information has been shared before these talks, evidence has been shared, for instance, during the last Foreign Secretaries meeting, evidence has been shared yesterday on some issues. I cannot go into details. That would not be in keeping with the purpose of this exercise. Ultimately, we will see what happens.

Question: Are you at liberty to talk of any of the evidence that has been presented?

Official Spokesperson: I am not at liberty to talk and I do not think it helps much to talk. Ultimately, this is really about doing. So we will see what is done.

Question: There are PTI reports that the Indian side presented some photographs of the Pakistani suspects involved in some of the blasts. Would you like to comment?

Official Spokesperson: As I said I am not going to get into details based on media reports. I am telling you that evidence was shared.

Question: How cooperative has the Pakistani side been?
Official Spokesperson: This is not a question of characterizing anybody's cooperation or lack of cooperation on the basis of one meeting. This is a meeting between delegations of two countries, both the delegations have done what they had to do, there is an agreed joint statement, now let us see where it goes. As far as we are concerned we will naturally judge the cooperation and efficacy by the results we achieve.

Question: In the recent Attari Express blasts, they (Pakistan) wanted a joint investigation. Any comments?

Official Spokesperson: Well, that question was sufficiently answered by the External Affairs Minister during the joint press interaction with Mr. Kasuri.

Question: Is there any terrorist outfit which is not within the mandate of the joint anti-terrorism mechanism?

Official Spokesperson: I do not see any such exceptions. I think the mandate of the group is very clear as laid out in the joint press statement in Havana.

Question: Is there any territory in India or Pakistan which is outside the mandate…?

Official Spokesperson: You know the mandate is in plain English. It has no exceptions.

Thank you.
Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary Shivshankar Menon at the conclusion of the Foreign Secretary level talks.

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: Thank you very much. Foreign Secretary Riaz Mohammad Khan has narrated points of agreement. I will confine myself to a few general points. Yesterday, I had the privilege of calling on H.E. Shaukat Aziz, the Prime Minister of Pakistan and Foreign Minister Kasuri. In those meeting, I found that there was clear political will on both sides to make all round progress in the composite dialogue and to the process forward towards establishing normal, friendly and good neighbourly relations between our two countries. Both leaders emphasized their commitment to this process. With Foreign Secretary Riaz Mohammad Khan as he mentioned, we had two good rounds of talks; one yesterday and one today. When we reviewed the third round of talks and where it has brought us, we noted the significant improvement brought in our relations by the dialogue process especially in promoting people to people relations qualitatively better than they have been for a very very long time and that the composite dialogue has proven record of success. The dialogue process has seen implementation of a number of confidence building measures, narrowing of the divergences and the improvements in the understanding of each other positions on the issues which divide us.

We regard CBMs as an integral part of the process of resolving issues and differences and this is our intent to try and resolve all issues that divide us including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. When we reviewed the third round of talks and we also decided to launch the fourth round, we discussed also the two subjects on the Foreign Secretary level that we cover; peace and security including CBMs and the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. We agreed that in the fourth round, we anticipate that considerable progress can be made in all these aspects. During the discussion, I reiterated the emphasis for maintaining an atmosphere free from violence and terror to sustain popular support in India for the dialogue process. We both noted the importance of joint anti-terror mechanism which met last week in Islamabad and reiterated the importance of implementation of the commitments in this regard. On J & K, India and Pakistan are engaged in the most sustained and intensive dialogue that they have ever had. We seek the settlement of all outstanding issues including J & K. With Foreign Secretary Riaz Mohammad Khan, I also discussed the implementation of the existing CBMs and new cross LoC CBMs. We raised the Kargil Skardu route for a bus service and Pakistan side agreed to consider it. We now start looking at the logistics and modalities of operationaling this. We also discussed trade across the Loc.
As the Foreign Secretary mentioned, we have proposed dates for different meetings for the fourth round of composite dialogue between April and July 2007 and this include early meetings on Siachen and Sir Creek. There is one point I would like mention on the Samjhauta Express tragedy which many of our Pakistani friends have mentioned to me in the last two days. Today, we shared with the Pakistani side a list of passport numbers of which the holders remain unidentified. As you know, even today 19 of those who perished remain unidentified and we will be working jointly with the Pakistan side to look through the list of passports numbers and identify who are the holders of the passport numbers. We also would like to make it clear that we have kept the DNA sample of the 19 persons victims of the tragedy who remain unidentified and if there are any relatives or any body who is interested in Pakistan who feels he has information and likes to check, we would like them to contact our High Commission in Islamabad. We have already issued visas to the relatives who wish to visit India. That would help us. We have had fruitful and positive discussion over the last two days which I think has set a stage for a successful fourth round of the composite dialogue. I am grateful to Foreign Secretary for his hospitality and kindness as a host. Pakistan’s high reputation of treating guests has been maintained.

Question: Secretary Menon, you have said that Pakistan and India discussed J & K. India has already discarded one of the four points suggested i.e. the joint management. Would you take us into confidence on counter proposal if at all India has suggested to Pakistan on this question. Secondly, any modus operandi were discussed about the anti-terror mechanism?

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: I am surprised. I think the mandate of the mechanism which was laid down clearly by the leaders of both our countries in Havana was very clear. It said they decided to put in place India – Pakistan institutional mechanism to identify and implement counter terrorism initiatives and investigations. The meeting of the joint anti-terror mechanism last week also issued a joint statement which also said that they agreed that specific information will be exchanged through the mechanism for helping investigation on either side relating to terrorist acts and prevention of violence and terrorist acts in the two countries. So I am not quite sure why there is any doubt. This is joint mechanism and terrorism is an enemy for both us all. I hope that we can make this mechanism productive and enable to implement its mandate. There can be nothing more authoritative than our leaders have said. On the larger question that you have raised about discussion on J & K, I do not think this is a place to reiterate all the ideas that are on the table, I think the important things is that we are engaged in intensive dialogue and this is our intention to bring this dialogue to successful conclusion. To get into detail of this proposal of that or this idea or that, I do not think that contribute to that end.

Question: Question to both of you. Could you confirm if India has given any material on violence in Kashmir in the talks last week here in the antiterror meeting? There are reports that both sides are close to some agreement on Kashmir?

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: I think discussion should remain confidential by the nature of what we are trying to do. What we are dealing in here is not which is some thing done in the public. Its mandate is quite clear (antiterror mechanism).

Question: What solution is there on the issue of Siachen. Secondly, when your Minister was here in January, he promised that the issue of Jinnah House will be decided very soon. Has there been any decision on that issue?

1. Before the start off the talks, the Pakistan Foreign Ministry had expected the fourth round of the composite dialogue to make progress on the resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir issue. The Spokesperson of the Pakistan Foreign Ministry had said on 12th March that it was waiting for India’s response to President Pervez Musharraf’s “ideas” on the resolution of the Kashmir issue. “On Jammu and Kashmir, it is important that we now move from confidence-building measures to dispute resolution,” Pakistani spokesperson Tasnim Aslam said. She recalled the statement by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh welcoming Gen. Musharraf’s proposals and saying that they should be discussed with an “open mind.” The spokesperson too expected discussions on Pakistan’s earlier proposal of a “strategic restraint regime” - this included mutual force reduction and freezing of missile programmes by both. Media reports quoted Pakistan Foreign Secretary Riaz Mohammed as describing the year 2007 as a “watershed” year for bilateral relations, and suggesting that there was “a need to seize the opportunity” arising from the quality and scope of talks and the international environment, to move from conflict management to resolution. Media said that Pakistan made several proposals for building confidence. These are Kashmir-specific measures, and include a helicopter service between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad, holding of sports events and a postal service across the Line of Control. Pakistan appears to have shed its earlier reluctance on starting a bus service between Kargil in Kashmir and Skardu. The two sides discussed the possibility of cross-LoC trade. They agreed to implement the Kashmir-related CBMs already decided upon. A truck service across the LoC has been hanging in the balance since April 2006, and the Foreign Secretaries agreed that this should be operationalised soon. It was also decided that the five agreed-upon crossing points on the LoC be opened. Mr. Khan said demilitarization was important for “raising the comfort level of Kashmiris” and that it was Pakistan’s expectation that “this, or something related to it” should be part of any “final shape” whenever that point was reached. Both Foreign Secretaries said there had never been such “focused” and “sustained” discussions on the issue of Kashmir, and that discussions on the issue were taking place at various levels. An issue over which the two sides appeared somewhat at odds was on questions relating to the mandate of the joint antiterror mechanism. Asked about reports that Pakistan did not want acts of violence in Kashmir included in the work of mechanism, Mr. Khan said the mandate of the mechanism, as finalised at its first meeting last week, was “clear.” According to him, the “emphasis” of the mandate was on preventing future acts of terrorism, while including exchange of specific information to help investigations in both countries. “As regards Kashmir, the Kashmir issue is a dispute between the two countries. That’s a separate issue,” he said. Mr. Menon felt the mechanism’s mandate had been “laid down quite clearly by both our leaders” and it was to identify and implement Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: We are looking at a set of ideas for some time - set of ideas some of which we brought to the table, some of the ideas Pakistan brought to the table. And what we would like to do is, to hold a meeting of the defence secretaries and the DGMOs together as early as possible to try and clarify and to see whether we can come to an agreement on Siachen. I think this is an issue which has eluded solution for a very long time. But we are now talking about common set of ideas which we have both brought to the table. But as I said I do not want to say we have accepted they have accepted because ultimately both of us have to agree to a solution. It has to be a our common solution to the problem. We would hold meeting and we have proposed dates and Pakistan side is also keen to hold meeting so let us see. We are hopeful.

We are in the process of locating suitable premises for Pakistan Consulate General in Mumbai. We have located some land on which we think that the Consulate General can be built and which would meet the requirements. Separately, we are looking for housing for them while they build. We have shown some properties but they have not met the needs of the Consulate General. We hope to find the solution to the problem. Jinnah House itself, I think as if now there are other issues related to it. We would like to make use of the House which takes into account the sentiments of all the people of the sub-continent because he was the citizen of sub-continent too. So I think we will find a solution which works for all of us and that is what the Minister meant.

Question: The question for both the Secretaries. There are reports that India has rejected demilitarization. What is your count on that?

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: Demilitarization in generic sense is an idea counter-terrorism initiatives, including the sharing of specific information for investigation and prevention of terrorist acts in both countries. On the Samjhauta incident, India gave Pakistan a list of passport numbers against which tickets were issued for travelling in the two compartments that were bombed, to identify 19 victims of the attack. The practice then, since changed, was to issue tickets for the unreserved compartment against passport numbers but without taking down the names. Mr. Menon put to rest speculation that India was considering handing over the Jinnah House in Mumbai to Pakistan, by saying that its future had to be decided keeping in mind “the sentiments of the people of the entire sub-continent.” “Jinnah was a citizen of the sub-continent, and I think we would like to find a solution that works for all of us,” said Mr. Menon. Before the start of the talks in Islamabad on March 13, at the Pakistan Foreign Ministry, Foreign Secretary Shiv Shankar Menon expressed the hope that the talks would be “constructive,” while his Pakistani counterpart Riaz Muhammed Khan said he was looking forward to “fruitful” talks. He said he perceived a “clear expression of political will, on both sides” to take the process forward and to “move our relationship into a phase where we will truly be able to say that we enjoy good neighbourly relations.” Mr. Menon, later called on Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz and Foreign Minister Khurshid Mahmud Kasuri. Mr. Aziz told Mr. Menon that his Government was “firmly committed” to the process of the composite dialogue, emphasising the need to make it “more meaningful and result-oriented.” Pakistan was keen to settle all disputes with India, including the issue of Kashmir, he said. Mr. Aziz also acknowledged the role of confidence-building measures as “instrumental in improving the ambience and relationship between the two countries.”
which many people feel is a good idea. But from the Government of India point of view, it is the function of the situation on the ground, on the level of threats and violence that exist there. And that is where we as a Government with the responsibility to protect the lives and property of the people, that is angle through which we would approach it.

Question: We keep on receiving complaints of being too slow. Yesterday the meeting was only for three hours and today only for about one hour?

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: (to Foreign Secretary Mr. Riaz Mohammad Khan…would you defend the bureaucracy…) I would only say judge us by the results. Three years ago, nobody would have said that we would stand up and speak about our relationship that has come so far. So I think that rather to defend ourselves against this charge, you should congratulate the bureaucracy for having done this. If the bureaucracy have managed this, this is because we have been given clear leadership. And there is clear political will in the leadership on both sides to break out of the pattern of the past. That is not an easy thing. As we have been locked into a relationship for sixty years with issues we are dealing with here. So for me, it is not question of are you too slow to travel. There will be people no matter what you do, will say (that) you are too slow.

Question: There is a disappointment that the committee of jurists on prisoners have not been operationalized today. Secondly, both of you claim of having sustained dialogue in the history on Kashmir. When you are coming up with a solution.

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: On the prisoners, we have exchanged the... names of the jurists. Pakistan has given us the names of the retired judges and we have done the same. Within next few months, the committee can meet and start doing its work. Because we are determined to solve this problem because it is a humanitarian problem. And we do not think this is a problem we should be carrying on. This is in our interest to solve this problem as quickly as possible. This determination came in our talks. You have noticed that this is the problem we have addressed every time we have met. We have made some progress in terms of releases, improvement of conditions. There is more to be done and thats why we are very keen that the committee should meet quickly. You mentioned the visit to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh visit to Pakistan. He is looking forward to the visit. He has accepted the invitation. We still have to set dates for the visit. From our point of view, we would like very much that it be a productive visit. That have meaningful outcome and move relationship forward. When will we solve the issues that divide us, as soon as possible. That we want and that is what we are trying to do. But I cannot give you the dates. When we have a solution, we will certainly come and tell you.

Question: When are you implementing the verdict of World Bank neutral expert on Baglihar dam?

Foreign Secretary Mr. Menon: We are going ahead with the implementation of the project on the basis of verdict. That is continuing now.

❖❖❖❖❖
Pakistan Foreign Secretary’s remarks at the joint press conference with Indian Foreign Secretary and the decisions taken by the two Foreign Secretaries.

It has been a privilege and pleasure for me to welcome H.E. Shivshanker Menon and his delegation to Islamabad for the start of fourth round of Composite Dialogue between Pakistan and India.

The fourth round of Composite Dialogue is coinciding with the 60th year of the Independence of Pakistan and India. The fact that in the 60th year of independence we are having dialogue to promote peace between each other underscores the need for turning a new page in our relations. 2007 is a critical year and can prove to be a watershed. In the past few years we have taken steps and engaged each other in serious discussion of issues that have divided us that alongwith the change of international environment make it possible that we move from problem and dispute management to resolution of issues. The quality and scope of discussions that we are now having on these problems have strengthened the prospects of success.

It would be a pity if for whatever reason, lack of focus or lack of political will, we are prevented from crossing the hurdle. There is a need to seize the opportunity.

H.E. Shankar Menon and I have two sessions of talks. H.E. Shankar Menon has also met the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister yesterday. The first session was devoted to a review of the third round and peace and security. The second session today focused on Jammu and Kashmir.

On Jammu and Kashmir, as you are aware, discussions are taking place at various levels. At the leadership level, at the Foreign Ministers level, within the composite dialogue and in addition to other channels and interaction among civil society of the two countries. There have been many ideas which have shaped the broad parameters of these discussions.

During this round of composite dialogue while recognising the need to make progress towards a solution to sustain the peace process, the focus has been on the Kashmir related confidence measures. We review in some details the steps that had been taken for interaction across the LoC and how we can facilitate implementation. We have suggested new measures for consideration.

On peace and security we acknowledged the agreements that have been concluded and reviewed progress on suggestions that are under consideration. It is agreed that there should be regular expert level discussions on doctrines for ensuring security in an environment of strategic deterrence that is maintained by the two countries and is a fact of life in South Asia.

We also noted that the first meeting of the anti terrorism mechanism was held in Islamabad and that the mechanism has agreed on the modus operandi and objectives. I had the opportunity to reiterate our request for sharing of findings with us on the Samjhuta Express terrorist incident. Today we have received a list of additional passports numbers that should help us identify victims.

The Indian side has provided us a schedule of the meetings to be held under the fourth round. This includes dates for meetings of Defence Secretaries and DG MOs on Siachen and meeting of hydrographes to complete their survey of Sir Creek and adjoining areas.

We will give confirmation about these dates shortly.

Some of the steps that have been agreed by the two sides include:

Peace and Security
- Expedite negotiations to conclude an Agreement on Prevention of Incidents at Sea.
- To fully observe the ceasefire.
- Conclude and sign an Agreement on Modalities for the Conduct of Quarterly Flag meetings at the Sectors to be agreed upon.
- Conclude and sign a Framework Agreement on Speedy Return of Inadvertent Line Crossers.
- Conclude an agreement on No Development of New Posts and Defence Works along the LOC.
- Proposed draft for new border control guidelines along the International Border.

Nuclear CBMs:
- Hold discussions on security doctrines.

Jammu and Kashmir
- Ensure implementation of the already agreed Jammu and Kashmir related CBMs.
— Ensure operationalization of Truck service.
— Ensure operationalization/rationalization of the five crossing points.

Siachen
— Defence Secretaries of the two countries assisted by respective Directors General (Military Operations) to meet to hold talks.

People to People Contacts — Conclude during the Fourth round bilateral Visa Agreement, Agreement on Consular Access, and revise the Protocol on Visits to Religious Places.
— The Committee on Prisoners composed of four judges from each side to ensure humane treatment and expeditious release of prisoners on both sides.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1651. Press Release of the Prime Minister’s Office on the meeting between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Pakistan Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz.

New Delhi, April 4, 2007.

Pakistan Prime Minister, Mr. Shaukat Aziz called on the Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh, here today. The two leaders discussed a wide range of bilateral issues including trade, energy, banking, air connectivity and other issues.1

1. At the press conference held by EAM on April 4 at the end of the SAARC Summit the journalists asked Mr. Mukerjee about the meeting between PM and Shaukat Aziz:

QUESTION: I want to ask you about the meeting between the Prime Minister and Shaukat Aziz, Prime Minister of Pakistan. Did Mr. Shaukat Aziz say anything about the Kashmir issue? And also, was there any discussion on Siachen issue and what is India’s response to both?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER: In fact, when the two leaders discussed among themselves, they covered a large number of their bilateral relations. Not merely bilateral relations, they shared their perceptions about the regional and international issues also. So far as Kashmir is concerned, as I mentioned to you, we are having regular dialogue within the framework of the Composite Dialogue. This is the institutional arrangement continuing for quite some time. In respect of Siachen, Defence Secretary level talks are going to take place in a couple of days, I think on 6th or 7th of April it will take place and that will be the 11th round of the talks. So, talks are going on.

A Pakistani press release on the meeting said that “India and Pakistan will press ahead with a proposed gas pipeline from Iran”. “They (India and Pakistan) expressed satisfaction Prime Minister Aziz assured Dr. Singh that Pakistan would take early action to return fishing boats seized from Indian fishermen to their owners. The two leaders also agreed to review the status of each other's citizens held prisoners in the two countries. They agreed to increase air connectivity between India and Pakistan. They also agreed to continue the ongoing discussions on the Iran-Pakistan-India gas pipeline. Mr. Aziz said Pakistan is ready to export cement to India taking advantage of the duty reduction announced by the Government. Mr. Aziz also informed the Prime Minister that Pakistan was issuing more visas to Sikh Yatris coming from across the world to visit Sikh shrines in Pakistan.

Prime Minister Aziz thanked Dr. Singh for the financial support given to the families of the victims of the Samjhauta train incident. He complimented Prime Minister Singh for the successful and efficient conduct of the SAARC summit. He also expressed satisfaction at the content of the discussions at the summit.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

over the progress made so far in the technical-level talks among the three sides,” said the press release. The two leaders “agreed on granting permission to their respective banks to open branches and increasing air links between the countries,” the Pakistani release said. They are said to have reviewed the status of the composite dialogue and discussed the issues of Jammu and Kashmir, Siachin, and Sir Creek. The Pakistan Prime Minister underscored the importance of resolving Kashmir for durable peace…”
Press Release issued by Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the meeting between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan

Islamabad, April 4, 2007.

Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz had a 50-minute bilateral meeting with Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh including a 20-minute one on one meeting this morning. The meeting focused on bilateral and regional issues. Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz congratulated the Indian Prime Minister for hosting the SAARC Summit which marks an important milestone in SAARC process for regional cooperation.

The two Prime Ministers discussed the Iran-Pakistan-India Gas pipeline project and reaffirmed their commitment to sincerely and seriously pursue the project for its successful completion. They expressed satisfaction over the progress so far made in the technical level talks between the three sides.

The Prime Minister reviewed with his Indian counterpart the status of the composite dialogue and discussed bilateral issues including Jammu and Kashmir dispute, Siachen and Sir Creek. The forthcoming Defence Secretary level talks are expected to address the Siachen and Sir Creek issues to discuss ways and means to make substantive progress on the two issues. The Pakistan Prime Minister underscored the importance of resolving Kashmir for durable peace and brighter future of South Asia.

The two leaders also discussed trade issues and people to people contacts. They agreed on granting permission to their respective Banks to open branches and increasing air links between the two countries. Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz noted that direct bilateral trade between the two countries had increased. The two Prime Minister also agreed that the issue of prisoners should be addressed with a humanitarian approach. As gesture of good will, Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz agreed to the release of boats of Indian fishermen captured in Pakistani waters.

Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz also raised the Samjhota terrorist incident with his Indian counterpart underscoring Pakistan’s interest in the findings by Indian investigators. Prime Minister Manmohan Singh expressed deep sorrow over the incident and loss of life. He agreed that the Pakistan side would be kept informed and will be provided periodic status report as most of the victims were Pakistani nationals. The Indian Prime Minister reiterated the Government of India’s intention to pay compensation to the victims of the terrorist incident.
The fourth round of Home/Interior Secretary Level Talks between India and Pakistan on Terrorism and Drugs Trafficking, as a part of the continuing Composite Dialogue process between the two countries, was held in New Delhi on July 3, 2007. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Madhukar Gupta, Union Home Secretary while the Pakistan delegation was headed by Syed Kamal Shah, Secretary, Ministry of Interior.

2. Frank and candid discussions were held in a constructive and friendly atmosphere.

3. Both sides strongly condemned all acts of terrorism and underlined the imperative need for effective and sustained measures against terrorist activities.

4. The two sides recognized that terrorists and criminals in either country need to be given swift and effective punishment.

5. Both sides welcomed the release of prisoners and fishermen by each other on the eve of these Talks as a gesture of goodwill and on humane considerations.

6. They also agreed to release by August 14-15, 2007, those prisoners who have been granted consular access, whose national status has been verified and who have completed their prison sentences. To this end, they agreed that immediate steps will be taken by either side to reconcile their numbers to facilitate their early release on completion of necessary formalities.

7. The two sides also agreed to release by August 14-15, 2007 the remaining fishermen in each other’s custody on completion of due process. They further decided to take immediate steps to release the fishing boats, excluding trawlers, in each other’s custody.

8. Both sides agreed that the recently formed Committee on Prisoners, comprising eminent retired judges from the two countries, is a useful instrument to facilitate release and repatriation of prisoners who have served their prison sentences. It was agreed that action would be initiated to hold two meetings, one in India and the other in Pakistan, within a period of 3 months by which time the necessary reconciliation of numbers of prisoners on both sides would have been completed.

9. Separate working groups discussed in detail the drafts of the revised Visa and Consular Access Agreements aimed at liberalizing and making existing provisions more effective. The text of the Agreement on Consular Access has been finalised. Also, they made considerable progress towards early finalisation and signing of the Visa Agreement.

10. Both sides assessed as positive the existing cooperation and information sharing between the Narcotics Control Bureau of India and the Anti Narcotics Force of Pakistan and agreed that both Agencies would enhance mutual cooperation in terms of effective and sustained steps to control drugs trafficking. They also agreed that a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) between the two drug control agencies will be signed at the earliest possible.

11. Both sides appreciated the continuing interaction between the Central Bureau of Investigation of India and the Federal Investigation Agency of Pakistan in the areas of human trafficking, illegal immigration and counterfeit currency, and underlined the need to further intensify it. The nodal points in both Agencies will meet periodically to facilitate early disposal of Interpol related cases.

12. It was agreed to continue the discussions within the framework of the Composite Dialogue.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1654. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Home Affairs on the India - Pakistan talks to combat terrorism.

New Delhi, July 4, 2007

In the Home Secretary Level talks between India and Pakistan on Terrorism and Drug Trafficking, held yesterday, the following main points emerged and the decisions taken :-

(i) India raised its concerns relating to terrorism and fugitives. It was agreed that effective and sustained measures would be taken to combat the menace of terrorism.

(ii) It was agreed that terrorists and criminals in either country would be effectively dealt with.

(iii) It was agreed to enhance the cooperation between CBI and FIA in the areas of human trafficking, illegal immigration and counterfeit currency. The nodal points in both the agencies will meet periodically to facilitate early action on Interpol related cases.

(iv) It was agreed that all fishermen will be released by August 14-15, 2007. It was also agreed that fishing boats in each other’s custody will also be released.
(v) Efforts will be made by both sides to reconcile the number and identities of prisoners in each other’s jails.

(vi) All those prisoners who have completed their sentences will also be released by both sides by August 14-15, 2007.

(vii) A protocol on Consular Access was discussed in detail and was finalized.

(viii) Detailed discussions took place on the draft Visa Agreement. Considerable progress was made in finalizing some of the provisions.

(ix) After detailed discussions, it was agreed that an MoU on Narcotics Control between the two agencies could be signed in the near future.

2. The discussions were held in a candid and cordial atmosphere.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1655. Reaction of the External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee to the bomb blasts in Rawalpindi.

New Delhi, September 4, 2007.

External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee said on September 4: “It is very unfortunate. We have sympathy for the victims,” He was speaking on the sidelines of a conference of Editors from India, Brazil and South Africa in New Delhi.

“During the Home Secretary-level meeting, we suggested to them and we have given some particulars as we normally give to them about those who are indulging in all sorts of activities like insurgency and other terrorist activity,” said the Minister.

“We seek their cooperation.”

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1. The External Affairs Minister was referring to the two suicide bomb attacks on two localities in the high-security zone in the garrison city of Rawalpindi on September 4, killing 27 people and injuring more than 80 others. Most of the people killed or injured in the blasts belonged to defence services, four of them officers, though several civilian passers-by and schoolchildren were among the victims. Authorities described the two blasts as a coordinated move to hit high-profile targets in the military garrison. Military spokesman and Director-General of Inter-Services Public Relations Maj-Gen Waheed Arshad said the attacks were suicide bombings aimed at hitting personnel of the security forces and other people. Later, briefing journalists in Islamabad, interior ministry spokesman Brig (retd) Javed Iqbal Cheema said the authorities had reasons to believe that the latest attacks were the work of the same group that had earlier carried out the attacks in Islamabad and some other parts of the country.
1656. Joint Statement issued on the Second Meeting of India Pakistan Joint Anti Terrorism Mechanism.

New Delhi, October 22, 2007.

In pursuance of the decision of the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India in Havana, Cuba on 16th September 2006, the second meeting of the Anti-Terrorism Mechanism was held in New Delhi on 22nd October 2007. The Indian delegation was headed by Mr. K.C. Singh, Additional Secretary (IO), Ministry of External Affairs of India. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Khalid Aziz Babar, Additional Secretary (UN&EC), Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan.

2. The two sides reviewed the follow up steps taken on the information shared during the first meeting of the Joint Anti Terrorism Mechanism held in Islamabad on 6th March 2007 and in the intervening period.

3. Both sides shared new information on terrorist incidents including those which have occurred since the last meeting. They agreed to continue to work to identify measures, exchange specific information and assist in investigations.

4. The next meeting of the Mechanism will be held in Islamabad according to the schedule already agreed upon.

1. The Indian Express story on the meeting of the Joint Anti Terrorism Mechanism makes an interesting reading: "The Pakistani link to the recent terror strikes in Hyderabad, Ajmer and Ludhiana came to the fore on Monday as India sought Pakistan’s help in tracking down suspects who are believed to have cross-border links. India is learnt to have referred to Harkat-ul-Jihadi-Islami (HuJI) and its commander Shahid Bilal, who is alleged to have masterminded nearly all the recent terror strikes in the country. The recent terror strikes figured in the second meeting of the Joint Anti-Terrorism Mechanism between India and Pakistan held here on Monday," a senior official said. The meeting also came days after the Ludhiana blast and amid Indian concern over attempts in Pakistan to build up a radical Sikh environment. Investigators feel the Mecca Masjid attack and the Ajmer blast were carried out by the same group - HuJI Bangladesh - due to similarities in the modus operandi. Both used a mobile phone trigger and unexploded devices were found after both strikes. According to security agencies, Bilal fled India after the attack on the STF headquarters in Hyderabad in 2005 and took refuge in Karachi. Bilal, who was drafted into militancy by Rasool Khan Party, developed a terror network in and around Hyderabad, initially using modules of Lashkar-e-Toiba and subsequently drawing in HuJI cadre who came in from Bangladesh. India also asked Pakistan about action taken on information it had shared on the Samjhauta Express attack, the Malegaon strike and the Mumbai blasts at the first meeting of the mechanism in Islamabad in March. No arrests have been made yet in the Hyderabad blasts (Mecca Masjid and the twin blasts), the Ajmer strike or the Ludhiana blast. On its part, Pakistan is learnt to have raised terror attacks in the country and sought India’s assistance in working out some recent cases. The two sides reviewed follow-up action on information shared at the first meeting of the mechanism in Islamabad in March this year. At the first meeting, the two sides discussed the framework that needed to be put in place to share information related to terrorism. The second meeting was delayed after Pakistan sought time since its pointsman for the talks had retired. The feeling here, however, was that the delay had to do with the volatile internal situation in Pakistan." (The mechanism was set up following an agreement between Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and President Pervez Musharraf in Havana in September 2006.)
1657. Response of Official Spokesperson to a question on the mandate of the Anti-Terrorism Mechanism.

New Delhi, October 30, 2007.

Information relating to all terrorist attacks was discussed and exchanged in the context of Pakistan’s assurance of 6 January 2004 of not permitting territory in its control to be used to support terrorism in any form. The mandate of the Mechanism is helping investigations on either side related to terrorist acts and prevention of violence and terrorist acts in the two countries.

1. The Spokesperson was responding to the Pakistan Foreign Office Spokesman’s denial of October 29 to the New Delhi daily Indian Express story of the same day on the meeting of India-Pakistan Anti-Terrorism Mechanism (held in New Delhi on October 22), which said that “for first time Pak accepts Indian dossier on terror in J&K”. The Pakistani Spokesman described the Indian Express story as baseless and said: “The purview of talks under the Joint Anti-Terrorism Mechanism does not cover Jammu and Kashmir, which is a disputed territory, and is being discussed under the Composite Dialogue process. The scope of discussions under the Mechanism relates to the terrorist incidents in India and Pakistan.”

New Delhi, November 3, 2007.

We regret the difficult times that Pakistan is passing through. We trust that conditions of normalcy will soon return permitting Pakistan's transition to stability and democracy to continue*.

* The Spokesman's statement came after the Prime Minister Manmohan Singh held an unscheduled meeting with External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee in the evening of November 3 to take stock of the developments in Pakistan. It may be recalled that that day President Musharraf had declared a State of Emergency in Pakistan, suspended the Constitution and issued a Provisional Constitution Order. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court was removed from his post and all other judges were asked to take a fresh oath of office. The emergency was justified on account of threat to the State from Islamic militancy. Talking to The Hindu after the meeting at the Prime Minister’s residence, National Security Adviser M.K. Narayanan said: “We are treating it as an internal problem of Pakistan, but we are watchful and on the alert.” The Congress party’s media in charge Veerappa Molly said: “We have been anxious for democracy to emerge in Pakistan.” BJP leader Yashwant Sinha said the situation was a much stronger case for international concern than Myanmar. On November 6 with developments in Pakistan unfolding at a fast pace, External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee expressed the hope that the democratic process would soon begin in the neighbouring country, where Emergency was imposed last weekend. He said New Delhi wanted peace, prosperity and stability to prevail in Pakistan. “We are watching the situation closely,” the External Minister told newsmen after inaugurating the first India-Africa Hydrocarbon Conference. “We do hope the process of democratisation in Pakistan to begin soon and the people of Pakistan will get an opportunity to have their government as per their Constitution.”

On November 12 the Defence Minister A. K. Antony said in Kozhikode (Kerala) that “India is closely monitoring the situation in Pakistan and taking adequate security measures along the borders with that country.” He told presspersons that the developments in Pakistan warranted taking several precautionary measures. “All steps have been taken to protect our borders as well as the Line of Control. As of now the situation is peaceful,” he maintained. Barring occasional attempts of infiltration by Pakistan extremist forces, the border had not witnessed any exchange of fire in the last three years. India hoped that the peaceful atmosphere would continue, Mr. Antony said. The Union Minister termed the recent incidents in Pakistan as unfortunate. “We wish that normality would return and democracy restored in that country soon,” he said. He said that India did not want to do anything that would disturb the existing bilateral relationship with Pakistan. The recent developments in that country were its internal matter, the Defence Minister said.
1659. Condolences from the Indian leaders on the assassination of Pakistani leader Benazir Bhutto.

December 27, 2007.

Message of President Mrs. Pratibha Devisingh Patil:

The President of India, Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil, has expressed her deep shock and grief on hearing the tragic news of assassination of Mrs. Benazir Bhutto. The President has further said, “it is a tragedy for the people of Pakistan to lose a leader of her stature in her prime. This tragedy underscores the menace that terrorism poses to us and to the stability of our societies. The assassination of Mrs. Benazir Bhutto is a tragedy not just for Pakistan but for our entire region. We stand with the people of Pakistan in this hour of grief and tragedy”.

Message of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh issued from Goa.

I was deeply shocked and horrified to hear of the heinous assassination of Mrs. Benazir Bhutto. Mrs. Bhutto was no ordinary political leader, but one who left a deep imprint on her time and age. Her contributions to a previous moment of hope in India Pakistan relations, and her intent to break India Pakistan relations out of the sterile patterns of the past, were exemplary. In her death, the sub continent has lost an outstanding leader who worked for democracy and reconciliation in her country. The manner of her going is a reminder of the common dangers that our region faces from cowardly acts of terrorism and of the need to eradicate this dangerous threat. My heartfelt condolences go to her family and the people of Pakistan who have suffered a grievous blow.

Sentiments expressed by Prime Minister in the Condolence Book of the Pakistan High Commission.

“It was with the deepest sense of horror and sorrow that I have learnt of the tragic demise of Madam Benazir Bhutto. In her sad and untimely demise, Pakistan and South Asia have lost an outstanding political leader, who was passionately committed to the cause of moderation, democracy and peace and friendship between our two countries”.

“I convey my heartfelt condolences to the members of the bereaved family and the people of Pakistan”.

Dr. Manmohan Singh Prime Minister of India
28.12.2007
Message of External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee.

I heard with shock and horror of the death of Mrs. Benazir Bhutto. Mrs. Bhutto was a brave and outstanding woman leader of the sub-continent. That she should fall to a barbarous terrorist attack is particularly tragic, and should strengthen our resolve to fight this scourge. Mrs. Bhutto’s contributions to democracy, to the improvement of India-Pakistan relations, and to the restoration of normalcy within Pakistan will be an inspiration.

My heart-felt condolences go to her immediate family, members of her party and the people of Pakistan. Our hopes and prayers are with them in this hour of loss.

_____________________

All Party meeting condoled the death of Ms. Benazir Bhutto:

A resolution passed at an all-party meeting, convened to discuss the situation in the region in the wake of Ms. Benazir’s killing, conveyed its heartfelt sympathies to the members of her family and the people of Pakistan. The leaders, who were briefed by National Security Adviser M.K. Narayanan, described Benazir as an outstanding leader of South Asia and the voice of moderation and democracy in Pakistan.

The all-party meet was attended by External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee, Defence Minister A.K. Antony, Home Minister Shivraj Patil and Mr. Narayanan. The Bharatiya Janata Party was represented by the Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha, L.K. Advani, and the former External Affairs Minister, Jaswant Singh, Sitaram Yechury (Communist Party of India - Marxist), A.B. Bardhan (Communist Party of India), Raghuvansh Prasad Singh (Rashtriya Janata Dal), Shahid Siddiqui (Samajwadi Party), Satish Mishra (Bahujan Samaj Party), Sharad Yadav (Janata Dal- United) and T.R. Baalu (DMK). [Just before the all-party meeting, Prime Minister Manmohan Singh chaired a meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Security that reviewed the situation in the region and domestically, and discussed the steps by India to deal with the situation.]

The Prime Minister who was in Goa when the ghastly act took place speaking in that city to the media reiterated his deep shock and horror at the assassination of the former Pakistan Prime Minister, Benazir Bhutto and described her as “one of the outstanding leaders of our sub-continent, who always looked for reconciliation between India and Pakistan.” He said: “Ms. Bhutto always expressed her feelings that relations between the two countries should be warm.”
Lamenting that “in her loss we have lost an outstanding personality and an outstanding champion of democracy,” Dr. Singh said she left a “deep impression on our time and the age she lived through. She always wanted South Asia to become a prosperous region in the world.” Dr. Singh underlined the need for a joint fight against terror, which lurked as a threat to the prosperity of the region. Extending his condolences to her family and to Pakistan, he said: “We all have to pledge to work together to deal with this menace which threatens the people of the civilised world.”

The Congress Working Committee (CWC) on December 28 said the assassination of the former Pakistan Prime Minister, Benazir Bhutto, was “yet another reminder of the grave challenge posed by the forces of terror and violence.”

Congress president Sonia Gandhi, who chaired the specially convened CWC, expressed the party’s shock and grief at the assassination. “Her death is equally a loss for the entire region of South Asia,” she said. She later visited the Pakistan High Commission and signed the book of condolence.

“Knowing fully well the risk involved in the task of restoring the democratic process in Pakistan, she did not hesitate to risk her life in pursuing this objective with courage, commitment and dedication. Her supreme sacrifice to the cause of democracy in Pakistan will continue to be a source of inspiration to those who have firm faith in the spirit of democracy,” Ms. Gandhi said the loss of such a popular and charismatic leader, especially at this critical juncture, was a colossal tragedy for the people of Pakistan. “The reprehensible and cowardly act, which has brutally cut short a life full of promise and potential, deserves to be strongly condemned by civilised society.”

“The CWC deeply mourns her untimely death and conveys its heartfelt condolences to the members of her bereaved family, the Pakistan People’s Party and the People of Pakistan in their moment of grief.” Other Political parties across the spectrum too reacted almost in one voice of shock and dismay and concern about the political process in Pakistan as news about the assassination of former Pakistan Prime Minister and Pakistan People’s Party leader Benazir Bhutto reached New Delhi on December 27.

The Polit Bureau of the Communist Party of India (Marxist) said there were “forces [in Pakistan] which are seeking to destabilise Pakistan and not allowing the transition to democracy to succeed … These forces must be thwarted.”

The Bharatiya Janata Party condemned the assassination and expressed concern not only about how the incident would affect Pakistan but also India in its immediate neighbourhood.
Former Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee described the killing as “big challenge for democracy and peace” and added that the challenge was not only for Pakistan: “We have to fight it out together.”

Leader of Opposition L. K. Advani said “the Talibanisation of Pakistan” was a threat to India. “Indian democracy abhors the cult of violence. This is negation of democracy itself. She was a charismatic leader whose unrealized potential has been cruelly cut short,” said All India Congress Committee spokesperson Abhishek Singhvi.

He said instability and violence could not be good for Pakistan, as indeed for the subcontinent.

“We hope and trust that the appropriate agencies of Pakistan will get to the root of this most unfortunate incident,” he said.

Conveying its heartfelt condolences to Ms. Bhutto’s family and to the people of Pakistan, the CPI (M) expressed its “shock and outrage” at the “dastardly assassination” while CPI national secretary D. Raja feared that the assassination would complicate matters in Pakistan where elections were due to be held. He said there were clearly forces which did not want any form of democracy in Pakistan.

BJP president Rajnath Singh expressed his sympathy and offered condolences to Ms. Bhutto’s family, especially mentioning her children, while former External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh spoke admiringly of Ms. Bhutto’s courage and determination to participate in the democratic process although she was aware of grave threat to her life. “She had come back to participate in the democratic process in Pakistan despite resistance from the establishment,” he noted. Mr. Rajnath Singh was worried about the impact of instability in Pakistan on India.

In a statement, Lok Sabha Speaker Somnath Chatterjee expressed “profound” shock over the assassination. He hoped that the sub-continent would be rid off such attacks on democratic processes, and the people of Pakistan would reject such methods of terror and strengthen democracy.

◆◆◆◆◆
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

SECTION - II

NO WAR DECLARATION
1660. Extract from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's speech pledging friendship with Pakistan.

Ludhiana, September 18, 1949.

At Ferozepur I referred to the Kashmir problem. Today I saw a press report attributing to me the statement that India needed Kashmir for India's security and, therefore, India could not compromise on the position she had taken up in this regard. I never said so, nor am I prepared to say so. We went to Kashmir not for our security but we went there because Kashmir was being attacked and Kashmiri's wanted us to save their land. We went to Kashmir with the consent of the people of Kashmir and with their consent we remained there. It is wrong to say that we went to Kashmir for our protection. If Kashmiri's want to have relations with us, it is for them to say so. If they do not want us there, we will not be there.

India is prepared to make a declaration that all the differences between India and Pakistan must be settled by negotiation and not by resort to arms.

Sometimes I hear rumours that there will be war with Pakistan. I read of such rumours in Pakistan newspapers. I cannot understand how the suspicion can be removed from the minds of the people of Pakistan but you should not get panicky.

You should continue your daily work peacefully. I think there will be no war with Pakistan. We will not fight unless we are forced to do so. We will fight only if Pakistan attacks us. Our policy is that we will try with determination not to bring about another big war in the world because we think that if there is a big war then the world will be destroyed.

India will not be a member of any bloc. We want to remain on friendly terms with everybody. That being so how can we have a different policy in relation to Pakistan? We fought with Pakistan only when we were asked by Kashmir to come to their help. You can rest assured that there will be no attack from our side, but if Pakistan attacks us then we will meet the attack with determination.

◆◆◆◆
1661. Aide Memoire of the Government of Pakistan reacting to the proposal for a No War Declaration.

The Pakistan Government welcomes the proposal that all outstanding disputes between India and Pakistan should be settled by peaceful means and not by war. This has been their stand all along. They are convinced that just and peaceful settlement of outstanding questions would remove both the causes and the fear of war between the two countries.

2. The main disputes between India and Pakistan relate to:

(i) Jammu and Kashmir,
(ii) Junagadh and neighbouring States that have acceded to Pakistan,
(iii) Canal waters,
(iv) Evacuee property, and
(v) Assets of Pakistan withheld by India.

(i) Jammu and Kashmir

The points at issue relate to the implementation of the U.N. Commission's Resolutions of 13th August, 1948, and the 5th January, 1949. These Resolutions have been accepted by both Governments and have the character of an International Agreement. Negotiations between the two Governments and mediation by the U.N. Commission have failed to resolve the differences between the two Governments in the implementation of Part II of the Commission's Resolution of 13th August, 1948. The only course left is to refer the points of difference to arbitration. In short, both Governments should reaffirm their desire to implement at the earliest possible date the Commission's Resolutions of 13th August, 1948, and 5th January, 1949, by having a free and impartial plebiscite in the spring 1950 and should agree in advance to refer to arbitration any points of difference that have arisen or may arise in the implementation of these Resolutions.

In the view of the Pakistan Government, the Kashmir dispute has an absolute priority over other disputes. Without a just and peaceful solution of the Kashmir question it is impossible to create that atmosphere of good-will which is essential to the solution of disputes.

(ii) Junagadh

The dispute relates to the occupation by India's armed forces of Junagadh and neighbouring States which had acceded to Pakistan. The U.N. Commission has been entrusted with the task of mediation in this case also and if its efforts at mediation do not succeed, both Governments should agree to abide by arbitration.

(iii) Canal Waters

The issue is a juridical one and if negotiations between the two Governments do not succeed, both Governments should agree in advance to refer the matter to decision by the International Court of Justice.

(iv) Evacuee Property

The evacuee property dispute can only be settled after the canal waters dispute has been settled since a decision on the canal waters dispute has a vital bearing on the question of evacuee property. A settlement of the canal waters dispute is, therefore, an essential preliminary to a settlement of the evacuee property. After the canal waters dispute has been settled, the evacuee property disputes should be settled by negotiation aided, if necessary, by mediation and if that does not prove successful by a resort to arbitration.

(v) Assets of Pakistan withheld by India

For example, the assets of the State Bank withheld by the Reserve Bank, the sterling due to Pakistan under the Payments Agreement. In this case too if negotiations do not succeed, both Governments should agree in advance to refer the matter to arbitration.

3. In all cases where a matter is to be referred to arbitration it should be agreed that all points of difference including those relating to procedure should, if necessary, be referred to arbitration so that it should not be possible for either party to hold up or obstruct a settlement. And both Governments should agree to abide by the award of the arbitrator.

4. If the Government of India is prepared to accept a solution on the above lines, further negotiations can be undertaken to settle the details and the procedure of mediation and arbitration. As soon as agreement has been reached a joint declaration will be made that the two Governments will in no case go to war.
Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Secretary General of the Ministry of External Affairs on the points raised by Pakistan in its Aide Memoire of 3rd December, 1949.

New Delhi, December 4, 1949.

The first thing is for both Governments to decide and declare that we rule out the resort to war in settling any differences, whatever they might be, and that we propose to settle them by peaceful methods. This statement is certainly rather vague. But in another sense it is definite enough and should go some way in reducing the tension, which unfortunately exists at present. In fact it will be easier to deal with the various problems when it is realized by all parties concerned that the only way of settlement is a peaceful one.

The Kashmir question*, as you have said, is in the hands of the United Nations and we can say nothing about it separately.

So far as we are concerned, there is no Junagadh case or any case in regard to other States. Not only can it not be reopened, but there is nothing to reopen.

As regards the dispute over canal waters and evacuee property@, both of these should first be considered on the expert level by representatives of both parties. Where there is no agreement in the end, we are certainly prepared for a reference to a tribunal or to arbitration.

As regards the claim that Pakistan assets are being held back by India, so far as I know, there are many claims on our side that Pakistan is not paying what is our due. These matters should also be considered on the expert level first and then, if necessary, by reference to some impartial authority.

All these questions should not come in the way of the declaration. If the questions

---

* The U.N.C.I.P., had on 28 August 1949, proposed that all points of difference between India and Pakistan with regard to the implementation of its Resolution should be submitted to arbitration. India rejected the proposal of arbitration because it amounted to placing the aggressor and the aggressed on an equal footing.

 By the Inter - Dominion Agreement of 4 May 1948, India agreed to resume the supply of Indus waters to Pakistan and Pakistan agreed to develop in due course alternative resources for water supply.

@ The Hindus and Sikhs who migrated from West Pakistan left behind 4,800,000 acres of agricultural land and housing property worth Rs. 5,000 crores. The Muslims who migrated from India left only 3,139,000 acres of land and houses worth Rs. 1000 crores. Negotiations with Pakistan on the repatriation of property and other assets left behind by refugees were deadlocked.
can be decided without the declaration, no need for the declaration arises. It is in order to ease the situation between the two countries and help in creating an atmosphere favourable to the settlement of disputes, that we have made our proposal. As soon as the declaration is made, we can discuss ways and means of settling outstanding disputes, as you have suggested.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1663. Extract from the Proceedings of the meeting of the Standing Committee of the Central Legislative Assembly for the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, December 17, 1949.

Present: - Shri Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister (Chairman).

Members: Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao
Begum Aizaz Rasul.
Shri Thirumala Rao.
Shri Girija Sankar Guha.
Shrimati Renuka Ray.
Prof. N.G. Ranga.
Shri U. Srinivasa Mallayya.

Officials: Shri K.P.S. Menon.
Shri H.S. Malik.
Shri A.V. Pai.
Shri S. Dutt.
Shri Y.D. Gundevia.
Shri Prem Krishen.

16. The Prime Minister explained that sometime ago, he had suggested a declaration by India and Pakistan that all disputes between them will be settled peaceably and there will be no resort to armed conflict on any question. The Prime Minister of Pakistan, when questioned on the subject, is reported to have said that he had received no communication from the Government of India. On seeing this, the Prime Minister had decided to make a reference and an informal approach had been made through the Pakistan High Commissioner in India. As a further development, it is now proposed to send a draft agreement to the Government of Pakistan with a view to signature by both countries. This is expected to improve relations between the two countries by ruling out all questions of decision of disputes by armed conflict.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1664. Draft of a joint declaration, suggested by the Government of India, which was handed over to the Pakistan High Commissioner.

New Delhi, December 22, 1949.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples who have many common ties hereby declare that they condemn resort to war for the settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that the settlement of such disputes between them shall always be sought through recognized peaceful methods such as negotiation, or by resort to mediation or arbitration by special agency set up by mutual agreement for the purpose, or by agreed reference to some appropriate international body recognized by both of them. It is their earnest hope as well as their firm conviction that the implementation of this declaration in the spirit which lies behind it will serve to maintain good relations between the two countries and advance the cause of world peace.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Statement* by Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly regarding No War Declaration.

Karachi, January 17, 1950.

The Government of Pakistan are grateful to the Government of India for the draft of the proposed declaration forwarded by them and greatly regret that through an unfortunate confusion over transmission it only reached them on January 10th.

2. While they share the sentiments in the Government of India’s draft the Government of Pakistan feel that its terms are too vague. In their view, the only way to promote peace is to resolve major disputes; and a joint declaration will carry conviction to no one unless it is supported by evidence of some concrete action. Even if these disputes cannot themselves be settled before the declaration is made, at least the procedure for settling them can be laid down by agreement in precise terms in the declaration, so that both parties enter into firm commitments which would in course of time definitely lead to the resolution of disputes.

3. For this reason they would strongly press the Government of India to agree to the concrete and precise suggestions of the Government of Pakistan already made regarding the procedure to be followed in the settlement of disputes or to suggest modifications in them which the Government of Pakistan would be ready to examine.

* The statement was made in reply to a question asked in the Pakistan Assembly on the Indian proposal for a No War Declaration.
My dear Prime Minister,

I am writing to you about the proposed joint declaration by the Governments of India and Pakistan for the avoidance of war.

2. On the 16th January we received a copy of a statement, which you were to make in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly in reply to a question regarding this proposed joint declaration by the Governments of India and Pakistan for the avoidance of war in the settlement of disputes. In this statement it is said that, in the view of the Government of Pakistan, the only way to promote peace is to resolve major disputes. Even if these disputes cannot themselves be settled before the declaration is made, at least the procedure for settling them can be laid down by agreement in precise terms in the declaration. Further, that your Government urge the Government of India to agree to the concrete and precise suggestions of the Government of Pakistan already made regarding the procedure to be followed in the settlement of disputes.

3. I was not aware of any concrete and precise suggestions of the Government of Pakistan or its High Commissioner in Delhi in this respect. All that had happened previously was that your High Commissioner had mentioned various matters in dispute and referred to possible methods of settling them. No concrete or precise procedure had been suggested. We had dealt with the points raised by your High Commissioner, whereupon it was agreed that a tentative draft of a declaration might be prepared. This draft was handed to your High Commissioner on the 22nd December, 1949. The first reply to it that we received is the copy of your statement which reached us on the 16th January. We were surprised to find in this a reference to certain concrete and precise suggestions, which we had not thus far received.

4. I have now seen newspaper reports of the full statement made by you before the Pakistan Constituent Assembly on January 17th. You refer in this to the various matters which are, according to you, in dispute. As you know, the Kashmir issue is before the United Nations and has therefore to be considered separately. As regards Junagadh, I am surprised at your reference to it, as this is not a live issue.
5. The canal water issue has been the subject of correspondence between the two Governments and both are practically agreed that a joint technical commission should be set up for making a factual investigation. On the basis of the report of the commission, the two Governments will confer with a view to arriving at a settlement. If it is not found possible to reach a settlement, we are quite prepared to refer the matter to arbitration or some tribunal approved of by both Governments. You will appreciate that the manner of subsequent procedure as well as the form can hardly be decided satisfactorily before we know what the results of the technical commission are and what the remaining points for decision are.

6. We are prepared that the evacuee property dispute should be settled by arbitration, if negotiations and mediation fail.

7. So far as the division of the Reserve Bank's assets is concerned, the major portion of the assets claimed by Pakistan has already been transferred to the State Bank, and in regard to the remaining claims, disagreement has arisen on the question of the mode of payment. The question thus is one of the manner in which the claims have to be settled. This matter has already been discussed informally between the two Governments, and Pakistan themselves have suggested a conference to discuss it further. There are a number of other issues connected with this matter, all of which would have to be considered in arriving at a settlement.

8. The question of payment of sterling depends upon the amount that is due and of which type it is, that is, whether current or blocked. Both these matters are eminently fit for settlement by negotiation and indeed, as I have mentioned above, a conference is envisaged.

9. As you know, the Government of India have large claims of financial nature on the Pakistan Government. These have been pending for a long time without any satisfactory settlement. This again should be dealt with by negotiation and in the absence of any settlement, by other peaceful methods.

10. The whole object of the proposed joint declaration was to remove or lessen the unfortunate tension that exists between our two Governments and to produce an atmosphere which is more favourable to the consideration and settlement of particular disputes. If these disputes are satisfactorily settled separately, we would welcome it. But obviously there has been difficulty and delay in doing this. A joint declaration would, no doubt, be helpful in bringing us nearer to a settlement of all outstanding disputes between the two Governments, which the Government of India earnestly desire.

11. The procedure for settling disputes cannot be uniform in all cases. It is possible that one method may be appropriate for one dispute and another method for another dispute. Apart from negotiation and mediation, the only remaining peaceful methods are arbitration and reference to some international authority or tribunal. That is precise enough.

12. The proposal to make a joint declaration was made by the Government of India in all earnestness, so that we might take one effective step forward towards the resolution of existing disputes between the two Governments. Not to take this first step, because the other steps are not simultaneously taken, is to avoid taking any step at all for the present at least. That is not a very helpful way of proceeding in this matter. For us to say that in no event are we going to war for a settlement of disputes is an important and significant contribution to peace between the two countries. The Government of India are prepared to say that, if the Government of Pakistan is also agreeable. Owing to geography and for many other reasons, it is inevitable that many issues arise between the two countries which require settlement. A firm declaration that we will in any event settle them by peaceful methods will itself be a great service to our two countries and the world, because it will remove fear of war from the minds of our peoples.

13. Any joint declaration that we might make must necessarily be in general terms to cover all cases that may arise now or hereafter. Apart from this joint declaration, and in pursuance of it, we can at once begin to consider specific matters separately. I shall be glad to have an early reply from you.

Yours sincerely

Jawaharlal Nehru

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan
Prime Minister of Pakistan,
Karachi.
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Finance Minister Ghulam Mohammad.

New Delhi, January 18, 1950.

Prime Minister India
New Delhi, January 18, 1950.

My dear Ghulam Mohammed,

During our brief talks in Colombo you expressed your eagerness to help in every way in resolving the disputes between Pakistan and India. You invited me to go to Karachi and also offered to come to Delhi at short notice if this was necessary. Referring to the proposed joint declaration to be made by the Governments of India and Pakistan, you said that this could go through if some slight mention was made about the method of settlement. Regarding Kashmir, you appreciated that the matter was with the United Nations. The two major questions that remained were: canal waters and evacuee property. We have made it repeatedly clear that we are prepared for a peaceful settlement of these through arbitration or some tribunal, and it would be easy to say so in the event of our technical commissions and negotiations failing to arrive at an agreement.

I have now seen a report of what you said at a press conference in Colombo on January 16th. I must say that this does not support the attitude that you took up with me. I have also seen your Prime Minister’s statement in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly. This again is not very helpful.

I must confess to having a feeling that what you said personally to me does not fit in with your public statements which are in an entirely different key.

Regarding the proposed joint declaration, I do not understand how we can tie up that declaration with any specific issue. Of course, we can deal with the specific issues separately in a separate statement or in exchange of correspondence. So far as the two main issues are concerned, that is canal waters and evacuee property, I see no difficulty whatever in our finding a method of solution agreeable to both Governments, should negotiations fail. But it is obvious that even a reference to arbitration or a tribunal can only be made when the facts are precisely known and the extent of difference. One cannot specify a tribunal before knowing what is going to be referred. It seems to me quite enough to say that in the event of lack of agreement the matter should be decided by arbitration or reference to a tribunal chosen by the parties concerned. This largely meets your viewpoint and would be in keeping with our declaration.

* Ghulam Mohammed had said in Colombo that India was delaying a settlement on Kashmir. When Attlee and Truman suggested arbitration, India had rejected that proposal. When asked about Indian proposal for a no-war pact Ghulam Mohammed said that what was needed was not statements and speeches but machinery to settle disputes mediation or arbitration.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Mr. Ghulam Mohammad,
Finance Minister of Pakistan, Karachi

1668. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, February 14, 1950.

Prime Minister Pakistan
Karachi

My dear Prime Minister,

As promised in my letter of January 25, I write in reply to your letter of January 18, to give you the views of the Government of Pakistan.

2. At the outset, I should like to emphasise the principles which guide Pakistan's approach to this question. As a Member of the United Nations, Pakistan has firm faith in the principles of the Charter and is prepared always to abide by them. This membership in itself constitutes a declaration of Pakistan's renunciation of warlike means of settling disputes. With her neighbour, India, in particular, Pakistan desires most sincerely to remove all causes of friction, and to promote friendly relations without which it is impossible for either country to achieve the full measure of its potential development. As I have repeatedly reaffirmed, Pakistan is convinced that war between India and Pakistan would bring utter ruin on both. The common good of both countries lies in the peaceful settlement of all disputes between them.

3. Pakistan therefore welcomes the proposal to issue a joint declaration, the primary object of which must be to carry conviction to the people of India and Pakistan and of the whole world as to the sincerity of both Governments in renouncing war as a method of settling their disputes. To attain this object, it is essential that there should be tangible action to match the spirit of the declaration, since peoples and Governments are judged by their actions rather than by their words. This action should, in the view of my Government, be the laying down of a clear cut procedure with an agreed timetable, which would make it binding on both Governments to carry through the settlement of their disputes to its final peaceful conclusion. For example, we could lay down that, from the date of the declaration, two months would be allowed for negotiations. The next two months would then be allowed for settlement by mediation of those matters which negotiation had failed to resolve. If, at the end of this second period of two months, any matters remained over they should all stand automatically referred to arbitration by a method agreed upon in advance. A last period of two months should suffice for this process, though its duration would of course depend on the arbitrator or arbitrators.

4. I am sorry, if, as paragraph 3 of your letter suggests, there has been any misunderstanding regarding the view which we have consistently held that a concrete and precise procedure should be followed. When, towards the end of November 1949, your Secretary General orally suggested to our High Commissioner that a joint "no - war declaration" should be made and that, if no agreement were reached the dispute should be referred to a third party for settlement, we directed our High Commissioner to reply as in the annexure* to this letter. Our High Commissioner reported that he read out his reply word by word to your Secretary General on December 3*. You will, I think, agree that the reply makes concrete and precise suggestions; and the statement which I made in the Assembly on January 17 did no more than reiterate the suggestions made to your Government on December 3. However, it seems that there was some misunderstanding and that our precise proposals were not placed before you when you prepared the draft of the joint declaration which reached us on January 9. I would most earnestly request you to reconsider your view that an agreement in general terms is alone required, and to consider further the advantages of the more precise course suggested by me.

5. The procedure for settling disputes which we suggest is fundamentally a very simple one, and is flexible enough to cover all cases which may arise now (or) in future. As you observe, "apart from negotiation and mediation, the only remaining peaceful methods are arbitration and reference to some international authority or tribunal." If, therefore, a dispute cannot be settled by negotiation and mediation, it must be referred to arbitration. Whether arbitration is by a special agency set up by mutual agreement for the purpose, or by an international authority, it's essential feature is that an independent authority gives an award which is binding on both parties. Resort to arbitration would, of course be had only when negotiation and mediation had failed to bring agreement and would in each case cover differences over procedure as well. In all disputes, there is a danger that the party which is in possession of and wishes to withhold the rightful dues of the other may so conduct itself as either to prevent a fair settlement or to cause such delay in settlement as to give the same result. Either course produces a sense of injustice, frustration and despair of securing a remedy by peaceful means which is one of the most frequent causes of conflict. The procedure which my Government propose is designed to obviate any such contingency.

* Please see Document No.1661.

6. In no spirit of controversy, but as an illustration of the considerations set out above, the Kashmir dispute which holds the key to Indo - Pakistan relations may be cited. This dispute was referred to the Security Council, and after a year's effort the settlement embodied in the U.N.C.I.P.'s Resolutions of 13th August, 1948 and 5th January, 1949, was reached, with the agreement of both India and Pakistan and the approval of the Security Council. This settlement provided for cease-fire and demilitarization leading to a free and impartial plebiscite. Differences having arisen over the programme of demilitarization and the Commission's mediation having failed to resolve them, the Commission suggested arbitration of the points of difference. Pakistan accepted, but India refused, with the result that the matter was referred back to the Security Council after the lapse of another year. The Security Council then asked its President, General McNaughton, to mediate. The proposals which General McNaughton put forward have again been accepted by Pakistan but not by India. In a situation of this kind, when reference to an international body like the Security Council and negotiations and mediation carried out under its authority have failed, no negotiation other than arbitration of points of difference in implementation of the settlement already reached can lead to a resolution of the dispute.

7. Again, the canal water dispute is a justifiable issue which should be referred to the International Court of Justice if no agreement by negotiations can be reached, and yet India has so far refused, to agree to this course. It is true that both Governments have practically agreed that a joint commission should be set up, although Pakistan believes that the common objective will be better served if the Commission consists of non-technical statesmen who will enlist services of technical experts, than by appointing a technical Commission. On the basis of the Commission's report, the two Governments will confer with a view to arriving at a settlement; but if an agreement is not reached, the proper way of resolving differences in a matter of this kind would be a reference to the International Court of Justice. What is most urgently needed is to set at rest the fear operating on the mind of the people likely to be affected that the dispute may drag on indefinitely while their welfare and prosperity are progressively put in jeopardy. They must be assured that, in the event of the dispute not being resolved by the method now being pursued, it will be settled by adjudication of the Tribunal best fitted to resolve it. Since you are prepared to accept arbitration, there should be no objection to designating the International Court of justice as the arbitral authority.

8. It will thus be seen that the considerations which have impelled the Government of Pakistan to their proposal for a precise procedure are derived from their past experience of these disputes. Other issues need not be dwelt upon in detail, but it is necessary to state that Junagadh is on the agenda of the Security Council to be dealt with after the Kashmir dispute has been settled, and cannot be regarded as a dead issue.

9. I feel that you will agree that if the principle of arbitration and a timetable leading up to it is accepted, the exact disputes to be handled under this procedure should be a matter for settlement in advance.

10. As regards the exact forum, mediation or arbitration could be undertaken by a special agency set up by mutual agreement for the purpose, or by agreed reference to some appropriate international body recognized by you to this end, but I suggest that it is desirable that the name of the arbitrator or arbitral agency be decided before the issue of the declaration and included in it; I have accordingly left a blank in the draft below for inclusion of names or description of the arbitrators. If the Government of India agree the Government of Pakistan would be prepared to accept the majority decisions of an Arbitral Tribunal of three persons; and I suggest for your consideration that the Governments of three friendly countries, whom we should now select, should be asked to nominate one member each.

11. In the light of these considerations, my Government suggest that the following should be the terms of the joint declaration:

"The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, they being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between peoples, hereby declare that they will not resort to war for settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that settlement of such disputes shall always be sought through peaceful methods of negotiation and mediation and, if these should fail to bring settlement, by resort to arbitration of all points of difference including those relating to the procedure for arbitration. They undertake that they will abide by the award of an arbitral Tribunal, which shall consist of..............for the settlement of all existing disputes. In the event of their not being unanimous, the decision of the majority shall be binding. Negotiations for the settlement of all such disputes shall begin as early as practicable, and such of them as are not settled by negotiation within two months from the date of this declaration shall be referred to mediation, for which a further period of two months shall be allowed. Any matters remaining unsettled at the expiry of this period shall be referred to arbitration."
"In pursuance of this declaration, both Governments hereby agree to refer to this arbitral Tribunal differences which have arisen or may arise in implementation of U.N.C.I.P.'s Resolution of 13th August, 1948 and 5th January, 1949, which both Governments have accepted for settlement of the Kashmir dispute. Both Governments also agree that the canal water dispute shall, if no agreement is reached by negotiation or mediation, be referred to the International Court of Justice for decision. In other disputes outstanding between them such as Junagadh and neighbouring States, evacuee property, boundary disputes and claims relating to assets, both Governments agree that if no settlement is reached by negotiation or mediation, the matter shall be referred to the arbitral Tribunal. It is their earnest hope as well as their firm conviction that implementation of this declaration and the spirit which lies behind it will serve to promote friendly relations between the two countries and advance the cause of International peace."

Yours sincerely

Liaquat Ali Khan

The Honourable Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

◆◆◆◆◆
My dear Nawabzada,

In continuation of my letter dated 17th February*, I am now writing to you to convey our considered reply to your letter of 14 February. I regret the slight delay in sending this fuller reply. Apart from the important engagements to which I referred in my letter of 17 February, we have had to deal with the events which have occurred recently in East and West Bengal. These events, as you know, have dominated the situation and intimately govern future relations between India and Pakistan. I am communicating with you separately in regard to the Bengal situation.

I am glad to note that Pakistan desires most sincerely to remove all causes of friction with her neighbor, India, and to promote friendly relations, without which it is impossible for either country to achieve the full measure of its potential development. May I say that we fully reciprocate these sentiments? I am also happy that Pakistan welcomes the proposal to issue a joint declaration, the primary object of which must be to carry conviction to the people of India and Pakistan and of the whole world as to the sincerity of both Governments in renouncing war as a method of settling their disputes. "To attain this object," you say, "it is essential that there should be tangible action to match the spirit of the declaration since peoples and Governments are judged by their actions rather than by their words." I may assure you that in suggesting that we should make the declaration first and, immediately afterwards, consider ways and means of settling outstanding disputes between our two countries, it was not my intention that action should not be prompt and in conformity with the spirit of the declaration. Our view was, and is, that, considering the acuteness of the tension that now unfortunately exists, the psychological effect of the declaration itself would be to reassure our respective peoples that, whatever the differences between the two Governments, they would be settled peacefully and that both countries would be spared the horrors of a fratricidal war. However, I realize that a matter

* In his letter of 17th February Prime Minister acknowledged his letter of 14th February and promised a "considered reply" as soon as possible since "Parliament is at present in session in addition to this we are having a meeting of the All India Congress Committee during the next two days" apart from the fact that the visit of the Prime Minister of Nepal was engaging his attention.

 Matters relating to minorities in Bengal (please see section on ‘Minorities’). of this high importance would not and ought not be considered exclusively from the standpoint of either India or Pakistan. With the full consciousness of the importance to both our countries of an agreed declaration and in a spirit of sincere friendship we have considered again our original proposal and I shall now indicate what we regard as an arrangement that should be acceptable to both of us.

I do not in the least minimize either the significance or the gravity of the dispute regarding the future of the State of Jammu and Kashmir. This issue, however, is already before the Security Council, and has only recently been fully debated.
We feel that the Security Council, which is one of the principal organs of the United Nations, and has adequate authority under the Charter to deal with it, should continue to handle it. Our stand with regard to Junagadh is well known to you; I regret that we are unable to modify it.

As regards the other disputes enumerated in the aide memoire, namely, canal waters, evacuee property and Pakistan assets claimed by your Government from India, we agree that a settlement of these disputes shall be sought through negotiation and mediation and, if these should fail to bring a settlement, by resort to arbitration. Of course when arbitration is resorted to we shall abide by the award of any arbitral tribunal that may be set up in agreement between the two Governments.

According to my understanding, you propose that there should be one arbitral tribunal to deal with all disputes, presumably with the exception of the dispute over canal waters which you think should be referred to the International Court of Justice. We anticipate practical difficulty in one tribunal dealing with all disputes, especially when one considers the importance that you and we both attach to an early settlement of some of them. Apart from the question of time, that of the competence of the personnel has also to be taken into account. For example, the qualifications required of members of the tribunal that may be appointed to deal with the dispute over canal waters may not be the same as those required for one of the other disputes, e.g., the one relating to evacuee property. Indeed, your view that, as regards the dispute over canal waters, the International Court of Justice should be the arbitral authority itself supports the point of view that I have just expressed. I am also not in favour of inviting the Governments of three friendly countries to nominate one member each to these tribunals. In my opinion, it would be very much better to adhere to the practice adopted by both our Governments so far, namely, that each should select one arbitrator and the third should be chosen by the two Governments in agreement.
Of course, when a dispute is referred to arbitration, each party must agree in advance to abide by the award to the arbitrators; or if they are not unanimous, by the decision of the majority.
I shall now deal with the suggestion for a time table. I readily agree that, ordinarily, from the date of the declaration, two months should be allowed for negotiations. But circumstances beyond the control of one or both Governments may make completion of negotiations within this period impossible. I, therefore, suggest that the two Governments may by agreement extend this period provided that the maximum period does not exceed six months. As regards the subsequent processes, namely, mediation and arbitration, I am doubtful whether it would be prudent to fix time limits in advance. About arbitration, you yourself have said that its duration would depend on the arbitrator or arbitrators. The same holds true of mediation. While speed is important, flexibility is not less so, and neither should be sacrificed to the other. Some general provision on the lines that, in the event of the mediator or mediators - in the latter case, by a majority - coming to the conclusion that the possibilities of mediation, arbitration have been exhausted, the matter must be referred to arbitration, should be sufficient.

On the basis of what I have said in the preceding parts of this letter, I suggest the following redraft of the declaration as proposed by you in paragraph 11 of your letter:

"The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples, hereby declare that they will not resort to war for the settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that the settlement of such disputes shall always be sought through the peaceful methods of negotiation and mediation, and, if these should fail to bring settlement, by resort to arbitration. Differences relating to the procedure for arbitration, if not settled by agreement, shall also be referred to arbitration. They undertake that, for the settlement of all existing disputes, other than those, e.g., Kashmir, which are now before the Security Council of the United Nations, they abide by the award of an arbitral tribunal, or a recognized international agency such as the International Court of Justice. An arbitral tribunal for the settlement of a dispute shall consist of one nominee of each Government and a third chosen by the two nominees in agreement, or, failing such agreement, by the two Governments. In the event of the members of a tribunal not being unanimous, the decision of the majority shall be binding. Negotiations for the settlement of all such disputes shall begin as early as practicable. Normally the negotiations shall be completed within two months. But circumstances beyond the control of one or both Governments may make completion of negotiations within this period impossible. In such a contingency the maximum period for negotiations shall be six months. Such disputes as are not settled by negotiations shall be referred to mediation. If the mediator or mediators come to the conclusion - in the latter case by a majority - that the possibilities of mediation have been exhausted, the dispute or the unsettled points therein shall be referred to arbitration.

"In pursuance of this declaration, both Governments agree that the canal waters dispute shall, if no agreement is reached by negotiation or mediation, be referred for decision to the International Court of Justice or to any other tribunal that may be agreed upon. In other disputes outstanding between them such as evacuee property, boundary disputes and claims relating to assets, both Governments agree that if no settlement is reached by negotiation or mediation the matter shall be referred to an arbitral tribunal. It is their earnest hope as well as their firm conviction that implementation of this declaration and the spirit which lies behind it will serve to promote friendly relations between the two countries and advance the causes of international peace."

This matter has been under discussion between us for over two months now and I sincerely hope that we shall be able to reach an agreed conclusion without further delay.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

The Hon'ble
Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan,
Prime Minister of Pakistan, Karachi.

◆◆◆◆◆
1670. Letter from Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on No-War Declaration etc.

New Delhi, February 25, 1950.

Deputy Prime Minister of India
New Delhi

D.O.NO.140-DPM/50.  the 25th February 1950,

My dear Jawaharlal,

I have carefully read the draft letter which you propose to send to Liaquat Ali Khan in reply to his regarding the 'No war' declaration. My own reading of Liaquat's letter is that he is cleverly trying to commit us to a line of procedure both in regard to outstanding and future disputes which would give Pakistan, in view of its complete disregard of scruples, principles or moral behaviour, a perpetual advantage over us. While everything binds us, nothing seems to bind them. A perpetual war of nerves, a series of accomplished facts, continuous pressure backed by persistent vilifying campaign and absolute denial of even the most glaring facts which take place in its territory are all quite familiar to us. We have had sufficient experience of the implementation of agreements with Pakistan. We have also had bitter taste of the protection which it affords to minorities. If any body had any little faith in the good intentions of Pakistan, East Bengal should shatter it completely. To me, the whole matter seems to be so unrealistic in the present circumstances that I wonder if we cannot put an end to this talk, at least for the time being. We seem to be offering a counsel of peace where the spirit and mentality of war exist, and where, to the best of our information, all preparations for war are being made.

2. Your own proposal to Pakistan was a fairly simple one. It was to the effect that, whatever happens, whatever differences may exist between us, we would never resolve them by resort to war. Pakistan's stand completely negatives this approach. There is a clear implication (which, in my judgment, we should fully exploit) that, so far as Pakistan is concerned, it is prepared to go war in the event of differences not being resolved to its satisfaction. In short, while you wish absolutely to outlaw war between India and Pakistan, Liaquat's attitude is fundamentally different. He says, "First you provide a machinery for settling disputes and then I shall see, in the light of that machinery, whether I can agree to outlaw war". I feel that the fundamental difference in the approach to this problem between you two can be fully exploited to the disadvantage of Pakistan, should Pakistan ever try to accuse us of not meaning business.
3. My feeling is that, if we cannot get an agreement on the simple proposition of outlawry of war, we should not get ourselves involved in the discussion of details. Otherwise our position would become untenable and we would be accused of having mental reservations. We shall thus be providing Pakistan with targets of attack and, in the present prejudiced atmosphere of the world outside, I am afraid we shall again be put internationally in the wrong.

4. As regards specific issues raised by Pakistan, as you have pointed out, the question of Kashmir is before the Security Council. Having invoked a forum of settlement of disputes open to both India and Pakistan, as Members of the United Nations Organization, nothing further need be done in the way of settlement of disputes than to leave matters to be adjusted through that forum. The same applies to Junagadh on which, as you have rightly said, our position is well-known to Pakistan and we cannot modify it. Then come the questions of Canal waters, Evacuee Property and Pakistan Assets. Here, the position is fundamentally different from other international disputes. These questions do not arise between two nations or countries. They arise as a result of the partition of an undivided India. There are agreements attaching to these matters. The question is of implementing those agreements, and what action should be taken to secure the implementation of the agreements must be decided by both the Governments on the merits and progress of negotiations of each case. There can be no question of linking these matters with the fundamental question of outlawing war between the two countries. As illustrations of my point of view, I shall deal with the first two questions with which I am more familiar.

5. As regards Canal waters, the question really is one of Sovereignty rights. I wonder if there is any known case of questions relating to sovereignty rights apart from territorial disputes being referred to arbitration. We have here specific agreements, expressly or impliedly accepting our sovereignty rights over the Canal Waters. The Pakistan Government is not only going back on those agreements, but is also giving the whole dispute a wider significance and making the whole controversy more comprehensive. The only result of going to arbitration in such circumstances would be that we would lose what we have got under the agreements, and the whole question which was settled as a result of a joint agreement of partition will be opened afresh with results which are unpredictable. Any weakness in this matter is likely to have very wide repercussions on our whole irrigation system. The Bhakra scheme will be in jeopardy. Pakistan will try to have a finger in the distribution of the waters of the Jumna, Ganges and Brahmaputra, which vis-à-vis Pakistan acquire the character of international rivers. If at all a choice... has to be made, I would rather have arbitration than the International Court of Justice. In regard to the former, at least we shall have our own man on the Bench who might be able to influence the arbitrator by his learning and grasp of matters, as was the case recently in regard to the Bagge Tribunal; once we submit the case to the International Court of Justice, we just become helpless.

6. As regards Evacuee Property, the main dispute is whether it should be on a Government- to-Government basis or only on the basis of a private exchange. Here I feel that our position is fundamentally strong, because, even if we allow private exchange, there is no doubt that the gap which will be left in the field is so wide that we must have some means of settling accounts with Pakistan. There is no question of sovereignty rights involved, and I would personally not object to the matter being put to arbitration.

7. As regards Pakistan Assets, here again the question is one of implementation of partition agreements. We had an Arbitral Tribunal to settle some of the disputes arising out of partition. If negotiations on mediation fails, we could have an arbitral tribunal again.

8. To sum up, therefore, my view strongly is that we should not get involved into a discussion of individual items of dispute or of the machinery to be provided for settling those disputes. We should confine ourselves to the simple proposition which we have put forward, but over which there is a fundamental difference of approach between ourselves and Pakistan. If you feel that it is not possible to confine ourselves to this simple issue, then the best course would be to get out of the whole business by pointing out this fundamental difference in approach and indicating to Pakistan that this approach is suggestive of their having mental reservations on this simple issue. That being the case and with East Bengal situation facing us and the attendant campaign of vilification (of which their radio news of 10,000 persons killed in Calcutta is a glaring example), it is not an opportune time to pursue this matter at least for the time being, until relations between the two countries assume a character in which it would be possible for Pakistan to subscribe to the simple issue of outlawry of war without any mental reservations and it would be possible for us to put faith in such intentions. Any other approach at this time would not only land us in entanglements from which we would find it difficult to extricate ourselves, except by prejudicing whatever advantages we have gained, but is also likely to be misunderstood and severely criticized by public opinion in India. I sometimes wonder, having regard to the present situation, whether we could really talk of peace with Pakistan when it is quite clear that it is thinking and preparing in terms of war and is doing everything possible to cast on us a burden which would break our back.

I am returning herewith the copy of the draft letter sent by you.

Yours

sd/-

Vallabhbhai Patel

The Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister,
New Delhi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1671. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, July 14, 1950.

Prime Minister Pakistan
Karachi

July 14th 1950

Dear Pandit Nehru,

Will you kindly refer to your letter of 17th February, 1950*, acknowledging my letter of 14th February regarding the issue of a joint declaration to settle all disputes between India and Pakistan through peaceful methods? You stated that you attached the greatest importance to this matter and would endeavour to send your considered reply as soon as possible. Recent events in the international sphere have lent added urgency and importance to this question and I hope you will be able to send your views at an early date.

Yours sincerely,

Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

* In his letter of 17th February Prime Minister acknowledged his letter of 14th February and promised a "considered reply" as soon as possible since "parliament is at present in session in addition to this we are having a meeting of the all India Congress Committee during the next two days" apart from the fact that the visit of the Prime Minister of Nepal was engaging his attention.
The Hon'ble
Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India.
New Delhi.

NOTE: The letter was replied by Nehru on February 24 (See Document No.1669) but the letter was never delivered to Liaquat Ali Khan due to some mix up in the Indian High Commission in Karachi. Nehru on August 29 wrote a fresh letter without referring to his earlier reply of 24 February.

1672. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.
New Delhi, August 29, 1950.
Prime Minister
India
New Delhi August 29, 1950

My dear Nawabzada,

I must apologise for the delay in answering your letter of the 14th July regarding the issue of a joint declaration by the Governments of India and Pakistan that they will settle all outstanding disputes between the two countries by peaceful methods. After our talks on Kashmir last month, I had to cope with an important session of Parliament and, since the session concluded, I have had a number of most pressing matters to attend to.

I have, in consultation with my colleagues, given the most careful consideration to our correspondence on the subject, in particular to the views expressed in your letter of the 14th February. We are glad to note that Pakistan desires most sincerely to remove all causes of friction with her neighbour, India, and to promote friendly relations, without which it is impossible for either country to achieve the full measure of its potential development. May I say that we fully reciprocate these sentiments? I am also happy to note that Pakistan welcomes the proposal to issue a joint declaration, the primary object of which must be to carry conviction to the peoples of India and Pakistan and the whole world, as to the sincerity of both Governments in renouncing war as a method of settling their disputes.

"To attain this object", you say, "it is essential that there should be tangible action to match the spirit of the declaration, since peoples and Governments are judged by their actions rather than by their words." I may assure you that, in suggesting that we should make the declaration first, and immediately afterwards, consider ways and means of settling outstanding disputes between our two countries, it was not my intention that action should not be prompt and in conformity with the spirit of the declaration. To mention the three more important disputes:

(i) We have had personal discussions about Jammu and Kashmir and the matter should soon come up before the Security Council;

(ii) As regards evacuee property also, there have been discussions, since the conclusion of the Delhi Pact, between our two Governments, and my colleague, Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar, hopes to renew these in Karachi in the near future with a view to an early settlement;

(iii) The letter that you have sent me recently regarding the dispute over canal waters is receiving attention now and I hope to be able to address you shortly on the subject.

These instances support my contention that individual disputes have to be and can be dealt with most satisfactorily by separate consideration. What is, in our view, psychologically important is that this separate consideration of individual disputes should take place in an atmosphere of friendly understanding. For this purpose, a short but comprehensive declaration to the effect that, whatever the differences between our two Governments, they will be settled peacefully and that both countries would be spared the horrors of a fratricidal war is desirable and should be adequate. I would, therefore, in all earnestness, again commend to you, for favourable consideration, the draft declaration that we sent you through our High Commissioner last December.

For convenient reference, I am enclosing a copy of the draft declaration proposed by us.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru
Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, September 26, 1950.

Prime Minister
Pakistan
Karachi

the 26th, September, 1950

My dear Pandit Nehru,

It would not be fair to you if I were to conceal from you the sense of disappointment I had on reading your letter of the 29th August, 1950, regarding the issue of a joint declaration by the Governments of India and Pakistan to settle all disputes between the two countries by peaceful methods. My first impulse was to write to you immediately on receiving your letter, but I decided to give myself more time to ponder over the matter: maybe I had failed to make my meaning clear.

2. The issue is very simple. We both agree that it is in the highest degree desirable that our two Governments should settle all disputes between the two countries by peaceful methods. We also agree that those peaceful methods are negotiation, mediation and arbitration. The only question outstanding is whether both of us also agree that if negotiation and mediation fail to produce agreement within a specified time, we shall proceed to arbitration. I had believed that since there was no other way open to us there could be no difference of opinion over resort to arbitration. I have read and reread your letter to see if you have really rejected the suggestion but although you have not given positive assent to it, I do not find anything in the letter which should make me conclude that you dissent from it.

3. Disputes between countries arise from a clash of real or fancied interests; and if they are not settled peacefully and promptly, international peace and security may be endangered. It is, therefore, necessary to make certain of settling disputes peacefully and promptly. Such settlement can come about either by mutual agreement secured through negotiation and mediation or, if these should fail, through arbitration by an independent and impartial body. There is no other method of settling disputes peacefully. If we have no provision for proceeding to arbitration after negotiation and mediation have failed in the judgment of one or both parties, we may continue in a futile and endless round of negotiations and mediation which would put an intolerable strain upon goodwill and friendliness between the two countries. Frankly, this is what is happening at present. All this is so obvious that I feel considerably embarrassed in having to put it to you at such length.

4. You have enclosed with your letter the original draft declaration with which we started the consideration of this matter nearly ten months ago. I had pointed out then how this draft by failing to lay down the procedure for settling disputes would not achieve the object we both so ardently desire. To my mind, the whole essence of the proposed declaration that all disputes will be settled by peaceful methods lies in devising a procedure by which disputes will in actual fact be resolved peacefully. Without this, the declaration will lose in value and significance and might appear to be a rather unnecessary repetition of certain portions of the United Nations Charter to which both our countries are already pledged. I had hoped that the many months' thought which you have given to this question would have convinced you of the soundness of the arguments, in favour of a precise, prompt and effective procedure such as that proposed in the draft declaration given at the end of my letter of 14th February, 1950 (copy enclosed for facility of reference). If there is anything in this declaration which you consider open to objection or against the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations, I would be glad to consider it.

I should perhaps make it clear that the declaration proposed by me will be issued as soon as you give your assent to it: it was never my intention to hold it up until outstanding disputes had actually been settled. All that I have throughout been concerned with is that a firm procedure for settling disputes should be agreed upon.

5. I would again request you to give further thought to the consideration I have set out above. I have turned over this question in my mind for months and I am convinced that a clear-cut procedure which operates equally to the advantage or disadvantage of both sides and which would demonstrate to the peoples of India and Pakistan and to the whole world the sincerity and firm resolve of both Governments to settle all disputes peacefully will serve the best interest of our two countries.

6. My colleagues and I attach the greatest importance to this declaration. We regard it not merely as a proclamation of intentions, but as a solemn agreement which no matter what strains and stresses we undergo, should irrevocably bind our two countries in a concord of peace and friendship.

Yours sincerely

Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

The Hon. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

**********
ANNEXURE

“The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples, hereby declare that they will not resort to war for settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that settlement of such disputes shall always be sought through peaceful methods of negotiation and mediation and, if these should fail to bring settlement, by resort to arbitration of all points of difference including those relating to the procedure for arbitration. They undertake that they will abide by the award of an arbitral Tribunal, which shall consist of for the settlement of all existing disputes: In the event of their not being unanimous, the decision of the majority shall be binding. Negotiations for the settlement of all such disputes shall begin as early as practicable, and such of them as are not settled by negotiation within two months from the date of this declaration shall be referred to mediation, for which a further period of two months shall be allowed. Any matters remaining unsettled at the expiry of this period shall be referred to arbitration.

In pursuance of this declaration, both Governments hereby agree to refer to this arbitral Tribunal differences which have arisen or may arise in implementation of the UNCP’s Resolutions of August 13th, 1948, and January 5th, 1949, which both Governments have accepted for settlement of the Kashmir dispute. Both Governments also agree that the canal water dispute shall, if no agreement is reached by negotiation or mediation, be referred to the International Court of Justice for decision. In other disputes outstanding between them such as Junagadh and its neighbouring States, evacuee property, boundary disputes and claims relating to assets, both Governments agree that if no settlement is reached by negotiation or mediation the matter shall be referred to the arbitral Tribunal. It is their earnest hope as well as their firm conviction that implementation of this Declaration and the spirit which lies behind it will serve to promote friendly relations between the two countries and advance the cause of International peace*

◆◆◆◆◆
1674. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, October 8, 1950.

Prime Minister
India
New Delhi

October 8, 1950

My dear Nawabzada,

I thank you for your letter of the 27th September 1950. I received it only on the 4th October; this was due to a mistake in our High Commissioner's office in Karachi and explains the delay in my answering it.

I have read the letter with care, and I am as disappointed as you are that what appeared a simple proposition should lead to so much argument and difference in approach.

It is obvious that the difficulty arises not so much in the proposition itself, but rather in the complicated background of Indo-Pakistan relations. Only two or three days ago I read the speech on the Kashmir issue that you delivered before your Parliament. If you believe that our actions are based on fraud or an attempt to deceive, then anything that I may write, or any declaration that we might make, cannot have much value for you.

How then are we to proceed? We cannot get rid of this evil background suddenly or by a wave of some magical wand. Nor can we devise any procedure which will remove all difficulties which are inherent in the situation. Yet, we can act sometimes during a crisis in a way to break the vicious circle.

We live in changing and dynamic times. The world hangs on the edge of a precipice. Our own peoples look with suspicion at each other. There are many problems which come in the way of good relations. I should like to find some panacea for all the problems and diseases from which we suffer, but life is not made that way. Even so I do not despair of finding a solution because, in the nature of things, India and Pakistan will have to find one for their problems. But it would be vain to imagine that we can solve these problems by mere formulae or some form of words. A solution will come, sooner or later, but it will have to spring from other sources.

What was the proposal I put to you last year regarding a no-war declaration? It was a simple declaration to be made by the Governments of India and Pakistan to the effect that they will not resort to war for settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. Further, that a settlement of such disputes shall always be sought through peaceful methods of negotiation and mediation and, if these should fail to bring a settlement, by resort to arbitration or reference to a tribunal. You say this was too simple because it did not lay down a strict timetable and the exact procedure to be followed in each case. I confess I do not see how, in the complicated world that we live in, we can lay down a rigid timetable or lay down an identical procedure for all manner of disputes that may arise. These disputes may be political, economic or financial; they may be justiciable or not. The difference of opinion between us has been as to whether a uniform procedure, including a timetable, should be set out in the proposed declaration as being applicable to all disputes, present or future, or the declaration should be in general terms as proposed by us and the procedure for each dispute should be agreed upon with specific regard to its nature and relevant circumstances.

I am sorry that you should think that the declaration will lose in value and significance unless it describes the procedure by which disputes will in actual fact be resolved peacefully. I still fail to see how one uniform procedure could be assumed to or would in fact cover all disputes, be they existing or future ones. What may be called justiciable disputes, for example, those relating to canal waters and evacuee property, could and should be referred to arbitration, if other methods of settlement, namely, negotiation and mediation, fail. Disputes that are predominantly political, for example, the one relating to Kashmir, can, in our view, be settled in the last resort only by agreement between Governments. We also feel that a uniform time limit of two months for negotiation and two months for mediation is likely to break down in practice in many cases. The issues involved may be so complex that, with the best will in the world, negotiators and mediators may be unable to finish their work within two months. It would hardly be fair to suggest that, even when negotiation or mediation holds out reasonable hope of success, the process should automatically be abandoned in favour of arbitration at the end of two months.

I am not aware of any instance where two independent nations have bound themselves down to refer every dispute, whatever its nature, to a particular authority, much less to an external authority. There is the well known case of Canada and the United States of America. They created an International Commission, consisting of representatives of the two countries, for settlement of certain disputes. But that Commission had no outside member in it, and it dealt only with certain specified types of disputes between the two countries. I would gladly agree to any similar procedure for India and Pakistan. But, inevitably, it will have to deal with certain specified types of disputes and a commission appointed for the purpose will consist only of an equal number of judges chosen by India and Pakistan respectively. It is true that there is always a possibility of a lack of agreement between the members of the commission, but if they are judges of the highest standing, they will consider the issues before them in a judicial spirit and are highly likely to come to a unanimous or majority decision. Even if they fail to agree, the area of difference will have been narrowed down by the measure of agreement reached and only the outstanding point or points of difference will remain to be dealt with. The two Governments could then consider the matter afresh, including the question of reference to a third party. To think ab initio of a third party will lessen the sense of responsibility of the judges and will also be a confession of our continued dependence on others. That would hardly be becoming of proud and self-respecting independent nations.

 On 5 October, Liaquat Ali alleged that India had evaded her commitments on Kashmir by "quibbling, evasion and obstruction under the smoke - screen of moral platitudes." He urged the Security Council either to compel India to honour the agreement on a plebiscite, or to give its own decision, or to provide for arbitration.

Coming to specific disputes, I think that it will serve little purpose for me, at this stage and in this letter, to discuss the Kashmir issue. It is a non-justiciable and political issue and cannot be disposed off by reference to a judicial tribunal.

Then there is the question of the exchange ratio* (of Pakistani rupee to the Indian). This is in the hands of one of the specialised agencies of the United Nations, namely, the International Monetary Fund. We had hoped that the Fund would make recommendations on the subject in the course of its last meeting at Paris. Unfortunately this subject was postponed and we have to wait for their decision.

This leaves us with the questions of evacuee property and canal waters. We wrote to you about both of these sometime ago and suggested a precise method for their final settlement. We have had no answer from you to that proposal; but you have referred to it in the course of your speech on Kashmir before the Pakistan Parliament, and I regret to find from that brief reference that you do not view our proposal with favour. Your main objection appears to be that the judges from India and Pakistan may not agree with each other and there is no provision for meeting that contingency. You seem to think that such disagreement is almost certain to occur and that only outsiders can decide for us. I confess that I am unable to appreciate the force of this argument, which, as I have indicated above, reduces us to a dependent status relying upon the pleasure of others; this is something wholly repugnant to me and, in my view, incompatible with the dignity of both India and Pakistan.

If you read the two last letters that I have written to you, namely, the one dealing with the no-war declaration and the other with canal waters and evacuee property, you will find that, in effect, we have suggested not only a general and rather vague declaration, but also a precise method of dealing with what might be called justiciable issues. I have suggested a judicial tribunal of high standing to consider and decide the questions of canal waters and evacuee property. I am perfectly prepared to extend this principle to any other justiciable issue. Thus we provide not only for present disputes but for future disputes except those which cannot be considered by a judicial tribunal. I think we have gone farther in making this proposal than any two nations have ever gone. If we agree on this basis, it will not only be a great thing for India and Pakistan but also something that will powerfully impress the world at a time when despair is seizing it.

---

Pakistan had decided, in June 1948, to treat the Pakistan rupee at par with the Indian rupee until 30 September 1949, but it declined to devalue her currency when India devalued the rupee on 18 September 1949, consequent upon devaluation of the pound sterling the same day. On 22 September 1949, Pakistan decided not to transact any business in Indian currency pending new arrangements.

I cannot myself see how we can go into greater detail either in regard to timing or procedure. I regret, therefore, that I am unable to accept the draft declaration proposed by you. I would beg of you to give thought to the considerations I have urged in this letter. I would gladly add to my draft a reference to our constituting a joint tribunal, as I have suggested, for the final decision of the evacuee property and canal waters problems, and to say that the decision of the majority shall be binding. Further I shall be willing to say that this tribunal may also consider any other matters in dispute which are justiciable.

A joint declaration of this kind will be complete in itself. I have not the least doubt that it would go a very long way in removing the tensions that unfortunately exist between India and Pakistan, and would produce an atmosphere of friendliness which would help us to solve every problem or dispute, present or future, which might arise between India and Pakistan. It would affect, of course, our two countries but it would also affect Asia and the world. For the scope of the proposal could, in time, be extended to other neighbouring countries. This would create a wide area where there would be some assurance of peace, even though the rest of this world were foolish enough to jump into the abyss of war. Last year, when I made my proposal, the world situation was none too good but there was no immediate danger of a world war. As I write this letter, that danger is far greater; so is the necessity for dispassionate judgment and for a refusal to be swept by others into a bottomless gulf.

I am as anxious as you are that a decision in this matter, which has long been the subject of correspondence between us, should be reached without further delay, and shall be grateful for an early answer.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

Hon’ble Liaquat Ali Khan,
Prime Minister of Pakistan
Karachi.
1675. Letter from Prime Minister Jawharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, October 19, 1950.

Prime Minister India
New Delhi
No. 1640 - P.M. October 19, 1950

My dear Nawabzada,

I have received your acknowledgement to my last letter to you about the proposed "NO WAR" declaration between India and Pakistan. I well realise how fully occupied you must be and yet I venture to suggest that it is in the highest interest of both our countries to expedite a decision. Apart from the joint declaration which we have suggested, we have also suggested a judicial tribunal of the highest standing to decide two of our major issues, namely, evacuee property and canal waters. I would, be grateful if some steps could be taken in this direction as soon as possible.

2. I am constrained to write to you, more specially, because of the continuous propaganda in the Pakistan Press in regard to Kashmir. Interviews and statements are published frequently demanding war with India, over this issue and "a resort to the sword". Whether these statements are irresponsible or not, I cannot say, but I have seen no authoritative contradiction of them, and they are bound to affect public opinion greatly, in Pakistan.

3. I have stated on several occasions, and I repeated this at my press conference a few days ago, that so far as India is concerned, we would not resort to war in Kashmir unless we were attacked afresh. That is an unequivocal statement by which we stand. If you could also make a similar statement on behalf of Pakistan this would go far to remove the fears and tension that our countries suffer from at present.

Yours sincerely,

Sd. Jawaharlal Nehru

The Hon'ble Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan, Prime Minister of Pakistan, Karachi.

◆◆◆◆◆
Prime Minister Pakistan
Karachi, the 21st October 1950

My dear Pandit Nehru,

Your letter of 8th October, 1950, has given me a somewhat clearer idea of how your mind is working on the question of pacific settlement of disputes, but I am still puzzled by your hesitation to refer disputes to arbitration where negotiation and mediation fail to find a solution.

2. You have criticised the procedure suggested by me on the ground that it lays down a rigid timetable and an identical procedure for all manner of disputes. I suggested two months for negotiation and two months for mediation to prevent indefinite prolongation of disputes or stalling by the party that may be in a position of undue advantage. If you think this is too rigid, we need not lay down a timetable, but provide that if either party comes to the conclusion that no further progress can be made by negotiation or mediation, it may refer the matter to arbitration. The essential point is to make a firm provision for resort to arbitration when negotiation and mediation fail to produce results. There is no danger of the matter being taken to arbitration prematurely for if a party can obtain a fair deal by negotiation or mediation, it would not go to arbitration where it would have no hand in shaping the decision.

Your second objection relates to uniformity of procedure, and this, if I understand you right, is really an objection against having to refer a matter to arbitration if negotiation and mediation fail. You apparently feel that arbitration by an independent Tribunal is incompatible with the dignity of a sovereign State. Undoubtedly, all references of disputes to International bodies are to some extent a surrender of national sovereignty. But this is a concept which has now been accepted by all nations and is the foundation of the U.N. Charter. That disputes should arise at all, or having arisen should not be resolved quickly is a part of the imperfections of human nature. One cannot rise above those imperfections by ignoring the fact that conflicts of interest do arise and that an impartial person with no direct interest in the matter is in a better position to take a fair and just view than the parties concerned in the dispute. I am convinced that pacific settlement of all disputes is unattainable unless in a conflict of interest between two or more States, they are prepared to abide by the decision of an independent body. This is no more than a continuation of the process for extending the rule of law over larger and larger areas of human relations on which ultimately the hopes of mankind must rest. A sovereign State has within its own sphere of action complete liberty to pursue its interest as it thinks best. But where those interests come into clash with the interests of another State and a dispute arises, I maintain that it is not derogatory to their dignity or sovereignty if neither of them insists on being the judge in the matter. Sentiments of national prestige should not, in my view, be allowed to stand in the way of a just and speedy settlement of disputes with one's neighbours. Such sentiments have inflicted enormous misery and suffering on mankind. For us in Asia, it is particularly important to learn a lesson from the havoc wrought by the unbridled nationalism of the last century.

You have referred to the arrangement between Canada and the United States, whereby they refer certain disputes to a Commission of representatives from the two countries. I believe this arrangement was made at a time when the International Court of Justice was not in existence. I am inclined to the view that the creation of the International Court of Justice and the voluntary acceptance of its jurisdiction by various countries marks a much bigger step forward towards peace and progress. In addition, ad hoc tribunals are set up for settling disputes between independent countries. Only recently Afghanistan and Iran agreed to refer the dispute over the apportionment of the waters of the Helmond river to an independent tribunal of three nations. For the matter of that both of us appointed Justice Bagge of Sweden as the Chairman of the Tribunal in our boundary dispute and agreed to abide by his award. I do not, therefore, think that the appointment of an independent tribunal for arbitration is in any way inconsistent with national honour, prestige or independence.

There is, however, one aspect in which the proposal that I have made marks an important advance over anything that has happened before in human history and that advance consists in the obligation voluntarily accepted of referring to arbitration every dispute that our two countries fail to resolve by negotiation and mediation. Such a provision would, to my mind, provide the greatest incentive towards the success of our efforts to settle disputes by direct negotiation. It would encourage moderation and reasonableness on both sides. It would be the first example in history of two independent nations agreeing to settle all their disputes by peaceful methods. It would put India and Pakistan in the vanguard of human progress.

I do not propose in this letter to deal with the question of which disputes are justiciable and which are not or to the kind of tribunal to which particular disputes should be referred. I am here merely on the point of principle. In the letter I wrote a few days ago regarding the canal waters dispute, I have requested you to elaborate your proposals for an ad hoc Court, but what I have stated above is relevant in that context also.

Yours sincerely,
Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

The Hon'ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India, New Delhi.

1677. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, October 23, 1950.

Prime Minister
Pakistan
Karachi

the 23rd October 1950

My dear Pandit Nehru,

I was on the point of sending my reply to your letter of 8th October regarding the 'No - war declaration' when I received your letter of 19th October. I let my reply issue as it stood and am now dealing with the points in your letter of the 19th. In my letter of 21st October I did not go into the treatment of particular disputes for the reason that if we can agree on a general line of action, we should be able to deal with each 4 individual dispute more successfully.

You have referred to the statement made by you a few days ago that you would not resort to war in Kashmir unless you were attacked. I also want to settle all our disputes peacefully. As I pointed out in my letter of 14th February, 1950, the fact that we are both members of the United Nations and signatories to its Charter means that we are committed to peaceful methods for the settlement of our disputes; and this applies to Kashmir as much as to any other dispute. I made this quite clear in my speech on Kashmir on the 5th October. But the real obstacle in the way of a settlement of the Kashmir question is your refusal to carry out demilitarization so that an impartial plebiscite can be held. Kashmir is the key to relations between India and Pakistan. To us in Pakistan, the occupation of Kashmir by India is an attempt to dominate Pakistan and to place Pakistan at India's mercy economically and strategically. Perhaps you would appreciate my point of view better if I were to recall to your mind what you said on an issue which you now regard as dead, but which in fact is alive, namely, Junagadh. You said then that Junagadh's accession to Pakistan "cannot but be regarded by the Government of India as an encroachment on India's sovereignty and territory and inconsistent with friendly relations that should exist between the two Dominions". This applies many-fold to Kashmir vis-a-vis Pakistan and India.

All attempts to solve the Kashmir problem have failed because of your insistence to keep Indian armed forces in effective control of Kashmir. The dispute has been before the United Nations for nearly three years, but every suggestion for demilitarization made by any agency of the United Nations has been unacceptable to you. Our personal discussions have also led to no results. How is then a solution to be reached, if no peaceful method of settlement, neither direct negotiation nor mediation nor arbitration by organs of the United Nations, are acceptable to you?

It is only effective demilitarization as required by the Resolutions of the Security Council as well as of the UNCIP which both the countries have accepted that can bring about a real sense of peace. If you are prepared to do this, it would be a far more powerful contribution to peace and friendship between India and Pakistan than any 'No - war' declaration.

Of one thing I can assure you: I am determined to endeavour to the utmost to have a peaceful settlement of all disputes including Kashmir.

Yours sincerely

Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

The Hon'ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India, New Delhi.
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, October 27, 1950.

My dear Nawabzada,

I have received your three letters dated respectively the 18th, the 21st and 23rd October. The first deals with the disputes relating to canal waters and evacuee property, the other two with the proposals for a no-war declaration and the connected problem of the settlement of all disputes between our two Governments, present as well as future. I have also seen an official note dated the 18th October addressed to the Government of India by your Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations through our High Commission in Pakistan.

2. I have read all these communications with great care. Since the disputes relating to canal waters and evacuee property are part of the issues now outstanding between India and Pakistan, and the specific method of solving them that I have suggested is susceptible, in our view, of extension to the settlement of other disputes of a like nature, it seems reasonable to treat them as part of the general problem. I have, therefore, decided to deal with your three letters together.

3. To take up, first, the question of a no-war declaration and the general problem of settling present and future disputes between our two countries. You will forgive me if I say that I have been disappointed by what you have written on the subject. If I may ask: Is it not our aim to avoid war between our two countries in any circumstances, and to resolve all our disputes by peaceful methods alone? I do not wish to repeat the arguments that I have put forward in my previous letters. You will remember that the no-war declaration suggested by me specifically mentions arbitration by special agency set up by mutual agreement or by agreed reference to some international body recognized by both of us. There is no question, therefore, of our ruling out arbitration, as you seem to suggest. What we pointed out was that disputes between nations are of many different kinds and it is not possible to devise a uniform method of dealing with all kinds of disputes, whatever their nature. In some cases and at some stage arbitration may be desirable, whether by a mutually agreed special agency or by an international body that both India and Pakistan recognize. Disputes may or may not be justiciable. Some kinds of political disputes are obviously not justiciable, nor can all be referred to arbitration.
4. To the foregoing, I added a corollary in my letter to you of the 19th October. I said that I had stated on previous occasions, and repeated at a recent press conference, that India would not resort to war in Kashmir unless we were attacked. This is an unequivocal statement by which we stand regardless of what Pakistan may say. I had asked you to make a similar statement on behalf of Pakistan as this would go far to remove the fears and tension from which our countries suffer. I had brought this matter to your notice more especially because the Pakistan press and the statements of many prominent persons in Pakistan have been full of appeals for war against India for many months past. I had hoped that you would condemn this kind of talk in emphatic terms and make a declaration similar to mine. That you have not done so is likely to encourage the inference that there is a possibility of Pakistan attacking India, even though there might be no attack by India on Pakistan. I can only regard this as unfortunate.

5. In regard to two of the major disputes between our two countries, viz., canal waters and evacuee property, negotiations over a protracted period failed to produce any result. We, therefore, suggested immediate reference to a tribunal of the highest standing, consisting of two judges from India and two judges from Pakistan. There was no question of delay in this.

6. You ask me to send a draft of the convention governing the composition, the authority, the rules of decision and procedure, etc., of this tribunal which we have suggested. I am afraid I have not quite followed what you mean by a convention. Clearly there must be agreement between us regarding the composition of the tribunal, its terms of reference and powers. The composition has already been dealt with. As regards the tribunal’s powers, I think we should lay it down that it should have final authority to deal with the matters referred to it. The judges can decide unanimously or by majority. They will have all the powers of superior courts in regard to summoning of witnesses, etc. They will settle their procedure and method of working, as such tribunals do. We must invest the tribunal with the highest authority and not make it feel that it is just a stepping stone to something else. We must agree to abide by its decision in all matters referred to it.

7. As to what should happen if, unfortunately, there is an equal division of opinion among the judges, our view is that the two Governments must first consider those parts of the disputes which have not been finally decided and try to settle them themselves or, failing that, resort to arbitration or adjudication either by a mutually agreed special agency or an international organisation recognised by both Governments. Once this principle is accepted, the terms of reference can be settled between the two Governments acting in consultation. The procedure, to my mind, is quite simple and straightforward.
8. We have suggested that this tribunal might also deal with other justiciable matters that might be referred to it, now or later. When the moment so to enlarge its functions comes, we can draw up an appropriate convention or agreement.

9. I pointed out in my previous letters how such a tribunal was preferable to any foreign court or tribunal. That did not mean that we should not refer any particular matter or any remaining points of dispute to the International Court of Justice or any other authority that we select, if the necessity for this arises.

10. Before concluding, I should like to refer to certain points relating to the canal waters dispute which you have mentioned in your letter of the 18th instant. I am surprised at your statement that supplies of water to Pakistan were not restored until after Pakistan’s signatures were affixed to the Agreement of May 4, 1948. This is a simple question of fact, which can easily be verified. We sent you a telegram on the 29th April 1948, in which it was stated that orders were being issued immediately for resumption of water supply from the Upper Bari Doab and Dimalpur canals. On the 1st of May you were good enough to acknowledge this telegram. Orders to renew the supply of water were issued immediately and renewal of supply actually took place on the 3rd May; the slight delay between the order to renew supplies and the actual renewal was unavoidable as the authorities concerned required a little time to carry out the orders. The agreement was signed on the 4th May evening. Perhaps I may claim to speak with some authority on this subject, because I was present at that Conference. Paragraph 2 of the Agreement itself shows that the East Punjab Government had revived the flow of water into these canals before the Agreement on 4th May was signed. Moreover, Pakistan’s representatives, who included Mr. Ghulam Mohammad and the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India as well as a Minister of the West Punjab Government, can testify to the fact. There was no question of coercion about this Agreement. Indeed, it was one of the happiest agreements arrived at in a friendly, cooperative atmosphere and no one then, or for long afterwards, ever raised the complaint which has recently been made on behalf of Pakistan.

11. The second paragraph in your letter of the 18th October is not quite correct and raises certain controversial issues about which we have had a lengthy correspondence in the past. Our position is that we shall continue the supply of water to the two canals, until the dispute is settled, in accordance with the Agreement of the 4th May 1948. I sincerely hope that this dispute will be expeditiously settled; indeed, I am confident that if we set up quickly the tribunal that we have proposed, a satisfactory settlement will soon be reached. I regret, however, that I cannot undertake to stop the new irrigation projects that we now have in hand.

12. You refer to a commission of engineers. It has been and is our view that no proper consideration of the canal waters question can take place without a technical survey carried out by engineers. For this reason, we have been pressing for such a technical survey. This was not meant to delay matters but to expedite them. In view, however, of your Government's attitude in regard to this matter, we have expressed our willingness to refer the canal waters issue at once to the ad hoc tribunal we have suggested. If your Government agrees, we can appoint the tribunal as well as the commission of engineers. Alternatively, we can go ahead with the tribunal, and leave it to that body to appoint the commission of engineers.

13. As I have written to you previously, we cannot consider the Kashmir issue in this connection. I shall always be glad to discuss that with you separately.

14. To conclude, the position seems to be this. If you agree to the no-war declaration that we have suggested, we can go ahead with it. If you do not agree, then the matter will have to be dropped for the present, much though I should regret this. In any event, there appears to be no reason whatever why we should not immediately agree to the constitution of a tribunal, on the lines indicated, for the final settlement of the evacuee property and canal waters disputes. Both are urgent and the procedure suggested by us for getting them out of the way is relatively simple. I would, therefore, beg of you to consider them independently and reach a decision.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Hon'ble Liaquat Ali Khan,
Prime Minister,
Government of Pakistan
Karachi.
My dear Pandit Nehru,

Thank you for your letter of the 24th November, 1950. It reached me last evening after 3.00 P.M. I am afraid in this letter you have raised so many issues that I feel constrained to send an immediate reply despite my numerous preoccupations.

2. I shall begin with the "No War Declaration". I am sincerely sorry that I have failed to convince you that a mere "declaration" of good intentions on our part unsubstantiated by concrete acts would carry conviction to nobody. May I, therefore, seek once again to convince you by drawing your attention to the logical end of an argument you have yourself advanced? In your letter you point out that in spite of the Charter of the United Nations, fierce disputes and impassioned arguments are in progress between nations. May I request you to pause and think why? I am myself convinced that if the leaders of the great powers agreed to issue a simple 'no war declaration' of the type you suggest it would not make the least difference. That is why I suggested and suggest once again that we should put substance and body in our declaration by devising a concrete procedure to solve some pending and all future disputes between India and Pakistan.

4. My statement that the crux of the difficulty is the reluctance of your Government to substitute on any issue impartial arbitration for threatened and actual use of force seems to have surprised you. I must confess, however, that your categorical assertion that you have never resorted to or threatened to resort to force to settle disputes with Pakistan has surprised me even more. I sincerely hope and trust that you have not forgotten that your military forces have occupied Junagadh and its neighbouring States which lawfully acceded to Pakistan and form part of its territories. I shall not refer to another sorry episode elsewhere which is still pending before the Security Council but I may remind you that not so long ago there was a large scale movement of the military forces of India and a considerable building up of warlike stores in forward areas very close to the borders of Pakistan. This was just before I came to Delhi for the conversations which resulted in the Delhi Agreement. You may recall that on that occasion you made a statement in your Parliament that you were on the brink of a precipice. It is with this background of uneasy Indo-Pakistan relations... that I have been trying to persuade you that in the disputes that exist between India and Pakistan both you and I should take a more realistic view of the situation and not delude ourselves and our peoples into seeking solace in empty platitudes. You have referred to the failure of Sir Owen Dixon’s mission and have drawn my attention to the fact that you have made a statement in one of your press conferences that India would not resort to war in Kashmir unless she is attacked. This is reassuring since Pakistan has no intention of attacking India. I have also declared over and over again that Pakistan wants peaceful settlement of the Kashmir question. Only Pakistan is irrevocably opposed to India gaining control of Kashmir by force against the will of the people and since India is in the military occupation of large areas in Jammu and Kashmir including the Valley it is obviously to India’s advantage to prevent any plebiscite being held. Pakistan could not possibly acquiesce in this position.

13. When you have had an opportunity to consider fully the views I have put forward, I believe it will serve the interests of our countries if we meet personally. I would very much welcome a visit by you to Karachi as soon as your duties permit.

Yours sincerely,

(Sd.) Liaquat Ali Khan

The Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

◆◆◆◆◆
Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, November 21, 1950.

Prime Minister Pakistan
Karachi

the 21st November, 1950

My dear Pandit Nehru,

If I have taken longer than usual in replying to your letter of October 27th, it is because I thought that time would be saved in the long run if I reviewed carefully our correspondence and analysed our respective points of view with the single purpose of finding a, constructive course of action.

2. For almost a year we have discussed ways of resolving our disputes by peaceful means. You have proposed that our Governments declare jointly that they will not resort to war. I have endeavoured to persuade you that such a Declaration by itself is not enough and that the way to resolve our disputes without resort to force is to adopt procedures for resolving them peacefully. I have proposed specific, concrete procedures that provide for automatic arbitration on all issues where negotiation fails. I suggested a substantive "No War Declaration" to this effect. This you have not accepted.

3. It seems to me that if we are to move forward we must face squarely what it is that has prevented India from accepting my "No War Declaration". Reviewing our correspondence, it becomes quite clear that the crux of the difficulty is the reluctance of your Government to substitute on any issue impartial arbitration for threatened and actual use of force. India has been unwilling to accept the decision of an impartial arbiter on any issue now outstanding. Pakistan is and has been willing to accept the decision of an impartial arbiter on every issue outstanding between us.

4. By joining the United Nations our countries have already renounced the use or threatened use of non-pacific means of every kind. We have subscribed to the statute of the International Court of Justice. We have agreed in the Charter of the United Nations that our legal disputes as a rule should be referred by us to that Court. A bare announcement that we will not declare war unless attacked add nothing to these commitments. If anything, it detracts from them. Against the background of the past two and a half years, an announcement that fails to substitute arbitration for compulsion, whether war is declared or not, will fail to carry conviction that there will be no resort to force.

5. During the past years our joint undertaking to accept the decision of a free and impartial PLEBISCITE of the inhabitants of Kashmir has remained a hollow declaration owing to the refusal of your Government to implement this Agreement and the Resolutions of the United Nations Commission and the Security Council. Your Government has rejected every recommendation that their armed forces be withdrawn while Pakistan has, agreed that its armed forces be withdrawn, in order to certify that the PLEBISCITE may take place without undue influence or compulsion by either side. When it was proposed to each of our Governments that we accept an impartial arbiter to settle the differences over the interpretation of the Agreement brought about by the United Nations, Pakistan agreed. India did not. You say that the matter is not justiciable. Certainly we do not think as well that the interpretation of an International Agreement is eminently justiciable but even if the matter were not justiciable, this would be only that impartial arbitration should be other than a Court of Law. The fact that a dispute is not justiciable is not a valid reason for refusing to accept the impartial decision of experienced and understanding statesmen. Your willingness to accept arbitration of the interpretation of our Kashmir Agreement will demonstrate more than a mere declaration of the determination of your Government to resolve this issue by peaceful means.

6. At the time of Partition the Indian representatives joined in declaring that there was no question of varying the shares of the two new countries in our Common Waters required for irrigation. Since then India has sought to compel acceptance of greatly increased supplies for India at the expense of irrigation vital to Pakistan. Taking advantage of its position as the upstream RIPARIAN, India arbitrarily cut off during the critical sowing season in spring of 1948 the supplies of water of every Pakistan canal that crossed the boundary. Contrary to information you have received - and no doubt contrary to your personal wishes and orders—the flows were not resumed until after your Government sought to exact certain conditions inimical to Pakistan. Not until certain of these conditions were met was the flow restored in the Central Bari Doab Canal, and it has not yet been restored in the Bahawalpur State distributary. Even your recent assurance that Partition supplies will not again be cut off has since been qualified by conditions which your Government know that Pakistan cannot accept. Our repeated requests to submit the canal waters dispute to the International Court of Justice have not been accepted.

7. Only after two and a half years have your Government accepted even the principle that the Water Dispute should be adjudicated. Instead however of accepting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice you have proposed the creation of a new Tribunal consisting of two Indian and two Pakistan Judges. If, as may be expected, a Tribunal so composed will be deadlocked, you suggest that the parties might negotiate a new Agreement to submit the stalemate to another Tribunal which this time presumably would consist of an odd number of Judges some of whom would be nationals neither of India nor of Pakistan. This counter-proposal contains a double veto and permits of endless delay. Meanwhile you intimate that your Government had decided to continue the construction of new irrigation projects designed to appropriate more water at the expense of Pakistan. Yet the right to do this is the very issue to be adjudicated.

8. Notwithstanding our apprehensions over this alternative to the International Court and the prejudice to Pakistan threatened in expansion of your irrigation projects during the delay involved, we will, as I indicated in my letter of October 18th, keep an open mind and study sympathetically the draft of governing convention of agreement which has been requested. If this draft provides for a Court that will assure effective adjudication Pakistan will accept. I do hope that we may have that draft in the near future.

9. Without qualifying in any way what I have just said, I must frankly confess to you that the more we have studied your counter-proposal the more clearly does it appear to us that the International Court would best serve your suggested purpose is well, as ours. It has the great advantage of independence, impartiality and unquestioned competence without being in any sense a foreign Court. It is our Court. India and Pakistan by accepting the statute of the Court and agreeing to its jurisdiction, far from impairing their sovereignty, exercised it in aligning themselves with those nations that have freely, chosen to live under the rule of law. By submitting our water dispute to that Court and abiding by its decision we again demonstrate that the highest act of sovereignty is to act in conformity with International Law. The International Court stands for the very same high principles of international conduct with which you have always identified yourself.

10. There are also many practical considerations weighing in favour of international conformity. The court is already functioning successfully. No detailed Agreement need be worked out to fix its composition, its jurisdiction, its rules of procedure or of decision. As you and your advisers consider the actual terms of the Draft Agreement governing the Tribunal you propose, I believe you will come to appreciate the full merit of the International Court. I therefore again request that rather than postpone settlement while seeking to create a new Tribunal as good as the International Court, we accept now the jurisdiction of that court to examine the Canal Waters dispute.

11. We have failed by negotiation to reach agreement as to the fair division of our common waters owing to widely divergent views as to our legal rights. The International Court would probably not have to go beyond definition of principles involved. Once this is done we should have little difficulty in applying the legal principles that are laid down.

12. Turning to the matter of Evacuee Property I have had difficulty in finding what questions of a legal nature are involved. To be sure the value of property in a region that requires irrigation depends upon an authoritative definition of that region's rights to a continuation of its water supplies. Apart from that the question seems to be factual and economic. Furthermore, if India will accept our repeated offers that there be freedom of sales and exchanges of urban Evacuee Property in both countries the problem will be reduced to manageable proportions. You have, moreover, our offer to establish concrete procedures to which we would be bound without any right of veto for reserving any matter, justiciable or not, that in the Evacuee Property question and in the other disputes cannot be resolved by mutual accommodation.

13. I will not lengthen this letter by reference to others of our disputes on which negotiations have failed. These include the question of Junagadh and neighbouring States that have acceded to Pakistan and the release of the assets of Pakistan now withheld by India.

14. My Government are prepared to reaffirm with yours the solemn engagements undertaken when we became members of the United Nations. We are willing to do more, but we are not willing to do less. The path of constructive statesmanship is, forms to eschew declarations without deeds and to avoid assuming to decide, by unilateral act or by vote, the merits of our own contentions. The solution to our problems will come, I am earnestly convinced, when each side, accepts adjudication of all issues that are justiciable and arbitration of all other issues. My Government are prepared to do this on every issue. I most earnestly hope that your Government will see fit to do the same.

Yours sincerely,

Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

The Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India, New Delhi.
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, November 24, 1950.

Prime Minister India
New Delhi November 24, 1950

My dear Nawabzada,

Thank you for your letter of the 21st November 1950. I can well appreciate, from my own experience, how busy you must have been. The subject matter of our correspondence is of sufficient importance to justify the fullest consideration. We have indeed given a great deal of consideration to this matter and have corresponded about it for a long time now. Unfortunately all this consideration has not, thus far, yielded any substantial result. Whether further correspondence on this subject will lead to a happier conclusion, I do not know. But I feel that I should reply to your letter fully so as to clear up any possible misunderstanding.

I am taking the earliest opportunity to do so, in spite of heavy work and many pre-occupations. Tomorrow morning I am leaving Delhi for two or three days.

2. Before dealing with other points, I should like to discuss the raison d’etre of our suggestion for a “no - war” Declaration. We thought, and subsequent events have proved it, that any complicated declaration would lead to interminable correspondence. We were anxious for an immediate step forward even though it might only be a first step. We were convinced that this would have given Indo-Pakistan problem a new orientation. Hence we suggested the simplest possible “no - war” Declaration. It is easy to criticise that, but can anyone doubt that such a declaration coming from our respective Governments would have made a tremendous difference in the relations between India and Pakistan and would have lightened the dark and heavy atmosphere that surrounds us?

3. We are fully aware of the obligations that our two countries, in common with many others, have accepted by becoming Members of the United Nations. But you know as well as I do that in spite of the brave and eloquent words of the Charter of the United Nations, fierce disputes and impassioned arguments are in progress at Lake Success, even as I write. Member nations look at each other with fear and suspicion and the world stands on the verge of catastrophe. It is even possible that the U.N. may change its original shape and character. All this is not the fault of the Charter but of fear which envelopes the nations of the world and drives them continuously in a wrong direction. Suppose that the leaders of the great powers met, or otherwise agreed, to issue a simple “no - war" declaration, such as I have suggested to you, would not that make a startling difference? There would be a great sigh of relief from hundreds of millions of people and imminent threat of war would, for the moment at least,ade away. A chance would be given to the nations to think calmly and dispasionately of their problems and possibly find a way out. And yet that simple declaration would contain nothing new. It would only be a reiteration of a part of the Charter.

4. We have had to contend also, in India and Pakistan, with this pervasive sense of fear and apprehension and the possibility of war between our two countries. This has been created by a variety of circumstances and by the persistence of certain disputes between Pakistan and India which remain unsolved. I have drawn your attention to the type of propaganda that has been going on in Pakistan and the belligerent character of certain speeches and writings in the Pakistan press about India. The Charter of the United Nations has not helped in stopping these speeches and writings or even in improving our relations. Nearly eight months ago, you and I met, under a happy inspiration, at a moment of deep crisis for our countries. After some discussion, we arrived at certain simple conclusions. There was nothing novel about them. But they were the result of an earnest approach by both sides, and, immediately, there was a remarkable change in the atmosphere of both countries. There was a cooling of temper and understanding replaced passion and prejudice. This psychological change did not solve any problem, but it went a long way to produce conditions favourable for a solution. After eight months, I think both of us can say with confidence that we did well and the results have justified our action.

5. This encouraged me to think that another move by us such as the one that I had suggested in the shape of a simple no - war declaration, would transform the minds of Indians and Pakistanis alike. To encumber that declaration with details of procedure and programme would be to weaken the effect, which was the main purpose of the declaration proposed by us. This does not mean, of course, that practical steps, including agreement on procedure and timing, would not be necessary for resolving specific disputes. In my previous letters to yon, I have attempted to deal as fully as I could with the mode of settling individual issues outstanding between our two countries.

6. You say that the crux of the difficulty in our reaching an agreement has been our reluctance to substitute, on any issue, impartial arbitration for threatened or actual use of force. I am greatly surprised at your reference to force and must deny categorically any suggestion that at any time, we have threatened resort to force to settle a dispute with Pakistan. Force has been used by Pakistan and by India against each other in Kashmir. I do not wish to repeat the sad story of Kashmir here. But you know well that we sent our troops to Kashmir under stress of grave emergency and when an invasion of Kashmir had already begun. I am convinced that we would have failed in our duty if we had not met this aggression and rescued Kashmir from it. After long denial that Pakistan forces had gone to Kashmir, this fact had to be admitted, and there they are still, with what justification, I have completely failed to understand. Even so, after the failure of Sir Owen Dixon's mission, I stated unequivocally that India would not attack Pakistan unless she was attacked first. I asked you to make a similar declaration on behalf of Pakistan, but to this you did not respond. I do not wish to enter into a controversy over this, but you will permit me to claim that my declaration should convince all reasonable persons of the genuineness of our pacific intentions. As regards impartial arbitration, I have never stated that we would not resort to it on any issue. But there are some issues, e.g., the future of Kashmir, which cannot be settled by arbitration. If I am not mistaken, your Minister for Kashmir Affairs, Mr. Gurmani, has expressed the same view publicly. In international affairs all kinds of issues arise. Some lend themselves to adjudication, some to arbitration and some to settlement only by agreement among the parties. To recognise this is not to refuse arbitration on matters which lend themselves to a settlement by this method.

7. Coming to the issues mentioned specifically in your letter, I shall take up Kashmir first. As I have said before, this matter is now before the United Nations. At no time have we resiled from any statement made or assurance given by us. The reasons for our inability to accept arbitration on certain points of dispute regarding the timing of the withdrawal of Pakistan forces, the disbandment and disarming of "Azad Kashmir" forces, and finally the withdrawal of Indian forces from Jammu and Kashmir territory, have been fully explained from time to time. Our contention has all along been that the phasing of the withdrawal of our forces must depend upon conditions that would enable us to discharge effectively our obligation to ensure the security of the State. We have certain obligations which we had solemnly undertaken. The maintenance of the security of the territory of Kashmir State is the paramount obligation of any Government which undertakes it. To fail in that duty is to betray the people of Kashmir and our own people. What forces are necessary for the purpose may be a matter for agreement by negotiation. It can hardly be a matter for arbitration.

8. In the course of the long discussions that have taken place in regard to Kashmir, we have always pointed out that it was essential for the origin of this trouble to be considered and decided upon; that unless this was done, any conclusion arrived at would lack reality. Unfortunately these discussions have concerned themselves with details and have ignored the aggression that has led to this conflict.
9. The question of canal waters has been the subject of many conferences and long correspondence. I do not wish to burden this letter with a repetition of what I have said previously on so many occasions. But I must point out that the statement in your letter that, "at the time of partition, Indian representatives joined in declaring that there was no question of varying the shares of the two new countries in our common waters required for irrigation" is not correct. When the matter came up before the Punjab Partition Committee, this was not agreed to. The correct position is set out briefly in subsequent paragraphs. Nor, as I have repeatedly pointed out, is it correct that India has, since partition, sought to compel acceptance of greatly increased supplies for India at the expense of irrigation vital to Pakistan. I am deeply distressed that the agreement reached between the two countries in May 1948, in a friendly spirit, and our honourable fulfillment of it, should be so distorted and denounced.

10. Since we disagree even about facts apart from interpretation, there is little use in my recapitulating at length what I have said before on the subject of this agreement. But I cannot let pass, without challenge, the charge now made that only after 2½ years, India has accepted the principle that the canal water dispute should be "adjudicated". As far back as May 1948, the Governments of India and Pakistan agreed "to approach the problem in a practical spirit on the basis of the East Punjab, (now Punjab, India) Government diminishing its supply to the Pakistan canals, in order to enable the West Punjab (now Punjab, Pakistan) Government to tap alternative sources." In the same practical spirit, the Government of India suggested, in August 1949, the appointment of a Joint Technical Commission to make an investigation for this purpose. If I may say so, it is Pakistan's intransigence which has held up this essential preliminary technical investigation. Our objection to reference of this canal waters issue to the International Court of Justice has been due not to any desire to shirk settlement of differences by an impartial body but to the honest belief that a matter of this kind can best be settled by a small group of persons of the highest judicial standing, from India and Pakistan, who can appraise all the vital practical factors on the spot.

11. I do not see why you should say that, as may be expected, a tribunal of the kind that we have suggested will be deadlocked. That seems to me to be an unjustified reflection upon the impartiality of your judges and ours. In any case, we have not suggested that, if the members of this tribunal should be divided, the point or points on which there is a deadlock should be referred to another tribunal which would consist of an odd number of judges, some of whom would be nationals neither of India nor of Pakistan. All that we have suggested is that the two Governments should agree in advance to abide by the decisions of the tribunal in all matters referred to it, and that, if unfortunately there is an equal division of opinion among the judges on any points, the two Governments should try to settle these points by negotiation among themselves and, failing that, resort to arbitration or adjudication by a mutually agreed special agency or an International Organisation recognised by both Governments. Since our proposal provides that the agreed or majority decision of the tribunal should be accepted by both parties, our hope is that the points of difference will be so few as to make their settlement easier and more expeditious than the reference of the whole dispute to a tribunal sitting thousands of miles away.

12. You refer to a governing convention for the creation of this tribunal. I cannot do better than quote what I have said on this subject in my letter of the 27th October:

"Clearly there must be agreement between us regarding the composition of the tribunal, its terms of reference and powers. The composition has already been dealt with. As regards the tribunal's powers, I think we should lay it down that it should have final authority to deal with the matters referred to it. The judges can decide unanimously or by majority. They will have all the powers of superior courts in regard to summoning of witnesses etc. They will settle their procedure and method of working, as such tribunals do. We must invest the tribunal with the highest authority and not make it feel that it is just a stepping stone to something else. We must agree to abide by its decision in all matters referred to it."

Once these broad principles are accepted by you, details can be worked out by discussion between your representatives and ours. This is all that seems necessary.

13. You refer to the construction of new irrigation projects by India. To describe as new a project like Bhakra which has been under consideration or preparation for the last thirty years is hardly accurate. Such new proposals as we have considered since Partition are essential for the development of Punjab, India and adjoining areas in India. As we have pointed out to your representatives repeatedly in our view there is a sufficiency of water in the Indus Basin for all your purposes as well as ours provided that we approach the problem in a spirit of mutual accommodation. We have persistently urged a joint enquiry to confirm this but Pakistan has avoided such an investigation. That, I venture to say, is no reason why the development of the East Punjab should be held up.

14. I did not suggest reference of the evacuee property dispute to the same tribunal as the one proposed for the canal water issue because the problem is legal; I did so primarily to expedite an equitable settlement with the help of an agency whose impartiality would command confidence. This dispute has formed the subject of prolonged discussions between our two Governments and we attach even greater importance to its early settlement because of the mass of human suffering involved by delay and its consequent repercussion on relations between the two countries. We both know how intense the feeling on this subject is. The value of agricultural property in certain areas would, of course, depend on irrigation facilities that might be available from existing or alternative sources, and the proposed Tribunal would no doubt take this factor into consideration in suggesting how best the dispute should be adjusted between the two parties. Sale and exchange of urban evacuee property were tried on an earlier occasion but without any substantial result for reason which I need not go into here. After all that has happened, it would not be practicable to revert to an agreement which would leave out large areas of agricultural land affecting the majority of evacuees in each country. Frankly, I fail to see why there should be any objection to settling this matter in the manner proposed by us.

As for the release of assets of Pakistan, you are well aware that there are counter claims.

15. I must express my extreme regret that after all the efforts we have made and the lengthy correspondence which we have had, we should arrive at this dead end. This is our common misfortune. I hope that we may find some way out of this unhappy deadlock in the future.

Yours sincerely,

Sd. Jawaharlal Nehru.

The Hon’ble
Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan,
Prime Minister of Pakistan, Karachi.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
1682. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to High Commissioner in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta regarding Common Defence Policy between India and Pakistan as proposed by the Pakistan Commander-in-Chief General Ayub Khan.

New Delhi, September 20, 1952.

My dear Mohan Sinhaji,

I am sorry for the delay in answering your letter of the 6th September which reached me just before I went to Indore. In this letter you refer to your meeting General Ayub Khan, the Commander-in-Chief of the Pakistan Land Forces.

The question of having a common defence policy between India and Pakistan has often been vaguely referred to. There is, therefore, nothing surprising in the talk you had with the General. Generally speaking, it is an obvious and natural thing for Pakistan and India to have a common defence policy and, if an approach is made to us, our answer can only be that we shall gladly consider this.

But the matter is not quite so simple as that. Defence policy depends very largely on foreign policy and involves, therefore, a common foreign policy. Pakistan's approach to foreign affairs is not very clear, and is very limited in outlook. In essence, Pakistan depends upon help from the UK and USA and occasionally threatens them with flirting with the Soviet. They cannot go very far publicly in their defence associations with the UK and USA because public feeling in Pakistan does not like it, neither does the Army or rather the junior officer element.

Pakistan's policy has largely revolved round Kashmir. For us Kashmir is an issue and nothing more, although it is an important issue. Our foreign policy does not depend upon Kashmir. It is obvious that there can hardly be any effective talk about common defence so long as the Kashmir issue remains unsolved, and in fact so long as there is Indo-Pakistan tension. The Kashmir issue itself is part of that tension and is not sole cause of it.

Thus there are many difficulties in the way. Nevertheless, even an approach of this kind is a hopeful sign and should not be repulsed.

There is another aspect of defence. In effect India is not really threatened by any country, except Pakistan. I am not at all nervous about what Russia or China can do to India. Indeed, Russia cannot act directly and China is hardly in a position to act across Tibet, and Himalayas, apart from our general friendly relations with her. The case of Pakistan is somewhat different. They might legitimately fear trouble on their North West frontier. A common defence policy would, therefore, involve us into underwriting Pakistan.

Then there is the question of Afghanistan. We are very friendly with Afghanistan and have a good deal of sympathy with the Pakhtoons. Pakistan is on very bad terms with both. We would not like to line up against Afghanistan or the Pakhtoons.

I have pointed out to you all these difficulties which, for the moment, appear to me superable. I can quite understand the desire of senior Generals in Pakistan for a common defence policy. I would welcome that chiefly because it mean an ending of our various tensions and thus releasing energy in both countries for constructive work. It is not the common defence policy that is so important in my eyes as a real friendly settlement with Pakistan which removes the great burden from both of us and thus strengthens us separately as well as jointly, but the way to that does not appear to be easy at present. Some time or other it will have to come.

If you have a chance, you can certainly talk about matters informally and without the least commitment. But please remember that if you raise this question, Pakistan is likely to think that we are awakening and are afraid of them and the result might well be a more aggressive attitude than now on the part of Pakistan. You have yourself said that the present Pakistan leaders are not strong enough to show courage. But nothing can be lost in our dealing with this question in a friendly way and showing our interest in it, provided we do not go too far and do not give an impression of over-eagerness.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

Shri Mohan Sinha Mehta,
High Commissioner in Pakistan
Karachi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1683. Extract from a letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Khwaja Nazimuddin.

New Delhi, November 19, 1952.

15. I recognize that the relations of India and Pakistan are not good. It is because of this that those who are in charge of the destinies of either of these countries have a very special responsibility to discharge. I claim that my Government have endeavored to discharge that responsibility and have not been afraid of saying and doing things which might make them unpopular. But I deeply regret to find a lack of that responsibility in the leaders of Pakistan. Fate and circumstance have placed us in these high positions of responsibility and what we say or do might have far-reaching effect on millions of people. It is a heavy burden we carry.

16. It has seemed to me tragic that anyone should ever talk of war between India and Pakistan. I ventured to suggest to your predecessor, Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan that both countries should declare unequivocally that on no account and for no reason will they go to war with each other for the solution of any problem or any matter in dispute between them. War solves no problems. It is a confession of defeat and surrender to disaster. Unfortunately Mr. Liaquat Ali khan was not prepared to give that undertaking on behalf of his Government. Even so we have solemnly stated that India will not go to war with Pakistan whatever happens, unless she is attacked. We shall abide by that declaration. I invite you, as I invited your predecessor, to make a similar declaration. If both our countries make it clear that our problems would be solved by peaceful methods alone and that on no account would we go to war with each other, a great burden would be lifted from the minds of millions of people in Pakistan and India. A situation would be created when it would be far easier to solve those problems and to develop the normal friendly cooperative relations between India and Pakistan, which, I am sure, the vast majority of people in both these countries desire. History, geography and many a common heritage dictate this. We should be wise enough to understand this lesson of the past and the present and thus build a future for India and Pakistan which is free from fear and hatred and conflict and in which we cooperate to our mutual advantage.

17. If you share with me the sentiments and objective referred to above, as I very much hope that you do, then it should not be difficult for us to find some way of approach which would lead to a solution of our problems. So far as we are concerned we shall gladly welcome this.
Extract relevant to the issue of "Joint Defence" from the Press Conference of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

London, June 10, 1953.

Question: Can you tell us how the talks are going on with the Ceylon and Pakistan Prime Ministers?

Jawaharlal Nehru: I cannot say very much. We have had some talks. So far as the Pakistan talks are concerned, they can only be in the nature of preliminary talks here, and even before we came here it was decided that we should have a preliminary survey and then have more detailed talks after our return. I met the Prime Minister once or twice, that is, apart from meeting in conferences, and I am likely to meet him again. So far as the Ceylon talks are concerned, they are also, well, in the initial stages yet.

Q: With regard to Pakistan, the Pakistan Prime Minister told us that you had put cold water on the suggestion of common defence.

JN: I ? No, that is not quite correct. What I have said was that it is obviously natural for countries like India and Pakistan to develop common policies. Defence was completely dependent on foreign policy. It is the foreign policy that governs defence, it cannot stand by itself. We are interested in Pakistan's defence, of course, as Pakistan would be interested in India's defence. Secondly, I have said that I am not interested in any defence pacts which are in the nature of military alliances. Policy is one thing, because I do not like to have military alliances, which can normally only be thought of as against somebody else. If you leave out the factor that it is not against anybody, I am prepared to have everything in common. It is not a question with Pakistan but within any country, we are not having any military alliance. We have, if you like, pacts of peace, pacts of what is it, no-war, non-aggression, that type of thing, but a military pact involves us in commitments which we are not prepared to undertake, not that we are afraid of a commitment, but because it goes somewhat against our basic policies of developing friendly relations with other countries. We think the best defence, and the best pact is friendly relations with other countries.

Of course, every country has to provide for contingencies. If you carry my argument to the extreme, you might say, why not abolish the army and the defence services in India. Well, we cannot do that. We want to keep them up to the mark, as efficient and confident as possible, but we look upon them completely, first of all, as defence. We do not think of them as going out of the country - leave out the Korea business, which is separate. We have no expeditionary forces as we used to have in the old days; and secondly, we do not wish to tie ourselves up with any other country. Now take another country like Burma with which our relations are extremely friendly and cordial and with which, say, in the realm of foreign policy, we are also having a great deal in common, but we do not talk about defence pacts*.

Q: I understand that you have made a suggestion to Pakistan for the abolition of the visa system.

JN: You mean in India. These matters are being considered. The position in West Pakistan and India is different from East Pakistan and India. Until recently, before the passport system was introduced, there was no difficulty in travelling between East and West Bengal. Now there is a passport system. Well, I suppose that some kind of easy passport or permit system inevitably has to come in between two independent countries as things are but the next step to an easy travel would be to do away with visas....

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

* At an interview with the PTI correspondent at Karachi on 27 April 1953, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali had said that he looked upon Nehru as "an elder brother" and that after creating a "favourable atmosphere" they could very well sit down and discuss the possibilities of "joint defence of India and Pakistan."
SECRET

TELEGRAM

From: Hicomind, Karachi.
To: Foreign, New Delhi.

IMMEDIATE

No. 268. March 20, 1955

Personal

For M.J. (Commonwealth Secretary) from C.C. (High Commissioner)

Last night there was banquet by CHAUDKURI MOHD ALI to Turkish Prime Minister at the end of which MOHD ALI took me aside for half hour and said that he was most anxious and earnest about maintaining friendly relations with India that these border incidents were senseless and causing insecurity on both sides, that special responsibilities had devolved on them because of peculiar geographical situation for meeting aggression on this sub continent, that it would be sheer lunacy on the part of anyone in Pakistan to think of fighting with India, that any such war even if started could not possibly be sustained for any length of time either by them or by us without selling ourselves outright to foreign supporters, that military aid received by them did not make any substantial difference in the proportion of armed strength of the two countries and that India was wrong in accusing Pakistan of aggressive intentions now or in future. He also said that if there was anyone in India who thought of aggression against Pakistan he would be equally mad as the misery that would follow in the wake of any such fight would be inconceivably disastrous. He said that he had just made a statement in their Constituent Assembly to the effect that they would defend their sovereignty and integrity but he was most earnestly desirous of having friendly relations between the two countries.

2. SYMON British High Commissioner in Karachi sitting next to me at dinner also ridiculed any idea in India that Pakistan could possibly think of war against India and said that he was in possession of full facts about military aid given to Pakistan and that he could affirm that India had no reason for apprehending any disproportionate increase in Pakistan's armed strength. He said that he would probably go to India next month to put the correct point of view before his many friends in India.
Extract from the speech of Pakistan Prime Minister Ch. Mohammad Ali in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly.

* * * * *

"But, I go further and I say, let both countries sign an agreement that they will not go to war against each other and will settle all their disputes by negotiation and mediation and failing these by arbitration. These are well known international methods of settling disputes and all our disputes can be resolved in that manner. The whole atmosphere can be changed.

"I make this offer in all sincerity and in all earnestness so that the people of India and of Pakistan might live as friendly neighbours and each is free to pursue the policy it thinks best. It is only in that spirit of amity and good neighbourly relations that countries that have a long border with each other can and should live.

"I trust that the House will endorse the stand that I have taken and the proposals that I have made, they are intended in the best interests of peace and security in this whole region.

"But if these proposals are not accepted and if aggression is aimed and committed against our country, we shall defend ourselves and we shall defend our freedom with the utmost force and to the last drop of our blood".

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, June 12, 1956.

Prime Minister,
Pakistan
Karachi
the 12th June, 1956

My dear Prime Minister,
I regret that I could not write to you earlier on my proposal for a "NO WAR DECLARATION", as promised in my message conveyed to you on the 7th April, 1956.
2. When I made my proposal to you I was fully aware of the correspondence that had passed on this subject between you and my predecessor, the late Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan. I have since gone through that correspondence again but must confess that I have not been able to understand the reasons which explain your hesitation in accepting my proposal for the avoidance of war, although we both seem agreed throughout that all our disputes must be settled by peaceful means and not by war.

3. In para 6 of your letter dated the 13th January, 1950, to my late predecessor, you observed "We are prepared that the evacuee property dispute should be settled by arbitration, if negotiations and mediation fail." Further on in para 11 you stated that "the procedure for settling disputes could not be uniform in all cases" and that "it is possible that one method may be appropriate for one dispute and another method for another dispute." I am unable to conceive of any dispute to which either or all of these remedies could not be appropriately applied. Indeed, in para 6 of your letter dated the 8th October, 1950, suggesting that India and Pakistan declare that they will not go to war for settlement of any existing or future disputes between them you added:

"Further, that a settlement of such disputes shall always be sought through peaceful methods of negotiation and mediation and, if these should fail to bring settlement, by resort to arbitration or reference to a tribunal".

My own proposal runs:

"Let both countries sign an agreement that they will not go to war against each other and will settle all their disputes by negotiation and mediation and failing these by arbitration."

4. There is a close parallel perceptible between our two statements but, if I understand you rightly, the main difference still is that according to your view, negotiation, mediation and arbitration can be alternative methods only in certain cases but not in all. I, on the other hand, am firmly of the view that unless we agree that in respect of all disputes arbitration should be resorted to if other alternatives fail (as they well might, because either of the parties can indefinitely block a settlement by the simple device of refusing to settle a dispute except on its own terms), there will be no assurance that a particular dispute will in fact be ever resolved and the danger of war must inevitably remain. Negotiations or mediation may go on interminably, embittering our relations instead of improving them and thereby enhancing and not reducing chances of a recourse to use of force. After all, if negotiation and mediation fail and the alternative of arbitration (or judicial determination by an International tribunal) is ruled out, what other peaceful method is left to the parties to try and solve the dispute? When we are both agreed that, disputes? must be solved by peaceful means and when you concede that arbitration may be resorted to in certain cases when negotiation and mediation prove fruitless. I must say I find it difficult to understand your reluctance to accept the principle of arbitration in all cases.

5. This principle is, as you know, embodied in the United Nations Charter to which both our Governments subscribe. I should like, further, to invite your attention to the Bandung Communiqué in which all of us, participants, committed ourselves to the principle of settling all international disputes by peaceful means, such as negotiation, conciliation, arbitration etc. I need hardly add that your own Constitution enjoins that your country "shall encourage, settlement of all international disputes by arbitration." My formula seeks only to reinforce this internationally recognised principle.

6. I am reluctant to read outright rejection of my proposal in paragraph 7 of your message dated the 4th April, 1956, communicated to me through your High Commissioner's letter No. F. 26 (55) - Gen. of the same date and commend to you most earnestly my formula again. The acceptance of this formula and the signing of a No - War declaration by India and Pakistan would completely transform Indo - Pakistan relations, enormously strengthen the cause of world peace and might well have a profound influence on the welfare of and relationships between the countries of the great Continents of Asia and Africa. I would beg of you, in view of the immensity of the stake, to give this matter your most careful thought.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Mohammad Ali

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India, New Delhi.
My dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your letter of 12th June which reached me on the 15th June. This is on the subject of a "No War" declaration.

I have been, as indeed you must be, very heavily engaged because of my approaching departure for London for the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference. During the last few days I have also been out of Delhi. I shall be leaving Delhi within a few hours for London, but I do not wish to go away without sending you an answer to your letter.

You will forgive me if I write somewhat briefly on this subject of our correspondence. Indeed, there is little now that I could add to the previous letters that I have written in regard to a "No War" declaration.

A "No War" declaration by itself need not necessarily solve a problem, but it creates the necessary atmosphere which helps in its solution. The mere fact of a declaration of faith abandoning war for any purpose must go a long way to create this atmosphere.

You are right in saying that it is necessary to devise means for a settlement of international disputes. The United Nations Charter itself mentions various methods for this purpose. So does the Bandung Declaration. Indeed, in my previous letters on this subject, I have myself suggested a number of methods. Arbitration is not ruled out and may well be applied in a number of cases, but the methods of peaceful settlement must necessarily vary according to the nature of the dispute, the stage of settlement reached in negotiations and the known points of difference. It is neither feasible nor desirable to lay down some rigid code to settle every dispute in a particular way. Perhaps, when the world has developed much more than it is at present, better methods of settling disputes would be found. At present, we have quite a number of grave international disputes between different countries and, in spite of the United Nations Charter, they have not been settled. In the nature of things, so long as we have absolutely independent and sovereign States, it will not be possible to make them submit to a rigid procedure which might infringe their sovereignty. Thus the process of arbitration is not suitable in certain types of cases at present. It may be suitable in others. You and I know well that in a number of world disputes today, the parties concerned would never agree to arbitration. Much less would they agree to any rigid procedure for every dispute in the future.

It seems to me that the right way to approach this problem is to have a "No War" declaration by India and Pakistan, more or less on the lines suggested by me in my letter dated 29th August, 1950. I have no doubt that if we made such a declaration, it would not only remove the tensions that exist today between our two countries, but would also create a new climate of peace and co-operation between India and Pakistan. It is this climate that I earnestly hope for.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/ - Jawaharlal Nehru.

The Hon'ble Chaudhri Mohamad Ali,
Prime Minister of Pakistan,
Karachi.

◆◆◆◆◆
Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha on India’s Offer of ‘No-War Declaration’.

New Delhi, August 14, 1956.

The first proposal for a no-war declaration was made on behalf of the Government of India in 1949. Perhaps the House will be interested to know what this was. The text of the proposed joint declaration runs as follows:

"The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples who have many common ties, hereby declare that they condemn resort to war for the settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that the settlement of such disputes between them shall always be sought through recognised peaceful methods such as negotiation or by agreed reference to some appropriate international body recognised by both of them. It is their earnest hope, as well as their firm conviction, that the implementation of this declaration in the spirit which lies behind it will serve to maintain good relations between the two countries and advance the cause of world peace."

This was in 1949 and in answer the Pakistan Government stated—that is much too vague—that there must be automatic procedure so that matters may be referred to a tribunal for arbitration and decision in case mediation fails. In fact, it was suggested that a tribunal might be set up and among the subjects to be referred forthwith were the Kashmir dispute, the disputes outstanding between them such as Junagadh and the neighbouring States and the other matters. We pointed out that, so far as we know, no State bound themselves down to arbitration on every kind of dispute that might arise. Of course, there might be arbitration, there might be references to the International World Court or to a tribunal; but we cannot possibly bind ourselves down to these courses. This correspondence has been going on. It was first started in 1949 - 50; then there was a gap. It was resumed in 1953 - 54. Again there was a gap. Then, in 1956 it has started once again.
1691. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on No-War Declaration in the Rajya Sabha.

New Delhi, December 4, 1956.

PAKISTAN

Then, much has been said about Pakistan. There is just one thing that I should like to remind the House about. Mr. Suhrawardy talks about an invasion from India or India wanting to do this or that to Pakistan. The House will remember that four years ago, or maybe five years ago, I offered a no-war declaration to guarantee that neither country would go to war and each country would settle these problems peacefully, and even if there is no settlement, they would never go to war with each other. But they never accepted that offer. That offer still holds good. And I went a step further and I said that even though Pakistan did not accept that declaration, I, on behalf of India, made that declaration that I would not go to war with Pakistan unless we were attacked because after all we have to defend ourselves. So, I cannot imagine really what this type of propaganda that is being carried on by Mr. Suhrawardy actually means. I fear that it is a prelude possibly to some little trouble. The House may remember, or perhaps may have forgotten, that Goa is a special protégé of Mr. Suhrawardy. He visited Goa and he visited Lisbon etc. in this connection.

I have no right to object. He is a lawyer, a practising lawyer, and he had every right, as a lawyer, to be briefed by anybody. Now, he is Prime Minister. The whole attitude of Pakistan, apart from Mr. Suhrawardy, in regard to Goa - well it is difficult to explain except to say that they dislike India so much that they want to injure India wherever and however they can. Then, some hon. Member read out his speech or statement in regard to Egypt. Now, all the Bandung Conference, the Colombo Powers' declaration - all of that goes by the board if Mr. Suhrawardy's policy is the policy to be pursued by Pakistan.

Mr. Bimal Ghose said something about the United States' military help to Pakistan. It is certainly true that the U.S.A. declared very firmly that any help they would give must be on condition that it was not used against India and that presumably Pakistan gave that assurance, but the fact is that from the statement of Mr. Suhrawardy he seems to think that those arms can be used against India if he so chooses.
Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha while presenting the Demands for Grants of the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, April 9, 1958.

When you consider this unfortunate fact of the strained relations between India and Pakistan, curious strained relations - because, when you and I meet or anybody meets, a group of people from India meets a group of people from Pakistan, we are friendly, we hardly meet as strangers, as people of two countries; we speak the same language; we have common friends, common memories and a hundred and one things, and yet there is this tremendous strain which does harm to both of us - when you think of this, people tell you - some people say - 'Oh, you go and settle this Kashmir issue, and all would be well'. - this is the normal criticism or advice offered to us in foreign countries - or 'Settle this canal waters issue'. Well, obviously, if we settled any issue which is in conflict, it creates a good atmosphere naturally. But I do submit to this House that all this, that the strain and the feeling of conflict between India and Pakistan is not due to the Kashmir issue, is not due to the canal waters or any other issue, but that all these issues are due to another essential conflict, something else. These are the outcome of that, not the origin of the conflict; of course, they overlap, and it is rather difficult to draw a line between the two. But it does mean this, that if this type of approach, this type of anti-India approach, hatred of India, bitter dislike of India which is propagated in the press, in the statements of leading people in Pakistan, continues, and if that is the basis of their foreign and internal policy, then it just does not matter what you settle and what you do not settle, because that is the basis of policy. If by any chance the Kashmir issue was out of the picture as a matter of conflict, it will have, no doubt, a very good effect; I have no doubt. But unless that basic approach is changed, the thing will continue in other forms. That is our difficulty, so that I feel very unhappy about this matter, and it is no pleasure for me, no desire of mine, to say words, any words which might accentuate our difficulties. I do not like much that is happening in Pakistan. I do not want to criticise it. It is none of my business unless it affects me.
1693. Statement by Pakistan Prime Minister Malik Firoz Khan Noon on No-War Declaration.

Karachi, April 15, 1958.

I have been distressed to read Pandit Nehru's statement in the Indian parliament to the effect that what stood in the way of friendly co-operation between Bharat and Pakistan was not Kashmir or the Canal Waters problem but the anti-Bharati approach of the Pakistani Government and its leadership based on hatred of Bharat. My predecessors and I have been declaring from time to time that we seek nothing but goodwill, amity and friendship with India and want to live with her in peace like good neighbours. It is, however, well known that the cross-currents of hatred between India and Pakistan are primarily due to the repudiation by India of all her international obligations and commitments in respect of the Kashmir dispute and the manner in which the Canal Waters dispute has been allowed to develop. I am sure that the two countries could settle down to a state of perpetual friendship if only India would agree to the settlement of the Kashmir and water disputes in accordance with the accepted universal standards of justice. Pakistan desires nothing but everlasting friendship with India. This, however, can be achieved only by the two countries cooperating with instead of recriminating against each other.

I repeat my offer once again to agree to sign a declaration that we will not go to war with each other and settle all our disputes by negotiations and mediation and failing these by arbitration.

I hope sincerely that Pandit Nehru will realise that it is the existence of these disputes and these disputes alone which is forcing the two countries to waste their wealth in an armament race - wealth which belongs to the poor and which should be spent for the improvement of their standard of living. Our hand of friendship will always be extended and it is for India to reciprocate the gesture. Let us live in peace and not make ourselves a laughing stock of the world.

◆◆◆◆◆
Letter from President Ayub Khan to General (Retd.) K.M. Cariappa.

President's Camp (Pakistan)
Nathiagali

From: General Mohammad Ayub Khan, HP, HJ

My dear General*,

Many thanks for your kind letter of 22nd May. I am glad to know you and the rest of your family members are well.

It is good that the Canal Waters dispute between India and Pakistan looks like resolving itself. Although this solution is going to cost us lot of hardship, we are accepting it in the interest of peace between the two countries. You talk about “No - War Declaration” as a solution of the Kashmir problem. If you view it carefully, it amounts to nothing more than shelving the problem. This we just cannot afford to do; for us it is a matter of life and death. The correct answer is contained in our repeated offers to the Indian leadership to let us have a joint defence of this sub-continent. But the pre-requisite to that is a just and honourable solution of our outstanding problems like that of Kashmir. The response so far from India has been negative, but I have no doubt in my mind that one day this line of thought will be appreciated.

You mention about the new order that we have issued about succession to the office of the President. It is not based on any immediate requirement of my or anybody else’s health; it is just a procedure to be followed in case a necessity arises.

I am here with my family for a short time. Thank you for your kind wishes. Please pass on my kind regards to your sister.

With best wishes.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Mohammad Ayub Khan

General K.M. Cariappa, OBE,
"The Roshanara". Mercara, Coorg, India.

* General Cariappa was the first Indian C-in-C of the Independent India’s defence forces.
My dear General,

Thank you very much for your letter of 17th July 1959. I agree with you that after the expected settlement of the Canal Waters Dispute the Kashmir dispute will continue to be a fruitful source of hatred and bitterness between the two countries.

I have given a very serious second thought to the "No War Declaration". As you know there was correspondence on this subject between the two past Prime Ministers of Pakistan, Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan and Chaudhry Mohammad Ali on one side and Mr. Nehru on the other.

Mr. Nehru's formula ran as follows:

"The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan condemn resort to war for the settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that the settlement of such disputes between them shall always be sought through recognised peaceful methods such as negotiation, or by resort to mediation or arbitration by a special agency set up by mutual agreement for the purpose, or by agreed reference to some appropriate international body recognised by both of them."

The formula put forward by the then Prime Minister of Pakistan Chaudhry Mohammad Ali reads:

"Let both countries sign an agreement that they will not go to war against each other and will settle all their disputes by negotiation, mediation, and failing these by arbitration."

The main difference between the two, as you will see, is that according to Mr. Nehru's view negotiation, mediation and arbitration can be alternative methods in only certain cases but not in all. To quote his own words "In the nature of things, so long as we have absolutely independent and sovereign States, it will not be possible to make them submit to a rigid procedure which might infringe their sovereignty. Thus the process of arbitration is not suitable in certain types of cases at present. It may be suitable in others." He maintains that the declaration proposed by him will not only remove the tension that existed between our two countries but will also create a new climate of peaceful co-operation between India and Pakistan.

We in Pakistan on the other hand are firmly of the view that unless we agree that in respect of all disputes arbitration should be resorted to if other alternatives fail (as they well might, because either of the parties can indefinitely block a settlement by the simple device of refusing to settle a dispute, except on its own terms), there will be no assurance that a particular dispute will in fact be ever resolved and the specter of a conflict would remain. Negotiations or mediation may go on interminably, embittering our relations.

In substance, the declaration proposed by Mr. Nehru goes no further than what is stated in the United Nations Charter or in the Bandung Declaration, to both of which India and Pakistan are already parties. And yet neither the fact that India and Pakistan profess allegiance to the principles of the United Nations Charter nor the fact that they are signatories of the Bandung Declaration has helped them to remove tensions or create a climate of peace and cooperation. The reason is obvious. So long as even one dispute which embitters relations between our countries remains unresolved, a mere declaration of faith abandoning war as an instrument of settling disputes without ensuring that that dispute will in fact be peacefully eliminated can carry no conviction.

Mr. Nehru says that arbitration may be resorted to, for settling some disputes but not others. He does not say what is to happen to those other disputes when negotiations and mediation have failed and resort cannot be had to arbitration. How are they to be peacefully resolved? And if they are not resolved, how can a friendly and co-operative atmosphere be maintained between India and Pakistan? In my opinion, there is no other method of ensuring a peaceful settlement of disputes than the one we have proposed. We consider it of utmost importance to settle our existing disputes peacefully and quickly. Should this happy state of affairs were to come about a "No War Declaration" would have some meaning and carry conviction.

I would like to emphasize that it should not be inferred that simply because we have not agreed to sign the "No War Declaration" we are planning conquests or military adventures against India. Nothing is further from our thoughts. I have on several occasions made public statements to that effect. We are determined to settle all our disputes peacefully and are going to persist in our peaceful efforts. Take the Kashmir dispute itself. We are after twelve years, still waiting for a peaceful solution. If we had been thinking in terms of settlement through war surely, during this long period, there would have been many an opportunity to resort to it. How can we, therefore, convince Mr. Nehru that while we do not wish to fight but we are determined to have a settlement of the Kashmir dispute.
Hope you and the rest of your family members are well.
With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/- Mohammad Ayub Khan

General K.M. Cariappa, OBE,
The Roshanara, Mercara, Coorg, India.

◆◆◆◆◆

1696. SECRET
Letter from Commonwealth Secretary to High Commissioner Rajeshwar Dayal.

Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi

D.O. No. 371 - CS/60 June 21, 1960
Jyaistha 31, 1882 (Saka)

My dear Dayal,
Thank you for your letters Nos. 6/HC/60, 7/HC/60 and 19/HC/60 dated 13th, 14th and 16th June, 1960. I have shown these letters to P.M.

2. It is evident that owing to the changing world situation and recent occurrences - the U-2 incident, 'Summit' failure, developments in South Korea, Turkey and Japan - there is fresh thinking going on both in Pakistan about their relations with India and in the United States as regards their global policies. Pakistan, which is largely conditioned by its dependence on the United States, is bound to be affected by the advice that the United States give as a result of their reappraisal of the global situation.

3. We can very well appreciate that, because of various factors, it would be advantageous to both India and Pakistan to reduce our tensions on the border and, if possible, to lesson some of our border forces. This, however, is a political question as well as a defence question and can only be dealt with by the two Governments. It is obvious that this question cannot be considered separately for each area. It is also impossible for local Commanders to consider this matter as it is not their business but the business of the two Governments.

4. We are naturally willing to consider this question at Government level in its various aspects. The easiest course would have been to have a 'no war' declaration as we have repeatedly stated in the past. If Pakistan has any serious difficulties in the way of agreeing to this or to a non-aggression pact in a formal manner, we can consider the question somewhat indirectly and from the point of view, as you have stated, of non-user of force. This is very much the same thing: only it is a round-about and somewhat weaker way of saying the same thing. Whatever way we may put it, the point to be made is that there should be a clear understanding between the two Governments that force will not be used. Only then can the other question of possible withdrawals from the border regions arise. As stated earlier, there can be no question of local Commanders coming to any agreement in such matters.

5. You should, as you have mentioned in the past, tell the Pakistan authorities that the continuation and recent increase of incidents involving sabotage by Pakistani elements in Jammu & Kashmir State create grave suspicions in the minds of our people about the real policy of the Government of Pakistan. Pakistan Government may deny any connection with these incidents but it is difficult for us to accept this denial. We have no doubt that the Pakistan Government can stop these incidents if they choose to do so. We have, in fact, enough evidence that at least Pakistani officials organize and encourage these sabotage incidents.

6. As you know, P.M. has agreed to go to Pakistan to sign the Canal Waters Agreement when this has been finalised. When he goes there for this purpose, he will be prepared to talk with President Ayub Khan about our mutual problems including consideration of the question of non-aggression and the non-use of force approach. The Canal Waters Agreement has, however, been delayed. P.M. would have liked to sign the Agreement sometime between the 20th and 30th of July before the Parliament session commences but it is uncertain now when the Agreement will be finalised. As regards Kashmir, it is beyond any possibility for Government of India to hand over any part of our territory to the Government of Pakistan or to agree to any process which might lead to this. One does not shout about this but this is a basic fact which the leaders of Pakistan must remember. We can appreciate their difficulties with the public opinion or whatever else they have to contend with. The only course therefore, open to those who deal with this question, is not to try to reopen it in a basic way but to help to create conditions which will gradually lead to its settlement. This may take time but there is no other way.

7. P.M. has already expressed his views on the question of Joint Defence in the past. There can be no Joint Defence between India and Pakistan unless we give up completely our foreign policy and our general outlook on world affairs. We have absolutely no intention of doing so. In fact, recent events have shown the wisdom of our policy and we are firmly determined to adhere to it. So far as India and Pakistan are concerned, it is, however, possible to come to formal or informal agreements about our own affairs and our own defences which may lead to some relief to each country.

8. I have summarised P.M’s views in the above paragraphs for your background information but you should make it absolutely clear that these matters are for consideration between the two Governments and at the appropriate level and there can be no question of local Commanders arriving at any understandings or agreements in this regard.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- M.J. Desai.

Shri R. Dayal,
High Commissioner for India in Pakistan,
Camp: Murree.
Proposal of Pakistan President General Ayub Khan for Joint Defence.

Note by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri

Commonwealth Secretary may have seen the enclosed clipping from The Statesman. It would be worthwhile considering the pros and cons of the problem of Joint Defence. What are its implications and has its feasibility been properly studied? If not, I would very much like that it should be done now.

Sd/- Lal Bahadur Shastri
17-8-1964

No. 953-PMO/64

***************

The following note was prepared by the Ministry of External Affairs as a result of the above desire of the Prime Minister.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Kashmir Unit)

President Ayub was the first Head of the Pakistan Government to suggest joint defence with India. This was done in the early part of 1959 in the context of the Tibetan revolt. The proposal attracted immediate attention in the U.S.A. One reason for this was the growing awareness in that country, particularly in the Congress, that American aid to India and Pakistan, economic or military, instead of strengthening their defences against Communist countries in the north was being dissipated because of their incompatible policies. Criticism had begun that this aid was being used by India and Pakistan for purposes other than those envisaged by U.S.A. and, therefore, did little to further U.S. global strategy.

2. The genesis of the proposal lay in President Ayub's conception of the sub-continent having been repeatedly invaded in the past owing to its internal dissentions, leading its Governments to be defeated in detail. In his various statements, he said that there was no earthly reason for war between India and Pakistan and that once "our basic differences with India are justly and honourably settled, Pakistan would not hesitate to enter into any form of mutual cooperation with the neighbouring country". This, he said on March 27, 1959. He also referred to the wastefulness of military expenditure, considering that militarily neither side could attack the other and get away with it.

3. Since then, he has presented this proposal in many forms. He has been arguing that Indian and Pakistan troops, instead of facing each other, should be looking outward. During the Joint talks, he referred to this subject during his talk with Sardar Swaran Singh, leader of the Indian delegation, on December 26, 1962. The summary record states:

"After a preliminary exchange of courtesies, the President promptly swung the conversation round to what he termed the threat to the subcontinent, of which he had always been conscious. The President said that throughout history "our sub-continent" had got into difficulties with the foreign invader because of our own disunity. This was true of Moghul conquest as well as the British conquest. When the battle of Plessey was being fought, very few people elsewhere in India were seriously concerned, etc. etc. The President then pointedly referred to the waste of our resources by Indian and Pakistani armies confronting one another on our borders. This, he said, was a colossal waste of money and energy and had led to nothing but suffering for the common man for whose economic uplift all this money could have been used. The President somewhat vaguely said that once a settlement and understanding was reached between India and Pakistan, there would be disengagement of troops and the burden on the peoples of the two countries would be reduced immediately. He emphasised that it was quite meaningless to suggest that Pakistan was a threat to India or that Pakistan would launch a surprise attack and seize Indian territory and launch attacks on Indian towns. All this made no sense in the twentieth century. The President went on to say that others may not agree with him but, although Russia and China were seemingly opposed to each other today, he was convinced that a day would come when they would move into this part of Asia, the Russians coming south into the Persian Gulf and the Chinese through Burma into the Bay of Bengal".

4. The proposal also received notice in India and questions were put in Parliament. So long as it was unqualified and offered without conditions, it appeared to have some advantages. The difficulty, however, arose when President Ayub and other spokesmen of the Pakistan Government began to emphasise - this also in the early part of 1959 - that no such proposal could be considered unless and until the Kashmir issue was settled first. As President Ayub said in Quetta on May 10, 1959, "a pre-requisite to such a pact is the solution of big problems like Kashmir and Canal Waters. Once these are resolved, we will look forward to this proposal". Even more serious difficulties were pointed out by the late Prime Minister. On May 2, 1959, the late Prime Minister stated:

"The moment we talk about joint defence, the question arises as to who is the party that might attack us and against whom we are preparing our defence. We do not think that the Soviet Union will attack us. We are not going to take an anti-communist attitude. It is true that we are having some trouble with China at the present moment, but that will be of no interest to Pakistan. In any event, to talk of joint defence indirectly puts us in some kind of military camp”.

The Prime Minister also referred to this matter in a statement in the Rajya Sabha on May 4:

"It is said often in Pakistan; let us have a common defence policy. Now I am all for settling our troubles with Pakistan and living a normal, friendly neighbourly life. We try for that. But I do not understand when people say that we have a common defence policy. Against whom? Immediately the question comes up "against whom is this common defence policy?" Are we going to become members of the Baghdad Pact or the SEATO....?
We do not want to have a common defence policy which is almost another meaning of some kind of a military alliance. The whole policy that we have pursued is opposed to this conception. We want friendly relations with Pakistan. We hope we shall get them. But we are not going to tie ourselves up, our conceptions, our policies, with other countries involving military defence and attacking and all that”.

Since Chinese invasion, the picture has changed. But the basic issues raised by the late Prime Minister, as explained later in this note, remain.

5. When critics in India brought up our old offer of no-war declaration as being as good as joint defence, and perhaps even better, President Ayub said on November 3, 1959, "Why talk of war? Why not settle our differences and talk of peace?” At the same time on November 10, he stated in Tehran that Pakistan considered war as irrelevant and believed that it was not the medium to solve disputes. This was a paraphrase of our no-war declaration which he nevertheless continued to reject. "When I talk of mutual defence, I mean the solution of problems between us”, he said to "Reynold News” on December 20, 1959. On December 27, 1959, in an exclusive interview published in AL AHRAM, he struck a new note:

"In fact India aims at isolating Pakistan and weakening her economy.
Nevertheless I believe that failure to solve Kashmir problem will lead both India and Pakistan to destruction. It may even result in the loss of the independence of both of them”.

In other words, he seriously suggested that the solution of the Kashmir problem was of greater importance to Pakistan than its own independence or even survival!
This tended to show that Pakistan did not believe either in the reality of any threat to the sub-continent from the north or in any urgent need for joint defence.
Attempting to answer the late Prime Minister’s arguments, President Ayub said at the time:

“I just mean some agreement or understanding between our two countries, that there shall be peace between us, that the problem of Kashmir shall be solved; that our armies need not worry any more about our common frontier and look after the other borders. This would be enough for the moment. As soon as we reach such an understanding which allows our two armies fully to face any danger from outside the subcontinent, the substance of joint defence would be reached. Later, when the relations improved, we may talk about other things”.

In Chittagong on 24 January 1960, he referred to three kinds of joint defence arrangements with India - (i) a Pact between the two countries, (ii) an understanding, and (iii) mutual peace between the two countries to let them look after their outer borders. “I am prepared to have any of these arrangements”. However, these arrangements were subject to the settlement of the Kashmir problem.

6. Apart from the conditions laid down by President Ayub, the basic issues involved in the case must be faced. To begin with, joint defence against whom? It cannot be against neighbours like Ceylon, Burma, Malaysia, Nepal, Afghanistan or Iran with whom we have friendly relations. For similar reasons it cannot be against the Soviet Union. As for China, Foreign Minister Bhutto declared in the Pakistan National Assembly last year that in the event of war with India, Pakistan would be helped by the most powerful nation in Asia, whose territorial integrity and security would be involved. “This is a new and vital factor that has been brought into the situation”, he added. On another occasion he declared that even if the Kashmir issue was settled amicably, Pakistan would not join India against China. The Chinese Vice Minister of Foreign Trade, Mr. Nan Han Chen, said in December 1963 during a visit to Pakistan that if there was a war between India and Pakistan, “China will surely support Pakistan and not India”. Marshal Chen-Yi, Chinese Foreign Minister, told a Pakistani correspondent at Lahore last February: “Pakistan and China will continue to be friends even after you get Kashmir and we take Taiwan”.

7. Thus, joint defence cannot be directed even against China. The picture might change if we could settle our border problem with that country. In such a case joint defence might appear to be aimed at the Soviet Union which would immediately affect our relations with the Russians. If China is to pursue its policy of expansionism and domination of South and South East Asia, it stands to gain more by its present tactics of keeping Pakistan divided from India and from the Soviet Union. It is also worth mentioning that joint defence might seriously affect our relations with Afghanistan which has a dispute with Pakistan over the Pakhtoonistan issue, and which has been very friendly towards us. This is turn might strain our relations with the Soviet Union on which we are dependent for support on the Kashmir issue in the Security Council.

8. Another basic issue is that joint defence involves joint foreign policy and joint communications, all of which tend to blur the partition, if not annulling it, apart from the difficulty that we are not prepared to join military blocs and Pakistan is not prepared to leave them. Such a development would hardly be palatable to Pakistan which has already rejected Sheikh Abdullah's proposal for confederation. President Ayub's reasons against confederation apply with equal force to his proposal of joint defence. We suspect that there is already a non-aggression or defensive pact or understanding between China and Pakistan. It is difficult to imagine, therefore, how any joint defence can exist between a non-aligned country like India and a country which is aligned on the one hand with Western military blocs and on the other with China. President Ayub could not be unaware of these facts.

9. Apart from these considerations, the real difficulty is that no joint defence is possible until the Kashmir issue is settled, and presumably settled to Pakistan's satisfaction. This explains the proposal for what it really is, namely, a tactical and propaganda device by which the Kashmir issue is kept in the forefront of world attention and presented in a light favourable to Pakistan without committing Pakistan in any manner.

10. Nevertheless the proposal has certain constructive elements which we have tried to advocate in promoting Indo-Pakistan understanding, without compromising our non-aligned position, only to run up against Pakistan opposition. Non-aggression and disengagement of troops along the Indo-Pakistan border, including the cease fire line, embodied in a treaty of friendship, would be an essential part of joint defence. All our efforts to persuade Pakistan to agree to such a proposal have met with failure. There was a protracted correspondence between the late Prime Minister and Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan, over our proposal of no-war declaration, the essence of which was that while we recommended that neither party should resort to force to resolve Indo-Pakistan disputes, Pakistan insisted on suggesting ways and means of resolving them, including arbitration which, in our opinion, was not necessarily applicable to every dispute, least of all to the Kashmir dispute. During the joint talks when we proposed the disengagement of troops along the cease fire line, we were told by Foreign Minister Bhutto that in any disengagement of troops India would immediately gain by diverting its troops to the India-China border, without giving Pakistan any corresponding benefit since Pakistan's defence had been guaranteed by U.S.A. and CENTO and SEATO powers. Only last June Mr. Bhutto declared that Pakistan could never have a no-war pact with India, "an aggressor country" in Kashmir. Recently he described any suggestion for such a pact as "a most sinister move" since it would mean accepting the cease fire line in Kashmir and "ultimately we would forget the Kashmir issue".

11. Such an attitude strikes at the root of President Ayub's proposal. Restoration of boundary pillars along the Jammu - Sialkot border, observance of the Cease Fire Agreement and the cease fire line which would immediately reduce the number of incidents and tension in the area, clearance of Pakistan encroachments on our side of the cease fire line, termination of Pakistan subversion and sabotage in Kashmir, freer movement of people from one side of the cease fire line to the other, economic cooperation, rational use of natural resources, like water, to mutual advantage, and other similar measures would pave the way for the real objective of President Ayub's proposal, namely, disengagement of troops and the avoidance of needless expenditure on stationing troops along the Indo - Pakistan border and the cease fire line. Every one of these suggestions has been rejected by Pakistan.

12. A fact which cannot be ignored is that Pakistan has been waging a war against secularism and pursuing a sectarian policy with far reaching implications. Thus it is not a mere accident that while opposed the confederation with India, President Ayub advocated recently a confederation of Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iran, and Turkey. It is not accidental that Pakistan, Iran and Turkey recently met in Istanbul as "non - Arab States" to devise ways and means of developing a Common Market. The Arab States are secular.

13. It is also noteworthy that while President Ayub objects to any military aid being given to India by U.S.A. on the false ground that such aid would be used by India against Pakistan and not against China with which she has only a "minor border problem," President Ayub does not advocate any reduction in U.S. military aid to Pakistan. If anything Pakistan tries to extract a larger quantum of military aid from U.S.A. This shows quite clearly that the Pakistan objective is to keep India militarily weak and Pakistan strong, obviously with the object of dictating terms to India on the Kashmir issue from a position of strength.

14. President Ayub is thus not prepared to face the implications of his own proposal. If he rules out war for the settlement of Indo - Pakistan disputes; if money spent on keeping troops on the opposite sides of the Indo - Pakistan border and the cease fire line, is a needless waste of resources, preventing economic development for raising living standards in the two countries; if he is really conscious of the danger to the sub-continent from the north; and if he sincerely believes in closer and friendly relations between India and Pakistan, he should jump at our offer of no war declaration which would meet all these requirements, without committing either party to a military alliance. The growing intimacy between Pakistan and China, Pakistan's attempt to isolate India from her neighbours by presenting India's military strength as a threat to their own security and by even suggesting that they might, as a result, have to seek Chinese help, and at the same time to continue to receive all support from her military allies while opposing provision of any military assistance by them to India, exposes the proposal as a super-pressure to force India to surrender Kashmir. This is clear from the statement he made in London on July 13 when he said that even if India genuinely believed that she was threatened by China, New Delhi's first aim should be to come to terms with Pakistan on Kashmir and other issues to provide for joint defence of the sub-continent.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1698. Joint Statement issued after the meeting between Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and Pakistan President General Ayub Khan.

Karachi, October 12, 1964.

The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India met informally today during the latter's stop-over at Karachi en-route to New Delhi from Cairo.

The two leaders had a general discussion on relations between the two countries. They were both firmly of the view that these relations needed to be improved and conducted to their mutual benefit as good neighbours. They agreed that to that end it was necessary to promote better understanding between the two countries and to settle outstanding problems and disputes on an honourable and equitable basis. They further agreed that discussions between the two Governments at appropriate levels should be held at the earliest possible moment so as to give effect to their common desire to develop friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries.

The opportunity to have this personal exchange of views was welcomed by the President and the Prime Minister, who will remain in touch to determine how these objectives can be best realised.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1699. Media Report on the visit of US Senate delegation headed by Senator Sayne Morse to India.

New Delhi, December 12, 1965.

The U.S.A. Senate delegation headed by Senator Wayne Morse, which came to India at the invitation of the Government of India, is to study various problems facing India's economic growth and other issues, including the recent Indo-Pakistan conflict and the Chinese threat on the northern border.

Mr. Wayne Morse thanked the Prime Minister for the "frank" discussions on India's problems and assured him that these talks would be "most helpful" in enabling the delegation to return with a "clear idea on great many issues".

"We are looking forward to reporting our observations to the President and to the Senate," he added.

Mr. Morse said that President Johnson had asked him personally to express to Mr. Shastri and through him to the Indian people his feelings, regard and friendship for India.

"May I add that members of his delegation are delighted to know that your meeting with President Johnson will take place soon. Mr. Prime Minister, I would like to conclude by saying that the U.S.A. yields to no one in its friendship for free democratic India."

He also thanked the Prime Minister for the invitation extended to the delegation to visit "your great country".

Mr. Morse said that the U.S. Vice-President, Mr. Humbert Humphrey to whom the invitation was addressed, had discussed the delegation's trip with President Johnson. President Johnson was "deeply grateful for this opportunity we have been offered to hear your views".

The Prime Minister told the delegation that India was willing to enter into a no-war pact with Pakistan even now. He said that it was essential that Pakistan should abjure war as a method of settling differences. It was also essential that Pakistan should stop the hate campaign against India. The Prime Minister said that he could not understand why the friends of Pakistan never gave this advice to that country. India had offered a no-war pact to Pakistan many years ago. This offer had been repeated by him and was still open. There were many problems pending in the world but nations had not gone to war to settle them.

In the course of the last 18 years. Mr. Shastri said Pakistan had indulged in aggression against India thrice. This was something most painful.
"I do not know if the people outside India have taken into consideration the feelings of the people of India who have been subjected to aggression thrice. India had no alternative but to resist the aggressor. We had to make it clear that our desire for peace was not to be mistaken for weakness. What has happened in the recent Indo - Pakistan conflict is not a matter of satisfaction for me or the country. We have also suffered during this conflict. But there is no doubt that our Armed Forces have dealt a heavy blow to the Pakistan Army and their armour." he added.

Mr. Shastri said the continuous cease-fire violations by Pakistan and the Chinese intrusion into Indian territory were causing anxiety. China had some time ago served an ultimatum on India but it did nothing then. Now the Chinese were active on both the eastern and western borders. There could be many reasons for it but he could not say definitely what it meant. It was possible, he added, that Pakistan and China were preparing to do something. They were hand in glove with each other. There was absolutely no doubt that Pakistan and China had been in constant consultations with each other. Not only when Pakistan launched the attack in Kashmir but even when Pakistan launched an attack in the Rann of Kutch.

Mr. Shastri said that ideologically, the two countries had nothing in common.
What was common between them was their antipathy against India. The situation was complicated. India would have to wait and see how things developed, he added.

The Prime Minister said that aggression by her two neighbours had come in the way of India's economic development. China, of course, would be very happy if India's economic progress slowed down.

China he added, was a powerful country and had built up a mighty war machine.
It was not easy for India to fight China but if attacked India would have to resist that country with all her strength.

Although India was primarily interested in economic development, she had no choice but to strengthen her defences to meet this twin threat to her territorial integrity, said the Prime Minister.
1700. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi delivered on the Independence Day from the ramparts of the Red Fort renewing the no-war pact offer to Pakistan.

Delhi, August 15, 1968.

Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi appealed to Pakistan to reconsider India's offer of a "no war" pact with her. That was the only way which was good to both the countries, for then alone both would be able to tackle their internal problems with undivided attention.

Mrs. Gandhi was addressing the nation on August 15, from the ramparts of the historic Red Fort on the 21st Independence anniversary.

Mrs. Gandhi said that though Soviet Union's decision to sell arms to Pakistan should cause concern to every Indian, there was no cause to get panicky or feel disgruntled. There was also no question of India getting pressurized by anybody. India, she said, was a big country with a firm determination to follow the path of peace and progress. Such countries were never pressurized. "Unfortunately, our relations with Pakistan have not been friendly. Pakistan has always kept up tension with India. Both Mr. Nehru and Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri offered to sign a "no war" pact with Pakistan. I again appeal to Pakistan today to reconsider this proposal as it is the only way in which lies the good of both India and Pakistan*....."

* Pakistan's response to Mrs. Gandhi's offer was contained in "observers' remarks made on August 16 and carried by the Dawn on August 17, who described the offer as a "mere stunt to hoodwink the world to camouflage her expansionist designs". The observers said the tremendous war machine being built up by India, her intransigence on basic disputes like Jammu and Kashmir and Farraka and past record of backing out of international agreements exposed the hollowness of the Indian proposal. How could there be a lasting peace if the causes of conflict between the two countries were not removed, they asked. The Indian offer in itself was an admission of the existence of disputes which could have led to an armed conflict between the two countries. This danger, they said, could not be removed by a no-war pact without first re-solving the fundamental disputes. The observers said Pakistan had to take into account the massive arms buildup by India and the intentions underlying this. The Indian contention that the war potential was directed against China was meaningless because the type of war machine she was evolving could operate essentially in plains. They said if India had any intention of living in peace with Pakistan she would not have spurned the offers of peaceful settlement of disputes made by President Ayub Khan time and again. The Indians, they said, actually wanted Pakistan to forget disputes like the Jammu and Kashmir which concerned the life and death struggle of the Kashmiri people to secure their right of self-determination.
Extract from the speech of Pakistan President Ayub Khan giving response to the offer of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for a no-war declaration.

Islamabad, September 1, 1968.

"Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi has recently again put forward the proposal that Pakistan and India should sign a no war pact. Pakistan has always stood for peace. We want to settle all our disputes with India in a peaceful manner. This has also been our policy in regard to the dispute about Jammu and Kashmir. But on the one hand Indian leaders avoid any purposeful negotiations on this basic dispute and, on the other, keep on talking about unrealistic no war pacts. There could not be a better no war pact than a just settlement of this basic dispute. To talk of no war pacts without settling the Kashmir dispute is only an attempt to mislead and hoodwink the world*.

"The question of Farakka Barrage should also be settled in a friendly and realistic manner. This issue affects the well-being of the people and I appeal to the Indian Government to settle this question in a humanitarian spirit. To turn every issue in to a permanent dispute is indicative of narrow-mindedness. It is easy to create disputes but very difficult to resolve them."

* On October 26 to mark the completion of his ten years after his military coup, Ayub Khan made a televised broadcast and repeating his offer of no-war pact said that Pakistan was willing to sign a no - war pact with India provided it was laid down how the two countries could resolve the existing problems or those that might arise in the future. He said: "If India was to come to an agreement with us on the substance of such a pact, we should be very happy indeed. But there has been no settlement with India so far and it is continuing to build up its armed forces at an alarming rate." In face of this situation, he said: “We have perforce to build a deterrent force to deal effectively with any aggression against us.” India’s attitude was crucial to Pakistan’s security as “it has been hostile to us”, he said. Significantly, Radio Pakistan was broadcasting commentaries on India’s offer of no - war declaration in the last few days, preparing the ground for the speech President Ayub Khan made.

These commentaries made a reference to a counter suggestion, made by Pakistan’s first Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan, that a machinery should be created for resolving Indo - Pakistan disputes simultaneously with the signing of a no - war declaration.
1702. Statement by the External Affairs Minister in Rajya Sabha recapitulating the history of the "No-War Declaration".

New Delhi, November 21, 1968.

On December 22, 1949, the Government of India handed over to the Pakistan High Commissioner in India a draft of a joint declaration denouncing the use of force for the settlement of disputes between the two countries. The draft, which came to be known as the "No War Declaration" is reproduced below:

"The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples who have many common ties, hereby declare that they condemn resort to war for the settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that the settlement of such disputes between them shall always be sought through recognised peaceful methods such as negotiation, or by resort to mediation or arbitration by special agency set up by mutual agreement for the purpose, or by agreed reference to some appropriate international body recognised by both of them. It is their earnest hope as well as their firm conviction that the implementation of this declaration in the spirit which lies behind it will serve to maintain good relations between the two countries and advance the cause of world peace."

2. On January 16, 1950, Prime Minister Nehru wrote to Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan commending the above proposal. On 14th February, 1950, Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan replied to Mr. Nehru forwarding an alternative draft of a joint declaration which read as follows:

"The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples, hereby declare that they will not resort to war for settlement of any existing or future disputes between them. They further agree that settlement of such disputes shall always be sought through peaceful methods of negotiation & mediation and, if these should fail to bring settlement, by resort to arbitration of all points of difference including those relating to the procedure for arbitration. They undertake that they will abide by the award of an arbitral Tribunal, which shall consist of ........................................for the settlement of all existing disputes. In the event of their not being unanimous, the decision of the majority shall be binding. Negotiations for the settlement of all such disputes shall begin as early as practicable, and such of them as are not settled by negotiations within two months from the date of this declaration shall be referred to mediation, for which a further period of two months shall be allowed. Any matters remaining unsettled at the expiry of this period shall be referred to arbitration."
In pursuance of this declaration, both Governments hereby agree to refer to this Arbitral Tribunal differences which have arisen or may arise in implementation of the UNCIP's Resolution of August 13th 1948, and January 5th, 1949, which both Governments have accepted for settlement of the Kashmir dispute. Both Governments also agree that the canal water dispute shall, if no agreement is reached by negotiation or mediation, be referred to the International Court of Justice for decision. In other disputes outstanding between them such as Junagadh and its neighbouring States, evacuee property, boundary disputes and claims relating to assets, both Governments agree that if no settlement is reached by negotiation or mediation the matter shall be referred to the Arbitral Tribunal. It is their earnest hope as well as their firm conviction that implementation of this Declaration and the spirit which lies behind it will serve to promote friendly relations between the two countries and advance the cause of International peace.

3. All through 1950 letters were exchanged between the prime ministers of India and Pakistan in which each reiterated his own view on the subject. The Government of India maintained that neither a time table nor a uniform procedure for all types of disputes was practicable (and) dispute should be settled on the basis of the procedure most appropriate to it; and that certain issues - such as political issues - were non-justiciable and could not be disposed off by reference to a Judicial Tribunal.

4. On 17th March 1950, Prime Minister Nehru, speaking in Parliament, summarised the position as follows:

"Before I go back to the new situation that has arisen in Bengal, may I remind the House that some time ago I made an offer to the Pakistan Government that we should both subscribe to a "No - War" declaration on behalf of our Governments? The draft that we proposed was published in the Press. It was a very simple draft. The answer of the Pakistan Governments was rather complicated; they said that before we did this, we must devise means for settling every other problem that we had, whether it was Kashmir or devaluation. I pointed out to them that it would be very good thing if we could solve all our problems and that, if we were to solve them, the first step should be taken. What I wanted was to create an atmosphere which would help in the solution of those problems. So we went on arguing and the latest thing is a reply from the Prime Minister of Pakistan making various proposals about how the other problems should be tackled and what procedure should be laid down."

5. During the lengthy Correspondence between Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Bogra and Mr. Nehru on Kashmir during the period July 1953 to October 1954, the No - War declaration proposal was once again raised. Mr. Nehru reiterated the Indian viewpoint; the Pakistan Prime Minister did not resile from the Pakistani stand.

6. In March 1956, following a series of clashes on the western border, the Pakistan Prime Minister Chaudhuri Mohammad Ali in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly revived the idea of issuing a "No War Declaration" in the interest of friendly and neighbourly relations between the two countries. Our Prime Minister in a letter dated March 29th, 1956, to the Pakistan Prime Minister welcomed this proposal and drew his attention to the similar proposal first made by India. In reply, Chaudhuri Mohammad Ali furnished the full text of the relevant portion of his speech of March 19, 1956. This made it clear that his idea was substantially the same as Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan's proposal of 1950. The extract from the speech of March 19, 1956 reads: "Let both countries sign an agreement that they will not go to war against each other and will settle all their disputes by negotiations and mediation and failing these by arbitration." Our Prime Minister in his reply dated June 20, 1956, stated that it was "neither feasible nor desirable to lay down some rigid code to settle every dispute in a particular way".

7. On December 4, 1956, in a statement made by the Prime Minister in the Rajya Sabha, he said as follows:

"The House will remember that 4 years ago or may be 5 years ago, I offered a No War declaration to guarantee that neither country would go to war and each country would settle these problems peacefully, and even if there is no settlement, they would never go to war with each other. But they never accepted that offer. That offer still holds good. And I went a step further and I said that even though Pakistan did not accept that declaration, I, on behalf of India, made the declaration that I would not go to war with Pakistan unless we were attacked because after all we have to defend ourselves."

8. On July 7, 1965, Prime Minister Shastri repeated India's offer of 'no war pact' with Pakistan, at Nagpur. Prime Minister added that the offer which had been made years ago by late Jawaharlal Nehru was still open and Pakistan was welcome to accept it.

9. On July 12, 1965, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan "ridiculed" Mr. Shastri's offer in the National Assembly of Pakistan. The Pakistan Foreign Minister described the offer as "fraudulent" and "deceptive". In his monthly broadcast on August 1, 1965, President Ayub Khan questioned how the Indian rulers could expect Pakistan to agree to a no war pact without their taking any concrete or positive step for the settlement of outstanding disputes.

10. Article I of the Tashkent Declaration reads as follows:

"The Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan agree that both sides will exert all efforts to create good neighbourly relations between India and Pakistan in accordance with the United Nations Charter. They reaffirm their obligation under the Charter not to have recourse to force and to settle their disputes through peaceful means. They considered that the interests of peace in their region and particularly in the Indo-Pakistan Sub-continent and, indeed, the interests of the peoples of India and Pakistan were not served by the continuance of tension between the two countries. It was against this background that Jammu and Kashmir was discussed, and each of the sides set forth its respective position."

11. The Prime Minister spoke as follows on August 15, this year (1968):

"Both late Mr. Nehru and Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, offered to sign a "No-War Pact" with Pakistan. I again appeal to Pakistan today to reconsider this proposal as it is the only way in which lies the good of both India and Pakistan...........

12. On September 1, 1968, President Ayub rejected the Prime Minister's offer in the following words:

"Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi has recently again put forward the proposal that Pakistan and India should sign a no war pact. Pakistan has always stood for peace. We want to settle all disputes with India in a peaceful manner. This has also been our policy in regard to the dispute about Jammu & Kashmir. But on the one hand Indian leaders avoid any purposeful negotiations on this basic dispute and, on the other, keep on talking about unrealistic no war pacts. There could not be a better 'no war pact' than a just settlement of this basic dispute. To talk of no war pacts without settling the Kashmir dispute is only an attempt to mislead and hoodwink the world."

13. On October 26, 1968, President Ayub in a television broadcast on the tenth anniversary of his assumption of power, while attacking India for its hostility and intransigence towards Pakistan and justifying Pakistan's military preparations stated:

"We are most willing have a No War Pact but with that we must have another pact and that pact should define how India and Pakistan can resolve the problems that exist at present or may arise in the future. If India was to come to an agreement with us on the substance of such a pace we shall be very happy indeed. But there has been no settlement with India so far and she is continuing to build up her armed forces at an alarming rate at the cost of her people who are undergoing starvation, privation and suffering. We have therefore to build a deterrent force to deal effectively with any aggression against us."
Note recorded by Secretary Ministry of External Affairs
Kewal Singh on the call made by the Pakistan High Commissioner.

New Delhi, January 4, 1969.

Ministry of External Affairs

The Pakistan High Commissioner saw me and requested for a transcript of the Prime Minister's answer at the press conference of January 1, 1969, in which she mentioned the possibility of setting up a bilateral machinery to settle Indo-Pak problems and wished to discuss the matter further with me at a subsequent meeting.

2. The transcript of the relevant question and answer released by the Press Information Bureau is reproduced below. I shall hand over this to the Pakistan High Commissioner.

"Question: Are you in a position to comment on President Ayub Khan's recent proposal of no-war pact?"

"Prime Minister: In a way I did comment on it in Parliament. We ourselves have been anxious for a no-war pact for a very long time, since my father's time. Obviously the no-war pact can have no meaning if you say that other things must be solved first. But what could take place is that you evolve some kind of machinery - bilateral machinery - that is at whatever level it is decided upon to go into these matters simultaneously."

3. Regarding the High Commissioner's request to discuss the matter further, subject to Prime Minister's approval, I intend to tell the following in reply to possible queries about the matter.

(i) The Prime Minister's suggestion for a No-War Pact which was made on 15th August, 1968, was animated by the desire to break the present impasse in Indo-Pak relations. She has put no conditions to the offer. A commitment to peace on both sides was a necessary step towards the creation of a proper climate for the solution of mutual problems. For either country to keep open the option to use force bred tension and suspicion.

(ii) Speaking on October 26, President Ayub had said that Pakistan would be willing to have No-War Pact but with that Pact there should be another Pact to define how India and Pakistan can resolve their mutual problems. By offering a No-War Pact we did not mean that it was not necessary to take any further steps to solve mutual problems. It is to assure Pakistan that we wished to solve all our problems with Pakistan that Prime Minister had referred to the creation of a bilateral joint machinery which could immediately start discussions for the normalization of relations and the resolution of all differences between the two countries.

(iii) It should be the objective of the Joint Body, through a step by step approach, to bring about normalcy and to settle all differences between the two countries. The setting up of such a Joint Body or Commission would be in consonance with the provisions of the Tashkent Declaration.

4. If the High Commissioner asks a specific question whether this Joint Body would go into the Kashmir question and also asks for details about the Joint machinery that we have in view, I would answer that if the ideas of a No-War Pact and the setting up of an Indo-Pakistan joint body are acceptable in principle, details can be discussed and gone into. Naturally the Joint Body will look into every problem or issue raised by the parties. I would refuse to be drawn out further at this stage.

Sd/- (Kewal Singh)
Secretary E.A. - I
4/1/1969

◆◆◆◆◆
Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to the High Commission of India in Pakistan regarding proposal for a 'No-war Declaration'.

New Delhi, January 10, 1969.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

Narendra Singh
Joint Secretary (Pak)

No. PL/103/1/68

January 10, 1969

My dear Chib,

Please refer to your telegram No. 4 of January 4, 1969, asking whether the Pakistani press reports are true that the Prime Minister at her press conference on January 1, 1969 said that the bilateral machinery for settlement of outstanding problems will include a discussion on Kashmir.

2. You must now have seen the answer given by Prime Minister at the press conference which referred to the joint bilateral machinery. It is reproduced below:

"Question: Are you in a position to comment on President Ayub Khan’s recent proposal on No - War Pact?"

"Prime Minister: In a way I did comment on it in Parliament. We ourselves have been anxious for a No - War Pact for a very long time, since my father’s time. Obviously the No - War Pact can have no meaning if you say that other things must be solved first. But what could take place is that you evolve some kind of machinery - bilateral machinery - that is at whatever level it is decided upon to go into these matters simultaneously."

No mention was thus made by her about Kashmir in the context of the joint machinery.

3. To the Pakistan High Commissioner who has asked for a clarification as to what exactly was said and meant we intend to, today, the third anniversary of the Tashkent Declaration, give a copy of the above question and answer and speak as follows:

"The Prime Minister’s suggestion for a No - War Pact which was made on August 15, 1968, was animated by the desire to break the present impasse in Indo - Pak relations. She put no conditions to the offer. For either country to keep open the option to use force bred tension and suspicion. President Ayub speaking on October 26, had said that Pakistan would be willing to have a No - War Pact with India but that with that Pact there should be another Pact to define how India and Pakistan can resolve their mutual problems. By offering a No - War Pact, Prime Minister did not mean that it was not necessary to take steps to solve mutual problems. Indeed we are anxious to solve our all problems with Pakistan peacefully through bilateral discussions. The Prime Minister had, therefore, referred to the creation of a bilateral Joint Machinery which could after the signing of the No - War Pact immediately start discussions for the normalization of Indo - Pak relations and the solution to all difficulties between the two Countries. It should be the objective of the Joint Body, to bring about normalcy and to settle all differences between the two countries step by step. Setting up of a Joint Body would be in consonance with the provisions of the Tashkent Declaration. Further details about the Joint machinery can be discussed after we have received a definite indication from Pakistan that in principle they agree to a No - War Pact and the creating of such a negotiating body. This is all what we have to say for the time being."

4. Our substantive position on a discussion on Kashmir in the Joint Body - or anywhere else - is as follows, for your information and to enable you to brief your colleagues if necessary:

"We should try to make a start by normalizing relations and solving the easier questions. The signing of a No-War Pact and normalization of relations would open avenues for a discussion of other Indo - Pak problems including that of the situation created by Pakistan's occupation of a part of Kashmir, in a realistic manner. We have already made clear that we are prepared to discuss and settle all our differences with Pakistan in a spirit of good-neighbourliness. As the Prime Minister has stated at the Press Conference-in answer to Kashmir was part of the bigger problem of Indo-Pak relations. That is, we should look for ways and means to improve Indo-Pak relations so that some solution could also be found in Kashmir. (While giving the above explanation we should be careful not to encourage the impression that we would ever be willing in the joint body or elsewhere to discuss the Kashmir question on Pakistan's present terms i.e. discuss the future status of affiliation of the State, since this would mean annulment of the accession and putting the status of the area which is outside the control of the invaders in jeopardy. This discussion will be about the situation created by Pakistan occupation of Kashmir, which, of course, does not rule out some compromise solution"

Yours sincerely,
Sd/-
(Narendra Singh)

Shri A.S. Chib, Counselor,
High Commission of India, Islamabad.
1705. Briefing by Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on India's offer of a 'No War Declaration'.

Rawalpindi, January 30, 1969.

The Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman said in Rawalpindi that the Indian Prime Minister's statement of Jan 1 on President Ayub Khan's proposal for evolving a joint machinery for the settlement of all outstanding Indo-Pakistan disputes simultaneously with a no-war pact was "merely a propaganda policy to mislead the world opinion".

Replying to newsmen's questions, he said there was "no justification at all for attaching any significance" to the Indian Prime Minister's statement given at a Press Conference at New Delhi on Jan 1 and her subsequent clarification at Teheran Airport on Jan 11 as they do not indicate any willingness on the part of India to settle the Kashmir dispute.

The proposal was made by President Ayub Khan in a statement on Oct 24 last year. It raised considerable interest in India and other countries. But the first official word from India came on Dec 12 when Mrs. Indira Gandhi told the Rajya Sabha that the proposal was not acceptable to India.

Later on Jan 1 at a Press conference, asked to comment on President Ayub's proposal, she said: "In a way I have commented on it in the Parliament. We ourselves have been anxious for a no-war pact for a very long time - since my father's time. Obviously no-war pact can have no meaning if you say that other things must be solved first. But what can take place is that you evolve some kind of machinery - bilateral machinery - that is at whatever level is decided upon to go into these matters simultaneously."

Firstly, she had prefaced her statement by referring to her Dec 12 statement in which she had rejected the President's proposal: and secondly, as she explained on Jan 11 while replying to newsmen's questions at Teheran Airport, what she had meant was that a bilateral machinery should be evolved to go into matter such as those concerning "seized cargo, restoration of air communications, and liberalization of travel and trade." She further said: "We do not feel that Kashmir is a problem"

The main purpose of her statement was obviously not to offer anything to Pakistan but to offer an olive branch to China and in this context it was found expedient to make some gestures, to Pakistan also that Moscow and Washington may not get suspicious of India's intentions.

What Pakistan had meant by the proposal was that simultaneously with a no-war pact, a machinery should be evolved for settlement of all the outstanding Indo-Pakistan disputes including Kashmir and Farakka, through bilateral talks if possible or other internationally recognised methods such as arbitration and mediation if necessary. These methods had been adopted by the two countries for the settlement of the Rann of Kutch dispute.

The spokesman said that Pakistan stand for self-executing machinery, arbitration or mediation for settlement of disputes was neither "strange" nor fantastic. President Ayub Khan's proposal raised considerable interest in India and the elder statesman, Mr. Jaya Parkash Narayan had even regarded it as some kind of opening to break the deadlock in the Indo-Pakistan relations.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1706. Letter of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq while acknowledging his greetings on her birthday.

New Delhi January 1981 (exact date not available).

I have received your letter of November 12. Thank you for your thoughtful greetings on my birthday.

Friendly relations between our two countries are important for the well-being of our two peoples. They are also a major factor in establishing peace and stability in the region. Therefore, guiding these relations on constructive lines is not only a vital responsibility of our two governments but also an imperative necessity for the progress and prosperity of our two peoples.

It is unfortunate that the state of these relations is not what it ought to be. But this is not due to any lack of effort on our part.

We had sincerely hoped that the Simla Agreement would usher in an era of cooperation and friendship. Eight years after its signing, we find that out of context interpretations are being used to thwart its purport and essence.

In Simla, the basic question to which we addressed ourselves was whether the interests of our two peoples must be contradictory or whether they could be complementary. We agreed that confrontation was not in the interests of either country and that our interests are indeed complementary. Because of the history of suspicion and mistrust, we took some fundamental decisions to guide our conduct in the coming years.
In order to create an atmosphere for the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship, we agreed that controversial and emotional issues which had defied solutions would not be used for propaganda. We would not ignore or down-grade these issues, but would work step by step to create an atmosphere in which these issues could be discussed rationally, logically and positively. This required a conscious decision not to interfere in each other's internal affairs, to prevent hostile propaganda directed against each other and to encourage the dissemination of such information as would promote the development of friendly relations.

Events which are exclusively our internal affair have been commented upon by official spokesmen and Government-controlled media in an effort to interfere in and exploit temporary and local situations. Public references have been made in a propagandistic manner at all sorts of forums to matters which are essentially of a bilateral nature. The Kashmir question has been projected as of concern to the Islamic countries by linking it with the just struggle of the people of Palestine, which has been consistently supported by India. Can this be to the advantage of the people of Palestine or for the solidarity of the developing world? Are these actions conducive to friendship and trust between our two countries or in accordance with the basic understanding reached at Simla?

Some initial steps were taken to enlarge areas of positive cooperation. Since then, nothing substantial seems to have happened. We have taken initiatives in trade, economic cooperation, scientific and cultural exchanges and increased contacts between the two peoples for greater understanding. The response has not been positive. On the contrary it has been met with cynicism and even suspicion.

As always, the people and Government of India, and I personally stand committed to the promotion of friendship, understanding and cooperation between our two peoples. We are equally committed to respect Pakistan's national unity, territorial integrity, political independence and sovereign equality. But progress towards friendship and cooperation is not dependent upon us alone. It is in our common interest to eschew opportunism and to work for meaningful cooperation for the larger good of both peoples. We remain more than willing to respond to any positive measures to improve the content of our relations.

A new year has begun; please accept my best wishes for your personal health and for progress and prosperity of the friendly people of Pakistan.

❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖
1707. Telegram from Foreign Secretary to Indian Missions abroad.

New Delhi, January 9, 1981.

TELEGRAM

From: Foreign, New Delhi
To: Indembassy, Washington
     Indembassy, Ankara
     Indembassy, Doha
     Indembassy, Bahrain
     Indembassy, Jeddah
     Indembassy, Kuwait

MOST IMMEDIATE

No. 34104-Circular January 9, 1981.

Head of Mission From Foreign Secretary

As you are aware, the Pakistani media has in the recent past been creating something of a war scare in that country by talking about an impending conflict with India because of our aggressive intentions, the military build-up on our side and Indo-Soviet collusion. While the media campaign has now been moderated, the Pakistan Government has continued to stress to Western countries and members of the Islamic Conference, the so called threat to Pakistan from India. This may be as much to justify Pakistan's recent efforts to acquire military hardware as to provide the cover up for future purchases with assistance from Saudi Arabia and possibly the United States. President Zia is leaving shortly for Turkey, Bahrain and Qatar before going to Saudi Arabia for Islamic Conference and will doubtless dwell on the threats to Pakistan's security from the Soviet presence in Afghanistan and from India as well.

Prime Minister has recently written a letter to ZIA-UL-HAQ in reply to his communication which was sent in November. You should take immediate steps to brief the Government(s) of your accreditation at an appropriately high level on the lines of PM's letter stressing the desire for friendly relations with Pakistan. This would counter the efforts of the Pakistanis to give distorted picture of Indo-Pak relations. The Text of PM's letter is reproduced below: (as per Document No.1706)
Excerpts from the press conference of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi at Palam Airport on return from the Cancun Conference.

New Delhi, October 27, 1981.

Question: Madam Prime Minister, during your absence, there has been a very interesting development in our region. Our immediate neighbour, President Zia-ul-Haq has repeatedly been saying that he wants a No-War Pact with India. And in your absence, according to news, reports, he said that he would like to send it in writing to you. Would you comment on that?

Prime Minister: It make no difference whether it is in writing or in words. We are the ones who proposed a No-War Pact in 1949. We did not let the matter rest there. It has been repeated time and again by every succeeding Prime Minister. We have made it clear in every possible way that India wants to live at peace with Pakistan. I think those specific words “No-War Pact” were used in my father’s time and Pakistan rejected them outright. Afterwards, when I was talking with Mr. Bhutto and when we came to an agreement that there should be better relations, they said: “Please do not mention these words”. I don’t think he said that they are allergic but he said something to the effect that it is better to avoid them now. We said we were not wedded to words, and this was what we wanted and at that time we came to the decision that we should create an atmosphere of goodwill which would lead up to this. And, since it was our offer and we have never changed it since then, we are committed to that.

But what we are intrigued about is why these words should be used by President Zia at this particular time when they are going all out with anti India propaganda and raising bilateral issues. They speak of the Simla spirit, but the main thing agreed on in Simla was that bilateral issues would not be raised internationally; we could discuss them among ourselves, and if a general goodwill was established, we felt that there would be no difficulty in solving the bilateral problems. You can’t have two parallel things; you prepare for war and you say you would like to have a No-War Pact.

Question: Would you kindly ask for a further elucidation of this point?

Prime Minister: I asked for it the very first time I heard it. I said I don’t know what exactly it meant. But elucidation can’t come through words but through action and attitude.

Question: You said earlier that Pakistan can’t have two parallel things — make preparations for war and talk of No-war Pact. Are you saying that they are arming themselves for that purpose for a war....?
Prime Minister: Obviously, I am not saying anything new. What I have said before is that they are acquiring weaponry in quantity and in quality, in sophistication, which is far above the needs of the size of the country and any danger that can be posed. Who are they going to fight? Are they going to fight Afghanistan? Are they going to fight the Soviet Union? So, from whom is the danger? In all these years since independence, it is we who have been attacked by Pakistan. India has never, not once, either before or after independence, waged a war against another country.

1709. Letter from High Commissioner Natwar Singh to External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao.

Islamabad, November 3, 1981.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

Dear Shri Narasimha Rao,

During the last 3 days I have had two elderly and very distinguished Pakistani gentlemen to see me. First came Mr. Ghulam Farooq, who is now nearing 80. He had been a Minister in President Ayub's Cabinet and is on good terms with the present regime. He asked to see me on Friday, the 30th October, 1981 at my residence. This was my second meeting with him. Earlier in the year he came to lunch and nothing specific was discussed. This time, however, Mr. Farooq opened his innings by referring to the Non Aggression offer that Pakistan had made to us. He also said that somebody on the Indian side should do a little arithmetic to find out what precisely Pakistan was getting from the Americans. According to him such an exercise would have a salutary effect and correct the misapprehensions about the quantum and quality of the aid package offered to Pakistan. He concluded by expressing the hope that relations between the two countries would improve and that the Non Aggression Pact was a genuine offer and should be seen as such.

2. It is obvious that he had come on the behest of the Pakistani Government. I told him that a No War Pact had been offered by Indian many years ago and had been subsequently repeated on a number of occasions and each time it was brushed aside by Pakistan. I then drew his attention to the circumstances in which the Simla Agreement had been signed and the difficulties PM faced in seeing that Agreement through. There could be no greater evidence of the Prime Minister's desire to have harmonious and good neighbourly relations with Pakistan. Again as soon as she returned to power in January 1980 she sent Sardar Swaran Singh and Foreign Secretary Sathe to have talks with the Pakistani leaders. Then this year she took the initiative to send her Foreign Minister to Pakistan. The talks that he had with Pakistani leadership appeared to us to have gone well but within 3 or 4 days of Shri Narasimha Rao's return to India, the Buckley package was announced and this caused consternation and surprise in India. At no stage during the Foreign Minister's stay in Pakistan was any indication given of the type of military hardware Pakistan would be buying. When we raised the question of F. 16s a forthright (or so later a) clear answer was evaded.

3. We naturally protested against the F. 16s and I personally saw the President in this connection. Then nothing happened for a number of weeks till the 15th of September. On that day I was handed a statement that the Pakistani Government was issuing accepting the American offer on military and economic aid. In the last paragraph Pakistan mentioned a Non Aggression Pact with India. Since then we had not been given any details although references to it are made regularly in public by the President and other spokesmen of the Pakistan Government. It should not surprise people if India viewed this offer with some disquiet. We were also struck by the timing of the offer. It was made when Congressional hearings were going on in Washington, the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference was shortly to meet in Australia and the UN General Assembly was being convened.

4. We also did not understand why Pakistan needed such sophisticated military hardware especially when they had said in public that they did not expect any attack from the Soviet Union. We too on our part, had, at the highest level assured Pakistan that we were not unaware of their security requirements and wished Pakistan all good luck and earnestly desired good relations with our north-western neighbour.

5. Mr. Farooq heard me patiently and said that we must forget the past and look to the future. President Zia was genuine in his offer and he hoped that the misunderstandings that have appeared will be smoothened out. It then referred to some statements that President Zia had made with total disregard for any objectivity. We found it difficult to reconcile Pakistan's desire to have good relations with us and at the same time go in for heavy import of military hardware. We on our part certainly desire good relations with Pakistan as mutual antagonism could not be to the benefit of either country.
6. Yesterday, Mr. Agha Hilaly came to see me. He has been in Islamabad for two or three days and has seen the President. He asked me why the relations between India and Pakistan had soured. I told him that we could hardly be blamed for souring Indo - Pak relations. Right from the days of the Simla Agreement to the visit of Shri Narasimha Rao we had made every attempt to have good relations with Pakistan and we really found it difficult to reconcile Pakistan's desire for good relations with India and her decision to accept massive military aid. We had as he knew, offered a No War pact a number of times and had received no encouragement from Pakistan. I then asked him why during your visit to Pakistan in June no one on the Pakistani side had even mentioned a Non Aggression Pact. What had happened between 12th of June and 15th of September which made Pakistan take a 180º turn and make the Non Aggression Pact offer? Surely the proper time for taking soundings would have been the Foreign Minister's visit.

7. Agha Hilaly then came out with something very interesting. He said that he had been to India last December and had met a number of distinguished people who were his friends and colleagues. He had broached the subject with Shri G. Parthasarathy, whose response about the No War Pact had not been encouraging. He had also seen Shri L.K. Jha and Shri Rajeshwar Dayal. On his return to Pakistan he had reported to the concerned people about the lukewarm response he got to his soundings about the signing of the No War Pact. Bearing this in mind the Pakistani authorities did not think it desirable to discuss this matter with you since the views of the Indian side had been given to Hilaly.

8. I again asked him what precisely had happened between June and September. Agha Hilaly said that till 15th September the ball had been in the Pakistani court but after 15th September it was in the Indian court. I also told him that we had really not been given this offer directly. The offer was made in a statement on American arms aid to Pakistan. We did not precisely know what Pakistan had in mind. I assured him that we wish friendly relations with Pakistan and that both you and P.M. worked overtime to try and achieve their objective of having good neighbourly relations with Pakistan. But we found that statements of president Zia somewhat provocative and I then referred to what Zia had said to Far Eastern Economic Review and New York Times.

9. India had no intention "to walk over the bones of the 84 million Pakistanis". On the contrary we want the best of relations. Agha Hilaly then referred to one or two statements made by P.M. I told him that doctored versions of PM's statement were published in the Pakistani media and we had no means by which to even correct wrong facts. I said that Ambassador Sattar in New Delhi had access to everyone. He makes full use of India's democratic ethos. I had no such advantage in Pakistan and in the absence of a free press and a freely elected parliament we could not get across our point of view to the people of Pakistan. I said that in each statement P.M. had deliberately mentioned our desire for good relations with Pakistan. In view of past history we were fully entitled to ask why Pakistan was going in for such heavy armament. Agha Hilaly said that the Indian military people knew that Pakistan was no match for India and India should not fear Pakistan militarily.

10. Before leaving Agha Hilaly asked me whether it would be a good idea for him to visit India in the near future and talk to you. I said he would be welcome in India and was free to meet anyone he liked. He gave me the impression that he might come to Delhi sometime in January.

11. He also told me that his brother was in America and would return after the Aid Package to Pakistan had been approved by the American Congress. He also said that Pakistan was backing Salim for the post of Secretary General but it seemed unlikely that he would get the necessary majority. According to Hilaly, Sadruddin Agha Khan had the best chance.

Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao, Minister of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

Sd/-
November 3, 1981
1710. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Pakistan's offer of a 'no-war pact' to India.

Islamabad, November 5, 1981.

The Pakistan Government said at Islamabad on November 5 that it had formally conveyed the proposal for a non-aggression pact with India to the Indian Government on September 14, 1981*.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the Pakistan Secretary-General, Foreign Affairs, had conveyed the proposal to enter into immediate consultations with India for the purpose of exchanging mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement to the Indian Ambassador in Pakistan, Mr. Natwar Singh, on September 14.

According to the spokesman, Pakistan's Ambassador in India, Mr. Abdul Sattar, subsequently had also called at the Indian External Affairs Ministry in New Delhi and conveyed the same proposal there also.

The spokesman made the clarifying statement when his attention was drawn to an ALL INDIA RADIO report that the Consultative Committee of the Parliamentarians attached to the Indian External Affairs Ministry had been officially told that India had not received any formal offer of no-war pact from Pakistan.

The spokesman pointed out that India since 1949 had continually expressed interest in signing a non-aggression pact with Pakistan.

He recalled that as recently as May 11 last, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had reiterated her country's interest when she told correspondents at the Lucknow airport that "we stick to our policy of no-war. It is for Pakistan to act upon any agreement".

* Earlier on October 31, Pakistani Foreign Secretary Riaz Piracha while passing through New Delhi on way to Kathmandu had also conveyed this information to the media and had said that Pakistan was awaiting New Delhi's response. He said this offer had been made in "good faith and particularly at this time and precisely because of the existing circumstances." When asked how Pakistan was proposing a no-war pact when it had rejected several such offers from India in the past, he said: "Does it negate it?" 1711. Press Release issued by the Embassy of Pakistan in India on the Non-Aggression Pact proposal.

New Delhi, November 11, 1981.

Non-aggression Pact Proposal

On 15 September 1981* the Government of Pakistan put forward an important and serious proposal for "immediate consultations with India for the purpose of exchanging mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement". Unfortunately, this constructive idea has not been appreciated so far in a proper context.

Contrary to reports in the press, the proposal for consultations was in fact made formally. As for the draft of the guarantees of non-aggression to be exchanged between the two countries, that could be produced, perhaps more usefully, after the proposed consultations between the two sides.

It may be recalled that the Simla Agreement was drafted following an extensive exchange of views between the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India. The special Emissaries of the two sides met at end-April 1972 at Murree. The exchange of views was continued at Simla when the conference opened on 28 June 1972. The first draft was put forward after, not before, the consultations between the two sides.

The prospects of a successful outcome of serious negotiations are not necessarily promoted by a one-sided draft.

As for the proposal for bilateral consultations, that was communicated by Mr. S. Shah Nawaz, Secretary General of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ambassador of India in Islamabad on 15 September. Later, the Ambassador of Pakistan in New Delhi also conveyed the proposal to the Indian Ministry of External Affairs.

In diplomatic practice, communications made verbally are not only as formal but frequently more so than written communications.

Consultations between the two sides could help clarify the points that should be incorporated in the proposed exchange of mutual guarantees of non-aggression.

---

* An Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs said in New Delhi on November 12 that India had not received any formal offer of a no-war pact from Pakistan so far. Replying to a question by newsmen on the above press release, the Spokesman maintained that the Embassy's release did not depict the factual position correctly either in terms of conscience or intentions of the Pakistan Government. Not a single formal approach had been made to the Indian Government either through its Embassy in Islamabad or the MEA in New Delhi, he insisted.
It should be recalled that already the Simla Agreement contains multiple provisions regarding non-use of force. Thus paragraph 1 (i) affirms that "the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations shall govern the relations between the two countries". One of the cardinal obligations of the members of the United Nations is that they "shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means" and "shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State".

Paragraph I (iii) of the Simla Agreement enjoins peaceful coexistence upon both countries and sub-para (iv) specifically requires that the basic issues between the two countries "shall be resolved by peaceful means". Again, sub-para (vi) requires the two countries to "refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of each other". Finally, by paragraph 4 (ii) about the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir, the two sides "further undertake to refrain from the threat or use of force in violation of this Line".

The Prime Minister of India was reported to have said on 11 June 1981 at Lucknow that India had made an offer of no-war agreement to Pakistan and it was now for Pakistan to respond.

The statement issued by the Government of Pakistan on 15 September 1981 referred also to discussions held with the United States on the programme of economic assistance and military sales. As is well-known, Pakistan expects to obtain credits from the United States to the extent of about 1.7 billion dollars for purchase of arms over a 5-year period.

The Government of Pakistan's statement dwelt at length on other important issues of policy particularly its relations with India. Following are the relevant extracts:

"We wish to reiterate that our acceptance of the US package does not affect in any way our commitments as a member of Islamic Conference and the Non-Aligned Movement or our well-known position on major international issues in regard to which our foreign policy has consistently maintained principled stand.

"Similarly, the development of bilateral relations with the United States will not affect our relationship with any third country. We would like to reaffirm, particularly in regard to our relations with India, that there would be no weakening of our efforts to develop a relationship of mutual trust and confidence with this important neighbouring country. We are not in competition with India in an arms race and the modest quantity of arms that we may acquire during the next five years is solely meant to achieve partial replacement of our obsolete defence equipment. All we propose to do is to acquire a minimum defence capability to ensure the security of Pakistan in the context of the regional situation which is far from reassuring.

"Although, it is Pakistan as a small country which needs assurances from its larger neighbours in regard to its security, particularly from India, which, despite its overwhelming military superiority, has embarked on a programme of acquiring the most modern offensive weapons, including Jaguars, Mig-23s and Mig-25s and Mirage-2000 aircraft, in large number from the western sources, and on concessional terms from Soviet Union, we are prepared on our part to do whatever we can to promote mutual confidence. We would like to convey the assurance that in expressing our desire for a friendly and tension-free relationship, we are not indulging in a propaganda exercise. If India is inclined to banish its unfounded fears and is ready to grasp the hand of friendship which we extend, it shall not find us wanting in fully reciprocating any gesture on its part for establishing good-neighbourly relations. On our part, we are prepared to enter into immediate consultations with India for the purpose of exchanging mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1712. Extract from the record of the discussions between Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs Eric Gonsalves and US Assistant Secretary of State Nicholas Veliotes.

Washington (D. C), November 13, 1981.

Secretary (East) met Assistant Secretary of State Nicholas Veliotes at 1000 hours on November 13. Deputy Assistant Secretary, David Schneider and Director Howard Schaeffer were present on the American side. Ambassador and Counsellor (Political) accompanied Secretary (East).

Veliotes enquired as to why India had not reacted favourably to Pakistan's proposal for a "no-war pact". Secretary (East) said that in our view the Pakistani effort was a mere propaganda exercise. It was India which had first proposed a "no-war pact" in 1949 and even given Pakistan the draft for such a pact. This offer had been repeated on a number of occasions. Pakistan, however, had continuously refused to consider our offer and instead insisted on the settlement of Kashmir issue and the setting up of self-executing machinery as pre-requisite to such a "no - war pact".

18. Secretary (East) said that it was our view that the "no - war pact" would be a useful arrangement, but we had strong misgivings about Pakistani motivations which we felt were essentially for propaganda purposes. It had to be borne in mind that the suggestion for a "no - war pact" was in the last two lines of a long statement made by Pakistan which justified its acceptance of U.S. arms aid. This statement had been made on September 14. On September 21, Agha Shahi had said that the Kashmir issue had to be settled before a no - war pact could be concluded. In these circumstances, we naturally had our misgivings about Pakistani intentions. Further, the Pakistanis had not given any details either in Islamabad or in New Delhi about what exactly they envisaged. We had asked for clarifications from Pakistan and had not got any. Prime Minister had said that it had to be borne in mind that Pakistan had not responded to our specific proposals on a "no - war pact".

19. Referring to the proposed visit of the Secretary of State, Schneider said that Afghanistan would naturally be discussed. Secretary (East) said that we had discussed Afghanistan for the last two years. U.S. and India had no differences in acknowledging that the final objective is to preserve the sovereignty, territorial integrity and non - aligned status of Afghanistan and to seek a political settlement which could lead to the withdrawal of Soviet troops. However, while we dealt with this problem in a regional context by trying to build an environment which would facilitate a dialogue between Afghanistan and Pakistan, and Afghanistan and Iran, there was a tendency on the part of Pakistan to widen this framework by raising the issue in the Islamic Conference and in the U.N. General Assembly.

20. Secretary (East) said that with the U.S. now having decided to supply arms to Pakistan, there seemed to be a move towards a confrontational posture with Pakistan and Afghanistan acting as proxies which would only be to the detriment of both countries. This was why we had stated that we are opposed to steps which increased tension in the region.

21. Secretary (East) said that we are also concerned by U.S. efforts to link Pakistan with South West Asia, without recognizing its sub-continental location. The net result of this effort was that there was an increase in tensions. Last year, we had tried to get Pakistan to move towards accepting a sub-continental approach to regional issues. Pakistan had instead decided to go to the Islamic Conference and to the U.S. for support. While we had tried to persuade the Soviet Union and Afghanistan to moderate and make their positions flexible in order to commence a dialogue, Pakistan pulled back just when it seemed that such a dialogue was possible. Secretary (East) alluded to the efforts made by us when the Secretary General, his Special Representative and Foreign Minister Agha Shahi were in Delhi during the Non-Aligned Conference. It could thus not be claimed that we had not made efforts in order to seek a reduction of tension in our region.

22. Veliotes said that he could see that we had a desire to give a sub-continental dimension to developments in Afghanistan. It had, however, to be borne in mind that the Soviet move into Afghanistan had a strategic impact on South West Asia. Further, there was an inevitable link between the Soviet move into Afghanistan and events in Poland. The U.S. could just not allow a perception to develop that it had acquiesced in the Soviet move into Afghanistan. If its opposition to the Soviet move was not highly visible, there would undoubtedly be a fall out in perceptions about their position on Poland. Veliotes said that frankly the U.S. would like to get the Soviets out of Afghanistan. But it had to be borne in mind that West European countries like the FRG are concerned with what they see as a direct link between U.S. attitudes towards the Soviet move into Afghanistan and the situation in Poland. Veliotes reiterated that the U.S. aim is to solve the Afghanistan issue. It was not the U.S. policy to derive satisfaction from merely making things difficult for the Soviets in Afghanistan.

23. Schneider said that Pakistan's relevance to South West Asia had become important essentially because of the Soviet move into Afghanistan. The U.S. did not see Pakistan as anything other than a South Asian country. The U.S., therefore, sincerely wanted good relations between India and Pakistan. Similarly, the U.S. wanted China's relations with India to improve. The subcontinent was viewed as a definite geographical entity by the U.S. which was interested in seeing better relations develop between countries in the region.

24. Secretary (East) said that he was not taking issue with U.S. objectives. He was taking issue with how the U.S. policies were helping those in Pakistan who wanted to link themselves with the U.S. in order to promote confrontation with us. The U.S. had stated that there was no quid pro quo for their assistance to Pakistan. President Zia, however, had said something which was somewhat different from this U.S. assertion.

* * * * *

Sd/-
13-11-1981

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
Statement by the External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao in both Houses of Parliament on the reported offer of a 'no-war pact' by Pakistan.

New Delhi, November 25, 1981.

The House will recall that the late Prime Minister Nehru had proposed to Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan on December 22, 1949, that the two governments sign a joint no-war declaration. The basis of this was to have been: "The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being desirous of promoting friendship and goodwill between their peoples who have many common ties, hereby declare that they condemn resort to war for the settlement of any existing or future disputes between them."

This offer was thereafter repeated on numerous occasions by Prime Minister Nehru, Lal Bahadur Shastri (in 1965), Smt. Indira Gandhi (in 1968), and Shri Morarji Desai (in 1977). When the Foreign Secretary visited Pakistan in February, 1980, he had renewed the offer to sign a no-war pact with Pakistan so that no apprehensions remain in Pakistan about any threat from India.

Our repeated offers in this behalf have invariably and all along drawn a negative response from Pakistan.

Over the years, Pakistan's basic position in this matter remained unchanged. In June 1963, Mr. Bhutto declared "Let India arrive at an equitable and honourable settlement with Pakistan over Kashmir, we can then have not one but a thousand no-war pacts....While the Kashmir dispute exist, it is inconceivable that we should accept India's offer of a no-war pact." President Ayub rejecting Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's offer of a no-war pact called first for a settlement of the Kashmir issue.

Replying to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's suggestion to sign a no-war pact, President Yahya Khan stated: "It is our sincere conviction that amity and friendship will continue to elude India and Pakistan if our two Governments run after the shadow that the peripheral issues and evade the reality that our two outstanding disputes regarding Jammu & Kashmir and the Ganges waters represent......" President Zia-ul-Haq, in an interview to an Indian journalist stated quite clearly: "No war pacts, non-aggression pacts were not worth the paper on which they were written. History tells us that a number of no-war pacts, non-aggression pacts and the peace treaties have proved good for nothing."

Ever since the Simla Agreement of 1972 Pakistan has stated on a number of occasions that the Simla Agreement itself is a kind of no-war pact and, therefore, there is no further need for thinking of any such pact. Foreign Minister Agha Shahi informed our Foreign Secretary in February 1980 that it was not possible for them, due to political reasons, to consider a no-war pact, as in their opinion, the Simla Agreement itself was virtually a no-war pact.

The Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Government issued, on September 15, 1981 a long statement announcing the formal acceptance by Pakistan of the package proposal for supply and sale of U.S. arms to Pakistan. The concluding portion of this statement was a paragraph suggesting Pakistan's readiness “to enter into immediate consultations with India for the purpose of exchanging mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force in the spirit of the Simla agreement.” The Pakistan newspapers of September 16 reported the principal thrust of this statement by using headlines like “Positive Turn in Dialogue with USA.” This was the context in which Pakistan then made this suggestion. The timing too was significant, namely the U.S. Congressional hearings on the U.S. - Pak arms deal.

Copies of the Pakistan Official Spokesman's statement, referred to above, were given to our Ambassador in Islamabad and by the Pakistan Ambassador in New Delhi to our Foreign Secretary. More than two months later on 22nd November 1981 to be exact, the Pakistan Government have confirmed their “offer” in official notes communicated to us in Delhi and Islamabad.

Thus it would be seen that the mention of this subject was contained cryptically in a public statement released to the media on an entirely different subject, ironically enough, justifying the acquisition of arms which are more likely to regenerate confrontations and to promote arms race in the sub-continent. The propaganda offensive which followed contained baseless false and absurd charges against India on a very wide variety of subjects. It was obviously difficult to take this as a basis for a proper response from the Government of India. We did not, however, say anything which could be construed as negative. Meanwhile, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Agha Shahi, speaking to pressmen in New York on September 21, as reported by the Associated Press of Pakistan from the UN Headquarters, is said to have “Categorically denied that Pakistan's offer was in contradiction of its 1951 position that a no-war pact should follow the resolution of the Kashmir dispute”.

While the substance of Pakistan's "offer" in all communications, to date, remains exactly the same, Government of India considers it necessary to share its views with Parliament. Hence, Mr. Speaker, this statement.

In this connection, I could do no better than to restate our well known position. As I said during my visit to Pakistan in June, it is in India's interest to see a stable and prosperous Pakistan. I believe that this sentiment is reciprocated by the People off Pakistan. We are committed to the normalization of relations with Pakistan as laid down in Simla Agreement.

That means that we settle all our problems by direct bilateral discussions without involving third parties. It was on the same basis that we originally offered the no-war pact. We stand by it, as such, with no exceptions, on conditions, and no variations. Our attitude will thus be positive on the basis that Pakistan's "offer" constitutes an acceptance for the first time, of India's offer of a no-war pact which has stood intact since 1949, and as further amplification of the Simla Agreement.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1714. Briefing by Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi on the offer of 'no-war pact'.

Islamabad, December 3, 1981.

Foreign Minister Agha Shahi reaffirmed on December 3 Pakistan's readiness to enter into immediate consultations with India with a view to exchanging mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force. Recalling that Pakistan had made this offer on September 15 and that it was formally confirmed in a diplomatic note handed over to the Indian Ambassador at Islamabad on November 22, Mr. Shahi said in a statement at a Press briefing at the Foreign Office that the official Indian reply to the proposal was still awaited.

When his attention was drawn to the recent statement of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi that India was willing to discuss a no-war agreement with Pakistan, Shahi welcomed this statement and said that Pakistan's offer was not a diplomatic tactic but a serious proposal, which had been made in all sincerity. Discussions on it could begin as soon as the Indian side indicated its readiness to enter into them, he added.

Mr. Shahi reiterated that Pakistan was ready to begin immediately, through diplomatic channels, discussions with India to work out a mutually acceptable agreement binding the two countries not to resort to the threat or use of force in any manner whatsoever against each other and to settle their existing or future disputes exclusively through peaceful means. Such an accord would serve to reinforce the provisions of the Simla Agreement and Pakistan was looking forward to a positive reply from India to its formal proposal.

Referring to the statement of the Indian Minister of State for Defence, Mr. Shivraj Patil, that India was increasing its military preparedness because of the sale of F-16 aircraft and other sophisticated weapons to Pakistan, Mr. Shahi pointed out that these steps were unwarranted as India enjoyed overwhelming numerical superiority in sophisticated armaments of every type.

Furthermore, no military equipment had yet reached Pakistan, and its induction into the Pakistan Armed Forces would take several years. Characterizing as inconceivable the Indian Minister of State's statement that the arms acquired from the USA were "more likely to be used in the eastern direction", he said the fact was that these arms were meant exclusively for self-defence. Such statements were not conducive to the promotion of mutual trust and amity between the two countries, he added.

Asked to comment on the Indian Minister's assertion that the modest quantity of arms being acquired by Pakistan appeared far in excess of "Pakistan's legitimated defence requirements", Mr. Agha Shahi said it was precisely to avoid such erroneous and arbitrary conclusions that Pakistan had proposed over two years ago that the military officials of India and Pakistan should hold discussions to determine the ratio of forces and the level of armaments that the two sides should maintain by mutual agreement while holding out the assurance that Pakistan would not claim military parity.

Pakistan continued to stand by this proposal. Pending such an agreement, each side was free to acquire what it considered necessary for its defence, he said.

Pakistan, Mr. Shahi added, also stood by its proposal for the mutual renunciation of nuclear weapons or reciprocal inspection of nuclear facilities in any form acceptable to India. He recalled that a first step had been taken in this direction in the joint statement of Foreign Ministers of June 10 that the two countries would use nuclear energy only for peaceful purposes.
1715. AIDE MEMOIRE of the Government of India on the question of 'no-war pact' handed over to the Pakistan Minister of Foreign Affairs by the Indian High Commissioner Natwar Singh in Islamabad.

Islamabad, December 24, 1981.

The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan had given note No. IND (P - I)/1/2/81 on November 22, 1981 to the Ambassador of India in Islamabad about discussion for a Non-aggression Pact.

2. The Government of India is always in favour of any discussion aimed at promoting peace and friendship between the two countries. The initial discussions could be held during the visit of Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India. The Minister for External Affairs, Government of India, has separately written to His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi about the visit*.

3. The elements of an agreement on Non-aggression and Non-use of Force between India and Pakistan which have been reiterated by the Government of India on different occasions, are:

   (i) The Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972 shall be the basis for friendly and harmonious relations between the two countries.

   (ii) The primary objective of the two countries is to provide a better and fuller life for their peoples.

   (iii) To achieve the above, a tension free atmosphere has to be created so that the valuable resources of the two countries can be husbanded for productive nation-building activities.

   (iv) The pre-requisite for good-neighbourliness and durable peace between them is a commitment by both countries to the well-known five principles of peaceful co-existence which include respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty and non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

   (v) The relations between the two countries have to be based on the principle of equality, mutual benefit and bilateralism.

   (vi) They will not, in any circumstances, resort to war or use or threaten to use force for the settlement of any disputes between them and all such disputes shall be settled on a bilateral basis and by peaceful means.

While handing over the Aide Memoire to the Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi, the Indian Ambassador Natwar Singh also renewed External Affairs Minister Narasimha Rao's invitation to Agha Shahi to visit New Delhi for further talks.
(vii) Both countries reiterate their firm commitment to the policy of non-alignment, the essence of which is non-involvement in great power confrontation.

Islamabad
December 24, 1981

1716. Response of the Pakistan Government to the Indian Aide Memoire on the 'no-war pact' presented to the External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao.

New Delhi, January 12, 1982.

The Aide Memoire presented to the Foreign Minister of Pakistan on 24 December 1981 by the Ambassador of India in Islamabad has received due consideration. The Government of Pakistan welcomes the Government of India's readiness to enter into discussions on the subject of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force between Pakistan and India. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan would be visiting New Delhi in response to the invitation extended to him by His Excellency Mr. Narasimha Rao, Minister of External Affairs of India, for initial discussions.

The Government of Pakistan has noted the various elements suggested by the Government of India for inclusion in the proposed agreement and recognises that several of these contain positive features.

The Government of Pakistan is of the view that the central objectives of the proposed agreement are two-fold: firstly, mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force, and secondly, a solemn commitment to the resolution of disputes and differences, present or future, exclusively by peaceful means. It would therefore be necessary to exclude from the agreement elements which could cause difficulties in the path of its conclusion.

Accordingly, the Government of Pakistan suggests the following elements for inclusion in the proposed agreement:

(1) The Charter of the United Nations which establishes the norms and rules of law governing the international rights and obligations of States, constitutes the basis for relations between the two countries.
The Simla Agreement provides for the establishment of durable peace and friendly and harmonious bilateral relations.

The two countries shall not, in any circumstances, resort to war or use force or threaten to use force in any form whatsoever against each other.

The two countries shall settle all disputes or differences between them exclusively by peaceful means.

The pre-requisite for good neighbourly relations and durable peace between the two countries is a commitment by both of them to the universally accepted five principles of peaceful coexistence, namely:

(i) Respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty,
(ii) Non-aggression,
(iii) Non-interference in each other's internal affairs,
(iv) Equality and mutual benefit, and
(v) Peaceful co-existence.

The primary objective of the two countries is to provide a better and fuller life for their peoples.

To achieve the above, a tension free atmosphere has to be created so that the valuable resources of the two countries can be husbanded for productive nation-building activities.

Both countries reiterate their firm commitment to the policy of non-alignment which asserts independence from the Great Powers and their military alliances or blocs so as to maintain freedom of judgment and action.

New Delhi
Ambassador Abdul Sattar called on FM at 11 AM on 12th January, 1982.

At the outset, the Ambassador conveyed greetings from President Zia and Agha Shahi to FM. He said that he hoped to get a chance to call on PM to convey their greetings to her as well.

The Ambassador said that the Pakistani leadership fondly recalled FM's visit to Pakistan, which was the “high watermark” of Indo-Pakistan relations in recent times. 1982 had begun on a hopeful note and he hoped that it would be an auspicious year for bilateral relations.

The Ambassador said that Agha Shahi was grateful for FM's invitation. He had wanted to avail himself of it at an early date. However, because of a Conference of Pakistani Heads of Mission and the session of the Federal Council which began on 11th January, the visit could not take place before the end of the month.

The Ambassador digressed for a moment to talk about the Federal Council. He said that this was a nominated body, the strength of which was presently 287, but was to be raised to 300. More than half of the members were affiliated to the PPP. Apart from representatives of other parties, members were drawn from the professions, the academic and business world. These were intelligent and respectable people whose counsel would be salutary. The Federal Council was part of President Zia’s effort to find a smooth and orderly transition from military to civilian rule.

Regarding the Indian Aide Memoire, Satter said that this had been studied closely. The idea of a non-aggression pact was not a novel one; it had been in existence for decades. The Pakistan Government believed that the time was more propitious now than ever before to translate the idea into reality. There was not a single dissenting voice in Pakistan on the advisability of entering into such an agreement, perceiving as the people of Pakistan did the recent deterioration in the security environment. The Ambassador added that the Government of Pakistan remained fully committed to the Simla Agreement and would not countenance anything which detracted from the rights and obligations spelt out for each country in that document. The Pakistanis had been puzzled to see press reports which quoted Indian leaders as talking of a Pakistani “trap”. The last thing Pakistan wanted to do was to score debating points.
FM quickly interjected to categorically deny that he had made any such reference either at the CWC meeting or on any other occasion. He had in fact been very perturbed to read about the reports that had appeared, misquoting him. Enquiries had revealed that these reports stemmed from the imagination of a UNI correspondent and not from any responsible source. Sattar said that this was not the first occasion on which such references had appeared. However, he was happy at FM’s clarification and would report to Islamabad.

The Ambassador went on to say that the kind of agreement envisioned had one basic component, viz., a solemn commitment to renounce recourse to war, with the corollary that both sides shall resolve whatever disputes exist or arise in the future exclusively by peaceful means. The Government of Pakistan had no preconceived notions about the other elements mentioned in the Indian Aide Memoire. Pakistan found the reference to the five principles of peaceful co-existence to be perfectly acceptable. However, only three of these were mentioned in the Indian draft. The exclusion of the other two could convey the impression that one side has certain reservations. Pakistan would therefore be happy if all the five elements were incorporated.

Turning to another element, Satter said that Pakistan had no problem in going along with a reiteration of the commitment to non-alignment. But he said that it would be better if the formulation is extracted from approved documents of the Non-aligned Movement, which incorporated phraseology which was generally acceptable. He said that the Pakistani Aide Memoire, which he had come to hand over, had borrowed from the New Delhi Declaration of Foreign Minister’s of Non-aligned countries in this regard.

Sattar went on to say that nothing should be incorporated in the Agreement which could be seen to detract from the sovereignty of either party. The word “bilateralism” needed to be properly understood on both sides. Pakistan understood bilateralism to mean that the two countries should try to improve relations without detriment to the relations of either with any third country. Whatever definition was finally adopted should connote respect for each other’s sovereignty and Pakistan felt that the best way of doing so would perhaps be to reiterate a commitment to the Charter of the United Nations.

Sattar clarified that the Aide Memoire that he was handing over was not a formal draft. Some of the elements contained therein could constitute principles for a Preambular portion while others could be incorporated in the substantive part.

Concluding his presentation, the Ambassador observed that India and Pakistan could well be on the threshold of a new era in their relations. President Zia was deeply committed to friendship with India. While Pakistan fully subscribed to the Simla Agreement, a Non-Aggression Pact at this juncture would have a much greater impact since it could not be seen as having been signed under any kind of duress. Such a pact would, therefore, without doubt, be well received by the people of Pakistan, and hopefully also by the Indian people.

Turning to Agha Shahi's programme, Sattar mentioned that Shahi was contemplating arriving in Delhi on 29th January so that he could watch the beating of the Retreat. FM said that, while he would be delighted to receive Agha Shahi on that day, he had certain commitments in Bangalore which may prevent him from being back in Delhi in time to receive him. However, he said he would try to reschedule his programme and promised to let the Ambassador know in a day or two. FM turned down a suggestion made by Sattar that Agha Shahi be received by someone else on his behalf in case FM could not return by the 29th. It was also agreed, on the basis of a suggestion made by Sattar, that there would be no substantive speeches during Agha Shahi's visit. In the event of a Press Conference being desirable, it would be a joint one, with both Ministers present. Agha Shahi would be giving a return dinner in honour of FM.

FM thanked the Ambassador for the communication* that he had brought back. He said that we would study it carefully. He ventured the comment that the exercise was not one of merely cataloguing principles. There may be many principles over which we have no quarrel. What was important was to pick out, from the catalogue of principles, those which were most relevant in the context of Indo-Pak relations. He shared the Ambassador's hope that the present exercise would open a new chapter in our relations and said that he was greatly looking forward to Agha Shahi's visit.

The meeting ended with usual pleasantries.

(A. Banerji)
PS to FM
12-1-1982

* Please see Document No.1716.
Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi on the offer of No-War Pact to India.

Text of Statement

I am proceeding tomorrow (January 29) on a visit to New Delhi which is likely to last for four days. My visit is taking place on an invitation from His Excellency Mr. P.V. Narasimha Rao, the Minister of External Affairs of India who, you would recall, had paid a four-day visit to Pakistan in June last year. While I welcome this opportunity which enables me to return His Excellency Mr. Narasimha Rao's visit, I am looking forward to the initial discussions on the subject of an agreement on non-aggression and renunciation of force between Pakistan and India which I have been invited to hold with him on this occasion. The delegation which is accompanying me to New Delhi includes, apart from officials of the Foreign Office, our Ambassador in France, Shahibzada Yaqub Khan, and Lt. Gen. K.M. Arif, Chief of Staff to the President.

We are attaching great importance to the beginning of discussions at Foreign Ministers' level on our proposal to conclude an agreement between Pakistan and India which we hope would lay the foundation of lasting peace and open a new chapter of good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

We proceed to New Delhi in full awareness of the nature of the problems and difficulties which have bedeviled our bilateral relationship ever since the two countries emerged on the map of the world as independent States, 35 years ago. The major portion of this period has been spent in conflict and confrontation. The peoples of the countries have experienced the ravages of three wars only to find that these have resolved no problems but have merely aggravated their burdens and added to their difficulties.

The Antecedents of No-War Pact Move

The idea of a no-war pact first originated in the circumstances of 1949-50 when the two Governments exchanged drafts of a proposed declaration renouncing war or the use of force or the threat of use of force as a means to settle disputes. Subsequently, the idea was revived on several occasions by one side or the other but the circumstances on each occasion were no propitious to allow the idea to take a practical shape.

It was in the Simla Agreement of 1972 that this idea first found a mutually agreed expression committing the two sides to turn their back on a chapter of conflict and confrontation and to renounce the use of threat or use of force for settlement of their disputes or differences.
Simla and After

Recent experience has shown that even the Simla Agreement has not engendered the required fundamental change of sentiments and attitudes which alone could impart substance to this formal Agreement to which we continue to subscribe in good faith on the basis of sovereign equality. Our original situation has undergone qualitative changes which unfortunately have produced friction and an increase of tension between Pakistan and India rather than proximity and mutual understanding which might have been expected. Believing that a serious effort was called for to rectify this situation and to utilize an opportune moment in history to further develop and complete the process begun at Simla, we invited India on September 15 last year to enter into immediate consultations with us for an exchange of mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force.

During the four months that have elapsed some progress has been achieved and the two sides have exchanged diplomatic notes identifying the elements considered appropriate for inclusion in the proposed agreement. Some of the elements spelt out by each side are mutually agreeable while there are others in regard to which clarifications are needed or differences would have to be overcome. It is my earnest hope that the forthcoming talks in New Delhi would help in reconciling the view put forward by the two sides and pave the way towards the conclusion of a mutually acceptable agreement.

Difficulties in the Way

No one should underestimate the difficulties that lie in the way of reaching an agreement of such a fundamental character given the controversy that has surrounded the idea in the past and the doubts and suspicions that continue to be harboured and given expression to in India. It is most unfortunate that despite our unequivocal assertions that there is no trap or deception in the offer that we have made in utter good faith, there is continuing skepticism in some circles in India about our motives and intentions. Surprisingly enough, it has even been suggested that in taking an initiative of this kind, we are perhaps trying to erode the Simla Agreement when the contrary is true. In a similar vein, allegations have been made that our only purpose in proposing such an agreement is to facilitate an increased supply of arms from the United States. These and other baseless comments and observations must be deplored as irresponsible expressions of deep-seated prejudice and misunderstanding.

As I said in my address to the Federal Council on January 12, 1982, we shall make every effort to overcome differences so as to conclude a non-aggression pact which would not derogate from the independence and sovereignty of Pakistan. As regards the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, I reiterate that such a
Mr. Shahi answered some questions from journalists:

Asked what he hoped to achieve from these talks, Mr. Shahi replied: "We Muslims believe that beginning lies with you (the person who takes the initiative) and the end lies in the hands of Allah."

Answering a question about the significance of the proposed pact, he said it could bring about transformation in the political, security and strategic situation in the region. "If there is no agreement, the situation could be to the contrary," he said.

Asked if his talks with Mr. Rao would be followed by more talks later on, Mr. Shahi said India wanted to hold initial discussions on the subject of the no-war pact from which it transpired that the talks would continue later on. "That's what the Indians appear to want," he added.

"We proceed to New Delhi in full awareness of the nature of problems and difficulties which have bedeviled our bilateral relations ever - since the two countries emerged on the map of the world as independent State 35 years ago," he said.

Mr. Shahi, however, made it clear that Pakistan would make every effort to overcome the differences so as to conclude a non-aggression pact, "which would not derogate from the independence and sovereignty of Pakistan".

Mr. Shahi did not agree that his New Delhi visit would pave the way for an India-Pakistan summit.

Explaining the difficulties in the way of reaching a non-aggression agreement, Mr. Shahi referred we what he called skeptical reports from India about Pakistan's motives and intentions and said there was no trap or deception in the offer that Pakistan had made in utter good faith.

He mentioned a report that Pakistan wanted to erode the Simla Agreement through a no-war pact and said the contrary was true. Similarly the allegation that in proposing such an agreement Pakistan wanted to facilitate an increased supply of arms from the United States was baseless and irresponsible.

About the Kashmir dispute, Mr. Shahi said: "I reiterate that such a pact would neither add to nor subtract from the provisions of the Simla Agreement."

Neither India nor Pakistan had expressed any desire to discuss the possibility of transforming the actual Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir as a "soft line" for the purposes of travel, he added.
His visit beginning January 29 would not solve all the problems, but it could possibly be a beginning to "other understandings", he said and added that he was not unmindful of the difficulties that lay ahead in his task.

Replying to question whether other subjects like Pakistan's nuclear programme and increase in trade and travel would also come under discussion, Mr. Shahi said the agenda of his talks in New Delhi related only to the proposal for a non-aggression pact, but nothing prevented the two sides from taking up other subjects.

Similarly, subjects like mutual reduction of forces and declaration of South Asia as a nuclear weapons-free zone were not on the agenda.

The reduction of forces and increase in trade were questions which should be taken up separately, he said and made it clear that the proposed pact was not in any way linked with other questions like increase in trade and travel between the two countries.

The fundamental strategic and security transformation in the region, he said, called for reappraisal of the existing doctrines and dogmas, for new thought patterns, for statesmanship to develop appropriate responses to new challenges.

"Our two countries … often in the past failed to bridge the communications gap between us, resulting in the most unfortunate and destructive conflicts. Never before was the need to bridge this gap so urgent and acute as it is now," he said.

Whatever might be the two sides' "interpretations of the extraordinary events in Afghanistan, and whatever the objectives and policies of the super-Powers, surely our own interest requires that we make all possible efforts to strengthen the framework for the maintenance of peace between our two countries", he added.

About the Simla Agreement, he said undoubtedly the accord constituted a good foundation for normal and peaceful relations. It continued to be so, but surely that did not mean that it is unnecessary to strengthen the foundation of cooperation between the two countries.

Provisions of the Simla Agreement must be interpreted in their proper context. The agreement was a judiciously balanced document. Quoting its provisions out of context could damage the spirit to the disadvantage of both parties. Nothing contained in the Simla Agreement derogated from the sovereignty of either party. It was specifically reaffirmed in the agreement that relations between the two countries shall be governed by the principles and purposes of the UN Charter.
The object of the Simla Agreement was to put an end to past conflict and confrontation and to provide for the initiation of the process for the establishment of durable peace and step-by-step normalisation. It committed the two sides to hold discussions for the settlement of outstanding questions.

Pakistan's initiative to defuse tension and promote confidence between Pakistan and India should be rightly understood as a complement to its simultaneous efforts towards a general improvement in the environment in the region. Specifically, the crisis in Afghanistan needed to be urgently resolved. Pakistan's opposition to foreign intervention in Afghanistan was rooted in the principles of international law and norms of UN Charter.

"Pakistan and India are blessed with vast resources. God has bestowed our peoples with great qualities of intelligence and industry. In peace both of us can accelerate progress and development. Let us give ourselves a chance", he added.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1719. Statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan on proposed treaty of non-aggression and non-use of force with India.

"Pakistan and India have already discussed some of the elements of the proposed pact of non-aggression and non-use of force. The discussion of this proposal is, therefore, an on-going process and as agreed by the Foreign Ministers in the joint Press Statement issued on February 1, 1982, the officials of the two countries are to meet in Islamabad to continue exchanges on the substance of the proposal. There is no controversy or confusion on this point. We feel convinced that the interests of both countries will be best served by the early conclusion of the proposed non-aggression pact, operation can be effectively prepared through this approach…

"The idea of a treaty of peace and friendship between Pakistan and India was mentioned by the Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan journalist in the course of a discussion on the nature and scope of the Indo-Soviet treaty of 1971. However, the matter was not pursued as it was realised that such a treaty was premature. The principal objective of the non-aggression pact was to create the necessary atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence in the context of which alone could such a treaty acquire relevance."
"The statement by the Indian side in the joint communique issued after Mrs. Gandhi’s visit to Saudi Arabia recently that India had proposed a treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation with Pakistan does not alter the above fact*…

"There is also no element of doubt or ambiguity about the proposal regarding the establishment of a joint commission. Pakistan has welcomed the proposal in principle and is prepared to discuss the terms of reference, composition and other aspects of the commission at a mutually convenient time."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

*On the same day on May 15, Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi said in New Delhi that Pakistan was not adhering to the Simla Accord after its present Government had come to power. India sincerely wanted friendship with Pakistan but it had to be forged with dignity and honour, Mrs. Gandhi said and added that Pakistan was, on the one hand, talking of a no-war pact, but had on the other, been acquiring sophisticated offensive weapons.

1720. PAKISTAN DRAFT

Proposed text for an agreement between Pakistan and India on non-Aggression, renunciation of force and promotion of Good Neighbourly relations.

[Shah Nawaz, Secretary General Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs handed over this draft to the Secretary (Pak-IRAF) Natwar Singh in the Ministry of External Affairs in Islamabad on June 1, 1982.]

The Government of Pakistan

AND: The Government of India

REAFFIRMING: their obligations under the Charter of the United Nations, including those requiring all states members to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations and to settle their international disputes by peaceful means;

REITERATING: their solemn commitment to the Simla Agreement which provides for the establishment of durable peace and friendly and harmonious bilateral relations;

MINDFUL: of their obligations as Members of the Non-Aligned Movement which asserts independence from the Great Powers and their military alliances or blocs, so as to maintain freedom of judgment and action;

CONVINCED: that the development of harmonious bilateral relations between the two countries will serve their best interests and will be neither at the expense of their relationships with nor directed against any third country;

BELIEVING: that the creation of a tension-free atmosphere would enable the two countries to devote their valuable resources more effectively to productive nation building activities so as to ensure a better and fuller life for their peoples;

HAVE AGREED AS FOLLOWS:

ARTICLE - 1

The contracting parties agree that the pre-requisite for good neighbourly relations and durable peace between the two countries is a commitment by both of them to the universally accepted five principles of peaceful co-existence, viz:

(i) Respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty,

(ii) Non-aggression,

(iii) Non-interference in each other's internal affairs,

(iv) Equality and mutual benefit, and

(v) Peaceful co-existence.

ARTICLE - 2

The contracting parties shall not in any circumstances resort to war or use force, or threaten to use force in any form whatsoever, against each other.

ARTICLE - 3

The Contracting parties shall settle all disputes or differences between them exclusively by peaceful means.

ARTICLE - 4

The contracting parties undertake to strengthen the existing machinery for bilateral consultations with a view to promoting mutual understanding, friendship and cooperation in the spirit of this Agreement.

ARTICLE - 5

This Agreement will come into force with immediate effect (on the exchange of Instruments of Ratification).
1721. Media Briefing by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the ‘non-aggression pact’ between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 4, 1982.

The Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs said in New Delhi that the forthcoming Indo-Pak dialogue would cover all matters of bilateral interest and not the non-aggression pact alone. He, however, indicated that no decision had yet been taken about the timing, place and level at which the resumed talks would be held. The spokesman said that no-war pact was only a part of the overall relationship that "we are working for. The relationship would have to be nurtured by confidence-building and measures such as the setting up of a Joint Commission to promote the positive aspects of relationship between our peoples".

He quoted Mr. Natwar Singh as having said that further discussions would be held between the two sides on all aspects of bilateral matters which were discussed at Delhi in February and in the light of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi’s letter to President Zia-ul-Haq.

Asked whether the atmosphere for a dialogue had been cleared now, the spokesman said: "It would be as unrealistic to say that the atmosphere has ceased to be vitiated as to say it has remained as vitiated as it was".

"There were differences between the two countries which we wish to compose with harmonious and friendly relations in a spirit of good neighbourliness", he added and said Mr. Natwar Singh's talks in Islamabad would be an effort towards achieving these objectives.

The spokesman said, "We have an abiding faith in the possibility of an enduring peace and friendship between the two countries. We are steadfast in this faith and we have an interest in Pakistan's stability, sovereignty and independence and, therefore, we regard it as imperative that there be peace, friendship and co-operation between us".

He stressed that it was significant that Premier Mrs. Gandhi had sent her letter to President Zia-ul-Haq through a special envoy*."

* In another briefing on June 7 the Spokesperson further said that the proposed draft of Non-Aggression Pact, prepared by Pakistan, required considerable amendments, modifications and additions. He said that New Delhi was examining the draft, adding: "It 1722. Draft of a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation Between India and Pakistan as Proposed by India and Handed over to Pakistan Foreign Secretary by Indian Foreign Secretary M.K. Rasgotra in Islamabad on August 11, 1982.

The Government of the Republic of India

AND:

The Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,

RECOGNISING: the significant contribution made by the Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972, to the maintenance of peace and to the process of normalisation of relations between them;

REITERATING: their resolve to establish durable peace in the subcontinent;

AFFIRMING: their determination to settle their differences by peaceful means and through bilateral negotiations;

REAFFIRMING: their steadfast adherence to the policy of non alignment which has significantly contributed to the maintenance of peace and the lessening of tensions in the world;

CONVINCED: that enduring peace, friendship and mutual cooperation between them corresponds to the vital interests of the peoples of the two countries;

EMPHASISING: the importance of mutually agreed confidence - building measures in promoting goodwill between the two countries;

have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE - I

(1) The two Governments shall develop and consolidate relations of peace, friendship, good-neighbourliness and cooperation in all spheres.

---

does seem to us at first glance that the draft requires considerable amendments, modifications and additions. He however declined to give details of the draft saying India would convey its comments to Islamabad.

[India and Pakistan held a first round of talks on the proposed pact last February. No dates have so far been set for a second round of talks but the draft is expected to form the basis for discussions between the two sides. The Pakistan Government had handed the draft to Natwar Singh, a special envoy of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who visited Islamabad from May 31 to June 2 to personally deliver a letter from her to President Zia - ul - Haq.]

He further said India wanted to make the draft "comprehensive" and hoped that both countries would be able to arrive at mutually agreed formulations. Media had quoted informed sources to say that Mrs. Gandhi, in her letter to President Zia, had suggested greater bilateral co - operation in various fields including setting up of a joint commission and signing of a friendship treaty, before going on to sign a no - war pact.
(2) Both countries affirm their adherence to the Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972, which shall continue to be the basis of relations between them.

ARTICLE - II

Both Governments reaffirm their common commitment to the universally accepted five principles of peaceful co-existence which are:

(i) Mutual respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty;
(ii) Mutual non-aggression;
(iii) Mutual non-interference in each other's internal affairs;
(iv) Equality and mutual benefit; and
(v) Peaceful co-existence.

ARTICLE - III

The two countries shall not resort to war or an armed conflict between them, and shall refrain from the threat or use of force for the settlement of any disputes or differences between them or for any other purpose.

ARTICLE - IV

(1) The two Governments reaffirm their determination, to settle any disputes or differences between them by peaceful means and exclusively through bilateral negotiations.

(2) Pending the settlement of any of the disputes or differences between the two countries, neither side shall unilaterally seek to alter the situation, directly or indirectly, nor shall it engage in the threat of use of force or other means in relation thereto, as stipulated in Article I (ii) and Article IV (ii) of the Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972.

ARTICLE - V

(1) The two Governments reiterate their firm commitment to the policy of non-alignment and of their obligations as members of the non-aligned movement which asserts non-involvement in Great Power confrontation and their military alliances or blocs in any form.

(2) The two governments mutually undertake not to give to any Great Power or to another State, whether or not in military alliance with them, any use of their territory or area within their jurisdiction as a military base or for any other facilities of a similar character in whatever form, and particularly those which adversely affect the security interests of the other party.
ARTICLE - VI
The two Governments emphasise the importance of measures to strengthen mutual trust and confidence which are essential for reinforcing their resolve to have good neighbourly and cooperative relationship. They shall establish appropriate machinery for this purpose.

ARTICLE - VII
(1) The two Governments shall develop mutual cooperation in trade, cultural, economic, scientific, technical and other fields, such as, education, art, literature, press, radio, cinema, sports, public health, tourism, etc. on the principles of equality and mutual benefit.

(2) A Joint Commission shall be established to implement the provisions of this Article, and to bring bilateral cooperation in the areas specified therein to the maximum level, consonant with mutual benefit.

ARTICLE - VIII
Both Governments shall take all steps within their power to prevent hostile propaganda directed against each other. They will encourage the dissemination of such information as would promote the development of friendly relations between the two countries and their people.

ARTICLE - IX
The two Governments agree that the primary objective of both the countries is to provide a better and fuller life for their people. With a view to achieve that end, they shall strive to create a tension-free atmosphere and avoid the pursuit of an arms race which will only divert resources from nation-building activities.

ARTICLE - X
The two countries shall cooperate with each other as well as with other countries in South Asia to promote concrete cooperation among the countries of the region in such specific fields as may be agreed upon from time to time.

ARTICLE - XI
The two countries reaffirm their commitment to the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations.

ARTICLE - XII
The two Governments shall maintain regular contacts in order to exchange information, where necessary, to ensure the smooth implementation of this Agreement.
ARTICLE - XIII
Any difference of interpretation of any Article or Articles of this Agreement which may arise between the parties will be settled bilaterally by peaceful means in a spirit of mutual respect and understanding.

ARTICLE - XIV
This Agreement will be subject to ratification and will come into force with effect from the date on which the Instruments of Ratification are exchanged.

SIGNED .................................................on the......................................
(INDIA) (PAKISTAN)

1723. Joint Press Conference of the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan at the end of their talks.
Islamabad, August 13, 1982.

India has formally proposed to Pakistan a treaty of peace, friendship and co-operation, Foreign Secretary Niaz Ahmed Naik announced at Islamabad on August 13, 1982.

He told a Press Conference held at the VIP lounge of the Islamabad airport that a draft of the proposed treaty had been given to him by Indian Foreign Secretary Maharaj Krishan Rasgotra during their two day talks held at the Foreign Office on August 11 and 12.

Being elaborate and multi-faceted, the draft treaty would require time to study, he added. (Mr. Naik made the announcement with Mr. Rasgotra sitting on his side at the Press conference.)

His talks with Mr. Rasgotra, he said, were held in the background of the talks held between the Foreign Ministers of the two countries in New Delhi in January last. Most of the negotiations were of bilateral nature, including Pakistan's proposal for a non-aggression agreement and the Indian proposal for a joint commission. Held in an atmosphere marked with mutual goodwill and cordially, the negotiations were the "most useful", he added.

They had also exchanged views on a number of international issues of common interest. The two sides greatly valued such discussions because these created better understanding.
During these talks, Mr. Naik said, they found that on many international issues they had similar views. The Pakistani delegation, he added, had been profoundly impressed by the deep understanding displayed by Mr. Rasgotra on international issues and also by the lucid manner in which he explained the views of the Indian Government.

The recent developments in Afghanistan as also the indirect talks held under the UN auspices at Geneva on the Afghanistan problem were also considered by the two sides. Both the sides reiterated their adherence to the two declarations adopted on Afghanistan by the two recent conferences of the Foreign Ministers of non-aligned countries, one at New Delhi and the other at Havana, Mr. Naik said.

They also discussed Lebanon where Israel was committing grave aggression against the Palestinians and the Lebanese people and expressed the view that most effective restraints should be put to Israeli aggression and expansionism.

The Iran-Iraq war, also came under discussion and the two sides wished that the protracted conflict should come to an early end so that further loss of life and property did not take place.

The two Foreign Secretaries, he said, were disappointed over the lack of progress in the North-South dialogue and stressed the imperative need for launching global negotiations for a just international economic order.

Mr. Naik said he had accepted with pleasure Mr. Rasgotra's invitation to visit New Delhi for the next round, the dates for which would be decided later.

He concluded his statement by expressing the Pakistan Government's desire to have good-neighbourly relations with India.

Rasgotra's Remarks.

Speaking next, Mr. Rasgotra told newsmen that he fully shared the remarks of Mr. Naik and that the only thing he would like to add was his own appreciation and that of the members of his delegation for the excellent arrangements and the warm hospitality extended by Pakistan to make their visit fruitful, successful and productive.

Asked how much ground had been covered on the proposal of non-aggression agreement, Mr. Rasgotra said he hoped there would be something to be told about that after the next round of talks, expected to take place shortly.

◆◆◆◆◆
President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq has said that Pakistan has only two objections to an Indian draft for a proposed treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries.

In a recent interview to VOICE OF AMERICA, Gen Zia said that India had imposed two preconditions suggesting that Pakistan should not give military bases to foreign powers and that all outstanding issues between the two countries be resolved through bilateral negotiations.

That would be tantamount to Pakistan's demand that India should not buy anything from the Soviet Union or that it should not give any military bases to that country, he said.

Indian preconditions were unacceptable to Pakistan as they undermined the latter's sovereignty as an independent State, Gen Zia said.

He, however, categorically stated that Pakistan's commitment to peace and security and improvement in bilateral relations with India should have been accepted and Delhi should not insist on having a few words written in an agreement.

Apart from the two clauses of the Indian and Pakistani draft proposals on a non-aggression pact and a treaty of friendship and cooperation, the wording of the drafts was identical, he added.

Gen Zia said he had gone out of the way in improving Pakistan's relations with India, almost unilaterally, and relations between the two countries were improving steadily.

The Indo-Pak relations had, however, received a setback during the MRD (Movement for Restoration of Democracy) movement, particularly in Sind, as the Indian Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, and the Indian External Affairs Minister, Mr. Narasimha Rao, had given statements on the internal situation in Sind.

He had told the Indian leaders that such statements would hamper the process of normalisation of relations between the two countries, and that proved to be correct.

Regarding the mission of the Indian Foreign Secretary, Mr. Rasgotra, and the meeting of the Joint Commission, Gen Zia said that it would further improve the relations between the two countries. The Indian delegation was holding talks and he hoped that positive results would emerge from these talks.

In reply to a question, he said India had amassed two-thirds of its military forces on the borders with Pakistan and consequently Pakistan had also deployed its forces all along the borders.

He was, however, surprised at the Indian stand that the deployment of troops by Pakistan threatened India's security.

India had built a number of garrisons, air bases and new bunkers on the borders with Pakistan during the past 10 years, he said and added that Pakistan was concerned at such Indian steps.

◆◆◆◆◆

1725. Letter from former Indian Foreign Secretary C. S. Jha to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on relations with Pakistan.

New Delhi, January 25, 1986.

51, Golf Links, New Delhi - 110003.
Tel: 617645.

Dated 25.1.1986

Dear Pradhan Mantri,

I take the liberty of writing on a matter which has been troubling many people including myself. I hope you will forgive me for this infliction for which my only excuse is my having been intimately involved in the past in the conduct of our relations with Pakistan.

May I say how much I have admired your courage and wisdom in tackling and finding solutions to our problems, both internal and external. You have, if I may say so, unerringly given high priority to our relations with Pakistan. Your efforts to find a modus vivendi with Pakistan in peace and good neighbourliness and mutual cooperation is most timely and commendable, and is one devoutly hoping for friendly relations between India and Pakistan. I wish you Godspeed in these efforts.

News reports indicate the possibility, even the imminence, of an agreed draft of a treaty or no war pact as a result of recent discussions between the Foreign Secretaries of the two governments in Islamabad. Our insistence on a comprehensive treaty of peace and friendship seems to have succeeded in securing Pakistan's agreement to marrying the Pakistan draft and our draft treaty of peace and friendship. Pakistan is also reported to have agreed to bilateralism i.e. peaceful solution of all problems between the two countries without third party interference. All this is satisfactory from our point of view.
But are they enough? Past experience shows that military conflicts between India and Pakistan have always taken place because of Pakistan's aggression in Kashmir, overt as in 1947 and in September 1965 or covert as in August 1965. The question that comes to mind is, will the conclusion of a no war pact and comprehensive treaty of friendship succeed in precluding similar action by Pakistan in future?

There is no doubt that the treaty of peace and friendship between India and Pakistan will help in solving many of our foreign policy problems and will be to the lasting benefit to both countries. Any such treaty, however, must be meaningful and effective as otherwise it will tend to be forgotten like the Tashkent Declaration in 1966 and the Simla Agreement in 1972 which were also in a sense no war pact. A treaty is a formal document binding not only present but also future governments. It is not unusual for treaties after they are entered into to be interpreted or misinterpreted by one of the parties for justifying actions contrary to the treaty's intensions or its spirit.

The proposed treaty therefore should not have any loopholes.

Pakistan has from time to time trotted out its claims and policies often mutually contradictory in relation to J&K. These are:

(a) The Kashmir question should be settled on the basis of U.N. resolution.
i.e. a plebiscite in Kashmir which we have rejected. The ruling Pakistan Muslim League has just repeated the same.

(b) J&K is disputed territory and, therefore, the entry of Pakistan troops into J&K can not constitute aggression against India. This plea was specifically put forward by the Pakistan delegate in the Security Council on 6th September 1965 (at which I had the honour to represent India) and has since been repeated on more than one occasion in the past. We countered this plea by pointing out that if this thesis were accepted, aggression would be made easy; any State could raise a spurious dispute concerning a part of the territory of a neighbouring State and on that basis seek to justify marching troops into the latter's territory. Pakistan's argument did not receive support in the Council except from the representative of Jordan at that meeting.
Pakistan has been showing in its maps the whole of J&K as a part of Pakistan; and very recently President Zia-ul-Haq, as reported in the press, has claimed J&K to be a part of Pakistan. This statement has not been contradicted or retracted by Pakistan.

Such claims and pleas by Pakistan on the eve of a no war pact with India cast doubt on its bona fides, it might again try to justify a future attack on J&K as the induction of Pakistan troops into another part of the territory of Pakistan or into a disputed territory, not amounting, according to them, to aggression against India while characterising a counter attack in Punjab (Pakistan), as in 1965 a violation of the treaty. Considering the past behaviour of Pakistan the danger is a real one.

When it comes to a precise treaty the acceptance of bilateralism by Pakistan by itself may not remove the danger. I do not know if the text that is being hammered out would take care of our apprehensions but in a treaty of this kind nothing can be taken for granted and private assurances by Zia-ul- Haq have little value unless they are incorporated in the treaty.

On our part we should have no difficulty in agreeing that we shall not take recourse to military action to recover that part of J&K which is in the illegal occupation of Pakistan. Prime Minister Nehru on 22 August, 1961 told Parliament "We are not going to take any summary measures to push out the Pakistani army or controlling apparatus from that area (so-called Azad Kashmir). It is our right and we are prepared to consider that when the time comes, in a peaceful way. That is going pretty far as the House would appreciate when we say that we are not going to take any military step in that area which is occupied by Pakistan". And this has been the policy of our government all these years. There has been no comparable statement by Pakistan in so far as they are concerned.

It is not practicable at present to expect Pakistan to recognise in the treaty that J&K is an integral part of India. Nor is time ripe yet for India or Pakistan to renounce their positions and to agree to the ceasefire line as international frontier, though that is the only possible solution. I wonder, however, if we should not at least insist on the inclusion of some clause to the effect that neither party would resort to military or other action, overt or covert, against the other in or in relations to J&K and both sides will treat the cease fire line in J&K as inviolable, pending a peaceful resolution of their disputes and differences in accordance the Simla Agreement 1972. Pakistan, if it is as keen on a no war agreement with India as declared by President Zia, should not find it difficult to agree to this. The fact that the conclusion of a no war pact or treaty with India will make it much easier for Pakistan to obtain more than $6 billion U.S. Military aid package in the next few years, should spur them to agree to some such provision and we should use this contingency as a leverage. A no war treaty no more specific than the Tashkent Declaration or the Simla Agreement will merely silence the few critics of U.S. military aid to Pak in U.S.

With my respects

Yours Sincerely

(C. S. Jha)

Shri Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1726. Views of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on the 'No-War Pact" with India.
Peshawar, August 9, 1996.
Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto ruled out a no-war pact with India, saying it is "irrelevant" unless bilateral relations are normalised and the Kashmir issue is resolved.

"I do not understand and have never understood the relevance of a no-war pact" with India, Ms. Bhutto told newsmen in reply to a question in Peshawar. "I think feelings for a no-war pact exist neither here nor there," she said, adding "even if there was a no-war pact and somebody wanted a war, they go for it."

She said, "I feel the signing of a no-war pact gives the impression that things are normalised. However, things cannot be normalised until the root cause of the conflict between the two countries, which is Kashmir, is settled," she said. [She was responding to a question of Opposition leader Nawaz Sharif's statement earlier this week that he favoured a no-war pact with India and that both countries should resume bilateral talks to settle their outstanding disputes.]

In reply to a question on the comprehensive test-ban treaty, (CTBT), Ms. Bhutto said Pakistan would never sign any treaty on the issue unless it was signed by India.

She asserted that Pakistan would continue helping militants in Jammu and Kashmir, saying "we have supported the Kashmiri people and we will go on supporting them in future also."

On the resumption of the stalled Indo-Pak talks, Bhutto referred to the exchange of letters with her Indian counterpart H.D. Deve Gowda, and said, "We have made it clear that the relations between the two countries cannot be normalised until the Kashmir issue is settled."
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS
1947-2007
A DOCUMENTARY STUDY
VOLUME-VI
Other books of Avtar Singh Bhasin

1. Some called it Partition, Some Freedom: (Last 75 days of the Raj)

3. India in Sri Lanka—Between Lion and the Tigers

4. India–Bangladesh Relations: Documents 1971–2002—Five Volumes

INDIA – PAKISTAN RELATIONS
1947 – 2007
A DOCUMENTARY STUDY

VOL - VI

Introduced and Edited by AVTAR SINGH BHASIN

Published in Cooperation with PUBLIC DIPLOMACY DIVISION
MINISTRY OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GEETIKA PUBLISHERS
New Delhi
SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

Volume – I
Preface.
Introduction.
Contents.
Section – I : Political—1947 – 54

Volume – II
Political – 1955 – 69

Volume- III

Volume – IV
Political – 1975 – 89

Volume – V
Political – 1990 – 2007
Section – II : No War Declaration

Volume – VI
Section – III : Defence Issues
Section – IV : Nuclear
Section – V : Junagadh
Section – VI : Kashmir

Volume – VII
Section – VII : Kutch
Section – VIII : Canal/Indus Waters
Section – IX : Eastern Waters

Volume – VIII
Section – X : Trade and Commerce
Section – XI : India – East Pakistan Border
Section – XII : India – West Pakistan Border
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Volume – IX</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Section – XIII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>: Minorities</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Section – XIV</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>: Evacuee Property</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Volume – X</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Section – XV</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>: Financial Issues</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Section – XVI</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>: Passport &amp; Visa</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Section – XVII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>: Miscellaneous</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
TO

My Late Wife
Mandip Kaur

Mother of Puneet and Mantosh

Mother-in-Law of Gurpreet & Kamaljeet

Grandmother of Arjan,
Geetika
Amitoj
Zorawar
VIII INDO-PAK RELATIONS
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>DOC. NO.</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>PAGE NO.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1727.</td>
<td>Telegram from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Leader of the Indian Delegation to the United Nations Vijayalakshmi Pandit. New Delhi, November 15, 1952.</td>
<td>4253</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1728.</td>
<td>Extract from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru’s speech at the All India Congress Committee meeting during discussion on the Foreign Policy resolution. Hyderabad, January 15, 1953.</td>
<td>4254</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1729.</td>
<td>Extract from the Letter of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Burmese Prime Minister U Nu. New Delhi, November 11, 1953.</td>
<td>4255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1730.</td>
<td>Extract from the Note of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Foreign Secretary and Commonwealth Secretary Ministry of External Affairs. New Delhi, November 27, 1953.</td>
<td>4257</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1731.</td>
<td>Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali. New Delhi, December 9, 1953.</td>
<td>4259</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1732.</td>
<td>Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali. New Delhi, December 21, 1953.</td>
<td>4264</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1733.</td>
<td>Extracts from the Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali. New Delhi, January 18, 1954.</td>
<td>4267</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1734.</td>
<td>Letter from the US President Eisenhower delivered by the US Ambassador to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru. Washington, February 24, 1954.</td>
<td>4268</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No.</td>
<td>Description</td>
<td>Date</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----</td>
<td>-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1736</td>
<td>Letter of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to President of the United States Dwight D. Eisenhower in reply to the latter’s.</td>
<td>February 28, 1954.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1738</td>
<td>Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru for the Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>March 19, 1954.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1739</td>
<td>Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha.</td>
<td>March 29, 1956.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1741</td>
<td>Statement issued by the U.S. State Department “Warning Against Attacks on Baghdad Pact Members”.</td>
<td>December 7, 1956.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1742</td>
<td>United States Congress Joint Resolution to Promote Peace and Stability in the Middle East signed by the US President Dwight Eisenhower on March 9, 1957.</td>
<td>March 9, 1957.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1743</td>
<td>Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>April 8, 1957.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1744</td>
<td>Note of the Soviet Union to the Government of Pakistan expressing concern on Pakistan’s membership of the military alliances.</td>
<td>April 15, 1958.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1745</td>
<td>Reply Note of the Pakistan Government to the Soviet Note expressing concern on Pakistan’s Membership of Military Alliances.</td>
<td>May 24, 1958.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1747. Letter from Ambassador in Iran T. N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary S. Dutt.
Tehran, November 21, 1958.

1748. Letter from Ambassador of India in the United States M. C. Chagla to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
Washington (D.C), November 25, 1958.

1749. Agreement between the United States and Pakistan.
Rawalpindi, March 5, 1959.

1750. Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha on US – Pakistan Military Pact.
New Delhi, March 6, 1959.

1751. Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in parliament on military aid to Pakistan.
New Delhi, March 13, 1959.

1752. Statement by Pakistan President Mohammad Ayub Khan justifying Pakistan’s military build up.
Murree, June 22, 1959.

1753. Exchange of Notes constituting an Agreement between the United States of America and Pakistan relating to the establishment of a Communication Unit in Pakistan.
Karachi, July 18, 1959.

1754. Note recorded by Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai on his talks with the Yugoslav Ambassador.
New Delhi, June 18, 1963.

1755. Letter from U.S Ambassador John Kenneth Galbraith to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
New Delhi, July 9, 1963.

1756. Letter from the High Commissioner of the United Kingdom for India P. H. Gore-Booth to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
New Delhi July 9, 1963.
1757. Letter from the United States Ambassador in India John Kenneth Galbraith to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru. New Delhi, July 9, 1963.
1762. Telegram from Ambassador in the United States B.K Nehru to Foreign Secretary on his talks with State Department Official Grant. Washington, November 1963.
1766. Note of the Call by the US Ambassador in India on the Secretary to Prime Minister. New Delhi, April 29, 1965.
1767. Telegram from Indian Ambassador in Washington to Foreign Secretary.

1768. Telegram from Indian Ambassador in Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

1769. Letter from Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri to the United States President Lyndon B. Johnson.
   New Delhi, May 23, 1965.

1770. Letter from Indian Ambassador in Turkey Sadath Ali Khan to Foreign Secretary C. S. Jha.

1771. Statement by Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan in Parliament on Pakistan’s military build-up.
   New Delhi, August 1, 1966.

1772. Statement by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Rajya Sabha on the resumption by the United States of Arms Aid to Pakistan.
   New Delhi, August 9, 1966.

1773. Aide Memoire presented by the Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany to the Ministry of External Affairs.

1774. Letter from External Affairs Minister M. C. Chagla to Pakistan Foreign Minister Sharifuddin Pirzada.
   New Delhi, February 25, 1967.

1775. Letter from Pakistan Foreign Minister Sharifuddin Pirzada to External Affairs Minister M. C. Chagla.
   Rawalpindi, April 7, 1967.

1776. Aide Memoire from the Embassy of the United States of America handed over by the US Ambassador in India to the Minister of External Affairs.
   New Delhi, April 10, 1967.

1780. Note on the meeting between Foreign Secretary Rajeshwar Dayal and the United States Ambassador Chester Bowles. New Delhi, April 1, 1968.

1781. Extract from the Statement of External Affairs Minister B. R. Bhagat in the Lok Sabha while replying to the debate on Demands for Grant of the Ministry of External Affairs. New Delhi, April 4, 1968.

1782. Telegram from High Commissioner in Pakistan to Foreign Secretary. Islamabad, June 27, 1968.

1783. Telegram from Foreign Secretary to High Commissioner in Pakistan. New Delhi, June 29, 1968.

1784. Statement by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi in the Lok Sabha on the supply of Soviet Arms to Pakistan. New Delhi, July 22, 1968.

1785. Excerpts from the Speech by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi in the Rajya Sabha on a motion regarding the decision of the Government of the USSR to supply arms to Pakistan. New Delhi, July 24, 1968.

CONTENTS

1787. Aide Memoire from Indian Embassy in the United States to the US State Department.

1788. Aide Memoire from the US State Department to Embassy of India in the United States.

1789. Statement made by the External Affairs Minister Dinesh Singh in the Lok Sabha on US military aid to Pakistan.
New Delhi, July 23, 1969.

1790. Statement by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on Arms supply to Pakistan by the USA and the USSR and Pakistan’s Declaration to use the arms against India.
New Delhi, November 9, 1970.

1791. Note recorded by Defence Secretary and Foreign Secretary on their Meeting with US. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State.
New Delhi, November 20, 1970.

1792. Statement by External Affairs Minister in the Lok Sabha on the Reported Supply of Arms to Pakistan by the U.S.S.R. and France.
New Delhi, July 6, 1971.

1793. Statement by External Affair Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on arms supply by the United States to Pakistan in reply to a Calling Attention Motion.

1794. Statement by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Rajya Sabha on reported US decision to resume Arms Supplies to Pakistan.

1795. Letter from External Affairs Minister Y.B. Chavan to U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and delivered on February 1, 1975.
New Delhi, January 28, 1975.
1796. Telegram from Ambassador in the United States T.N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

1797. Telegram from Ambassador in the United States T.N. Kaul to External Affairs Minister Y. B. Chavan.

1798. Media briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on supply of arms by US to Pakistan.
   Islamabad, February 5, 1975.

1799. Remarks of Pakistan Advisor on Foreign Affairs Agha Shahi on Indian response to Pakistani proposal for a “Mutual and Balanced Reduction of Force”.

1800. Expression of Concern by Pakistan on Indian decision to purchase Jaguar Aircraft.

   New Delhi, December 3, 1978.

   New Delhi, January 1, 1980.

1804. Statement made by the External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao in the Rajya Sabha on the serious development arising out of the decision of the United States of America and China to extend massive arms aid to Pakistan in the wake of Russian intervention in Afghanistan.
   New Delhi, January 24, 1980.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1805</td>
<td>Press Release issued by the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi denying that Pakistan was trying to acquire fresh arms. New Delhi, May 31, 1980.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1807</td>
<td>Interview of Pakistan Foreign Affairs Advisor Agha Shahi on Pakistan's Defence Needs to an Indian news magazine as published by Pakistan Times. Lahore, March 2, 1981.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1808</td>
<td>Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Islamabad, March 27, 1981.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1810</td>
<td>Statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi. Islamabad, April 17, 1981.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1812</td>
<td>Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Islamabad, September 15, 1981.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1814. Letter from External Affairs Minister Narayan Datt Tiwari to Member of Parliament Kapil Verma.

1815. Extract from the interview of Mr. Rajiv Gandhi with Pranoy Gupte of News Week regarding US Arms Aid to Pakistan.
New Delhi, March 31, 1987.

1816. Letter from Embassy of India in the United States to the Ministry of External Affairs.

1817. Monograph issued by the Inter Services, Public Relations Directorate of the Pakistan Army on a briefing given by the Chief of Army Staff of Pakistan, General Aslam Beg to the Pakistani press on September 13, 1989 and subsequently handed over to the Service Attaches of the Foreign Missions while brief them on the exercises code named “Zarb-e-Momon” on November 16, 1989 in Rawalpindi.
13 September, 1989.

New Delhi, August 19, 1992.

1819. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on the Amendment passed by the US Senate permitting transfer of substantial quantities of military equipment to Pakistan by waiving Pressler Amendment.
New Delhi, September 22, 1995.

1820. Statement by External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee on Proposed US Supply of Arms to Pakistan.
New Delhi, October 25, 1995.

1821. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding transfer of US Arms to Pakistan.
New Delhi, March 21, 1996.
CONTENTS

1822. Statement issued by the External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukerjee on the US decision to transfer US $ 368 million package of sophisticated arms to Pakistan.
New Delhi, April 16, 1996.

1823. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs expressing "alarm" at what it called “India’s relentless purchase of military equipment”.
Islamabad, February 18, 2002.

SECTION – IV
NUCLEAR

1824. Text of a Question and Answer by the Australian Minister for Foreign Affairs in the House of Representatives on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

1825. Statement by Pakistan Prime Minister Z.A. Bhutto on the Indian Nuclear Explosion.
Lahore, May 19, 1974.

1826. Official Announcement made by Brajesh Chandra Mishra in the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament regarding the underground Peaceful Nuclear Explosion conducted by India.

1827. Statement issued on behalf of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh on India’s Peaceful Nuclear Experiment.
New Delhi, May 21, 1974.

1828. Letter from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to Pakistan Prime Minister Z. A. Bhutto.
New Delhi, May 22, 1974.

1829. Reply Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Z. A. Bhutto to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
Islamabad, June 6, 1974.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Date/Location</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1830</td>
<td>Statement issued by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh following the exchange of correspondence between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan on the question of India’s peaceful nuclear explosion.</td>
<td>New Delhi, June 7, 1974.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1831</td>
<td>Record of discussions between External Affairs Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee and Secretary General of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs Agha Shahi.</td>
<td>New York, October 6, 1977.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1833</td>
<td>Press Release issued by the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi quoting the Statement issued by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs declaring ‘Pakistan's Nuclear programme for peaceful purposes”.</td>
<td>Islamabad, March 6, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1834</td>
<td>Statement by Minister of External Affairs Atal Bihari Vajpayee in Lok Sabha while responding to the ‘Calling Attention Notice’ on the ‘Reported Situation Arising out of Pakistan Going Nuclear’ .</td>
<td>New Delhi, March 30, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1836</td>
<td>Briefing by the American Embassy in Islamabad to American Journalists on Pakistan's Nuclear programme.</td>
<td>Islamabad, April 8, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1837</td>
<td>Statement by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Pakistan's nuclear programme.</td>
<td>Islamabad, April 8, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1838</td>
<td>Savingram from Ministry of External Affairs to its Missions’ abroad.</td>
<td>New Delhi, May 7, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No.</td>
<td>Description</td>
<td>Location and Date</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----</td>
<td>-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>---------------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1840.</td>
<td>Letter from the Ambassador of the Netherlands to Secretary (West) in the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.</td>
<td>New Delhi, May 17, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1842.</td>
<td>Media Briefing by Pakistan’s Foreign Affairs Advisor Agha Shahi on reports of Pakistan’s nuclear research programme.</td>
<td>Islamabad, July 4, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1844.</td>
<td>Record of the discussion between Indian External Affairs Minister Shyamnandan Mishra and Foreign Affairs Advisor of the President of Pakistan.</td>
<td>Havana, September 1, 1979.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1846.</td>
<td>Statement of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying reports that Pakistan proposed to carry out a nuclear test.</td>
<td>Islamabad, April 2, 1980.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1848.</td>
<td>Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs describing as mischievous a report that India in collusion with Israel intended to attack Pakistan’s nuclear facilities.</td>
<td>New Delhi, July 29, 1981.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1849. Record of discussions between Eugene Rostow, Director of the Arms Control & Disarmament Agency at the US State Department and Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs Eric Gonsalves on Pakistan's nuclear programme. Washington, November 13, 1981.

1850. Extract from the interview of Pakistan President Zia ul Haq with the Christian Science Monitor relating to Pakistan's nuclear programme. (as published in Pakistan Times, on December 2, 1982). Islamabad, December 2, 1982.

1851. Comment by Pakistan President Zia ul Haq on intelligence reports that India intended to carry out a preemptive strike on Pak nuclear facilities. Washington (D.C), December 20, 1982.

1852. Statement by Minister of External Affairs P.V. Narasimha Rao in the Lok Sabha, on a Calling Attention Notice regarding the situation arising out of the reported nuclear collaboration between Pakistan and China and the reaction of the Government in regard thereto. New Delhi, March 30, 1984.

1853. Statement by Pakistan's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Zain Noorani in the Senate regarding comments of Indian Prime Minister on Pakistan's nuclear Programme. Islamabad, July 13, 1985.

1855. Response of Pakistan's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs to the Indian Prime Minister's observation about Pakistan's nuclear programme. Islamabad, October 12, 1985.

CONTENTS

1858. Note recorded by Joint Secretary and Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs after his meeting with Journalist Kuldip Nayyar, who interviewed Pakistani Nuclear Scientist A. Q. Khan.

1859. Letter from Embassy of India in Pakistan to Ministry of External Affairs.

1860. Note from Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan in Singapore to diplomatic missions in Singapore.
   Singapore, March 5, 1987.

1861. Interview of Dr. Abdul Qadeer Khan with Brigadier (Rtd) A. R. Siddiqui and published in the May-June 1987 issue of Pakistan Defence Journal.

1862. Statement of Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo.

1863. Letter from Ambassador S. K. Singh to Foreign Secretary K. P. S. Menon.

1864. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s nuclear bomb.

1865. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi at the National Defence College on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.
   New Delhi, November 17, 1987.

1866. Media Briefing by Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office expressing concern on reported offer of Soviet N-Subs to India.
1867. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs denying India’s collusion with Israel to attack Pakistan’s nuclear facilities.
New Delhi, June 24, 1988.

1868. Speech by the Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs at the National Seminar on “Recent Trends in Pakistan and its Nuclear Capability” organized by the Indian Centre for Regional Affairs at the India International Centre.
New Delhi, August 6, 1988.

1869. Agreement on the Prohibition on Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities between the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

1870. Media briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying Indian Prime Minister’s charge that Pakistan had imported nuclear material from West Germany.

1871. Press Release issued by Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi carrying text of the Letter to the Editor of the Washington Times by Pakistan Ambassador in the United States clarifying his statement at the interview to a TV station.
New Delhi, February 16, 1989.

1872. Remarks by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi that Pakistan’s nuclear programme was nuclear weapons oriented.
New Delhi, April 2, 1989.

1873. Media remarks of the Spokesman of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on cooperation between India and Pakistan on nuclear issues.
Islamabad, December 5, 1989.

New Delhi, June 7, 1991.

1875. Indian reaction to the Pressler Amendment adopted by the US Congress.
New Delhi, June 14, 1991.
CONTENTS

1876. Message from High Commissioner J.N. Dixit to Foreign Secretary Muchkund Dubey. 4556
Islamabad, July 1, 1991.

1877. Statement made by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External affairs following the Indo-Pak Agreement on Prohibition of Attack Against Nuclear Installations and Facilities. 4557
New Delhi, January 1, 1992.

1878. Remarks of Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan on Pakistan's nuclear capability. 4558

1879. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Foreign Office on Pakistan’s nuclear capability. 4559

1880. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Consultations between Pakistan and Japan on nuclear issues etc. 4560
Islamabad, February 13, 1993.

1881. Press Conference of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on Pakistan’s nuclear programme. 4562

1882. Statement by Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to the Pakistan Atomic Energy Council on Pakistan’s determination to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. 4564

1883. Suo Moto Statement by Minister of State for External Affairs Salman Khurshid in Lok Sabha on Pakistan’s Nuclear Capability. 4565

1884. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on reported move on India testing a nuclear device. 4566
1885. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan's statement alleging that India was preparing for a nuclear test.

New Delhi, December 23, 1995.

1886. Response of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to reports that India may detonate a second nuclear device.

Islamabad, January 9, 1996.

1887. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on supplies of critical nuclear technologies to Pakistan by US Government.

New Delhi, March 15, 1996.

Islamabad, September 12, 1996.

1889. Press Statement issued by the Government of India regarding three underground nuclear tests.

1890. Statement made by Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub in the Senate.

Islamabad, May 12, 1998.

1991. Message from Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the leaders of the G-8 countries.

1892. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub in the Senate on India's nuclear tests.

1893. Media briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office to developments attending on the detonation of nuclear device by India.

1894. Resolution unanimously adopted by the Pakistan Senate.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1895</td>
<td>Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Foreign Office on latest Pakistan reaction to India’s nuclear tests. Islamabad, May 14, 1998.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1897</td>
<td>Interview of Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub with the BBC. Islamabad, May 16, 1998.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1900</td>
<td>Briefing by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the foreign media on Indian nuclear tests. Islamabad, May 25, 1998.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1902</td>
<td>Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan being summoned by Pakistan Foreign Secretary. New Delhi, May 28, 1998.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1905. Statement made by the President of the UN Security Council on 29 May 1998 at a Meeting of the Council on India and Pakistan Nuclear Tests.

1906. Announcement by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad of the sixth test conducted by Pakistan thereby completing the current series.

1907. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on Reaction of the UN Security Council to the Nuclear Tests conducted by Pakistan.

1908. Interview of Dr. A. Q. Khan with the Observer of London as reported by the Dawn on Pakistan's nuclear programme.
   Karachi, June 1, 1998.

1909. Joint Communiqué issued by Five Permanent Members (P-5) of the UN Security Council on Nuclear Tests.

   New Delhi, June 5, 1998.

   New Delhi, June 8, 1998.

   New Delhi, June 10, 1998.

   New Delhi, June 13, 1998.

1914. Letter from Minister of State for External Affairs Mrs. Vasundhara Raje addressed to the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Slovenia, South Africa and Sweden.
   New Delhi, June 16, 1998.
New Delhi, June 27, 1998.

1916. Letter from Permanent Representative of Pakistan at the UN Addressed to the Secretary General submitting Pakistan’s Position and Proposals on Nuclear Crisis in South Asia.

1917. Media Briefing by Pakistan Foreign Secretary on the talks between US President Clinton and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

1918. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs listing its Nuclear Installations.
Islamabad, January 1, 1999.

1919. Note from Ministry of External Affairs listing Indian Nuclear Facilities.
New Delhi, January 1, 1999.

1920. Press Conference of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on Indian testing of Agni II missile.
Islamabad, April 13, 1999.

1921. Address of Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad at the Institute of Strategic Studies.
Islamabad, September 7, 1999.

1922. Extract from Media Briefing by Pakistan Foreign Ministry regarding Pakistan signing the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT).
Islamabad, September 24, 1999.

1923. Extract from the Interview to CNN by Pakistan Chief Executive Prevez Musharraf threatening to use nuclear weapons if Pakistan’s security was threatened.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Event</th>
<th>Location</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1924</td>
<td>Interview of Pakistan Foreign Secretary during his visit to Berlin on the possible use of Nuclear Weapons.</td>
<td>Berlin, July 21, 2000.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1925</td>
<td>Reaction of Official Spokesperson to suggestions from Pakistani President on no-war pact and de-nuclearization.</td>
<td>New Delhi, January 24, 2002.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1926</td>
<td>Statement of the Official Spokesperson on “Pakistan’s nuclear bluff”.</td>
<td>New Delhi, June 20, 2002.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1927</td>
<td>Threat of Pakistan President Prevez Musharraf to use nukes. Interview to Der Spiegal weekly news magazine of Germany. (As reported by the Dawn on July 4, 2002.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1934. Agreement between the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Republic of India on reducing the risk from accidents relating to nuclear weapons.
   New Delhi, February 21, 2007.

1935. Joint Statement on India-Pakistan expert-level dialogue on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures (CBMs).
   New Delhi, October 19, 2007.

SECTION – V
JUNAGARH

1936. Extract from the Press Note issued by the Dewan of Junagadh on the question of the attitude of Junagadh State in the future Constitutional set-up of India after August 1947.
   Junagadh, April 11, 1947.

   Karachi, September 12, 1947.

1938. Telegram from Prime Minister of India to the Prime Minister of Pakistan.
   New Delhi, September 12, 1947.

1939. Minutes of the meeting of the Indian Cabinet relating to Junagadh State.
   New Delhi, September 17, 1947.

1940. Telegram No. 251 from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

1941. Telegram No. 34-GG from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
   New Delhi, September 21, 1947.
1942. Telegram No. 276 from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

1943. Telegram No. 350 –PR to Nawab of Junagadh (Repeated to N.M. Buch, Regional Commissioner, Rajkot) from the Ministry of External Affairs.
New Delhi, September 22, 1947.

1944. Telegram No. RC/l from Regional Commissioner, Rajkot, to the Indian Ministry of States.
Rajkot, September 22, 1947.

1945. Telegram from Dewan of Junagadh to the Indian Ministry of States.
Junagadh, September 23, 1947.

1946. Telegram No. C/19 from Regional Commissioner, Rajkot to the Indian Ministry of States.
Rajkot, September 23, 1947.

New Delhi, September 23, 1947.

1948. Minutes of the Meeting of the Cabinet regarding Relations with Junagadh State.
New Delhi, September 24, 1947.

1949. Demi Official letter from C.C. Desai, Additional Secretary, Ministry of States to L.K. Jha, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce, Government of India.
New Delhi, September 24, 1947.

1950. Telegram from Ruler of Mangrol to Government of India regarding his renouncing the accession to the Dominion of India.
Mangrol, September 25, 1947.
1951. Press Communiqué issued by the Ministry of States regarding the situation arising out of the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan.
New Delhi, September 25, 1947.

1952. Telegram No. 311 from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.
Karachi, September 25, 1947.

1953. Press Communiqué issued from the Ministry of States
New Delhi, September 25, 1947.

1954. Letter from Samaldas Laxmidas Gandhi, President, Junagadh Provisional Government to the Ministry of States, Government of India.
September 26, 1947.

1955. Demi Official letter from the Governor General of India Mountbatten of Burma to Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel.
New Delhi, September 27, 1947.

1956. Demi Official letter from Governor General Mountbatten of Burma to Secretary, Ministry of States V.P. Menon.
New Delhi, September 28, 1947.

1957. Meeting of the Cabinet held on Sunday, the 28th September, 1947 at 5:30 p.m.

1958. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
29th September, 1947.

1959. Letter from Governor General of India Mountbatten to Deputy Prime Minister and Home Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and his reply.
New Delhi, September 29, 1947.

1960. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.
New Delhi, September 30, 1947.
1961. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.
Karachi, (not dated).

1962. Report by Secretary, Ministry of States, V. P. Menon on his visit to Junagadh.
September 1947.

1963. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.
Karachi, October 1, 1947.

1964. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.
New Delhi, October 2, 1947.

1965. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
New Delhi, October 2, 1947.

1966. Extract from the Record of the Interview of Lord Ismay, Chief of Staff of Governor General with the Prime Minister
Jawaharlal Nehru.
New Delhi, October 3, 1947.

1967. Second Meeting of the Defence Committee held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, the 4th October, 1947.

1968. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
New Delhi, October 5, 1947.

1969. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.
New Delhi, October 5, 1947.

1970. Press Communiqué issued by the Government of India regarding Junagadh.
New Delhi, October 5, 1947.

1971. Demi Official letter from Regional Commissioner Rajkot N.M.
Buch to Secretary, Ministry of States V.P. Menon.
Rajkot, October 7, 1947.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1972</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.</td>
<td>4715</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 7, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1973</td>
<td>Press Note issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Junagadh.</td>
<td>4716</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Karachi, October 8, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1974</td>
<td>Directive from Chief of the General Staff to Brigadier Gurdial Singh, Commander, Kathiawar Defence Force.</td>
<td>4718</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 10, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1975</td>
<td>Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>4720</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Karachi, October 11, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1976</td>
<td>Demi Official letter from C. C. Desai, Additional Secretary, Ministry of States to N.M. Buch, Regional Commissioner, Rajkot.</td>
<td>4720</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 15, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1977</td>
<td>Meeting of the Cabinet held on Wednesday, the 15th October, 1947, at 5 p.m.</td>
<td>4721</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1978</td>
<td>Demi Official letter from Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister, to Governor General Viscount Mountbatten of Burma.</td>
<td>4722</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 15, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1979</td>
<td>Telegram from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Prime Minister of Pakistan at Lahore.</td>
<td>4723</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 15, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1980</td>
<td>Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>4724</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Karachi, October 19, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1981</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.</td>
<td>4725</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 20, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1982</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.</td>
<td>4726</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, October 20, 1947.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1984. Demi Official letter from H.V.R. Iengar, Principal Private Secretary to Prime Minister to Captain R.V. Brockman, Private Secretary to the Governor-General of India. New Delhi, October 23, 1947.

1985. Minutes of the Cabinet held on Thursday, the 23rd October, 1947, at 5 p.m. New Delhi.

1990. Extract from the Note recorded by the Governor General of India Lord Mountbatten on his meeting with the Governor General of Pakistan Mohammad Ali Jinnah. Lahore, November, 1947.

1998. Minutes of an Emergent Meeting of the Cabinet held on Monday the 10th November, 1947, at 10:30 a.m.

   Karachi, November 24, 1947.
2006. Telegram from High Commissioner for India in Karachi to the Ministry of External Affairs.
2007. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
   New Delhi, November 29, 1947.
   New Delhi, December 1, 1947.
2009. Telegram from High Commissioner for India in Karachi to the Ministry of External Affairs.
2010. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.
2011. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
   New Delhi, January 6, 1948.
2012. Press Note issued by the Government of Pakistan after the accession of Junagadh to the Indian Dominion.
   New Delhi, February 5, 1948.
SECTION – VI
KASHMIR

2015. Telegram, dated 4th September 1947, sent by Prime Minister, Kashmir, to Prime Minister, West Punjab, Lahore.

2017. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Patel.
   New Delhi, September 27, 1947.

2018. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Prime Minister of Kashmir.
   Karachi, October 2, 1947.

2019. Telegram from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to British Prime Minister C.R. Attlee and repeated to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.
   New Delhi, October 25, 1947.

2020. Note Signed by the Commanders-in-Chief of the Army, Air Force and Navy (All British Officers) of India Re: sending of Indian Troops into Jammu & Kashmir.
   New Delhi, October, 27, 1947.

2021. Message from the British Prime Minister C. R. Attlee to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

2022. Cable from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
   Lahore, October 30, 1947.

2023. Press Communiqué issued by the Pakistan Army Headquartrs denying deployment of Pakistan Army in Kashmir.
   Rawalpindi, October 30, 1947.

   Lahore, October 30, 1947.
2025. Message from the British Prime Minister C. R. Attlee to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru sent through the British High Commissioner in India.

2026. Telegram from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
Lahore, November 6, 1947.

2027. Cable from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.
New Delhi, November 8, 1947.

2028. Message from British Prime Minister C. R. Attlee to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru through the U.K. High Commissioner in India.

2029. Extracts from the Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Sri Prakasa.
New Delhi, November 25, 1947.

2030. Telegram from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to UK Prime Minister Attlee repeated to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
Lahore, November 25, 1947.

2032. Record of a Meeting Convened by Lord Mountbatten: Other present were: Jawaharlal Nehru, Baldev Singh (Defence Minister), Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister without Portfolio), Liaquat Ali Khan, Ghulam Mohammad (Pakistan Finance Minister).
New Delhi, December 8, 1947.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Date</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2034</td>
<td>Note Recorded by Jawaharlal Nehru of his meetings with Governor General Lord Mountbatten and with Lord Mountbatten and Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.</td>
<td>New Delhi, December 21, 1947.</td>
<td>4799</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2035</td>
<td>Note Recorded by Lord Mountbatten of his discussion with Jawaharlal Nehru and Liaquat Ali Khan.</td>
<td>New Delhi, December 22, 1947.</td>
<td>4804</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2036</td>
<td>Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Liaquat Ali Khan.</td>
<td>New Delhi, December 22, 1947.</td>
<td>4807</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2037</td>
<td>Note of Chief of Staff of Governor General Lord Ismay on Meeting between Nehru and Liaquat Ali Khan.</td>
<td>New Delhi, December 28, 1947.</td>
<td>4808</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2038</td>
<td>Telegram from the UK Prime Minister C. Attlee to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.</td>
<td>London, December 29, 1947.</td>
<td>4810</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2039</td>
<td>Extracts of the Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.</td>
<td>Karachi, December 30, 1947.</td>
<td>4812</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2040</td>
<td>Record of the Governor General Lord Mountbatten's meeting with Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.</td>
<td>New Delhi, December 31, 1947.</td>
<td>4816</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2041</td>
<td>Letter from the American Embassy to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.</td>
<td>New Delhi, January 2, 1948.</td>
<td>4817</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2042</td>
<td>Note from the Minister for External Affairs to the Embassy of the United States of America.</td>
<td>New Delhi, January 3, 1948.</td>
<td>4818</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2043</td>
<td>Extract from the letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to High Commissioner in London Krishna Menon.</td>
<td>New Delhi, February 20, 1948.</td>
<td>4819</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

2045. Letter from the Indian Embassy in Moscow to Ambassador Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit. Moscow, October 5, 1948.

2049. Letter from Indian Foreign Secretary K.P.S. Menon to Ambassador Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit. New Delhi, February 24, 1950.

2051. Extract from the letter of Secretary General, Ministry of External Affairs Girja Shankar Bajpai to Ambassador Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit.

2052. Extract from the Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Ambassador Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit. New Delhi, June 25, 1951.

2053. Extract from the letter of Secretary General, Ministry of External Affairs G.S. Bajpai, to Ambassador Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit. New Delhi, July 5, 1951.

2054. Extract from a letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Indian High Commissioner in London V.K. Krishna Menon. New Delhi, July 22, 1951.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Content ID</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Date/Location</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2055</td>
<td>Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to UN Representative Dr. Frank Graham.</td>
<td>New Delhi, September 11, 1951.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2056</td>
<td>Letter from Secretary General, Ministry of External Affairs G.S. Bajpai to the Permanent Representative of India at the United Nations B. N. Rau.</td>
<td>New Delhi, September 12, 1951.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2057</td>
<td>Extract from the letter from Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.</td>
<td>New York, November 5, 1952.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2058</td>
<td>Extract from the letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit.</td>
<td>New Delhi, November 18, 1952.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2059</td>
<td>Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Cabinet Secretary regarding Kashmir.</td>
<td>New Delhi, April 6, 1953.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2060</td>
<td>Record of Informal Discussions between the Official Committees of India and Pakistan on Kashmir form December 21 to December 29, 1953.</td>
<td>New Delhi, December 21-29, 1953.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2061</td>
<td>Extracts from the letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali.</td>
<td>New Delhi, August 23, 1954.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2062</td>
<td>Letter of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan C. C. Desai.</td>
<td>New Delhi, February 27, 1955.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2063</td>
<td>Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Governor General Ghulam Mohammad.</td>
<td>New Delhi, February 27, 1955.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
    Murree, July 11, 1955.

2066. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Prime Minister of Pakistan Mohammad Ali.
    New Delhi, July 21, 1955.

2067. Note recorded by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru for Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Kashmir.
    New Delhi, September 7, 1955.

2069. Extract from the Note of Ambassador of India in China R.K. Nehru regarding his meeting with the Chinese Premier Chou-En-Lai.
    Peking, March 16, 1956.

2070. Speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha replying to the Debate.
    New Delhi, March 29, 1956.

2072. Note recorded by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru after meeting with Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali in London during the Commonwealth Prime Ministers’ Conference.

2073. Note of the meeting of Mr. Eric S. Tucker with Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali.
2074. Office memorandum issued by the Ministry of Home Affairs to all Ministries of the Government of India regarding nomenclature for the area of Jammu and Kashmir under the occupation of Pakistan.
New Delhi, August 3, 1956.

2075. Letter from Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan to the Commonwealth Secretary M. J. Desai.
Karachi, October 4, 1956.

2076. Telegram from Indembssey, Peking to Foreign, New Delhi.
October 20, 1956.

2077. Aide Memoire handed over by the Pakistan High Commissioner in New Delhi to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru at their meeting.
New Delhi, November 22, 1956.

2078. Record of conversation of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru with the Soviet Ambassador.
New Delhi, November 23, 1956.

2079. Letter from Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan C. C. Desai to the Commonwealth Secretary M. J. Desai.
Karachi, December 5, 1956.

2080. Letter from Ceylonese High Commissioner in India to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.
New Delhi, February 9, 1957.

2081. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Prime Minister of Tunisa.
New Delhi, February 9, 1957.

2082. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Prime Minister of Ceylon SWRD Bandaranaike.
New Delhi, February 11, 1957.

2083. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Tunisian Prime Minister Habib Bourguiba.
New Delhi, February 12, 1957.
2084. Note of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru after his meeting with the Soviet Ambassador.
New Delhi, March 1, 1957.
2085. Note of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on his meeting with the Australian High Commissioner.
New Delhi, April 12, 1957.
2086. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Tunisian Prime Minister Habib Bourguiba.
New Delhi, April 23, 1957.
2087. Note of the Embassy of the United States in New Delhi.
New Delhi, May 15, 1957.
2088. Press Note issued by the Pakistan Press and Information Department on the Statement of Foreign Minister Firoz Khan Noon.
Karachi, September 3, 1957.
2089. Note of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on his meeting with the High Commissioner of the United Kingdom Malcolm MacDonald.
New Delhi, September 15, 1957.
2090. Message of Prime Minister Jawaher Lal Nehru to British Prime Minister Harold Macmilan.
New Delhi, September 18, 1957.
2091. Letter from the Indian Ambassador in Washington to the U.S. Assistant Secretary of State regarding depiction of Jammu and Kashmir in the map contained in the State Department’s publication: “The Middle East: Flexibility of Delineation”.
2092. Letter of the U. S. Assistant Secretary of State William M. Rountree addressed to the Indian Ambassador M. C. Chagla regarding depiction of Kashmir in the State Department publication.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Document Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2093</td>
<td>Telegram from Indembassy, Washington to Foreign, New Delhi. January 8, 1961.</td>
<td>4955</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2094</td>
<td>Letter from Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai to High Commissioner in Pakistian Rajeshwar Dayal (presently on vacation in India). New Delhi, December 31, 1961.</td>
<td>4956</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2095</td>
<td>Letter from Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai to Ambassador in the United States B. K. Nehru. New Delhi, January 3, 1962.</td>
<td>4959</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2096</td>
<td>Telegram From Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy in Washington. New Delhi, January 6, 1962.</td>
<td>4960</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2098</td>
<td>Telegram From Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy in Washington. New Delhi, January 10, 1962.</td>
<td>4962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2099</td>
<td>Letter from Officer on Special Duty in the Ministry of External Affairs (Kashmir) B. L. Sharma to Ambassador in the United States B. K., Nehru. New Delhi, January 11, 1962.</td>
<td>4964</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2100</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy in Washington. New Delhi, January 11, 1962.</td>
<td>4971</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2103</td>
<td>Letter from Officer on Special Duty (Kashmir) in the Ministry of External Affairs B. L. Sharma to Ambassador in the United States B. K. Nehru. New Delhi, January 17, 1962.</td>
<td>4975</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No.</td>
<td>Description</td>
<td>Date</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----</td>
<td>-----------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>-----------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2105</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.</td>
<td>New Delhi, January 19, 1962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2107</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Delegation at the UN to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>New York, January 28, 1962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2108</td>
<td>Letter from the Indian Ambassador to the US President forwarding a letter from Prime Minister of India Jawaharlal Nehru.</td>
<td>29th January, 1962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2110</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Delegation to the UN to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>New York, January 29, 1962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2113</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Delegation to the UN to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>New York, January 31, 1962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2114</td>
<td>Telegram from Prime Minister to Indian Embassy, Washington.</td>
<td>New Delhi, January 31, 1962</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2115. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
    New Delhi, February 1, 1962.

2116. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
    New Delhi, February 1, 1962.

2117. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2118. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2119. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2120. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
    New Delhi, February 6, 1962.

2121. Record of the meeting between Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia and the U. S. Ambassador.
    New Delhi, March 7, 1962.

2122. Note recorded by Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia on his meeting with U.S. Ambassador Galbraith and Ambassador B. K. Nehru on Kashmir.
    New Delhi, March 8, 1962.

2123. Extract from the Note recorded by Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai on his meeting on March 8, 1962 with U. S. Ambassador Galbraith and U. S. Ambassador in Nepal Stebbins at his residence.
    New Delhi, March 8, 1962.

2124. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
    New Delhi, March 13, 1962.
2125. Telegram from High Commissioner in Pakistan to Ministry of External Affairs.

2126. Telegram from Indian Embassy Cairo to Ministry of External Affairs.
Cairo, March 14, 1962.

2127. Letter from the Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia to all the Heads of Mission abroad.
New Delhi, March 24, 1962.

New Delhi, April 5, 1962.

2129. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.
Washington, April 6, 1962.

2130. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
New Delhi, April 9, 1962.

2131. Letter from the Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia to Ambassador in the US B. K. Nehru.
New Delhi, April 11, 1962.

2132. Telegram from Indian Delegation to UN to Ministry of External Affairs.
New York, April 12, 1962.

2133. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2134. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
New Delhi, May 7, 1962.

2135. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Document Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2136</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.</td>
<td>5029</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, May 15, 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2137</td>
<td>Record of the meeting between Foreign Secretary and U.S. Ambassador.</td>
<td>5031</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2138</td>
<td>Extracts from the Note of the Foreign Secretary on his meeting with the U.S.</td>
<td>5032</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ambassador on 18 May 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, May 18, 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2139</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>5034</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2140</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>5035</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2141</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.</td>
<td>5036</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, May 23, 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2142</td>
<td>Letter from Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai to Ambassador B. K. Nehru enclosing</td>
<td>5037</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>copies of his notes referred to in his telegram No. 24418 of 23rd May.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, May 24, 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2143</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>5041</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2144</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>5042</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Washington, June 8, 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2145</td>
<td>Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.</td>
<td>5043</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2146</td>
<td>Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.</td>
<td>5046</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, June 15, 1962.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2147. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru while replying to the debate in the Rajya Sabha on foreign affairs.
   New Delhi, June 23, 1962.

2148. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2149. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.

2150. Letter from Ambassador B. K. Nehru to Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai.
   New Delhi, August 17, 1962.

2152. Record of the meeting between Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia and the American Ambassador Galbraith.
   New Delhi, September 18, 1962.

2153. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
   New Delhi, September 19, 1962.

2154. Letter from Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia to Ambassador B. K. Nehru enclosing a letter from High Commissioner Rajeshwar Dayal from Karachi.
   New Delhi, September 19, 1962.

2155. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2157. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2158. Letter from Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia to Ambassador B. K. Nehru on his talks with Galbraith.
   New Delhi, October 12, 1962.

2159. The following statement was issued on August 2, 1963 by American Ambassador in Pakistan Walter P. McNaughton:

2161. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.
   Washington, November 1, 1963.

2162. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2163. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
   New Delhi, December 4, 1963.

2164. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
   New Delhi, December 17, 1963.

2165. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
   New Delhi, December 20, 1963.

2166. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
   New Delhi, December 21, 1963.
2167. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
New Delhi, December 21, 1963.

2168. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2169. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
New Delhi, December 23, 1963.

2170. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2171. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2172. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2173. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
New Delhi, December 23, 1963.

2174. Telegram from Ministry External Affairs to Indian Embassy Washington.
New Delhi, December 23, 1963.

2175. Telegram from Indian Embassy Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

2176. Record of the talks between Sheikh Abdullah and Indian Officials on Kashmir at the Prime Minister’s House.
New Delhi, May 8, 1964.
2177. Letter from Foreign Secretary to V. K. T. Chari on the question of Federation and its implications.
New Delhi, May 13, 1964.

2178. Unofficial translation of a letter from Soviet Prime Minister Alex Kosygin to Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri.

2179. Letter from Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri to the Soviet Premier A. Kosygin.
New Delhi, August 29, 1965.

2180. Reply from Pakistan President Ayub Khan to Secretary General of the United Nations in reply to his message of September 1, 1965.

2181. Message of the Soviet Premier Alex Kosygin to Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and Pakistan President Ayub Khan.
Moscow, September 4, 1965.

2182. Telegram dated 6 September 1965 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan to the President of the Security Council.
Rawalpindi, September 6, 1965.

2183. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in Pakistan to the British Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 6, 1965.

2184. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the British Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 6, 1965.

2185. Record of the meeting between British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and Pakistan High Commissioner in London Agha Hilaly.

2186. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 6, 1965.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Date</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2188</td>
<td>Message from the British Prime Minister’s Office to the U.S White Houses on the Prime Minister’s current thinking on the situation in Kashmir.</td>
<td>London, September 6, 1965.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2190</td>
<td>Record of the meeting taken by the British Prime Minister with the Officials of the Foreign Office on Kashmir.</td>
<td>London, September 7, 1965.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2191</td>
<td>Record of a meeting between the British Minister of State and the Indian High Commissioner Jivraj Mehta.</td>
<td>London, September 7, 1965.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2192</td>
<td>Record of the Conversation between the British Prime Minister and Pakistan High Commissioner regarding Pakistan’s conditions for a Cease Fire.</td>
<td>London, September 7, 1965.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2193</td>
<td>Record of the Conversation between the British Prime Minister and the Indian High Commissioner Jivraj Mehta regarding the proposal for an unconditional ceasefire.</td>
<td>London, September 7, 1965.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2195</td>
<td>Letter from the British High Commissioner in New Delhi to the British Commonwealth Relations Office.</td>
<td>New Delhi, September 7, 1965.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2196</td>
<td>Record of a meeting between the British Foreign Secretary and U. S. Under Secretary of State George Ball at the British Foreign Office on Kashmir.</td>
<td>London, September 8, 1965.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2197. Telegram from the British Foreign Office to the British Ambassador in Moscow to sound the Soviet authorities regarding their attitude on the possible Chinese intervention in Kashmir.

2198. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 8, 1965.

2199. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to Commonwealth Relations Office.

2200. The Gazette of India Extraordinary
The Gazette of India Extraordinary.

2201. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 11, 1965.

2202. Brief prepared by the British Commonwealth Relations Office for the Secretary of State for the Cabinet meeting on Kashmir.

2203. Letter from Foreign Minister of Pakistan Z.A. Bhutto to African Foreign Minister(s).
Rawalpindi, September 13, 1965.

Moscow, September 13, 1965.

2205. Reply by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri to the letter from UN Secretary General U Thant.
New Delhi, September 14, 1965.

2206. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 16, 1965.
2207. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the British Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 16, 1965.

2208. Telegram from British High Commissioner in New Delhi to the British Commonwealth Relations Office pleading that the accession of Kashmir to Pakistan would be against UK interests.
New Delhi, September 16, 1965.

2209. Telegram from the British Ambassador in Tehran to the British Foreign Office.
Tehran, September 16, 1965.

2210. Telegram from the British Foreign Office to the British Mission at the United Nations.

2211. Brief prepared for the Commonwealth Secretary of State on India-Pakistan for discussion in the Cabinet.

New Delhi, September 16, 1965.

2213. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to British Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 16, 1965.

2214. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Pakistan to the British Commonwealth Relations Office.
Rawalpindi, September 17, 1965.

2215. Telegram from the British Ambassador in Washington to the Foreign Office.
Washington, September 17, 1965.
2216. Identical letters from Soviet Premier Alex Kosygin to Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and Pakistan President Ayub Khan.
   Moscow, September 17, 1965.

2217. Telegram from British Ambassador in Washington to the British Foreign Office.

2218. Telegram from the British Ambassador in Washington to the Foreign Office.

2219. Telegram from British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the British Commonwealth Office.
   Rawalpindi, September 19, 1965.

2220. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to the Commonwealth Relations Office.
   Rawalpindi, September 20, 1965.

2221. Record of Conversation on India and Pakistan at the State Department on 20th September, 1965.

2222. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in New Delhi to the Commonwealth Relations Office.
   New Delhi, September 21, 1965.

2223. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in Rawalpindi to Commonwealth Relations Office.
   Rawalpindi, September 21, 1965.

2224. Note of the Ministry of External Affairs to the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi.
   New Delhi, September 21, 1965.

2225. Telegram from the British Ambassador in Tehran to the Foreign Office.
LX

2226. Statement by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri in Parliament on the Cease-fire.
      New Delhi, September 22, 1965.

2227. Letter of the British High Commission in New Delhi to the Commonwealth Relations Office conveying the conversation between the British High Commissioner and Italian Ambassador.
      New Delhi, September 22, 1965.

2228. Message from Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri to the Soviet Premier Alex Kosygin.
      New Delhi, September 22, 1965.

2229. Record of Telephonic Conversation between the British Prime Minister and Pakistan President Ayub Khan.
      September 23, 1965.

2230. Telegram from the British High Commissioner in New Delhi to the Commonwealth Relations Office.
      New Delhi, September 23, 1965.

      New Delhi, September 24, 1965.

2232. Letter from Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the UN addressed to the UN Secretary General.

2233. Note from the High Commission for India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

2234. Letter from Permanent Representative of India at the UN to the UN Secretary General.

2240. Speech by A.N. Kosygin, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR at the opening Session of the Tashkent Conference. Tashkent, January 4, 1966.

2241. The Declaration issued by the Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and President of Pakistan Mohammad Ayub Khan at the end of their meeting. Tashkent, January 10, 1966.

2243. Briefing by the Pakistani Foreign Secretary acting as the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Delegation at Tashkent on the outcome of the Tashkent Conference. Tashkent, January 10, 1966.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Date</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2244</td>
<td>Statement by Indian Foreign Secretary C. S. Jha acting as the Official Spokesman of the Indian Delegation at the Tashkent Conference.</td>
<td>Tashkent, January 10, 1966.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2245</td>
<td>Broadcast by the Pakistan President Mohammad Ayub Khan to the people of Pakistan.</td>
<td>Islamabad, January 14, 1966.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2246</td>
<td>Press Note issued by the Pakistan Information Department carrying the Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto on the Tashkent Declaration saying that the &quot;Declaration not an end in itself&quot;.</td>
<td>Larkana, January 15, 1966.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2249</td>
<td>First of the Month Broadcast of Pakistan President Mohammad Ayub Khan to the Nation.</td>
<td>February 1, 1966.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2251</td>
<td>Record of discussion between the Chief of Army Staff, India and the Commander-in-Chief, Pakistan Army, regarding the Reduction of Military Forces in Kashmir.</td>
<td>February 10, 1966.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2252. Speech of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi in the Lok Sabha on Tashkent Declaration.
   New Delhi, February 15, 1966.

2253. Reply by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the debate on Tashkent Declaration in the Lok Sabha.
   New Delhi, February 21, 1966.

2254. Debate in the Pakistan National Assembly on the Tashkent Declaration.

2255. Record of discussions held between C-in-C Designate Pakistan Army and Chief of the Army Staff, India on 13/14 September 1966 at New Delhi.

2256. Record of discussions held between the Indian Chief of the Army Staff and Commander in Chief of Pakistan Army amplifying decisions contained in paras 2 and 3 of the Record of the meeting held at New Delhi on September 13-14, 1966.
   Rawalpindi, October 25, 1967.

2257. Note Recorded by T.N. Kaul on his“ Private” meeting with Sheikh Abdullah and submitted to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
   New Delhi, October 10, 1967.

2258. Note Recorded by T.N.Kaul after his dinner appointment with Sheikh Abdullah and Submitted to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
   New Delhi, October 12, 1967.

2259. Note Recorded by T.N. Kaul on his “private” meeting with Sheikh Abdullah and Submitted to Prime Minister Mrs Indira Gandhi.
   New Delhi October 30, 1967.
2260. Note recorded by T.N. Kaul of his Meetings with Sheikh Abadullah and submitted to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

New Delhi, January 1, 1968.

2261. Statement of Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto on the Agreement between the Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi and Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah.

Rawalpindi, February 24, 1975.

2262. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan in the Pakistan National Assembly on Siachen.

Islamabad, June 8, 1985.

2263. Joint Statement issued at the end of Second Round of India-Pakistan Talks on Siachen.

New Delhi, June 12, 1986.

2264. Questions replied to in the Pakistan National Assembly on Siachen.

2265. Letter from Deputy Chief of Mission of India in Pakistan A. B. Patwardhan to Joint Secretary (Pakistan) Ministry of External Affairs.

2266. Letter from High Commissioner in Pakistan S.K. Singh to Defence Secretary S.K. Bhatangar.

2267. Joint Press Release issued at the end of Third Round of India – Pakistan talks on Siachen.

2268. Joint Statement issued at the end of fourth round of talks between the Defence Secretaries of India and Pakistan on Siachen.

New Delhi, September 24, 1988.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Number</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2269</td>
<td>Letter from Defence Secretary T.N. Seshan to Foreign Secretary K.P.S. Menon on Siachen.</td>
<td>5325</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2270</td>
<td>Interview of Pakistan Minister of State for Defence Ghulam Sarwer Cheema.</td>
<td>5327</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2271</td>
<td>Joint Statement issued on the conclusion of the 5th round of India – Pakistan talks on Siachen.</td>
<td>5328</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Rawalpindi, June 17, 1989.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2272</td>
<td>Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Siachen.</td>
<td>5330</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Islamabad, June 20, 1989.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2273</td>
<td>Media Report on the meeting between Indian and Pakistani military officials on Siachen.</td>
<td>5331</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, July 11, 1989.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2274</td>
<td>Extract from the Joint Press Release relevant to Siachen issued at the end of the visit of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to Islamabad.</td>
<td>5332</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Islamabad, July 17, 1989.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2275</td>
<td>Telegram from High Commissioner of India in Pakistan J. N. Dixit to Foreign Secretary.</td>
<td>5333</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Islamabad, November 28, 1989.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2276</td>
<td>Aide Memoire from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.</td>
<td>5335</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, December 1, 1989.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2277</td>
<td>Speech of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto in the Joint Sitting of Parliament initiating the debate on the Situation in Kashmir.</td>
<td>5336</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2278</td>
<td>Joint Press Statement issued at the end of Sixth round India – Pakistan talks on Siachen.</td>
<td>5340</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>New Delhi, November 5, 1992.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2279. Clarification provided by the Official spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the Joint Press Statement issued on the sixth Round of Talks on Siachen. New Delhi, November 6, 1992.

2282. Note circulated to the press by the Government of India after the Seventh Round of India – Pakistan talks on Siachen. New Delhi, November 6, 1998.

2286. Joint Press Statement issued at the end of India-Pakistan Defence Secretary level talks on Siachen. Islamabad, April 7, 2007.
INDIA – PAKISTAN RELATIONS

SECTION-III
DEFENCE ISSUES

SECTION-IV
NUCLEAR

SECTION-V
JUNAGARH

SECTION-VI
KASHMIR
LXVIII INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

SECTION - III

DEFENCE ISSUES
Telegram from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Leader of the Indian Delegation to the United Nations Vijayalakshmi Pandit.

New Delhi, November 15, 1952.

New York Times statement that United States Government is directly interested in increasing strength of Pakistan Army and having air bases in Pakistan is of great importance. Zafarullah Khan’s denial does not convince anyone. It is significant that Dawn has published long account on lines of New York Times statement from its Washington correspondent.

We have asked our Ambassador in Washington to try to find out what the position is. I should like you also to try to ascertain the facts about this matter*.

* The report dated 10 November stated that it was learnt that concerned American officials were “considering plans to building up Pakistan Army. The eventual plan is to build American air-fields in Pakistan, 90 minutes flying time from major Soviet industrial area”. On 10 November Mohammad Zafrullah Khan, the Foreign Minister, said, “no Pakistan plan exist for the development of the Pakistan Army by Americans, or for granting American air-fields in Pakistan”. Separately Mrs. Pandit had in her telegram to Prime Minister reporting her conversation at a lunch with the US Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said the latter had hinted at the possibility of a meeting between her and President Eisenhower and she sought instruction on the line she should take in her talks if the proposed meeting materialized. Prime Minister inter alia wrote to her: “you might also mention that we have been greatly disturbed by news that US Government is going to help Pakistan to build up its army and to have air bases in Pakistan. We do not know the truth of this, but even this report had created apprehension. We think that even in Pakistan this will have a bad effect on the people and probably weaken the present Government there. It will give handle to extremist elements in Pakistan. It was chiefly on some such reports two years ago that there was a military conspiracy in Pakistan which led to arrest of high-ranking officers”.

In the meantime reports started circulating that an attempt was being made to get Pakistan join the Middle East Defence Organisation (MEDO). Prime Minister in his minute dated December 24, 1952, directed the Ministry of External Affairs to supply some information to the press about the MEDO so that they could write about it. He however cautioned that the journalists should be told to write on their own behalf without involving the government in any manner. He also desired that the Ambassador in Washington (G. L. Mehta) be advised to discuss this matter with the Secretary of State Acheson so that they get the message that “we were interested in this and that any such arrangement with Pakistan would have repercussions in India. It is as well they should know this.”
It is not for me to say much about the reported move to include Pakistan in the Middle East Defence Organization at this stage except this, that it is a matter of grave concern to us what takes place in regard to the Middle East Defence Pact and Pakistan, because that may very well affect all kinds of balances and equilibrium in this country and Pakistan and in South Asia. Therefore, it is not a matter of little concern to us. We have been following this with close attention and we shall naturally have to adapt ourselves to changing conditions and developments.

Obviously as a responsible organization, we do not pass resolutions making it clear to this country and that country that India would consider the inclusion of Pakistan in the defence pact as an unfriendly act, or issue warnings, etc. These academic exercises can hardly be indulged in by a responsible organization like the Congress. Therefore, I could not allow that amendment. Nevertheless, the subject matter of amendment is, of course, of high importance*

---

* The Prime Minister’s intervention was directed at the proposed amendment in the Foreign Policy resolution “to make it clear” to the-Anglo-US powers that India would consider “the inclusion of Pakistan in the West Asia defence pact as an unfriendly act.” Though the amendment was disallowed, nevertheless it reflected the concerns of India at the developing security situation in the region.

On January 18 again speaking at the plenary session of the AICC Nehru clarified his position and said “Apparently my words were interpreted by some people as interfering in somebody else’s business. Well, I have no desire whatever to interfere in anybody else’s business just as I do not want anyone else to interfere in my business. It is not for me to come in the way of Pakistan or the USA or the UK who are free to take any steps they like in this matter. So I do not complain or interfere. What I said was that this matter is of grave concern to us naturally, and that we have to consider carefully what we have to do in our country and how to adapt ourselves to it. Obviously, if such a thing occurs, the region of cold war comes right up to our borders. That is to say, if Pakistan joins such a thing it can certainly do so; we do not come in the way – but it does make a difference to us either in cold war or if something worse, some other type of war happens. It affects us when something happens on our borders in any matter. It is not the possibility of war between India and Pakistan but it is the possibility of world war coming right up to our doors and it is a matter of concern to us.”

The need for the Prime Minister to clarify the position arose because the London Times, for example, in an editorial on 15 January criticized Indian comments on possible association of Pakistan with the proposed MEDO and stated: “The Government of India is rightly proud of its independence. It will not brook admonition, let alone pressure from other countries on the management of its affairs. Yet it does not seem to recognize that other countries feel and are entitled to feel the same.” The Dawn of Karachi on January 28, in an editorial said: “…if an opportunity comes to us to participate in such an organisation (MEDO)...it would be an act of folly on our part to miss it.”
10. You know that I have met Mohammad Ali, the Prime Minister of Pakistan, twice in recent months, once in Karachi and then in Delhi. I found him much easier to get on with than his predecessors. I believe he is anxious for a settlement with India as we are. He is a frank and amiable person. But he has been living in foreign countries ever since independence came and has thus been rather out of touch with his own country. In particular, he knows little about western Pakistan, being himself a Bengali. He became Prime Minister chiefly because of the rivalries of others. It was a good thing that he became Prime Minister, but his position in that post is rather a negative one. That is to say, that he has no particular following of his own and he remains there because others quarrel. He has a certain popularity with people. His position is, therefore, a difficult position, and continuous intrigues and struggles for power are going on behind the scenes in Pakistan. The political situation in Pakistan is completely fluid and nobody quite knows what might happen.

11. Mohammad Ali has spent the last few years in the USA and in Canada. He has been much influenced by the USA and, it is said, that the USA had some part in helping to make him Prime Minister. There is little doubt that the influence of the USA has increased greatly in Pakistan, at the cost of British influence. A large gift of wheat by the US to Pakistan was much publicised.

12. A new and rather alarming development is now taking place. There is no doubt that a military alliance between Pakistan and the US is being discussed and, I think, it is highly likely that this will take place in some form or other. The US Government is so obsessed with anti-communism that it forgets all other issues. Prominent Americans openly talk of raising, with their money, a well-equipped army of a million men in Pakistan. Pakistan, with its political and economic difficulties, is falling into this trap. There is considerable opposition to it among the people of Pakistan, but this opposition is not organized enough to make much difference.

13. You will appreciate that this formal lining up of Pakistan with the US as well as the building up of Pakistan as a great military centre, has far-reaching consequences for all of us. For India, it has a special significance and we are naturally much concerned. Pakistan practically becomes a satellite of America with bases and crowds of Americans all over the place. More and more it will pass under the influence of the US. The cold war will come right up to India’s frontiers and, if a shooting war starts, that will also come right up to our frontier.
14. Also, as its army develops, the military mentality will spread. As it is, the Pakistan army is a dominating influence there. The army officers have considerable contempt for the civil government and it is a possibility for military coups to take place. Whether it is Kashmir, or any other problem, this will make a big difference. I do not mean to suggest that we are frightened of all this. But, it is clear that this represents a basic change in southern and western Asia which will affect all countries and, more especially, India.

15. Yet another unfortunate development is the decision by the Pakistan Constituent Assembly to name the country “the Islamic Republic of Pakistan” and to lay down that only a Muslim can be Governor-General. Further that all laws will have to conform to the Islamic laws of the Shariat. It is possible, and indeed probable, that this proposal about the laws will not be fully implemented, because it is impossible to have medieval system of civil and criminal law in a modern State. Nevertheless, all this represents a certain medieval and reactionary outlook and it divides its citizens into two major classes: Muslims who are the dominant and governing group and non-Muslims who are tolerated and who may be protected, but nevertheless belong to an inferior species. In East Bengal there are still over ten million non-Muslims. To make all these people feel that they have no future and no opportunities even in the present hardly seems a Nehru’s mind was greatly occupied by this development and the very next day (November 12) in a letter to K.M. Panikkar Ambassador in Peking he wrote: “The second and even more important development, is the military alliance between Pakistan and the USA. Whether this has been actually signed or not (some reports say that the agreement has been signed), the fact remains that we are on the verge of it. The American press is full of it, and there is guarded mention of it even in the Pakistan press. Indeed, the New York Times had an extraordinary leader about it, looking forward to a million stout Pakistani soldiers armed and equipped by the US, standing up to communism. As I write to you, I have before me an article in the US News and World Report, which is an important weekly, more especially having influence with the defence forces in the US. In this, it says, ‘Pakistan is an answer to a prayer and is challenging India’s neutral leadership... Pakistanis are a warrior people who once conquered and ruled India’ and so on. In effect Pakistan becomes practically a colony of the US. There is practically no organized opposition there. I understand that the Nawab of Bhopal has also organized his trip abroad to fit in with Ghulam Mohammad’s and jointly they are going to stand up as champions who will fight communism. That of course is the mantra to win American love and money. It is said that both of them are dabbling in Anglo-Egyptian controversies. No doubt they will try to bring pressure on the Egyptian Government to fall in with British wishes. The US imagines that by this policy they have completely outflanked India’s so-called neutralism and will thus bring India to her knees. Whatever the future may hold, this is not going to happen. The first result of all this will be an extreme dislike of the US in India. As it is, our relations are cool.”

In another letter of 16th November to Lord Mountbatten he wrote, “I am much concerned at the reported military pact between Pakistan and the US. The New York Times talks calmly of the US not only having a number of bases in Pakistan, but building up an army of a million well-equipped men there.”
wise way of dealing with vast numbers of people. Apparently, the Americans and the Britishers rather encourage this medieval tendency, probably because they think that this will keep away Pakistan from communism. They are of course wrong.

16. Pakistan thus is going along a path which is not only bad for it but which draws it away from the circle of independent Asian countries, and makes it a backward and reactionary country dependent on the US. This cannot lead to stability.

* * * * *

1730. Extract from the Note of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to the Foreign Secretary and Commonwealth Secretary Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, November 27, 1953.

6. One interesting fact has to be kept in mind. This is the inner conflict that goes on between the US and the UK, in spite of their general alliance. In the Middle East, there is a continuous attempt by the US to displace the influence of the UK. This is visible in Egypt, as well as in some countries of western Asia. The UK resents this, but apparently is powerless to do much about it. Indeed, the US, in spite of fine phrases, treat the UK as a country which is in the downgrade and cannot play a world role which it has thus far played, and the US wants to take its place even in countries where the UK had continued to be dominant.

7. It is in this context that we should view the various attempts made to build up some kind of a Middle East Defence system. This did not come off chiefly because Egypt did not fall in line on account of her differences with the UK. An attempt was then made for Turkey, Iran and Pakistan to form some kind of a military alliance sponsored by the USA. That too has not thus far succeeded. The latest effort in this direction is the proposal to have a Pakistan- US military pact with US bases in Pakistan. A number of contradictory statements in regard to this have been made by prominent persons in America and Pakistan. There can be little doubt, however, that talks about such an alliance and bases have been held and that Pakistan is completely agreeable to fall in line. For the US this was part of its grand strategy of bases all over the globe and more especially encircling the Communist world. The UK might have no particular objection to the military aspect of such a pact, as it had probably no objection to MEDO, but it does not favour the US taking its place in the sun everywhere. There is little doubt that US influence has grown in Pakistan greatly, and at the cost of UK influence. I doubt if the UK at all likes the idea of a military pact between the US and Pakistan.

8. What the position is now in regard to this pact is not clear. It appears, however, that things had gone pretty far when a strong protest from India pulled them up, or rather pulled the US up and made it hesitate. Pakistan appears to be willing all along the line.

9. It need not be pointed out that a military pact between Pakistan and the US and US bases in Pakistan are matters of the gravest concern to India. Indeed, the whole of south East and South West Asia are concerned, India cannot possibly remain a passive spectator to these developments. If they come off they are bound to create bitterness and fear as between India and Pakistan. They will come in the way of the settlement of all our problems. They will, in fact, bring the cold war right up to our borders as well as the prospect of world war. Pakistan would then complete her progress towards the status of some kind of a satellite of the US.

10. There is general realization, I think, in South East Asia, as well as in some of the Western Asian countries, about the dangers of such an alliance. The US of course, thinks of it as another chain in her line of encirclement of the Soviet Union and in her fight against communism. Pakistan's foreign and military policies revolve round India. She is anxious to build up her military strength so as to use it first as a bargaining favor in dealing with India and secondly, if necessary, by a regular war on India.

11. It is clear to me that Pakistan-US pact will make a great change in the whole situation in Asia, and we in India will have to consider what we should do about it. There will be no question of our changing our foreign policy or our basic approach to international problems. We shall certainly continue our policy of non-alignment and yet we shall have to do something.

12. In any event, we must exert ourselves to the utmost now to prevent such a military pact between the US and Pakistan. I think this can be done because India still counts and a deliberately hostile approach to India will bring reactions which the US will not like at all. India, in her own way, is playing a vital role though she does not shout about it.

13. I think that our Ambassadors and Ministers in our Missions abroad should bring these facts in regard to the proposed pact between US and Pakistan to the notice of the Governments concerned and at the highest level. They may do so orally but they should be firm and clear about it. We should, therefore, instruct them to do this in a friendly way pointing out all the dangers. It is possible to create, if not a world opinion on this subject, at any rate an Asian opinion. This is bound to help, and it may even succeed finally in preventing that military alliance. Such an approach should be made to almost all countries though the emphasis and the method of approach will necessarily vary. It should be made also to the Soviet Union and China. They are, of course, opposed to this US and Pakistan alliance. Nevertheless, it is as well to put our case to them. There might be a polite hint to the countries that an expression of their opinion to the US and to Pakistan will help. This has to be done tactfully and not in any sense by way of pressure or threat. It should only be a recital of facts, and understanding of their inter-relation. Our Heads of Mission abroad must realize the importance of this question to Asia, and, I think, to world peace. Therefore, they should deal with it themselves and help in every way in making it clear to the countries concerned that India is not going to submit quietly to any such development.

1731. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali.

New Delhi, December 9, 1953.

New Delhi, December 9, 1953

My dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your letter of the 1st December 1953. I have been distressed to learn of your ill-health. I hope you have wholly recovered now.

2. On the 10th November, I wrote two letters to you, one of which was a personal letter. In that letter I referred to various matters including the evacuee property problem. In particular, I referred to the news of a military pact between Pakistan and the United States. I made it clear that it was not our wish to interfere in any way with Pakistan's internal or external policy. But when something is done in Pakistan which is likely to create powerful repercussions in India, then it is only right that I should draw your attention to it, just as if anything happened in India, which would produce that result in Pakistan, you would be perfectly entitled to draw my attention to it.

3. You have not referred to this matter in your letter to me, but in a public statement you have denied any such pact between Pakistan and the USA. The Governor-General of Pakistan has also said that all such rumours were without foundation and were baseless.

4. You are no doubt aware that the press of the United States has been writing about this proposed military pact or agreement repeatedly and in great detail. There was no denial of this or even correction. I had to conclude, therefore, that there was some basis for what was being written about so frequently in America.

5. As a matter of fact, there has been no uniformity in the various denials issued. Indeed, some statements made by responsible statesmen in the United States practically confirm these rumours, except, perhaps in regard to military bases. Even during the last three or four days, newspapers all over the world have been full of the military assistance that is likely to be given to Pakistan by the USA. If this is so, then you will permit me to say that my statement was not far from the truth and that the denials were hardly correct.

6. In my personal letter of the 10th November, I pointed out that any such pact between Pakistan and the USA meant the alignment of Pakistan, both in regard to its foreign and defence policy, with a particular bloc of nations. So far as India is concerned, it has been our consistent policy to avoid any such alignment; because we believe that this would be undesirable from the point of view of peace in Asia as well as world peace. We hoped that the countries of Asia would keep free from these entanglements and preserve an area of peace, whatever happened elsewhere. Some other important countries in South Asia have independently followed the same policy. Apart from the danger of extending the sphere of war, such alignments were highly likely to lead to progressive limitations in the independence of the country so entangled. The countries of Asia have only recently recovered their freedom and, in our opinion, it would be most unfortunate that any policy should be pursued which would inevitably bring in powerful outside influences, limiting that freedom. Past history is a warning to us in this respect.

7. I mention this because, in view of the developments that appear to be taking place, Pakistan’s foreign and defence policy will become diametrically opposed to the policies we have so consistently and earnestly pursued. I can only express my regret that the area of disagreement between India and Pakistan should be extended over a wider field now. So far as we are concerned, we shall continue to pursue our own policy of peace and non-alignment.

8. You and I are concerned with our respective countries, and we bear a heavy responsibility for their well-being. We have to think also and shoulder some responsibility for world affairs, and chiefly the vital issues of peace and war. In any event, we cannot forget that those issues affect our respective countries. We have thus to fashion our policies, keeping all this, and more especially peace, in view. War today is likely to be an irretrievable disaster and all our hard-won freedom will be endangered by it. Progress and reconstruction will, of course, stop completely. In fact, the movement will be in an opposite direction.

9. I do not know what the present position is in regard to the military pact or assistance between Pakistan and the USA. But responsible newspapers state that large-scale military assistance and equipment, arms and training will be given to Pakistan by the US. It is even stated (the New York Times has said so) that an army of a million men may be so trained in Pakistan. No doubt, the United States thinks that these forces may be utilized for a possible war against the Communist countries. Some of us differ from them in considering this as a method of ensuring peace. It seems to us rather an encouragement to war. Whatever the motive may be, the mere fact that large scale rearmament and military expansion takes place in Pakistan must necessarily have repercussions in India. The whole psychological atmosphere between the two countries will change for the worse and every question that is pending between us will be affected by it. We do not propose to enter into an armament race with Pakistan or any other country. Our ways of approach to these international problems are different from those of the nations of Europe and America. But it is obvious that such an expansion of Pakistan’s war resources, with the help of the United States of America, can only be looked upon as an unfriendly act in India and one that is fraught with danger. It is not the people of India who think so but people of other countries also and this has little to do with the motives behind the act, because the result in any event will be the same.

10. This matter is of such great importance and far-reaching consequences that I am writing to you once more about it, in addition to the more formal approach that we have asked our High commissioner at Karachi to make to you. Inevitably, it will affect the major questions that we are considering and, more especially, the Kashmir issue. We have been discussing for a long time past, the question of demilitarization in the Kashmir State. Indeed, it is proposed to discuss this particular question again at the Official Conference that has been suggested. The whole issue will change its face completely if heavy and rapid militarization of Pakistan itself is to take place. It is a relatively small matter what forces Pakistan maintains within the State of Kashmir, as it is doing at present. They can withdraw them 30 or 40 or 50 miles into Pakistan territory. These forces can come back at a few hours’ notice. If, however, they are backed by an increasing armed power in Pakistan itself, that is of far greater moment than the so-called demilitarization of Kashmir State. In fact, it becomes rather absurd to talk of demilitarization, if Pakistan proceeds in the reverse direction with the help of the United States.
11. I have been, and am, anxious that we should proceed towards a settlement of the Kashmir dispute. It was with this firm resolve that we had talks with each other in Karachi and Delhi and issued our joint statements. These joint statements become further and further removed from reality and tend to fade away before the cruel logic of facts as they are developing, in the shape especially, of the proposals to increase largely the armed forces of Pakistan. In fact, the question before us becomes one of militarization and not of demilitarization. It is in this context that we have to consider this issue of Kashmir.

12. In your letter you have referred to the manner of taking the plebiscite and have not agreed with what I had written in paragraphs 6, 7 and 8 of my letter of November 10. I can only say that your arguments failed to convince me and that I can only repeat what I said in my previous letter on this subject. So also in regard to the displaced persons. We have to consider this matter in not an argumentative and legalistic way, but from the broader point of view of bringing about a fair decision in Kashmir and avoiding upsets and large-scale dislocation. This was our approach in our talks and in the joint statements we issued. That approach is nullified if we are to adopt the procedure that you have suggested in your last letter. I cannot conceive of how we can have that procedure of temporary camps etc. without creating enormous difficulties.

In a broadcast on 1 December 1953, Mohammad Ali had denied the report that his country was negotiating with the US for military aid in return for US bases in Pakistan. He asserted that Pakistan would "tolerate no interference in her domestic or foreign policy from any quarter." The Governor-General of Pakistan, Ghulam Mohammed, said on 19 November 1953: "I was extremely surprised to see that Mr. Nehru has commented on these reports without verifying their veracity. I wish to make it absolutely clear that Pakistan will never be a camp follower of anyone". He described as "absolutely baseless and unfounded" the reports of military alliance between the US and Pakistan. But in another letter written to Nehru on December 17, 1953 he was ambivalent in completely denying it and said "he was surprised that Nehru should consider any attempt to strengthen Pakistan as an unfriendly act." He pointed out that the Indian Defence budget was three times as much as that of Pakistan's. "I am not sure that it is not established only on the basis that the present great disparity in the military potential of India and Pakistan shall never be altered to India's disadvantage", wrote Mohammad Ali and described Indian observations and press criticism as "unfortunate" and it was a "sad commentary on Indian professions of friendship". He, of course confirmed that "informal talks" had taken place with the US on American military equipment for Pakistan but no detailed discussions had taken place as yet and that Pakistan had its own ideology and "had not cast in her lot with the western powers as reported."

On 17 November 1953, Dulles, the US Secretary of State, declared that no negotiations had been underway with Pakistan for establishing American bases in that country, but he added that one could not rule out the possibility of such a pact with Pakistan in future. However, on 18 November, President Eisenhower stated at a press conference in Washington, that the question of military aid and bases had not been discussed in detail when he had met the Pakistani Governor-General on 13 November 1953. He also said that Indian reactions would be watched in any arrangements which might emerge.

Reuter reported from Washington that Pakistan sources in New York had informed UN delegates and others that Pakistan had indicated her willingness to grant America bases, if the US armed her. The report said: "According to Pakistan and US estimates, it would
13. Regarding the Official Committee, I am agreeable to a meeting taking place at a fairly early date. I would suggest that the meeting be held in Delhi. We are so overwhelmed at present with our work here and with Parliament that it is difficult to send persons to Karachi. As for the date, I should like it to be as soon as possible. But the date you suggest, namely the 15th December, is too near for proper arrangements to be made. I would therefore suggest that the conference be held in Delhi on Monday, the 21st December 1953. Our representative at that conference will be:

(1) Shri M.J. Desai,
(2) Shri Vishnu Sahay,
(3) Shri V. Shankar, and
(4) Brigadier Manekshaw.

There may be two or three civil or military representatives.

14. As for the agenda you have suggested, I have nothing special to say. We need not adopt the methods of Panmunjom and argue about rigid agendas indefinitely.

15. Please let me know if the date I have suggested suits you.

Yours sincerely
Jawaharlal Nehru

Asian opinion echoed Nehru’s reaction to the proposal of US military aid to Pakistan. Several newspapers such as the New Times of Myanmar, the Tribune of Sri Lanka, the Al-Akbar of Iraq shared the Indian reactions. Some of the Asian Governments also felt as strongly against the American move as India.

The India High Commissioner in Karachi delivered a note from the Government of India to Mohammad Ali on 19 December 1953 linking the question of Admiral Nimitz’s appointment as Plebiscite Administrator for Kashmir with that of US military aid to Pakistan. As the national of a great power and as he represented the country giving military aid to Pakistan, Admiral Nimitz was not considered suitable.

Mohammad Ali, in his letter of 1 December 1953, refused to accept Nehru’s ideas on regional arrangement for a plebiscite in Kashmir. Once the plebiscite had been held and people’s verdict as to the accession of the State of Jammu and Kashmir as a whole was known, both India and Pakistan would be bound to abide by that verdict; “it would not be open thereafter to either of us to proceed to dispose of the State in accordance, not with the verdict, but with some different criteria to be then defined.” Mohammed Ali named the Pakistani representatives for the joint committee of India and Pakistan: Aziz Ahmed, M. Ayub, and Aftab Ahmed Khan with two advisers, Maj-Gen. K. M. Sheikh and Lieut-Col. Mohammed Iqbal, and also proposed an agenda: (i) (a) demilitarization of the State, (b) other preliminary issues; and (ii) action necessary to implement the joint decision.
My dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your letter of December 17, which was delivered to me by your High Commissioner.

I have written to you fully on a previous occasion about the proposal for the USA to give military aid to Pakistan. I do not wish to repeat what I had already written, but I must express my regret at your not realizing the far-reaching consequences of any such military aid being given by a great power to Pakistan or, for the matter of that, to India. Both past history and recent events have shown us what the inevitable consequence of such aid is. I have no doubt that Pakistan cherishes her independence and would not like any limitation of it. Every free country cherishes its independence. We have seen, however, that this independence becomes progressively restricted when certain steps are taken.

I have also no doubt that the people of Pakistan desire peace. So do the people of every country in the world. Yet in the name of peace, policies have been pursued by some countries which have created a dangerous situation which is continually leading away from any firm peace and which might well lead to the most terrible of wars. We, in India, have endeavoured to follow a foreign policy which we feel is not only in the interests of world peace but is particularly indicated for the countries of Asia. That policy is an independent one and of non-alignment with any power bloc. It is clear that the policy which Pakistan intends to pursue is different. It is one of alignment with one group of nations and, in particular, of close military association with one great nation. We are convinced that this is not the way to peace and that this will endanger the future of Asia, as well as that of the country which adopts it. You will thus observe a great difference between India’s approach to these problems and that of Pakistan. If our approaches are so different, the ends we strive for, or that are likely to take shape, are bound to be different. It is not enough to talk of peace; one has to shape one’s policy to that end. Otherwise, we go straight to the atomic bomb and all its progeny.

You accuse me of giving credence to highly coloured and speculative press reports. Most of these reports have emanated from America and often from the highest quarters there. The press of almost every country in the world has discussed this matter and drawn certain inevitable conclusion. If I am to blame, then a very large part of the world is also to blame. In any event, I have not seen any serious criticism from you or from Pakistan of what the press of other countries and notably that of the United States has said in regard to this matter.

I must, of course, accept your statement that there is no truth in the reports that Pakistan was entering into a military alliance with the USA or that America was establishing bases in Pakistan. But, it is clearly stated in America, and you have yourself confirmed it, that it is proposed that the USA should give military aid to Pakistan. That in itself is a significant fact.

You refer to India spending larger sums on strengthening her armed forces. I have no figures with me about the Defence budget of Pakistan. But I should like to inform you that you are not correct in what you say about India’s Defence expenditure. We have in fact, ever since the ceasefire in Kashmir reduced our army by over 60,000 men. This process is continuing. It is gradual because we do not wish to create more unemployment. In our desire to build up industry, we are spending considerable sums in erecting large plants, which have both civil and military uses.

The fact that some talks relating to military aid to Pakistan have been taking place has drawn worldwide attention. I should like you to consider why this is so. There must be something unusual about it to produce this result. Any such military aid necessarily changes the situations in South Asia vary greatly. It means that Pakistan is tied up in a military sense with the USA and is aligned to that particular group of powers. It affects the situation in the Middle East, and you will have noticed the adverse reactions to this in the countries of the Middle East. India is, of course, even more interested in this as it is likely to produce an entirely new situation. That new situation does not depend so much on the quantity of military aid received, but more so on the fact of such free aid coming to Pakistan. This produces a qualitative change in the existing situation and, therefore, it affects Indo-Pakistan relations, and, more especially, the Kashmir problem.

During the last two years or more, we have discussed the Kashmir problem with Dr Graham. One of the subjects which was the question of demilitarization. Naturally, this was considered in the context of the then existing situation in India and Pakistan. If that situation changes basically, as it will no doubt change if military aid is obtained by Pakistan from the USA, then the premises along which we proceeded have changed. The new situation has to be considered afresh and from different premises.

I have already informed you of another grave difficulty which confronts us now. That is the question of the Plebiscite Administrator. It is totally inconceivable to us to accept any representative of a great power as Plebiscite Administrator. It is only after this point has been clearly settled that we can consider any other matter. It is not enough to say that a decision on this can be deferred and, meanwhile, other matters can be considered.

You have referred to the references in our press to the proposals for military aid to Pakistan. As I have said above, the press of the world has dealt with this matter and drawn its own conclusions, which are usually not different from those of the Indian press. It is quite natural for the Indian press to deal fully with a matter of the greatest moment which has attracted public attention so much.

Your High Commissioner has presented us with a memorandum protesting against certain meeting and demonstrations which are being held in India to express concern at these new developments. Public organizations have to deal with public opinion and to give a lead to it where necessary. Because of the importance of this matter, it became desirable for our national organization to deal with it and to direct people’s minds in right channels. Otherwise, they would have followed a wrong track. So far as I know, there has been no untoward event. We have in fact tried to avoid these demonstrations having any anti-Pakistan character and have stressed the friendship of our respective peoples.....

I agree with you that we are in danger of losing all the ground we have so far gained. But I would like you to consider who is to blame for this. This unfortunate development is the direct result of the proposal for the United States to give military aid to Pakistan. Instead of ensuring peace, it has made people think much more in terms of conflict and war. So far as the countries of Asia are concerned, this is a danger signal of foreign powers attaining great influence which is not compatible with true independence. This is evident enough in Asia today and requires little proof.

Yours sincerely
Jawaharlal Nehru

Hon’ble Mr. Mohammad Ali,
Prime Minister of Pakistan
Karachi, Pakistan

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
New Delhi, January 18, 1954

My dear Prime Minister,

* * *

5. I have already written to you fully about the talks, which have apparently been taking place in regard to military aid from the United States of America to Pakistan. I do not propose to repeat what I have said before. But I might point out that what you are reported to have said in an interview*, which has appeared in the US News and World Report, takes the matter very much further than any previous statement. I am sorry that you do not appreciate the vital difference that this has made to our approach to many problems. I do not and cannot challenge your Government’s right to take any step it chooses. But, when that step is, according to our thinking, of vital significance to the peace and security of Asia and affects India directly, we cannot ignore it, and we have to think of other problems in relation to this new and, what we consider, dangerous development. The total difference in our outlook is exemplified when you say that such aid given to Pakistan will add to the security of India. We think that we have nothing to fear from the attack of any country, but lining up with one of the power blocs brings insecurity and danger, apart from this being a step away from peace.

6. The position therefore, is that we should like to know exactly how matters are likely to stand in regard to this military aid before we can decide about other policies.

7. You will no doubt have observed that this proposal that the US should give military aid to Pakistan has been considered by almost every country in Europe or Asia as a vital development in the world situation. This is not so much because of Pakistan or India, but because a great world power, namely, the USA, is spreading out in Asia. This has very far-reaching consequences and we are compelled, therefore, to think of the new situation that has arisen.

---

* In an interview to the US News and World Report on January 15, 1954 Mohammad Ali asserted that Nehru was not afraid of aggression from Pakistan, but was protesting against US aid for fear of losing his bargaining power between the two power blocs and “is trying to pursue a course of neutrality and gather around him a bloc of smaller nations. By holding the balance of power, he wants to dominate the two power blocs. If there is another power strong enough to give the lead to other smaller nations, then Nehru’s bargaining position is weakened.”
This situation is in direct conflict with what we have been striving for in Asia and in the largest context of the world.

8. Because of this vital change, there has been strong reaction to it all over India, which may well be considered as unanimous. As head of a great democratic organization in India, I have to give a lead to that organization as to how to deal with this new situation. I have done so, and propose to continue to do so, stressing always our desire for friendly relations with Pakistan. In fact, the lead we gave has had a sobering effect all over the country.

* * * * *

Yours sincerely
Jawaharlal Nehru

1734. Letter from the US President Eisenhower delivered by the US Ambassador to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

I send you this personal message because I want you to know about my decision to extend military aid to Pakistan before it is public knowledge and also because I want you to know directly from me that this step does not in any way affect the friendship we feel for India. Quite the contrary. We will continually strive to strengthen the warm and enduring friendship between our two countries.

Our two governments have agreed that our desires for peace are in accord. It has also been understood that if our interpretation of existing circumstances and our belief in how to achieve our goals differ, it is the right and duty of sovereign nations to make their own decision. Having studied long and carefully the problem of opposing possible aggression in the Middle East, I believe that consultation between Pakistan and Turkey about security problems will serve the interests not only of Pakistan and Turkey, but also of the whole free world. Improvement in Pakistan’s defensive capabilities will also serve these interests and it is for this reason that our aid will be given. The Government’s views on this subject are elaborated in a public statement I will release, a copy of which the Ambassador will give you.

What we are proposing to do, and what Pakistan is agreeing to, is not directed in any way against India. And I am confirming publicly that if our aid to any country, including Pakistan, is misused and directed against another in aggression, I will undertake immediately, in accordance with my constitutional authority, appropriate action, both within and without the United Nations to thwart such aggression. I believe the Pakistan-Turkey collaboration agreement which is being discussed is sound evidence of the defensive purposes which both countries have in mind.

I know that you and your Government are keenly aware of the need for economic progresses a prime requisite for stability and strength. This Government has extended assistance to India in recognition of this fact, and I am recommending to Congress a continuation of substantial economic and technical aid for this reason. We also believe it in the interest of the free world that India have strong military defense capability and have admired the effective way your Government has administered your military establishment. If your Government should conclude that circumstances require military aid of a type contemplated by our mutual security legislation, please be assured that your request would receive my most sympathetic consideration.

I regret that there has been such widespread and unfounded speculation on this subject. Now that the facts are known, I hope that the real import of our decision will be understood.

I am, my dear Mr. Prime Minister,

Sincerely

Dwight D. Eisenhower

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1735. Statement by US President Eisenhower on military assistance to Pakistan.

On February 19, Turkey and Pakistan announced their intention to study methods of achieving closer collaboration on various matters including means designed towards strengthening peace and security. This Government welcomed this move and called it a constructive step towards better ensuring the security of the whole area of the Middle East. The Government of Pakistan has now asked the United States for grant of military assistance.

I have said repeatedly that regional groupings to ensure security against aggression constitute the most effective means to assure survival and progress. No nation can stand alone today. My report to the Congress on June 30, 1953 stated that we should strengthen efforts towards regional political, military and economic integration. I, therefore, under the authority granted by the Congress, am glad to comply with Pakistan's request, subject to the negotiation of the required Mutual Defense Assistance Program Agreement. This Government has been gravely concerned over the weakness of the defensive capabilities in the Middle East. It was with the purpose of helping to increase the defense potential in this area that Congress in its last session appropriated funds to be used to assist those nations in the area which desired such assistance, which would pledge their willingness to promote international peace and security within the framework of the United Nations, and which would take effective collective measures to prevent and remove threats to peace.

Let me make it clear that we shall be guided by the stated purposes and requirements of the mutual security legislation. These include specifically the provision that equipment, materials or services provided will be used solely to maintain the recipient country's internal security and for its legitimate self-defense, or to permit it to participate in the defense of the area of which it is a part. Any recipient country also must undertake that it will not engage in any act of aggression against any other nation. These undertakings afford adequate assurance to all nations, regardless of their political orientation and whatever their international policies may be, that the arms the United States provides for the defense of the free world will in no way threaten their own security. I can say that if our aid to any country, including Pakistan, is misused and directed against another in aggression, I will undertake immediately, in accordance with my constitutional authority, appropriate action both within and without the United Nations to thwart such aggression. I would also consult with the Congress on further steps.

The United States earnestly desires that there be increased stability and strength in the Middle East, as it has desired this same thing in other parts of the free world. It believes that the aspirations of the peoples in this area for maintaining and developing their way of life and for realizing the social advances close to their hearts will be best served by strength to deter aggression and to reduce the fear of aggression. The United States is prepared to help in this endeavour, if its help is wanted.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1736. Letter of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to President of the United States Dwight D. Eisenhower in reply to the latter’s letter of February 24, 1954.

New Delhi, February 28, 1954.

I thank you for your personal message which your Ambassador in Delhi handed to me on February 24th. With this message was a copy of your statement in regard to the military aid being given by the United States to Pakistan. I appreciate the assurance you have given. You are, however, aware of the views of my Government and our people in regard to this matter. Those views and the policy which we have pursued, after the most careful thought are based on our desire to help in the furtherance of peace and freedom. We shall continue to pursue that policy.

Yours sincerely
Jawaharlal Nehru

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

New Delhi, March 4, 1954.

...I should like to add a few more words in regard to this matter. In his letter, President Eisenhower, as the House knows, gave certain assurances and stated what his objectives or motives were. I have at no time in this House challenged any individual’s or any country’s motives. I cannot go behind their motives. We have to consider facts as they are. So far as President Eisenhower is concerned, on my part I am convinced that certainly, he bears no ill-will to India; he wishes well of India, and that he would not take any step to injure India. It is not a question of motives, but rather of certain results which inevitably follow certain actions, and it has seemed to us in regard to this matter of military aid to Pakistan, that the results were bound to be unfortunate. It is stated that the aid is merely meant to strengthen Pakistan so that it can defend itself against aggression, and also to ensure security and peace. It is not clear to me what kind of aggression and from what quarter it is feared. I am unable to see any danger of aggression on Pakistan from any quarter; but perhaps to throw light on this question, the Pakistan delegate to the United Nations, Mr. Ahmed Bokhari, only a day or two ago spoke in New York, and made it clear as to what his fears were. He said: “we want the guarantee that the two biggest countries in Asia will leave us alone.” He referred to China and India. Now, it is not again clear to me how China is going to invade Pakistan — whether it is going to come over the Karakoram Pass into Pakistan, or how it is going to get there. As for India, it is not necessary for me to remind the House as to what our attitude has been. I may say a little about it later.

So far as ensuring security and peace are concerned, one need not go into any argument about it. It is a fact that since this aid has been announced there has been greater insecurity and greater tension. Whatever, as I said, the motives may be, the result, the fact, is there — that there has been in India, in Pakistan, an upsetting of things as they were and a sense of insecurity. In other countries in Asia, West and others, there has also been a sense of the situation becoming, if I may say so, “fluid”, and a certain apprehension as to what the consequences might be.

Now, so far as India is concerned, the House will remember that for the last three years we have repeatedly offered a No-War Declaration to Pakistan. A No-War Declaration is what is called in perhaps more precise language a Non-Aggression Pact. Now we have offered that repeatedly and Pakistan has been repeatedly rejecting that for whatever reason it may be. If there had been such a No-War Declaration or Non-Aggression Pact, obviously that would have eased tension between the two countries and in surrounding areas and produced a greater felling of security in both countries. It would have helped us to solve the problems that face us. Now it is in the context of this rejection of our proposal for a No-War Declaration that we have to view this military aid from the United States to Pakistan. I venture to say that it is not easy to even imagine any aggression on Pakistan as things are, either from that great country China, or from India, regardless, I say, of motives about it. I am looking at the barest physical possibilities of the matter.

How then does this question of aggression arise and is made a pretext for this kind of military aid being given, from Pakistan’s side? I am wholly unaware of any possible reason which I can understand. For my part, I would welcome the strengthening of Pakistan, economically, even militarily, in the normal sense – if they build themselves up I have no complaint. But this is not a normal procedure. This is a very abnormal procedure, upsetting normality, and in so far as it upsets normality it is a step away from peace.

Now, the President of the United States has stated that if the aid given to Pakistan is misused and directed against another country in aggression he will undertake to thwart such aggression. I have no doubt that the President is opposed to aggression. But we know from past experience that aggression takes place and nothing done to thwart it. Aggression took place in Kashmir six and a half years ago with dire consequences. Nevertheless, the United States have not thus far condemned it and we are asked not to press this point in the interests of peace! Aggression may take place again and be denied; as the previous aggression was denied till it could not be hidden. If conditions are created for such an aggression to take place it may well follow, in spite of the desire of the United States to prevent it. Later, long arguments will be carried on as to whether it was aggression or not. The military aid given by the United States to Pakistan is likely to create the conditions which facilitate and encourage aggression.

The President of the United States has been good enough to suggest that he would consider sympathetically any request from us for military aid. In making this suggestion the President has done less than justice to us or to himself. If we object to military aid being given to Pakistan, we would be hypocrites and unprincipled opportunists to accept such aid ourselves.

As I have said repeatedly, this grant of military aid by the United States to Pakistan creates a grave situation for us in India and for Asia. It adds to our tensions. It makes it much more difficult to solve the problems which have confronted India and Pakistan. It is vitally necessary for India and Pakistan to solve these problems and to develop friendly and co-operative relations which their geographical position as neighbours as well as their long common history demand. These problems can only be solved by the two countries themselves and not by the intervention of others. It is, indeed, this intervention of other countries in the past that has come in the way of their solution. Recently a new and more friendly atmosphere had been created between India and Pakistan, and by direct consultations between the two Prime Ministers progress was being made towards the solution of these problems. That progress has now been checked and fresh difficulties have arisen.

The military aid being given by the United States to Pakistan is a form of intervention in these problems which is likely to have more far-reaching results than the previous types of intervention.

At the present moment there is a considerable number of American Observers attached to the United Nations team on either side of the “cease-fire” line in the Jammu and Kashmir State. These American Observers can no longer be treated by us as neutrals in this dispute, and hence their presence there appears to us to be improper.

I have referred previously to the wider aspects of this aid, aspects which may affect the whole of Asia. Many countries in Asia have recovered their freedom after long years of colonial subjection. They prize their freedom, and any intervention which lessens their freedom is considered by us to be harmful and a step away from both freedom and peace.

Recently, on the 26th of January the Assistant Secretary of State in the United States, Mr. Walter S. Robertson, made a statement to the House Appropriations Sub-Committee of the Congress of the United States of America. Now, I have no official record of the statement. The statement was made on January 26th. It was released, I believe, on February 23rd or 24th. I have to rely on Press reports on which I have two, which are not identical though the meaning perhaps is much the same. One Press report states that he told the House Appropriations Sub-Committee of the Congress that the U.S.A. must dominate Asia for an indefinite period and pose a military threat against Communist China until it breaks up internally. Another report says that the U.S. must hold a posture of strength in Asia for an indefinite period till those results follow. Whether it is a posture of strength or clear domination- I do not know what the exact words were – the idea behind it appears to be much the same. This testimony, as I said, was made public about five days ago. It is known that India’s policy in regard to the people’s Government of China differs from that of the U.S.A. We have recognised this Government in China and have friendly relations with it. Our two policies, therefore, in this respect are wholly opposed to each other. What is more important is that a responsible official of the U.S. should say that it is their policy that the U.S.A. must dominate Asia for an indefinite period.
Whatever the objective may be, the countries of Asia, and certainly India, do not accept this policy and do not propose to be dominated by any country for whatever purpose. It is in this wider context that we must view these recent developments and more especially the military aid to Pakistan.

The Prime Minister of Pakistan has stated that by the receipt of this military aid, a momentous step forward has been taken towards the strengthening of the Muslim world and that Pakistan has now entered a glorious chapter in its history and is now cast for a significant role in world affairs. It is not for me to criticize what the Pakistan Prime Minster says, but I have endeavoured to understand how the Muslim world is going to be strengthened through arms supplied by a Foreign Power, and how any country is going to play a significant role in world affairs relying on military aid from another country.

The Prime Minister of Pakistan has also stated that this military aid will help to solve the Kashmir problem. That is an indication of the way his mind works and how he thinks this military aid might be utilized. Military aid is only utilized in war or in a threat of war.

There is another aspect which I should like to mention. These separate pacts between countries take place, some of them in the nature of military alliances. It is for us and others to consider how far they are in consonance with the spirit of the U.N. Charter, even with the letter, I might say. But, I am not for the moment speaking in legal or juristic terms. The United Nations was formed for a particular purpose and the Charter lays down that purpose. I would like the House to consider – this is not the time to discuss this matter how far those purposes are being furthered by all these developments that we see in regard to countries linking up militarily against other countries, both sides often being represented in the United Nations.

Also it is becoming rather significant how discussions on particular vital matters affecting world peace are avoided in the United Nations General Assembly, and when something is discussed, previous decisions have been taken which almost appear to be imposed upon the United Nations in the General Assembly. That I submit is not the way either to work the United Nations to fulfill the purposes of the Charter or to remove the tensions of the world, instead of bringing about by feeling of security?

There is another small matter - not a small but relevant matter – relating to Kashmir. The House will remember its long history and how for the last two years among the questions being discussed has been the quantum of forces to be left in Kashmir with a view to having afterwards a plebiscite; that is, a reduction of forces- sometimes it is called demilitarization. There has thus far been no agreement on that issue. Now the whole issue has to be considered from an entirely different point of view when across the border, across the “cease-fire” line on the other side, large additional forces are being thrust from outside in Pakistan and put at the disposal of Pakistan. It does make a difference. I said some time back, that this military aid was changing the balance of things in India and Asia. I was not thinking so much of the relative military strength of Pakistan or India, although that of course is a relevant matter, but I was rather thinking of all these other aspects, to some of which I have drawn the attention of the House.

India has no intention of surrendering or bartering her freedom for any purpose or under any compulsion whatever.

In this grave situation that has arisen this House and the country will, I have no doubt stand united. This is no Party matter, but a national issue, on which there can be no two opinions.

1738. Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru for the Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 19, 1954.

In my letters to the Pakistan Prime Minister, I stated that there was no point in officials meeting to consider the preliminaries to the appointment of a Plebiscite Administrator. If the officials could not agree on the last occasion, when the US military aid was not so much a live issue, much less were they likely to agree now. I made it clear that those preliminaries, more especially, the question of the quantum of forces on our side in Kashmir had to be viewed on a new standpoint and we were not prepared to lessen our forces in view of this development. In other words, we want perfect freedom to make such dispositions of forces in the Jammu and Kashmir State as we consider necessary in view of the addition of strength to Pakistan by the military aid. This is now the approach to one of these important preliminary issues. If that issue could be settled on the lines we have suggested, that is, leaving us free to keep any number of forces there that we consider proper (and the number would depend on the situation as it develops on the other side), then the next step can be taken and other preliminaries can be settled.

We have not basically changed our position in regard to Kashmir. It remains what it was, concluding the question of a Plebiscite Administrator. But a Plebiscite Administrator will have to be clearly a neutral and impartial person. We cannot consider any American even a neutral now, apart from our previous objection to a representative of the great powers. The Plebiscite Administrator can only be appointed after the preliminaries are settled. We are, therefore, stuck on the preliminaries which have taken a new aspect because of this military aid.

That is more or less the position at present.

Of course all these new developments, including the elections in East Pakistan and their consequences, have to be watched. The present moment is one of complete flux in Pakistan and till we see what emerges out of this, it is difficult to take any steps forward.

So far as a ‘No-War declaration’ is concerned, I have repeatedly put it forward and there is nothing more to be said on my part. If Pakistan agrees to that on the lines suggested by us, we would certainly consider the question. Our High Commissioner can, when opportunity arises, repeat this position of ours. He need not ask the Pakistan PM to write to me especially and put forward his proposals. My letters have already been sent and it is up to the Pakistan PM to send a reply when he chooses.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1739. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha.

New Delhi, March 29, 1956.

* * *

It is clear that the approach of military pacts, like the Baghdad Pact and SEATO is a wrong approach, a dangerous approach and a harmful approach. It sets in motion all the wrong tendencies and prevents the right tendencies from developing ....

As the House knows, the Baghdad Pact has in fact created in Western Asia far greater tension and conflict than ever before. It has certainly put one country against another among countries that were friendly to one another. I do not know how anyone can say that this has brought security and stability to Western Asia.

Hon, Members know that the Baghdad Pact is said to be the northern or middle tier of defence, and presumably it is meant for defence against aggression if it takes place from the Soviet Union... But, surely, nobody here imagines that the Pakistan Government entered into this Pact because it expected some imminent or distant invasion or aggression from the Soviet Union. The Pakistan make it perfectly clear that they have joined this Pact because of India. Either they are apprehensive of India, or they want to develop strength and, as the phrase now goes, speak from strength. Whatever it is, they have joined the Baghdad Pact and SEATO essentially because of their hostility to India. I am sorry, because I do not feel hostility towards them and I cannot conceive of a war with Pakistan without the utmost dismay. My point is that people enter into these pacts with different motives. I am quite sure that the other members of the Baghdad Pact have no hostility to India, even as I am equally sure that India was the motive of Pakistan when it entered into this Pact...

ificado your text.
anxiously telegraphed for them) were unhappy and full of foreboding. On the question of the possible purchase of Soviet bombers, I had been relieved to learn that we had, not long ago, decided not to go in for these aircraft. The High Commissioner was in India when I learnt this. But the reports of the discussions in Delhi made it apparent that we were being drawn to it again--we were being pushed into this arms race, completely, against our will. Now, Mountbatten, seems to have reassured us in some ways again. I do hope we will get from you some notes on these, once again, crucial discussions.

4. You will recollect that, in some recent letters, I had reported my discussions with Oilbert Laithwaite and Lord Home, in which I had, rather forcefully, complained to them that, despite ourselves, were being pushed into speeding up our arms purchases--e.g., the Centurion tanks--because the accepted Military ratio was being deliberately upset against us by the American arms deliveries to Pakistan. This has led to a very salutary suggestion that we might be openly kept informed of the actual arms deliveries to Pakistan from American sources. The whole idea was, of course, rather vague and quite amateurish. In your reply of 21st February, you have agreed that if such a suggestion were made, it was hardly likely to find favour with the USA and there would be hardly any guarantee that it would be faithfully carried out.

5. I was myself of this view when I wrote to you on the 15th February. But, to tell you the truth, all the recent happenings and the high level talks in Delhi, as also the near decision that we should buy Soviet bombers--to say nothing of our recent serious border troubles--all this has recently made me fall back, and again, on the possibility of having the idea really seriously examined; that Pakistan should not obtain secret deliveries of arms from the USA; may be persuaded to openly keep us informed of these deliveries; and UK & USA should ensure that in any arms deliveries to Pakistan, the accepted ratio of military strength between our two countries should not substantially be altered. It also fits in with what is really behind the Western objection to the Czech arms deliveries to Egypt.

6. Is America seriously likely to resist the suggestion, if this is put to her? After all, it is not something very different from what is contemplated by Eisenhower himself on a world-wide scale, when he talks about armament disclosures and "open skies". I think the Prime Minister has somewhere welcomed the "open skies" idea, as a possible step in disarmament and the reduction of world tension. Why can we not seriously work out the idea, practically, on a limited, geographical plane, and try and apply it to India and Pakistan?

7. If Pakistan can be persuaded to accept the idea, in principle, I see no insuperable obstacle to working out the practical details. It may not be easy. It may be difficult. But the difficulties are only there to be overcome, after all.
8. I am confident that the UK would be prepared to back the proposition that the 1/2 : 2/3 ratio of military strength should be maintained between our two countries. By population and geographical area, the world would accept the view that some such ratio would be more than fair to Pakistan.

9. Our threat of being compelled to go to the Soviet Union for arms, if the balance is going to be upset – and they should, by now, know that it is a very practical threat – should itself lead to USA being pressured into accepting some such proposition. I do not see how USA could refuse to give the matter serious consideration if it is pointed out that the genesis of this is Eisenhower's own open skies proposition.

10. In short, the idea is not impractical, in my opinion. One could enlarge on this a great deal. A number of corollaries come to my mind. But I will not fog the central issue by dilating on it. If we fail to persuade Pakistan – as we have failed in other matters – we have the satisfaction of having made one more major effort of reducing the tension between our two countries. I would earnestly urge that the matter be considered on practical plane.

Yours sincerely

(Y.D. Gundevia)

Shri M.J. Desai, I.C.S.,
Commonwealth Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi

----------
Statement issued by the U.S. State Department “Warning Against Attacks on Baghdad Pact Members”.

“The President of Pakistan, the Prime Ministers of Iraq, Turkey and Pakistan, and the Foreign Minister of Iran in their recent meeting at Baghdad have reaffirmed their determination to further a peaceful and lasting settlement of current Middle Eastern problems.

“In recent days we have indeed seen grave threats to the peace and security of the world. The action of the United Nations has brought the fighting in the Near East to an end and the world community has a new opportunity to work in accordance with the United Nations Charter.

“In their dedicated efforts to maintain peace, representatives of Iran, Iraq, Pakistan and Turkey have within past weeks, met, first in Teheran and then in Baghdad, in order to bring to bear both their influence and wisdom in the interest of the nations of the free world. Throughout the period of the crisis, these countries clearly revealed their faith in the Charter and their determination that the peace, not only of the area in which they find themselves, but of the whole world, must be preserved.

“The United States, from the inception of the Baghdad Pact, supported the pact and the principles of collective security on which it is based. Through its own bilateral arrangements with Pact members in the Middle East area and its active membership in certain of the pact's committees, the United States has revealed its readiness to assist in measures to strengthen the security of those nations.

“The United States reaffirms its support for the collective efforts of these nations to maintain their independence. A threat to the territorial integrity or political independence of the members would be viewed by the United States with the utmost gravity.”

◆◆◆◆◆
1742. United States Congress Joint Resolution to Promote Peace and Stability in the Middle East signed by the US President Dwight Eisenhower on March 9, 1957.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled.

That the President be and hereby is authorized to cooperate with and assist any nation or group of nations in the general area of the Middle East desiring such assistance in the development of economic strength dedicated to the maintenance of national independence.

SEC.2. The President is authorized to undertake, in the general area of the Middle East, military assistance programmes with any nation or group of nations of that area desiring such assistance. Furthermore, the United States regards as vital to the national interest and world peace the preservation of the independence and integrity of the nations of the Middle East. To this end, if the President determines the necessity thereof, the United States is prepared to use armed forces to assist any such nation or group of such nations requesting assistance against armed aggression from any country controlled by International Communism;

Provided, that such employment shall be consonant with the treaty obligations of the United States and with the Constitution of the United States.

SEC.3. The President is hereby authorized to use during the balance of fiscal year 1957 for economic and military assistance under this joint resolution not to exceed $200,000,000 from any appropriation now available for carrying out the provisions of the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, in accord with the provisions of such Act:

Provided, that whenever the President determines it to be important to the security of the United States, such use may be under the authority of Section 401 (a) of the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended (except that the provisions of section 105(a) thereof shall not be waived), and without regard to the provisions of Section 105 of the Mutual Security Appropriation Act, 1957:

Provided further, that obligations incurred in carrying out the purposes of the first sentence of Section 2 of this joint resolution shall be paid only out of appropriations for military assistance, and obligations incurred in carrying out the purposes of the first section of this joint resolution shall be paid only out of appropriations other than those for military assistance.

This authorization is in addition to other existing authorizations with respect to the use of such appropriations. None of the additional authorization contained in this section shall be used until fifteen days after the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives and, when military assistance is involved, the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives have been furnished a report showing the object of the proposed use, the country for the benefit of which such use is intended, and the particular appropriation or appropriations for carrying out the provisions of the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended from which the funds are proposed to be derived:

Provided, that funds available under this section during the balance of fiscal year 1957 shall, in the case of any such report submitted during the last fifteen days of the fiscal year, remain available for use under this section for the purposes stated in such report for a period of twenty days, following the date of submission of such report.

Nothing contained in this joint resolution shall be construed as itself authorizing the appropriation of additional funds for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the first section or of the first sentence of section 2 of this joint resolution.

SEC. 4. The President should continue to furnish facilities and military assistance, within the provisions of applicable law and established policies, to the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East, with a view to maintaining the truce in that region.

SEC. 5. The President shall within the months of January and July of each year report to the Congress his actions hereunder.

SEC. 6. This joint resolution shall expire when the President shall determine that the peace and security of the nation in the general area of the Middle East are reasonably assured by international conditions created by action of the United Nation or otherwise except that it may be terminated earlier by a concurrent resolution of the two House of Congress.
1743. Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, April 8, 1957.

I agree with Shri Krishna Menon that the extract from the Bengali paper* issued by the USIS is not something which should be casually dealt with or ignored. The last sentence in that extract is an assurance to Pakistan that the US will come to her aid. It is true this is said in the context of India attacking Pakistan. Even so, it is highly undesirable. But, apart from this, the effect of such a sentence can only be to encourage Pakistan in her aggressive attitude and threats to India.

2. We are entitled to know formally from the US Government whether this represents the US policy.

3. In this connection, Mr. Richard’s recent statements in Pakistan and Pakistan being brought under the Eisenhower Middle East Doctrine, are also evidence of some definite policy against India. This taken together with the various statements made by Mr. Hildreth, who was lately US Ambassador in Pakistan, indicates a certain policy, and we should request the US Government to clarify this matter. I think, it would probably be desirable for a brief aide-memoire to be prepared, which can be handed to the US Ambassador here.

4. Then, there is the question of Mr. Dulles’s reported answer to a question about Kashmir. We have already asked for a correct report of this. If the report we receive, is on the lines of what appeared in the press, we shall have to take this up also, though I think, this should be taken up separately.

5. We have already drawn the attention of the US Ambassador to the very considerable military aid from the US to Pakistan. He goes on repeating that this is not much and that India is far stronger and need not have any

---

* In a USIS weekly in Bengali issued from Dhaka on 16 March, 1957 it was suggested that India might attack Pakistan and that the Kashmir issue was to be settled by the UN. Krishna Menon’s view was that the Indian Government should take the US - Pakistan issue more seriously and take it up with the US Government.

 Richards, Special Assistant to President Eisenhower, had said in Karachi on 30 March that he made tentative allocations for Pakistan from the funds approved for putting into operation the Eisenhower Doctrine. US Ambassador Hildreth said in Peshawar on 8 March, that “America has helped Pakistan in her demand for a fair plebiscite in Kashmir and supported her in all her legitimate demands.” The Times of India (Bombay) reported Hildreth’s view, expressed on the same occasion, that Pakistan had the “unqualified support” of the US and UK for her demand for a plebiscite in Kashmir. On 18 February in Dhaka, Hildreth expressed his appreciation of Pakistan’s growing military strength.
apprehensions. I think that we should now give him a concise statement, based on the information we have received, of the military aid to Pakistan in the course of the last year or so. FS has got a note on this, which he received from Intelligence. A summary should be prepared of this, giving the important factors in regard to armour, aircraft, airfields, etc., and this should be handed to the American Ambassador.

6. Minister Without Portfolio should see this note.

1744. Note of the Soviet Union to the Government of Pakistan expressing concern on Pakistan’s membership of the military alliances.

Moscow, April 15, 1958.

The Soviet Union, as is known, entertains deep sympathy towards all peoples of the East and welcomes any step of Afro-Asian countries aimed at consolidating their independence and sovereignty, uplifting their economy and national couture.

Righteous aspirations of these countries have always met and will meet with complete understanding on the part of the Soviet Government.

Friendly relations of the Soviet Union with many countries of the East develop and strengthen on the basis of the five well-known principles; mutual respect for territorial integrity and sovereignty, non-aggression, non-interference with each other’s internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, and peaceful co-existence. It is a firm belief of the Soviet Government that the relations between the USSR and Pakistan could have developed on the solid ground of the above mentioned principles to a great benefit for both States.

However the Soviet Government is forced to admit with regret that, due to the reasons which are beyond its control, the relations between the USSR and Pakistan leave much to be desired.

Pakistan, as is known is a member of military-political alliances which are hostile to the USSR, such as the Baghdad Pact and SEATO, dominant role in which is played by Western powers – inspirers of NATO, the main aggressive bloc. Aggressive and colonialist nature of the said military bloc has most clearly revealed itself lately, when certain members of these blocs
At the last Baghdad Pact Council Session in Ankara Pakistan demanded the rearmament of the Pact countries with the most modern weapons. Judging from numerous comments in the press of various countries, it meant the atomic and rocket weapons.

In this connection, war preparations extensively carried out in Pakistan arouse attention.

According to the information available to the Soviet Government, intensive work on the construction of launching grounds for guided missiles was started in 1957 in a number of areas on the territory of West Pakistan, i.e. in the immediate neighbourhood of the borders of the Soviet Union. Such launching grounds are built in the areas of Quetta, Gilgit and Peshawar. Besides, the construction of launching grounds for guided missiles is planned in a number of other regions of West Pakistan. Thus, in West Pakistan the construction of military installations is going on, which are intended for launching rocket missiles, brought to Pakistan from outside, which, undoubtedly, creates danger first of all for Pakistan’s neighbours.

Apart from the construction of launching grounds, the reconstruction and building of military air bases and aerodromes is underway in West Pakistan. So, for example, in the region of Karachi, Kohat, Peshawar, Quetta, Gilgit, Risalpur and Sargodha military airfields are built with runways of about 4km. long, intended for landing modern bombers of strategic aviation. All the construction work mentioned above is carried out under the direct supervision of the U.S. Army Engineering Corps with the participation of the American firm “Oman, Farnsworth & Wright”.

The Pakistan governmental circles explain the intensive military preparations, carried out under the direct assistance of the USA, referring to the alleged necessity of strengthening the “defence” of Pakistan. It is well-known however, that no one is going to attack Pakistan. It is quite evident that the launching grounds for guided missiles and aerodromes for strategic aviation bombers, which, as one knows, the Pakistan Government does not possess, are being erected in Pakistan to be used by the armed forces of the USA, and other partners of Pakistan in military-political bloc, for aggressive purposes.

Taking into account the geographical proximity of Pakistan to the Soviet borders and considering the interests of its own security, as well as the interests of preserving peace in the region of Asia, the Soviet Union, naturally, cannot pass by the above mentioned facts.

In this connection the Soviet Government approaches the Government of Pakistan with a friendly appeal to give the present international situation a more sober consideration and to think of what grave consequences will inevitably await Pakistan if its territory will be allowed for the establishment of military bases with the purposes of using them against the Soviet Union and other peace-loving countries. The Soviet Government has repeatedly stated that in case of aggressive actions against the USSR, the latter will be forced to use all the means at its disposal to launch a counter-bow upon the aggressor as well as upon the aggressor’s bases on foreign territories. Any state being attacked would act likewise. This is its natural right and duty.

Approaching the Government of Pakistan with this statement the Soviet Government is guided only by the interests of strengthening friendship between the Soviet Union and Pakistan, the interests of their peoples.

The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics hopes that the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan will give this statement due consideration.

◆◆◆◆◆
1745. Reply Note of the Pakistan Government to the Soviet Note expressing concern on Pakistan’s Membership of Military Alliances.

The Government of Pakistan is gratified at the expression of deep sympathy by the Soviet Union for the peoples of Asia in their efforts to consolidate national independence and sovereignty, and to achieve progress in the economic and cultural spheres. It is also heartening to be informed that their righteous aspirations will continue to receive the support of the Government of the U.S.S.R.

2. Pakistan has always been desirous of establishing friendly and cordial relations with all her neighbours, among whom the greatest and the most important is the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics. It will be recalled that in the past people inhabiting the territory which now constitutes Pakistan have had close cultural and economic relations with the inhabitants of what are now some of the Constituent Republics of the Soviet Union, and in spite of the differences of ideology and economic systems, Pakistan would have liked to re-establish similar relations of amity with the U.S.S.R. on a basis of mutual understanding and peaceful co-existence. Pakistan is, however, constrained to say that the Soviet Union has continuously misunderstood the policy adopted by Pakistan.

3. The policy of Pakistan is based on the ten principles enunciated at Bandung in 1955 by the twenty four nations of Asia and Africa, which included the Peoples Republic of China as well as India. This Conference declared its conviction that friendly co-operation in accordance with their principles would effectively contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security. These principles enjoin mutual respect for: fundamental human rights and purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter, sovereignty and territorial integrity, justice and international obligations, the right of each nation to defend itself singly or collectively, in conformity with the United Nations Charter, the equality of all races and nations; and recommend: non-intervention with each other’s internal affairs, non-aggression, settlement of all disputes by peaceful means, abstention from the use of arrangements of collective defense for the interests of any of the big powers, and promotion of mutual interests and co-operation. All of these admirable principles are included in the United Nations Charter. When they were affirmed in Bandung, it was expected that the powers concerned would apply them in international relations. How far practice has deviated from precept is open for all to see.

4. In the interests of her own security and to strengthen economic and cultural co-operation with likeminded nations, who have interests in the region and have historic ties and cultural affinities with one another. Pakistan has entered into collective security arrangements, known as the Baghdad Pact and SEATO. These Pacts are purely defensive in intent and character and as such they are permissible both under Article 51 of the United Nations Charter and the Bandung principles. They are not directed against any country. This has been re-iterated several times in the most explicit terms. On 3rd June, 1957, addressing the Council of Ministers of the Baghdad Pact in Karachi, the Prime Minister of Pakistan said, “I declare categorically once again that we shall never be a party to any act of aggression against any country. Our participation in the Baghdad Pact is based on our vital interest in the maintenance of peace and security in the area in which we are located”. This remains the policy of Pakistan. The Soviet Union is herself associated in a politico-military alliance viz. the Warsaw Pact, her objections to other nations doing likewise are, therefore, not comprehensible.

5. The fact that the Baghdad Pact and SEATO alliances are instruments designed to maintain peace was forcefully illustrated when in 1956 peaceful conditions were disturbed in the Middle East. The area members of the Baghdad Pact, after their meeting at Tehran, made notable and successful efforts, both individually and in concert, to obtain a cessation of fighting and thus showed the peaceful and constructive nature of their association. It is undoubtedly true that these defensive alliances have increased the defence capacity of the nations concerned. This should be regarded as a contribution to world peace rather than otherwise, because the area of tensions has been reduced and people have been given a greater sense of security. If, unfortunately, threats to the peace of the area still exist, the fault lies with those countries who base their policies on direct or indirect aggressive designs.

6. In the interests of its defence every country wishes to equip its armed forces with the most modern weapons and Pakistan is no exception to this rule. The U.S.S.R. is herself busily engaged in the improvement of war weapons and the re-equipment of her forces. It is the right of a soldier, who is called upon to defend his country, to be supplied with the best available appliances consistent with the law of nations and international practice. For accuracy’s sake however, it is necessary to state that Prime Minister of Pakistan’s speech at Ankara, to which reference has been made, contained no mention of atomic weapons.

7. Pakistan is not making any war preparations against any country. She is trying to make aggression against her unprofitable. This is her natural right and national duty.

8. The Soviet Government’s information regarding the existence and construction of launching sites for guided missiles or rocket missiles is completely without foundation. There exists not a single launching site in the whole of Pakistan, leave alone areas in the proximity of the U.S.S.R. On the other hand, the U.S.S.R. has all type of military bases and weapons on her territory, several of them in close proximity to Pakistan and the Soviet Union’s note indicates clearly the danger which this can give rise to. Pakistan, of course, reserves the right to take all steps on her territory necessary for her own safety.

9. It is correct that some of the airfields in Pakistan are being equipped with proper runways. The equipment is of a defensive nature and does not disclose any offensive intentions. As is well-known, the Pakistan Air Force is now equipped with jet aircraft which require longer runways. These runways, however, are not suitable for taking aircraft of the strategic types.

10. It is also correct that in the work of improving military airfields, assistance is being obtained from foreign experts. This is because skills necessary for the purpose are not available in Pakistan. This position should be clear to the Soviet Union because she herself is giving similar assistance in the building of military airfields to countries in the neighbourhood of Pakistan.

11. Pakistan would feel very much easier in the mind if she could be as certain as the Soviet Union seems to be that nobody intends to attack Pakistan or commit aggression against her. Disputes, which threaten the vital interests of Pakistan, even her very existence have been deliberately allowed to drag on and all solutions proposed, whether bilaterally or through the United Nations, to resolve them have been spurned. It needs to be mentioned that the exercise of the right of veto in the Security Council to frustrate the solution of certain disputes has prevented the improvement of the relations between nations in the region and has contributed to the maintenance of tension and lack of security.

12. It has been most authoritatively stated in the past that there are no foreign military bases in Pakistan and that the Government of Pakistan would in no case allow its territory to be used for purposes of aggression. In spite of this the Soviet Union persists in repeating these baseless allegations. Pakistan, as a peace loving country, regrets this attitude of the Soviet Union, which is contrary to the professed desire for friendly relations between the two countries, and of which Pakistan cannot but takes serious note.

13. The Government of Pakistan as well as the People of Pakistan desire to live in peace. Pakistan is a new state, with resources as yet undeveloped, and can only hope to work for the progress of her people if peaceful conditions prevail in the world. She is, therefore, in favour of all steps calculated to reduce international tension. For these reasons Pakistan welcome the move to hold a conference of the great powers at the Summit. If the Soviet Union approaches the problems which confront the world with a genuine desire to reach agreement, success is certain. Pakistan believes that in order to achieve lasting peace, it is necessary first of all to remove suspicions and secondly to ensure complete non-interference.

14. Finally, Pakistan wishes to draw the attention of the Soviet Union to a problem, which is of vital importance to Pakistan and involves the future of four million inhabitants of the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Pakistan asks for no more than an opportunity for these people to exercise their right of self-determination. This is also their own repeatedly expressed and internationally recognized demand and has been re-iterated by their leaders, including Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah himself, who has been for this reason put into prison once again after a brief period of liberty. For over ten years this problem has remained unresolved. The partisan attitude shown by the Soviet Union in recent years is so patently divorced from the merits of the case and from all principles of justice and equity that it has created great bitterness and disappointment in Pakistan, in Kashmir and indeed throughout the Muslim world. Is it too much to expect that the righteous aspirations of the people of Jammu and Kashmir meet with understanding on the part of the great Soviet Union?

1. The members of the Baghdad Pact attending the Ministerial meeting in London have re-examined their position in the light of recent events and conclude that the need which called the pact into being is greater than ever. These members declare their determination to maintain their collective security and to resist aggression, direct or indirect.

2. Under the Pact collective security arrangements have been instituted. Joint military planning has been advanced and area economic projects have been promoted. Relationships are being established with other free world nations associated for collective security.

3. The question of whether substantive alternations should be made in the Pact and its organization or whether the Pact will be continued in its present form is under consideration by the Governments concerned. However, the nations represented at the meeting in London reaffirmed their determination to strengthen further their united defense posture in the area.
4. Article I of the Pact of Mutual Co-operation signed at Baghdad on February 24, 1955 provides that the parties will co-operate for their security and defense and that such measures as they agree to take to give effect to this co-operation may form the subject of special agreements. Similarly, the United States in the interest of world peace, and pursuant to existing Congressional authorization, agrees to co-operate with the nations making this Declaration for their security and defense, and will promptly enter into agreements designed to give effect to this co-operation.

Manouchehr Egbal               Malik Firoz Khan Noon
Prime Minister of Iran          Prime Minister of Pakistan

Adnan Menderes                   Harold Macmillan Prime Minister of Turkey        Prime Minister of the United Kingdom

John Foster Dulles
Secretary of State
United States of America

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Letter from Ambassador in Iran T. N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary S. Dutt.

Tehran, November 21, 1958.

Embassy of India
Tehran

No: AF. 297/3/58

Will you please refer to my Top Secret d.o. No. AF 297/2/58 dated 13th November 1958? The Soviet Ambassador left Tehran for Moscow on 9th November, apparently to attend a meeting of the Party Congress which is to be held in January 1959, but obviously to report on the developments regarding the US-Iran military agreement. The Soviet Embassy have been telling various representatives, particularly the UAR, the Iraqi, ourselves and others, that the proposed US-Iran military agreement will be in two parts—(1) guaranteeing the integrity and sovereignty of Iran against any outside aggression or internal subversion and (2) a secret agreement granting a chain of bases to the American fleet in the Persian Gulf linking them with American bases in Karachi and Gwadur.

I attach a copy of a note recorded by the Third Secretary, Shilendra Singh, with whom the Soviet Counsellor had a talk on the subject on 13-11-1958. The Soviet Counsellor came to see me yesterday morning and repeated the same arguments. I understand that he has been trying the same approach on the Iraqi and UAR Charges and asking them to make representations to their Governments.

2. When I saw the Foreign Minister, Dr. Hekmat, on 15th November, at his request, regarding Fadhil al-Jamali, I asked him whether there was any truth in the Soviet allegations and the various rumours that Iran was going to grant military bases to US Forces on its territory, with particular reference to the Persian Gulf. On that day he casually denied the allegation and evaded the subject. I met him again on the 19th and asked him categorically whether I could inform my Government officially on behalf of the Iranian Government that there was no truth in these rumours. He was more communicative on this occasion and said “You can certainly assure your Government that Iran is not going to give any military bases either in the Persian Gulf or elsewhere to any Foreign Power. You can yourself pay a visit to the Persian Gulf area and see for yourself. We shall give you all the necessary facilities to go wherever you like.”

3. The American Ambassador, who came to return my call today, himself referred to this subject and said that America neither demanded nor was going to have any military bases in Iran. When I asked him what was the reason for the delay in signing the Agreement he replied that he was trying best to expedite it, but the Agreement had to be brought within the framework of the Congress Resolution (called the Eisenhower doctrine) and had to be related to certain proposals which had been made by Pakistan and Turkey. The Agreements with Pakistan, Iran and Turkey would be bilateral in form but would be inter-related.

4. The Soviet Counsellor informed me yesterday morning that his Government took a serious view of these developments which were intended to strengthen the Baghdad Pact. When the Baghdad Pact was formed, it did not possess any teeth but with the conclusion of the proposed military agreements between America on one side and Iran, Turkey and Pakistan on the other, the Baghdad Pact would really become an aggressive alliance and a threat to the security of all the neighbouring countries, particularly the USSR, Afghanistan, India, Iraq and the UAR. I told him about the categorical assurance that Foreign Minister Hekmat had given me, but he said that Dr. Kekmat had given such assurances before to his Ambassador which had been proved to be incorrect. He obviously wanted that these neighbouring countries should communicate their views to the Governments of Iran and the United States either publicly or confidentially. I told him I hoped that the apprehensions of the Soviet Union were not correct and that, in any case, so far as India was concerned it was not our policy to protest publicly or take any steps which might increase tension; if and when the agreement was published we might consider giving expression to our views, if necessary, in a suitable form.

5. Judging from my informal talks with various Iranian officials, including Dr. Hekmat, I am of the opinion that while there is no doubt that America is keen to strengthen the Baghdad pact, it is unlikely that she will insist on getting military bases in Iran. There is, however, no doubt that America is increasing the number of her military instructors and advisers in Iran who are found practically in every unit and formation in small numbers. It is also true that Iran is keen to build up her Army, Navy and Air Force and, as she apprehends a threat from Iraq, she is particularly anxious to build up her naval strength in the Persian Gulf. The Iranians feel very sore about the renaming of the Persian Gulf as the Arabian Gulf by Iraq and the UAR. They may, therefore, try to get American naval craft with American Naval experts and trainers to build up their naval strength in the Gulf area. Also it is possible that America will increase her aid to the Iranian Army and Air Force and add to the present number of American instructors and advisers. What is, however, even more sinister is the possibility of some kind of a grouping together of the military forces of Pakistan, Iran and Turkey under overall American control and advice.

6. It is, however, unlikely that Iran will allow herself to be embroiled in any conflict between India and Pakistan. The Iranian authorities have been at pains to explain to me that they have exercised a sobering rather than an inciting influence on other members of the Baghdad pact. In any case, Iran is faced with both internal and external threats to her own security and could neither afford nor wish to get involved in the quarrels of Pakistan with India. Whether Iran will gain anything in the long run by entering into a military alliance with the USA or not is the concern and affair of Iran herself. I feel that any advice or expression of views to the Iranian Government on this subject by us or by Afghanistan, Iraq or the UAR would only offend them and not produce any favourable reaction or change in their attitude — if anything, it might, in the present state of their temper, only stiffen it. If any approach is to be made, it should, in my opinion, be made to the American Government. This approach should only be by way of eliciting information at the present stage before we know what exact shape the proposed Agreement is going to take. If, however, it is deemed necessary to make any approach to the Iranian Government, I would request definite instructions on the subject.

Yours sincerely

(T. N. KAUL)

Shri S. Dutt,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs.

**************

SECRET

Note of Third Secretary Shilendra K. Singh on his meeting with the Soviet Counsellor.

Embassy of India
Tehran

I met Mr. Volkov, Counsellor of the USSR Embassy here this morning. Mr. Volkov appeared uneasy about the Irano-Soviet relations in the context of the agreement which is expected to be signed between Iran and the United States of America. He gave me the details of this as known to them and said it will be signed in Washington within a month. Iran, under this agreement, is to have a guarantee of aid, military and otherwise, from the USA in case of direct or indirect aggression against her by any power. Mr. Volkov suggested that in view of the attitude of Americans and their allies, as shown during the recent Lebanese and Jordanian crises, any internal disorders or even discontent can be attributed to foreign influence and propaganda and called ‘Indirect aggression’ by the ruling group in a country. It is this, Volkov continued, that made the whole thing look so sinister. There were some other clauses in this agreement, he said, concerning the establishment of a joint Iran-Pak-American fleet in the Persian Gulf. Explaining the genesis of this, he said that the idea had first been mooted last. year by Iranians, at the instigation of Americans. However, at that time Britain also was to have been a party to the establishment of this fleet. Britain did not think it necessary then to allow others step in what has been until now her sole preserve. She firmly but politely declined to allow others to use her fairly large naval base in Bahrain and the smaller bases in Sharja and Muscat by others. The idea now, as it appears to the Russians, seems to be that Iran, Pakistan and America will have a joint training establishment off Kharak island and that Iran was for this purpose to lease off to Americans some islands off Bandar Chahbahar, Jasq and Langeh and to undertake to supply them with oil and water and other necessities from the mainland; in return she was to receive free training facilities for her naval personnel and also get help for the extension of her naval forces. It remains to be seen, Mr. Volkov said, what the precise terms of the agreement between America and Pakistan in this connection are.

He said that India should consider it as an unfriendly act just as the Soviet Union does because this agreement was the commencement of the building up of an American fleet in the Indian ocean. He said that it is not impossible to visualize an American fleet in the Indian ocean interfering at some future date in the internal affairs of countries like Ceylon, Indonesia and Burma, if not in those of India herself, in the same manner as they have done in Jordan, Lebanon and China.

He developed this theme by saying that India was not merely a great Asian power in this area but also in the present set up Iran was beginning to treat our Embassy in Tehran with special respect. He said that we might, therefore, like to consider taking some action in order to warn the Iranians that in the name of their security and defence they are being made to play with fire and that in the present context things were not half as simple as their American friends would like them to believe. The results also may be "somewhat unexpected" even for Iran herself. He said that he did not want us to consider anything except our own interests in Iran and Middle East in making these representations. He said that the Soviet Union has not taken any cut-and-dried attitude on this matter as has been shown by Mr. Khrushchev's speech on this subject on the 10th November in Moscow.

Sd. Shilendra K. Singh
13-11-58
SECRET

Letter from Ambassador of India in the United States M. C. Chagla to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Washington (D.C), November 25, 1958.

No. 184 – A/58

November 25, 1958

I saw Mr. Dulles today. He was extremely pleasant and cordial. He told me that the Indo-American friendship was based on solid foundations; although we have had differences in the past and we often voted in different lobbies in the United Nations, our friendship was sincere and genuine. I told him that I had found the atmosphere in the United States very friendly and the world Bank conference in India had excellent results and had convinced the Americans who were there that India was seriously engaged in rapid economic development.

2. I then pointed out to him that the only factor which seriously interfered with our good relations was attitude of the United States to Pakistan. I told him that so far the United States could at least say that they were supporting a democratic Government. Now it was a case of supporting a military dictatorship. It did not even make any pretension to govern by democratic principles. I reminded him that General Ayub had openly talked of a war with India and it seemed to us strange that the United States should go on militarily strengthening such a government. It also seemed to us strange that the United States should pursue a line of conduct which compelled us to divert our resources to strengthen our defence when we could use these very resources for the betterment of our people. We felt that the continuance of military aid by the United States to Pakistan at this juncture must inevitably result in Pakistan adopting more and more a bellicose attitude towards India. Dulles said that the United States had written into the SEATO Treaty, much to Pakistan’s chagrin that American arms to Pakistan would be used only against a Communist attack and he had also made it clear that if Pakistan attacked India, the United States would go to the rescue of India. I told him that it was impossible to expect India to take any risk with regard to an attack from Pakistan. If Pakistan was getting militarily strong and was indulging in war cries against India, we had to take every possible precaution against a sudden attack from Pakistan. Dulles said that we had just bought a fleet of bombers although the United States had not supplied a single bomber to Pakistan. I told him we were too poor to buy a fleet to bombers and whatever we might have bought was solely for the purpose of defence. Further, Pakistan did not tell us what she was being supplied by the United States. Dulles wanted me to assure you that the United States had not supplied any weapons to Pakistan other than those which would be required for her defence. She had not supplied any offensive weapons. He further said that today our military position was that we were three times as strong as Pakistan and this was entirely unnecessary. I told him that, on the contrary, our feeling in India was that with American military aid, Pakistan was very strong and we had to keep up with her military preparations. I told him that just as the United States was not prepared to take any risk with regard to Russian military preparations, so also it would be extremely foolish on our part to ignore or minimise either the military strength of Pakistan or her attitude towards us. Dulles wanted particularly to emphasize that the United States would not permit Pakistan to attack India and if Pakistan did attack India, the United States would come to our rescue. I told him that more than anyone else he should realize that no independent country could rely solely on the help of others for her defence and the only way to ease the Indo-Pakistan situation was to remove the threat of war which was being constantly given by Pakistan to India and that could only be done if the United States stopped military aid to Pakistan.

3. I told Dulles that I had spoken very frankly and he told me that he appreciated the frankness and he hoped that I would always continue to be frank with him so that it would be easier for us to understand each other’s point of view.

Yours sincerely

(M. C. Chagla)

Shri Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister
New Delhi
1749. Agreement between the United States and Pakistan.

Rawalpindi, March 5, 1959.

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of Pakistan;

Desiring to implement the Declaration in which they associated themselves at London on July 28, 1958;

Considering that under Article I of the Pact of Mutual Co-operation signed at Baghdad on February 24, 1955, the parties signatory thereto agree to cooperate for their security and defence, and that, similarly, as stated in the above-mentioned Declaration, the Government of the United States of America, in the interest of world peace, agreed to cooperate with the Governments making that Declaration for their security and defense;

Recalling that, in the above-mentioned Declaration, the members of the Pact of Mutual Cooperation making that Declaration affirmed their determination to maintain their collective security and to resist aggression, direct or indirect;

Considering further that the Government of the United States of America is associated with the work of the major committees of the Pact of Mutual Cooperation signed at Baghdad on February 24, 1955;

Desiring to strengthen peace in accordance with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

Affirming their right to cooperate for their security and defense in accordance with Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations;

Considering that the Government of the United States of America regards as vital to its national interest and to world peace the preservation of the independence and integrity of Pakistan;

Recognizing the authorization to furnish appropriate assistance granted to the President of the United States of America by the Congress of the United States of America in the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, and in the Joint Resolution to Promote Peace and Stability in the Middle East; and

Considering that similar agreements are being entered into by the Government of the United States of America and the Governments of Iran and Turkey respectively,

Have agreed as follows:
ARTICLE - I
The Government of Pakistan is determined to resist aggression. In case of aggression against Pakistan, the Government of the United States of America, in accordance with the Constitution of the United States of America, will take such appropriate action, including the use of armed forces, as may be mutually agreed upon and as is envisaged in the Joint Resolution to promote Peace and Stability in the Middle East, in order to assist the Government of Pakistan at its request.

ARTICLE - II
The Government of the United States of America, in accordance with the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, and related laws of the United States of America, and with applicable agreements heretofore or hereafter entered into between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Pakistan, reaffirms that it will continue to furnish the Government of Pakistan such military and economic assistance as may be mutually agreed upon between the Government of Pakistan, in order to assist the Government of Pakistan in the preservation of its national independence and integrity and in the effective promotion of its economic development.

ARTICLE-III
The Government of Pakistan undertakes to utilize such military and economic assistance as may be provided by the Government of the United States of America in a manner consonant with the aims and purposes set forth by the Government associated in the Declaration signed at London on July 28, 1958, and for the purpose of effectively promoting the economic development of Pakistan and of preserving its national independence and integrity.

ARTICLE-IV
The Government of the United States of America and the Government of Pakistan will cooperate with the other Governments associated in the Declaration signed at London on July 28, 1958, in order to prepare and participate in such defensive arrangements as may be mutually agreed to be desirable, subject to the other applicable provisions of this Agreement.

ARTICLE-V
The provisions of the present Agreement do not affect the cooperation between the two Governments as envisaged in other international agreements or arrangements.
ARTICLE-VI

This Agreement shall enter into force upon the date of its signature and shall continue in force until one year after the receipt by either Government of written notice of the intention of the other Government to terminate the Agreement.

Done in duplicate at Rawalpindi, this fifth day of March, 1959.

For the Government of the United States of America
Fletcher Warren.

For the Government of Pakistan
Syid M. Hassan.

1750. Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in the Lok Sabha on US – Pakistan Military Pact.

New Delhi, March 6, 1959.

I can well understand the concern of Members about this news about the culmination of these long series of talks in the signing of a new military pact between the United States of America and the Pakistan Governments (on March 5). This matter has been before us in various forms in the last few weeks or more. In fact, it was as a result of the revolution in Iraq in July last that this question arose before the countries of the Baghdad Pact. They saw that the Baghdad Pact had been dealt a mortal blow by Baghdad going out of it and hence they had meetings, I believe, in London. Then, soon after, certain provisional or other decisions were taken to have bilateral pacts to replace in effect the Baghdad Pact which though continuing in form, had lost substance. We were concerned naturally and we followed these proceedings in so far as we could. We were not in, of course. On many occasions we have expressed our concern about it to the United States Government because new accounts were appearing in the world’s Press about this and on many occasions we were assured that this was merely some past commitment being carried on and there was no question of any special or additional military aid and certainly it was not aimed against India and it was confined to the previous purpose of the Baghdad Pact. So far as we were concerned, we were not enamored by Baghdad Pact at any time. In fact we did not like any military pact; more especially such as concerned us or concerned our safety. We did not like it. But anyhow, we were given this assurance that this was a repetition of some old commitment and nothing new and the nature of it would not change even in the bilateral pact.
That has been the position. I have stated that — as the Hon. Lady Member stated just now — about these assurances.

Now, a reference has been made to this pact in this morning’s papers. We have not seen the full text of it. It is possible that the text may be made public because I think – it is said – that it would be registered at the United Nations; if it is so, then it would be made public and if it is made public, we shall examine it and if the House so desires, I can place a copy on the Table of the House.

But I should like to add that last evening the Ambassador of the United States visited our Foreign Office — not me but the Foreign Secretary – presumably after the signature of this bilateral treaty at Ankara and he told the Foreign Secretary, he repeated in fact, what he had said previously that this was not anything special or additional, this was an old commitment about military aid, etc. and he specially repeated that this was governed by the Congressional resolution which is often called the Eisenhower Doctrine. That is to say, that it only applied to communist aggression and to none other.

Now, I am, as I said, repeating what they have said. I do not personally think that any kind of aggression is likely to be prevented or any security to be added to by such pacts. That is my personal view. But anyhow, this is the assurance he gave last evening.

This morning’s newspapers stated that the Foreign Secretary of the Pakistan Government has put a different interpretation to it. There is apparently a conflict between the interpretation put by the United States Government and the Pakistan Government. We propose to point this out to the United States Government or their representatives and to enquire which is the correct interpretation; in fact, find out what the facts are as far as we can. That is all we can do, Sir, at this stage. But I thought it would be desirable for me to place these facts before the House.

◆◆◆◆◆
Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in parliament on military aid to Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 13, 1959.

[This statement relates to the three agreements for military aid signed recently between the U.S.A. and Turkey, Iran and Pakistan.]

A meeting of the Baghdad Pact Council was held in London on July 29, 1958. This meeting was held soon after the revolution in Iraq. At this meeting, a declaration was issued on behalf of the Prime Ministers of Iran, Pakistan, Turkey and the United Kingdom and Mr. John Foster Dulles, Secretary of State, U.S.A. A copy of this declaration is attached to this statement. The concluding paragraph of the declaration contains an undertaking, given on behalf of the U. S. A. This paragraph runs as follows:

“Article I of the Pact of Mutual Co-operation signed at Baghdad on February 24, 1955 provides that the parties will co-operate for their security and defense and that such measures as they agree to take to give effect to this co-operation may form the subject of special agreements. Similarly, the United States, in the interest of world peace, and pursuant to existing Congressional authorization, agrees to co-operate with the nations making this declaration for their security and defence, and will promptly enter into agreements designed to give effect to this co-operation.”

In pursuance of this undertaking given on behalf of the U.S.A., consultations took place at Ankara early in March 1959, and three agreements were signed on March 5, 1959, between the U.S.A. on the one hand and Turkey, Iran and Pakistan on the other. These three agreements signed on March 5, 1959 are identical. A copy of the Agreement between the U.S.A. and Pakistan is attached to this statement.

Article I of this Agreement of March 5, 1959 runs as follows:

“The Government of Pakistan is determined to resist aggression. In case of aggression against Pakistan, the Government of the United States of America, in accordance with the Constitution of the United States of America, will take such appropriate action, including the use of armed forces, as may be mutually agreed upon and is envisaged in the Joint Resolution to promote peace and stability in the Middle East, in order to assist the Government of Pakistan at its request.”

It will be seen from this Article I that the United States of America agreed to assist the Government of Pakistan, at their request, in case of aggression against Pakistan by such appropriate action, including the use of armed forces, as would be:

(i) in accordance with the Constitution of the United States of America; and
(ii) as envisaged in the Joint Resolution to promote peace and stability in the Middle East. (This is commonly known as the Eisenhower Doctrine for the Middle East.)

Under the Constitution of the United States of America, U.S. armed forces cannot be used to assist any other country without the specific authority of the United States Congress. The Mutual Security Act authorizes the U.S. Government to give military and economic aid to foreign countries but does not authorize the use of United States forces in support of any other country. The use of the U.S. armed forces in support of any other country without specific sanction of the United States Congress is, however, possible under the authority given by the Joint Resolution of the Congress of March 9, 1957. Section 2 of this Joint Resolution reads as follows:

“The President is authorized to undertake, in the general area of the Middle East, military assistance programmes with any nations of that area desiring such assistance. Furthermore, the United States regards as vital to the national interest and world peace the preservation of the independence and integrity of the nations of the Middle East. To this end, if the President determines the necessity thereof, the United States is prepared to use armed forces to assist any such nation or group of such nations requesting assistance against armed aggression from any country controlled by international communism: provided that such employment shall be consonant with treaty obligations of the United States and with the Constitution of the United States.”

A study of the documents attached to the statement and, particularly, the portions to which attention has been drawn above, shows that under the latest Agreement signed between the United States of America and Pakistan, the Government of the United States have undertaken that they will not only continue to give economic and military assistance to Pakistan but will also, on request, use the armed forces of the United States in order to assist the Government of Pakistan, in case of armed aggression against Pakistan from any country controlled by international communism.

The spokesmen of the Government of Pakistan have, however, given a wider interpretation to the latest Agreement.

In view of this interpretation on the part of Pakistan and the doubts that had arisen because of this Agreement, a request was made to the United States authorities for clarification. We have been assured by the U.S. authorities that their latest bilateral agreement with Pakistan has no effect other than the extension of the Eisenhower Doctrine to cover Pakistan and that the Eisenhower Doctrine restricts the use of United States armed forces to cases of armed aggression from any country controlled by international communism. We have been specifically assured that this Agreement cannot be used against India. We have also been assured by the United States authorities that there are no secret clauses of this Agreement nor is there any separate secret supplementary agreement, Spokesmen of the Pakistan Government have on various occasions stated that their objective in entering into a defence aid agreement with the U.S.A. and in joining military pacts and alliances is to strengthen Pakistan against India. We have repeatedly pointed this out and emphasized that the United States defence aid to Pakistan encourages the Pakistan authorities in their aggressiveness and increases tension and conflict between India and Pakistan. We have known for some time that in cases of attempted sabotage in Jammu and Kashmir, Pakistan have used some military equipment of United States origin. It is not possible to say whether this equipment is part of the United States defence aid equipment to Pakistan or whether it has been purchased through normal commercial channels. The wider interpretation given by the Pakistan authorities to the latest Agreement is, therefore, a matter of grave concern to us, particularly in the context of our past experience of repeated and increasing aggressive action on the part of Pakistan.

We welcome the assurance given to us by the United States authorities, but aggression is difficult to define, and Pakistan authorities, have in the past committed aggression and denied it. In the context of this past experience, the continuing threats held out by Pakistan, and Pakistan’s interpretation of the latest Agreement with the U.S.A., it is difficult for us to ignore the possibility of Pakistan utilizing the aid received by it from other countries against India even though those other countries have given us clear assurance to the contrary. We have, therefore, requested the United States authorities to clarify this position still further.

We have repeatedly stated and it is our firm policy that we will not take any military action against Pakistan or any other country except in self-defence. We are sure that the Government and the people of the United States have nothing but goodwill for us and that they will not be parties to any agreements, formal or informal, open or secret, which may threaten the security of India.
1752. Statement by Pakistan President Mohammad Ayub Khan justifying Pakistan’s military build up.

Murree, June 22, 1959.

From the Press reports on Congressional Committee meetings, one gets the impression that there is a feeling in the minds of some influential people in the United States of America that Pakistan is keeping forces in excess of its requirements for external defences in the event of a general war. It is stated that five and a half divisions in Pakistan is all that is necessary to meet such a contingency. Such an impression is totally erroneous and based on an incorrect appreciation of the military requirements of Pakistan. No great imagination is required to come to the conclusion that 1,400 miles of our very sensitive frontier on the north-west and the security of East Pakistan cannot be achieved by five and a half divisions alone. And even if it were possible to do so how could we guarantee that whilst we are engaged elsewhere, India with three times our military strength would not march into our country.

"Whilst on this point, may I point out that 1,400 miles of the frontier referred to above is the one that until about 12 years ago was considered so sensitive as to require the major resources of the British Empire to defend. This is not only the frontier of Pakistan but it is also the frontier of India. In fact Pakistan by defending this frontier is also defending India, and as such, it would not be wrong to state that India owes us a great obligation and that in reality we are entitled to claim a share of this enormous expense.

I would beg our friends that when commenting on our problems they should at least understand our position clearly. Because of India’s aggressive intentions and massive military build-up, we are forced to maintain forces that whilst catering for external defence can at least act as a deterrent. True, it is causing us a lot of expense, but what else can we do? We are victims of circumstances. We have repeatedly offered to settle our differences with India on honourable terms and have extended our hand of friendship but we regret that there has not been any appropriate response. Is it realized that 80 per cent of Indian forces are sitting almost on our border and could move to forward concentration areas which are fully stocked and launch a major offensive against us at 10 days notice?

Our people on the border at least know this, and if we did not have some visible deterrent to this, they would just shift in millions inwards, causing a large scale refugee problem within the country. This would happen whilst we are still engaged in settling ten million refugees who have been driven out of India.

I would like our friends to understand very clearly that they shall find us dependable and trustworthy but at the same time if they think that they can lead us to confused thinking against the hard facts of life, then we just cannot oblige.

I appreciate the noble sentiments of such people for wishing India and us well and wanting peace between us two. I assure them all that the greatest desire Pakistan has is to come to peace with India if she was prepared to settle our differences justly and amicably. We have gone further than that and offered common defence of this subcontinent as it is the only way in which it can be defended. But unfortunately India is not so far prepared to appreciate the wisdom of such a gesture. So such friends as sometime take delight in criticism of Pakistan and misunderstanding of our intentions would do far more good if they could exert their pressure to make India see reason, in which case they shall not find us wanting in playing our part. I would also invite them wholeheartedly to come out and study the situation for themselves.”

◆◆◆◆◆
1753. Exchange of Notes constituting an Agreement between the United States of America and Pakistan relating to the establishment of a Communication Unit in Pakistan.

Karachi, July 18, 1959.

Letter from the Pakistani Minister of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations to the American Ambassador

Minister of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations

No. 40-SSP/59. Karachi, the 18th July, 1959

Your Excellency:

I refer to our recent discussions regarding the desire of the United States to station a Communications Unit in Pakistan. I have the hour to inform you that the Government of Pakistan agrees to the stationing of such a Unit on the following basis:

1. The Government of Pakistan will make available to the United States the land areas and rights-of-way required for the establishment and operation of the Communications Unit and will provide protection for such Unit. The agreed areas and rights-of-way are set forth in Annex A².

2. The Communications Unit and personnel assigned to it may install and use communication equipment, including antennas; use continuously agreed radio frequencies and agreed wire communications facilities; purchase locally goods and services including construction materials, electrical power and transportation services; make arrangements for the internal security of those small areas, within the agreed areas, designated for the exclusive use of the Communications Unit (only authorized personnel may enter these latter areas); carry arms in connection with official duties within the areas designated for the exclusive use of the Communications Unit and in connection with the courier duties outside the agreed areas; move freely within, into and out of and between the agreed areas; and may engage in such other activities as may be necessary for the effective operation of the Unit and the health and welfare of its personnel.

3. The Communications Unit and personnel assigned to it shall respect the laws of Pakistan and shall abstain from any activity which would adversely affect the interests of the people or the Government of Pakistan. The Government of the United States will take necessary measures to prevent abuse of the privileges granted by the Government of Pakistan under the present Agreement.
4. The Government of Pakistan will, upon request, assist the Communication Unit in the local procurement of goods, materials, supplies and services required for the establishment, operation and support of the Unit. The Unit shall enjoy any preferential rates, charges, or priorities which are available to the Armed Forces of Pakistan for goods or services purchased locally in connection with the operation of the Unit.

5. (a) The personnel of the Communications Unit shall receive exemption from payment of all duties and taxes, including export duties, on their personal and household goods brought into the country for their own use within six months of their arrival.

Goods imported under this section will not ordinarily be sold or disposed of in Pakistan by the owner, except to other persons enjoying comparable privileges. In the event of their sale or disposal to a person who does not enjoy comparable privileges, the duty and taxes thereon will be paid.

The Pakistan Customs Department will issue appropriate regulations regarding the provisions of this section.

(b) The temporary presence in Pakistan of a member of the Unit shall constitute neither residence nor domicile therein and shall not of itself subject him to taxation in Pakistan, either on his income or on his property, the presence of which in Pakistan is due to his temporary presence there, nor, in the event of his death, shall it subject his estate to a levy of death duties.

6. No tax, duty or other charge will be levied or assessed on activities of the Unit or on material, equipment, supplies or goods brought into or procured in Pakistan by the United States authorities for the use of the Unit, its agencies or personnel assigned to the Unit.

7. The United States Government may construct within the agreed areas the facilities required for support of the Communications Unit under the terms and conditions set forth in Articles II through VII of the Military Defense Construction Agreement signed at Karachi on May 28, 1956.¹

8. Title to removable materials, equipment or property brought into or acquired in Pakistan by or on behalf of the Communications Unit will remain in the United States Government. Such material, equipment or property may be brought into or removed tax and duty free at any time from Pakistan by the United States Government.
The materials, equipment and property of the Unit and its official papers will be exempt from inspection, search and seizure and may be removed freely by the United States Government at any time.

9. Jurisdiction over personnel of the Unit shall be exercised in accordance with the provisions of Annex B², an integral part hereof.

10. Arrangements required to give effect to this Agreement will be the subject of agreement between the commanding Officer of the communications Unit and Senior Military Officer of the Pakistan Forces in the area.

11. In this Agreement the expressions “personnel assigned to the Unit”, “personnel of the Unit”, and “member of the Unit include persons who are in Pakistan in connection with the Agreement and who are (a) members of the United States armed forces; (b) civilian personnel employed by, serving with, or accompanying the United States armed forces (except persons who are nationals of Pakistan or ordinarily resident therein); or (c) dependents of the persons defined (a) and (b) above.

12. This Agreement shall remain in force for a period of ten years and for a second period of ten years thereafter unless either party gives written notice to the other at least twelve months before the end of the first ten year period of its desire to terminate this Agreement.

If the foregoing arrangements are acceptable to Your Excellency’s Government, I have the honour to propose that this note and Your Excellency’s note in reply to that effect shall constitute an Agreement between our two Governments on this matter which shall enter into force on the date of your note in reply.

I avail myself of this opportunity to renew to Your Excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

Manzur QADIR
Minister of Foreign Affairs
and Commonwealth Relations

His Excellency Mr. Jemes M. Langley
The Ambassador of the United States of America in Pakistan Karachi.

ANNEX-A
AGREED AREAS AND RIGHTS OF WAY

The United States may use the land areas and rights-of-way described herein in accordance with the provisions of this Annex and the Agreement on the United States Communications unit of July 18, 1959, of which this Annex is part.
SITE-I

Site I is located on the Chumkani Road which runs eastward from the Peshawar-Kohat Road approximately three miles south of Peshawar.

1. Parcel Number 1. A parcel of land enclosed by boundaries established as follows: Base Point – a point 50.5 feet northward from the one-mile marker on the Chumkani Road on a line running perpendicular to the road. From this base point a line running in a westerly direction and parallel to the road with bearing South 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 2,500.00 feet to the southwest corner; thence North 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 5,000.00 feet to the northwest corner; thence North 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 5,000.00 feet to the northeast corner; thence South 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 5,086.69 feet to the southeast corner; thence a line running parallel to the road bearing North 83 degrees 07 minutes 40 seconds West, a distance of 675.58 feet to a point on the southern boundary line; thence South 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 1,830.00 feet to the point of beginning. All bearings magnetic.

2. Parcel Number 2. A parcel of land that lies within the boundaries of Parcel Number 1 described in paragraph 1 with boundaries established as follows: Base Point - the base point for Parcel Number 2 is the same as the base point for Parcel Number 1, described in paragraph 1. The southern boundary runs for 425.00 feet to the east of the base point. The southwest corner is 200.00 feet to the west of the base point. The western boundary is a line running from the southwest corner on a bearing of North 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 600.00 feet to the northwest corner. The northern boundary is a line running from the northwest corner on a bearing North 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 425.00 feet to the northeast corner. The eastern boundary is a line running from the northeast corner on a bearing South 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 600.00 feet to the southeast corner. All bearings magnetic.

3. Parcel Number 3. A parcel of land enclosed by boundaries established as follows: Base Point – a point 14.2 feet southward on a line starting at the one-mile marker on the Chumkani road and running perpendicular to the road. From this base point minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 1,070.00 feet to the northeast corner; thence South 51 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 200.00 feet to the southwest corner; thence South 51 degrees 12 minutes 35 seconds West, a distance of 2,420.74 feet to the southeast corner; thence South 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 200.00 feet to the southwest corner; thence North 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 1,500.00 feet to the northwest corner; thence North 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 1,030.00 feet to the point of beginning. All bearings magnetic.

4. Parcel Number 4. A parcel of land located west of and adjacent to Parcel Number 3 above, enclosed by boundaries established as follows: Base Point- a point on the northwest corner of Parcel Number 3 of Site I, said point being 14.5 feet south and 1,030.00 feet west of the one mile marker on the Chumkani Road; thence in a westerly direction with the bearing South 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, and along the south line of said Chumkani Road, a distance of 1,500.00 feet; thence in a southerly direction with bearing South 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, and parallel to the west boundary line of said Parcel No. 3, a distance of 1,500.00 feet; thence in an easterly direction with bearing North 89 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 1,742.4 feet to a point on the southwest corner of said Parcel Number 3; thence in a northerly direction with bearing North 0 degrees 30 minutes 00 seconds West, and along the west boundary line of Parcel Number 3, a distance of 1,500.00 feet to the point of beginning: said tract containing 60 acres, more or less. All bearings magnetic.

Parcels Number 2, Number 3 and Number 4 are for the exclusive use of the Communications Unit.

In order to provide utility services in Parcels Number 2, Number 3 and Number 4 the Communications Unit may install, use, operate and maintain utility systems, to include water, power, communications, and sewage, over, across and under the Chumakani Road adjoining these parcels.

In that part of Parcel Number I which is outside Parcel Number 2, the Communications Unit may lay cables and erect antennas, poles, connecting lines, power lines, and support wires; and personnel assigned to the Unit may enter and move within the area freely at any time for purposes related to the operation of the Communications Unit.

It is understood that the land in Parcel Number I which is outside Parcel Number 2 may be used by the land owners for agricultural purposes under conditions which will not interfere with the operations of the Communications Unit. Authorities of the Government of Pakistan will, upon request, make arrangements necessary to insure that the landowners are informed of such conditions and comply with them.
SITE II

Site II is located south of Peshawar approximately seven miles and east of the Peshawar-Kohat road approximately 4.3 miles.

1. Parcel Number 5. A parcel of land enclosed by boundaries established as follows: Base Point- a point on the south edge of the road running eastward from the seven-mile marker on the Peshawar-Kohat road, at a distance approximately 4 miles east of the Peshawar-Kohat road, and approximately 2,200.00 feet west of the intersection at which the east-west road intersects a rod that loops to the south around a high earth mound and also branches to the north. The base point is 20.00 feet south of the center line of the east-west road and is marked by concrete monument with a nail embedded on the top. From this base point a line running parallel to the road in an easterly direction, bearing South 72 degrees 50 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 1,200.00 feet to the northeast corner; thence South 17 degrees 10 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 2,400.00 feet to the southeast corner; thence North 72 degrees 50 minutes 00 seconds West, a distance of 2,400.00 feet to the southwest corner; thence North 17 degrees 10 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 2,400.00 feet to the northwest corner; thence South 72 degrees 50 minutes 00 seconds East, a distance of 1,200.00 feet to the point of beginning. All bearings magnetic.

2. Parcel Number 6. A square parcel of land each side of which is 660.00 feet long, located approximately at the center of Parcel Number 5.

3. Access Road. A strip of thirty feet wide connecting the northern boundary of parcel Number 6 with the east-west road for use by the Communications Unit as an access road.

Parcel Number 6 is for the exclusive use of the Communications Unit.

In that part of Parcel Number 5 which is outside Parcel Number 6, the Communications Unit may lay cables and erect antennas, poles, connecting lines, power lines, and support wires: and personnel assigned to the Unit may enter and move within the area freely at any time for purposes related to the operation of the Communication Unit.

It is understood that the land in Parcel Number 7 which is outside Parcel Number 8 and the road may be used by the landowners for agricultural purposes under conditions which will not interfere with the operations of the Communications Unit. Authorities of the Government of Pakistan will, upon request, make arrangements necessary to insure that the landowners are informed of such conditions and comply with them.
ANNEX B

JURISDICTION

Recognizing the responsibility of the courts of Pakistan for the administration of justice in Pakistan, and also the responsibility of the United States military authorities for maintaining good order and discipline among personnel of the Unit, it is agreed that jurisdiction over such personnel shall be exercised in accordance with the provisions of this Annex.

1. Subject to the provisions of this Annex,
   (a) the civil authorities of Pakistan shall have jurisdiction over the personnel of the Unit with respect to offences committed within the territory of Pakistan and punishable by the law of Pakistan;
   (b) the military authorities of the United States shall have the right to exercise within Pakistan all criminal and disciplinary jurisdiction conferred on them by the laws of the United States over the personnel of the Unit.

2. (a) The authorities of the United States shall have the right to exercise within Pakistan all criminal and disciplinary jurisdiction conferred on them by the laws of the United States over the personnel of the Unit.
   (b) The military authorities of the United States shall have the right to exercise exclusive jurisdiction over the personnel of the Unit with respect to offences, including offences relating to the security of the United States, punishable by the law of the United States but not by the law of Pakistan.
   (c) For the purposes of this paragraph and the paragraph next following, a security offence against the State shall include:
      (i) treason against the State;
      (ii) sabotage, espionage or violation of any law relating to the official secrets of that State, or secrets relating to the national defence of that State.

3. In cases where the right to exercise jurisdiction is concurrent the following rules shall apply:
   (a) The military authorities of the United States shall have the primary right to exercise jurisdiction over the personnel of the Unit in relation to
      (i) The military authorities of the United States, or offences solely against the person or property of another member of the Unit;
(ii) offences arising out of any act or omission done in the performance of official duty; and

(iii) subject to the provision of paragraph 1 (b), offences committed solely within those parts of the agreed areas which are designated for the exclusive use of the Communications Unit

(b) In the case of any other offence the authorities of Pakistan shall have the primary right to exercise jurisdiction.

(c) If the State having the primary right decides not to exercise jurisdiction, it shall notify the authorities of the other State as soon as practicable.
The authorities of Pakistan, recognizing that it is the primary responsibility of the United States authorities to maintain good order and discipline where persons subject to United States military law are concerned, will, upon the request of United States authorities, waive their primary right to exercise jurisdiction pursuant to this Annex, except where the Government of Pakistan determines that it is of particular importance that jurisdiction be exercised by the Pakistan authorities.

4. The foregoing provisions of this Annex shall not imply any right for the military authorities of the United States of exercise jurisdiction over who are nationals of or ordinarily resident in Pakistan, unless they are members of the Unit.

5. (a) The authorities of Pakistan and the United States shall assist each other in the arrest of members of the Unit and in handing them over to the authority which is to exercise jurisdiction in accordance with the above provisions.

(b) The authorities of Pakistan shall notify promptly the military authorities of the United States of the arrest of any member of the Unit.

(c) The custody of an accused member of the Unit, over whom Pakistan is to exercise jurisdiction, shall remain with the United States. The United States assumes the responsibility for custody pending conclusion of judicial proceedings. The United States authorities will make any member of the Unit immediately available to Pakistan authorities upon their request for purposes of investigation and trial.

6.(a) The authorities of Pakistan and the United States shall assist each other in the carrying out of all necessary investigations into offences and in the collection and production of evidence, including the seizure and in proper cases, the handing over of objects connected with the offence. The handing over of such objects may, however, be made subject to their return within the time specified by the authority delivering them.

(b) The authorities of Pakistan and the United States shall notify each other of the disposition of all cases in which there are concurrent rights to exercise jurisdiction.

7. The authorities of Pakistan shall give sympathetic consideration to a request by the United States for assistance in carrying out a sentence of imprisonment pronounced by the authorities of the United States the provisions of Annex within the territory of Pakistan.

8. If a case against a member of the Unit has been tried or disposed of in accordance with the provisions of this Annex by the authorities of one State, he shall not be prosecuted in Pakistan for the same offence by the authorities of the other State.

9. Whenever a member of the Unit is prosecuted in Pakistan Courts, he shall be entitled.

(a) to a prompt and speedy trial;
(b) to be informed in advance of trial of the specific charge or charges made against him;
(c) to be confronted with the witnesses against him;
(d) to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, if they are within the jurisdiction of Pakistan;
(e) to have legal representation of his own choice for his defence at all stages of the proceedings.
(f) if he considers necessary, to have the services of an interpreter; and
(g) to communicate with a representative of the United States and to have such a representative present at all stages of the proceedings.

10. If a member of the Unit is acquitted after trial by a court in Pakistan, no appeal against his acquittal shall be presented by the prosecution. In cases other than acquittal, no appeal shall be taken by the prosecution except on grounds of legal error.

11. The authorities of Pakistan will have jurisdiction with respect to civil suits or claims involving injury or death or loss or damage to property arising out of acts or omissions of members of the Unit provided that if the act or omission is in the performance of official duty, the authorities in Pakistan shall not exercise their jurisdiction.

12. The determination whether an act or omission is or is not in the performance of official duty for the purpose of paragraph (a)(ii) or paragraph 11 shall, in the first instance, be made by the United States military authorities after appropriate consultation with the Pakistan authorities. If the authorities of Pakistan and the United States hold divergent views on this point, the matter shall be decided between the diplomatic authorities of the United States and the appropriate authorities of the Government of Pakistan.

*******************

II

Letter from the American Ambassador to the Pakistani Minister of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations
Embassy of the United States of America
Karachi, July 18, 1959

Excellency:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of today’s date, together with Annex A and Annex B attached thereto, the texts of which read as follows:

[See note I]

I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that the Government of the United States of America accepts the arrangements contained in your note, together with Annex A and Annex B attached thereto, and regards your note, the Agreement to enter into force on this day.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

James M. Langley

His Excellency Manzur Qadir
Minister of Foreign Affairs
and Commonwealth Relations
Karachi
MINUTE OF UNDERSTANDING

It is agreed that the following conditions shall apply to the privileges extended to personnel of the Communications Unit in paragraph 5(a) of the Agreement on the United States Communications Unit of July 18, 1959;

1. The exemption applies to direct imports only and not to local purchase or clearances from bond.
2. No Pakistan foreign exchange is involved in such imports.
3. The number of motor cars imported under this section by each person assigned to the Unit shall not exceed one.

James M. Langey
United States Ambassador

Manzur Qadir
Minister of Foreign Affairs
and Commonwealth Relations
Karachi, July 18, 1959 In Duplicate Originals

III

Letter from the American Ambassador to the Pakistani Minister of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations

Embassy of the United States of America

Karachi, July 18, 1959

Dear Mr. Minister:

Today the Government of the United States of America and Pakistan exchanged notes formalizing our Agreement on the United States Communications Unit and the status of the members of the Unit who enter Pakistan in connection therewith.

Annex B2 of that Agreement provides for the exercise of jurisdiction over such members. In this regard, I would be grateful for your confirmation of the following understandings:

1. That no cruel or unusual punishment would be inflicted upon any person over whom the Pakistan authorities might exercise jurisdiction pursuant to Annex B;
2. That should any person over whom the Pakistani authorities exercise such jurisdiction subsequently be confined by those authorities, the United States military authorities would be permitted to visit such person periodically at the place of confinement:

3. That in implementation of the provisions of paragraph 3(c) of Annex B, it shall not be necessary for the United States to make a request for waiver in each particular case, and it shall be taken for granted that Pakistan has waived its primary right to exercise jurisdiction there under except where the Government of Pakistan determines in a specific case that it is of particular importance that jurisdiction be exercised therein by the authorities of Pakistan:

4. That with reference to paragraph 5(c) of Annex B, concerning custody of an accused member of the Unit shall be carried into effect:

5. That with respect to paragraph 11 of Annex B, concerning civil suits or claims arising out of any act or omission done in the performance of official duty over which the authorities of Pakistan shall not exercise their jurisdiction, meritorious in accordance with procedures which enable them to make expeditious settlement of such claims.

Sincerely yours,

James M. Langley
Ambassador

Mr. Manzur Qadir
Minister of Foreign Affairs
and Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

Letter from the Pakistani Minister of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations to the American Ambassador

Minister for Foreign Affairs
And Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

July 18th, 1959

Dear Mr. Ambassador:
As requested in your letter of July 18th, 1959, I am pleased to confirm our understandings:

[See note III]

Sincerely yours,

Manzur Qadir

Minister of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations

His Excellency Mr. James M. Langley

The Ambassador of the United States of America in Pakistan Karachi.

1754.

SECRET

Note recorded by Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai on his talks with the Yugoslav Ambassador.

New Delhi, June 18, 1963.

Ministry of External Affairs

Yugoslav Ambassador also saw me last evening. He made the same enquiries about the result of the Minister’s Mission to Canada, U.S.A and UK. I gave him general replies.

2. The Ambassador then mentioned the high level meeting between U.S.S.R., U.S.A. and UK on the Test Ban Agreement which has been fixed for the middle of July at Moscow. He said that this, coupled with President Kennedy’s statement, seem to indicate that the Russians and Americans are coming nearer to each other. The Ambassador had also heard about Russia’s willingness to supply us defence equipment. He asked what these development meant. I told him that it looked as if the Sino-Soviet differences will continue and Russia seems to have given notice to the Chinese that they will go ahead, in accordance with their own views, to seek possibilities of agreement with the western countries and to assist India both in defence and development according to their own assessment of the requirements of the situation.

3. The Ambassador then talked about Sino-Pakistan relations and Kashmir. I explained to him briefly the essentials of the Kashmir problem and told him that so far as Pakistan is concerned, its policies have always been thoroughly opportunistic. Till 1953 it tried to exploit United Nations and the Security Council to put a squeeze on India. From 1953 onwards, by joining defence pacts SEATO and CENTO, it tried to get diplomatic and military support to squeeze India and when by 1960, it found that this policy did not work, it began flirting with China and now is becoming openly pro-Chinese and anti-American with the sole aim of pressuring India on Kashmir and other matters. The only consistent line running through all these changes of policy is hatred of India and nothing else.

4. The Ambassador said that he hoped the Sino-Soviet differences will continue and all the major powers will appreciate the danger from China in the next decade and do what they can to contain China.

   Sd/-M.J.Desai
   18th June, 1963.

1755. Letter from U.S. Ambassador John Kenneth Galbraith to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

   New Delhi, July 9, 1963.

   Excellency:

   I have the honour to refer to the agreement between our two Governments effected by an exchange of notes signed at Washington on November 14, 1962, regarding assistance to the Government of India for the purpose of defense against the outright Chinese aggression directed from Peiping against India and to the request by the Government of India for assistance under that agreements to strengthen India’s defences against possible air attack on the Delhi and Calcutta areas. I further have the honour to propose the following understandings with respect to this request:

1. The United States Government will send to India two mobile radar installations, with related communication equipment. Title to these installations will be retained by the United States and they would be subject to possible removal in the event of urgent need elsewhere. These installations will be located in the Delhi and Calcutta areas and will be manned by United States military personnel. Properly trained Indian technicians would, as mutually agreed, progressively undertake responsibilities in the operation and maintenance of these installations.
2. The United States Government is prepared, subject to the availability of funds, to initiate at an early time the training of Indian technicians in the operation and maintenance of mobile and fixed radar installations and related communications equipment. The Government of India will undertake to make available Indian personnel for this training. Such training, if funds are available, could be continued until the end of the United States Fiscal Year 1964 at which time the United States Government would give sympathetic consideration to a request by the Government of India for additional training assistance.

3. The United States Government is prepared, subject to the availability of funds, to deliver to the Government of India within a period of 12 to 18 month from the entry into force of the present agreement equipment for six permanent radar installations, again with related communications equipment, for air defence in the western and eastern sectors of India centered on Delhi and Calcutta. These installations will be designed to replace the mobile installations described in paragraph 1bove.

4. The United States Government will join the Indian Air Force in such intermittent peacetime training exercises as may be mutually agreed. Such exercises shall be designed to improve the effectiveness of India’s air defences against bombing attacks on the Delhi and Calcutta areas. In connection with such mutually agreed exercises, the United States would be prepared to send fighter aircraft manned by United States military personnel to India on a temporary basis. It is understood that during periods of joint training exercises, over-all responsibility for the air defense of India will continue to remain vested in the appropriate Indian Commander. It is the understanding of the Government of the United States that the United Kingdom has indicated its willingness to participate in such joint training exercises.

5. The United States Government will consult with the Government of India in the event of a Chinese Communist attack on India, regarding possible United States assistance in strengthening India’s air defences.

6. Any assistance furnished by the United States Government under the present agreement shall be subject to the agreement effected by an exchange of notes signed at Washington on November 14, 1962. The financial terms agreed or to be agreed between the United States Government and the Government of India for military assistance furnished pursuant to the above mentioned agreement of November 14, 1962 shall apply to assistance furnished under paragraphs 2 and 3 of the present agreement. The Government of India will accord personnel sent by the Government of the United States to India pursuant to the terms of this understanding the same treatment accorded (to) members of the United States Military Supply Mission in India. The Government of India will provide the necessary local construction, including accommodations for United States military personnel for these projects.

If the foregoing understandings are acceptable to your Government this Note and Your Excellency’s reply concurring therein shall constitute an agreement between our two Governments which shall enter into force on the date of your reply.

Sd/- John Kenneth Galbraith

His Excellency
Jawaharlal Nehru
Prime Minister of India

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

As you know, my Government and that of the United States have been considering ways in which we could respond to the request of the Government of India for assistance in strengthening India's defences against possible Chinese Communist air attacks.

We discussed these matters recently with Mr. Krishnamachari and we understand that occasional visits by fighter squadrons of the Royal Air Force and the United States Air Force in order to join with the Indian Air Force in such training exercised as may be mutually agreed, would be welcome to the Indian Government.

I write to inform you that we are now ready to arrange such visits, and I am to suggest that detailed arrangements might be pursued as soon as possible on a service-to-service basis.

Yours faithfully

Sd/- (P. H. Gore – Booth)

His Excellency
Jawaharlal Nehru
Prime Minister of India
1757. Letter from the United States Ambassador in India John Kenneth Galbraith to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

New Delhi, July 9, 1963.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

As you know, my Government and that of the United Kingdom have been considering ways in which we could respond to the request of the Government of India for assistance in strengthening India's defences against possible Chinese Communist air attacks.

We discussed these matters recently with Mr. Krishnamachari and we understand that occasional visits by fighter squadrons of the United States Air Force and the Royal Air Force, in order to join with the Indian Air Force in such training exercises as may be mutually agreed, would be welcome to the Indian Government.

I write to inform you that we are now ready to arrange such visits, and I am to suggest that detailed arrangements might be pursued as soon as possible on a service-to-service basis.

Yours faithfully,

Sd/- John Kenneth Galbraith

His Excellency
Jawaharlal Nehru
Prime Minister of India
Rawalpindi, August 2, 1963

The press of Pakistan has given undue attention to a recent press conference statement by American Ambassador to India Chester Bowles, given in New Delhi. A transcript of his comments includes the following:

“Certainly we don't think that Pakistan is going to attack India or India is going to attack Pakistan. If either one was attacked by the other, we will certainly move through the United Nations in order to do everything we could to see it stopped. If it is not very clear, we have said it over and over again.”

Though not incorrect so far as it goes, Ambassador Bowles’ statement does not cover, nor was it intended to cover, the full extent of the United States Commitments to Pakistan in case of external aggression.

I recall to your attention the clear record in this matter. On November 19, 1962, I declared to a press conference in Karachi:

‘The United States in turn has assured the Pakistan Government officially that if this assistance to India should be misused and misdirected against another country in aggression, the United States would undertake immediately in accordance with constitutional authority appropriate action both within and without the United Nations to thwart such aggression by India’.

My statement was in full accord with a public statement by the Department of State the previous day which said:

‘The United States Government has similarly assured the Government of Pakistan that if our assistance to India should be misused and directed against another in aggression, the US would undertake immediately in accordance with constitutional authority appropriate action both within and without the United Nations to thwart such aggression. Needless to say, in giving these assurances that United States is confident that neither of these countries which it is aiding harbors aggressive designs.’

The joint communique issued by president John F. Kennedy and President Ayub Khan in Washington July 13, 1961, said in part:

‘The two Presidents reaffirmed the solemn purpose of the bilateral agreements signed by the two governments on March 5, 1959, which declared among other things that “the government of the United States of America regards as vital to its national interest and to world peace the preservation of the independence and integrity of Pakistan.”

In addition to these public statements of American policy, direct assurances of a similar nature have been given to the Government of Pakistan. The record is clear. The policy of the United States in regard to the independence and defense of Pakistan remains unchanged.

President John F. Kennedy, in his press conference of November 20, 1962, declared:

‘In providing military assistance to India, we are mindful of our alliance with Pakistan. All of our aid to India is for the purpose of defeating Chinese Communists subversion. Chinese incursions into the subcontinent are a threat to Pakistan as well as India, and both have a common interest in opposing it. We have urged this point on both governments. Our help to India in no way diminished or qualifies our commitment to Pakistan and we have made this clear to both Governments as well.’

The joint communiqué issued by President John F. Kennedy and President Ayub Khan in Washington on July 13, 1961 said in part:

‘The two Presidents reaffirmed the solemn purpose of the bilateral agreements signed by the two governments on March 5, 1959, which declared among other things that “the Government of the United States of America regard as vital to its national interest and to world peace the preservation of the independence and integrity of Pakistan.”

In addition to these public statements of American policy, direct assurance of a similar nature have been given to the Government of Pakistan. The record is clear. The policy of the United States in regard to the independence and defense of Pakistan remained unchanged.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
Mr. Talbot summarized American thinking towards Pakistan as follows:

Pakistan’s current resentment against the U.S. was partly for understandable reasons and partly to divert attention from domestic problems; but it was causing her to adopt some ill-considered policies. Feeling that President Ayub was more flexible than his officials, President Kennedy had dispatched Mr. Ball with a view to clearing the air and presenting an opening for the ventilation of grievances. Although Ayub had adamantly maintained that the price of better relations was the discontinuance of military aid to India, Mr. Ball had successfully achieved this limited objective.

2. Mr. Bhutto’s talks in Washington were the second round of this process. Although he had seen both President Kennedy and Mr. Rusk, the most penetrating talks had again been with Mr. Ball. The Administration had now to take account of:

(a) strong criticism in Congress directed against both Pakistan and India;
(b) Congress moved in favour of cutting aid programmes, and a threat of a 25% cut in the programmes for both India and Pakistan unless progress was made over Kashmir. The programme in Pakistan might therefore run into serious trouble next Spring;
(c) the dissipation of whatever leverage in Delhi the U.S. had possessed in May.

3. The talks had threatened to lead nowhere, with Mr. Bhutto contending that the U.S. were obsessed with China and that Pakistan had no intention of going too far with her. Accordingly Mr. Ball had tried to probe Pakistan’s future intentions under two hypotheses:

(i) a continuation of limited U.S. military aid to India;
(ii) persistence of Pakistan’s fears of India’s intentions against her.
This line of approach, however, had been similarly unproductive. Mr. Bhutto kept reverting to problem of military aid and seemed unable to indicate what the next steps might be to improve U.S.-Pakistan relations. In view of Pakistan's obsessions about India's intentions, it had, therefore, been agreed to treat the problem as a military one and that General Maxwell Taylor should visit Pakistan after the next CENTO Military meeting on November 5th and 6th. The State Department felt Mr. Bhutto had come away in a grumpy frame of mind. They felt too that it might be necessary to correct a possible misapprehension (arising from (ii) above) that the U.S. was now ready to allow contingency planning against India to be undertaken in the military committees of SEATO and CENTO.

4. The State Department felt the future outlook was “foggy”. No solution on Kashmir could be imposed. The U.S. were ready to help promote any settlement but they now had less influence with India and were in no position to press her to make a forward move. As against this, the Soviet Union was more active in providing aid to India and had the double advantage presentationally of being able to supply aid without a Kashmir string and as a counter-balance to Western aid. Serious problems would shortly arise:

(a) “Comingling” in India (receipt of both U.S. and communist aid);
(b) India’s requests for sophisticated equipment including second generation aircraft.
(c) would also arise in Pakistan. Meanwhile limited aid to India would continue and there would be no increase of aid to Pakistan.

5. In discussion it was agreed that the U.K. Ministers could usefully deploy the following broad arguments.

(a) Justification of Western Military Aid to India.

The continuing potential threat from China should be demonstrated in terms of military capabilities rather than by argument about Chinese intentions. On the latter, we could go a long way towards accepting the Pakistan thesis, but nobody could see more than a few months ahead. Chinese victory would be against Pakistan’s interests and require a major corrective by the West with all the dangers of escalation. This danger would remain so long as India did not have the capability to contain the threat. Such an Indian capability would take time to build up;

(b) Western military aid to India had not dramatically revived her military potential against Pakistan, but it had helped India to build up quicker her military capability of countering Chinese attacks. A corresponding increase of military aid to Pakistan from the West was no solution. Mr. Bhutto himself admitted that an arms race was not the answer.
(c) India’s Intentions

It was unthinkable for Commonwealth countries to attack each other; we are simply not prepared to discuss the possibility.

(d) Dangers of the present situation.

We regret the state of Indo-Pakistan relations. Both sides are to blame. It is suicidal for them to continue their present courses. It is in Pakistan’s interest for the West to be in a position of influence in India; this influence would be destroyed if our military aid were suddenly terminated.

**************

The Commonwealth Relations Office in forwarding the record of conversation with Talbot said:

I enclose a record of a conversation between C.R.O. officials and Mr. Talbot of the State Department on 10th October, in which the latter gave us an account of how the talks in Washington with Mr. Bhutto had gone. Talbot was on his way to a meeting of U.S. Heads of Mission in the Middle East. His visit was most timely and helpful in providing us with an opportunity to exchange ideas about the line which we should recommend to Ministers here to take with Bhutto. We have sent you separately copies of the briefs and will of course be letting you know shortly what transpires.

I am copying this letter and enclosure to Banks in Delhi, Forster in Washington and Scott in New York.

(J.A. Molyneux)

South Asia Department

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1760. Note of a Meeting between Pakistan Minister for Foreign Affairs Zulfikar Ali Bhutto and British Defence authorities.

On 17th October, 1963, Mr. Bhutto, Pakistan Minister for External Affairs, accompanied by the Pakistan High Commissioner in London, called on the Minister of Defence. Mr. Pickard (Commonwealth Relations Office) and Mr. Hockaday were also present.

2. MR. BHUTTO said that Pakistan’s main problem in the defence field was the military assistance which the Western powers were giving to India and the consequent imbalance in the Indian sub-continent. He had been disturbed by recent information that the Indians were showing considerable activity on their side of the cease-fire line in Kashmir and were trying to exercise military control over a number of villages. Pakistan was bound to be fearful of possible attack from India.

3. When MR. THORNEYCROFT suggested that the effective defence of the Indian sub-continent could be secured only by the formation of a common front between India and Pakistan Mr. Bhutto said that this had been offered by Pakistan in 1959 but was out of the question now. The Indians had ridiculed the proposal at the time and subsequently (as Martial Law in Pakistan had been relaxed) the offer had been subject to severe criticism in Pakistan. However, the Indian Government had now recognised that there was a danger from Communism, and he thought that disengagement between India and Pakistan might be a possibility if the Kashmir problem could be settled.

4. MR. THORNEYCROFT wondered whether a limited degree of disengagement might be possible even if the Kashmir problem was not settled. Better progress could often be made by tackling the lesser problems first than by attempting to solve major problems immediately. Militarily, he had no doubt that the United Kingdom and the United States had been right to give India some assistance in the face of Chinese attack, but he stressed that it had been on a limited scale and of a character particularly suited to mountain warfare. MR. BHUTTO said that the Indians have provoked the Chinese into attacking them and that in his opinion the Indians had exaggerated the gravity of the crisis in 1962. While Pakistan would naturally welcome a settlement between India and China, she would be in a difficult position if India took advantage of the aid which she had received to turn her guns upon Pakistan when the Chinese danger receded. The argument that if the West did not help India, she would turn to Russia, did not seem to him to hold water if the Indians had really appreciated the menace of Communism. While it was true that progress could often be made (e.g. between the West and Russia) by tackling the smaller issues first, this could only be done on a basis of military and political equality. Pakistan, however, was only one-third the size of India and the longer a settlement of the Kashmir problem was delayed, the better would India be able to absorb those parts of Kashmir which she had occupied. Meanwhile, Pakistan had no choice but to devote 70% of her budget to defence. Pakistan had incurred odium from other Moslem powers by her stand during the Suez crisis, and it was now painful to her to see the West helping India to Pakistan’s disadvantage.

5. MR. THORNEYCROFT said that he did not think that the modest aid which the United Kingdom was affording to India would unduly upset the military balance in the sub-continent, and assured Mr. Bhutto that the United Kingdom Government continued to regard Pakistan as an ally and a friend.

Ministry of Defence, S.W.1.

18th October, 1963

◆◆◆◆◆
1761. SECRET

Telegram from Ambassador of India in the United States
B. K. Nehru to Foreign Secretary Y.D. Gundevia.

I saw the Secretary of State this evening. There were present Ambassador BOWLES and Assistant Secretary TALBOT.

2. As soon as I mentioned the F-104s. BOWLES interrupted to say that it was very strange that the Indian Government did not trust the word of the American Ambassador and wanted their Ambassador to verify it from the Secretary of State. He said that before his departure he had given quite categorical assurances separately to you, to M. J. DESAI and to the Prime Minister that the Americans had no present intention of giving any F-104s to the Pakistanis. I had to confess that I have not been informed of this and I had come because my last information was that he would check from Washington and then let us know. I am afraid that by this failure of communication we have (a) given the impression to the American Ambassador that his word is inadequate and (b) shown up the lack of competence of our own administration.

3. Any way the assurance was repeated to me. There is no present intention of giving any 104s to Pakistan, but the problem of replacement of F-86s remains and will have to be considered.

4. RUSK said that we wished to take the opportunity of asking me what my Government’s views or, in the absence of Government instructions, my views were in regard to the military balance between India and Pakistan. I said I had no specific Government instructions, but I did not understand how it was any function of the United Stated to maintain such a balance. The magic formula at the time of Partition was 17 ½ to 82 ½ (TALBOT interrupted to say that the division of militarily assets was in the ratio of 3 of 1), this reflected the relative areas, populations, etc. of the two countries, we were more industrialized than Pakistan and we had more competent men. Consequently it was obvious that whatever the ratio of armaments, it would be abundantly in India’s favour. The Pakistanis would have to learn to live with the facts of geography and it would not be in the interests of either India or Pakistan or the United States for the least to try and work on the theory of balances. As far as we were concerned, we wanted to re-equip ourselves only to meet the Chinese thereat. If the United States really thought that Pakistan was under the threat of attack from China or the Soviet Union, they could similarly strengthen the Pakistani armed forces to meet that threat. The strength of the Indian forces was irrelevant for this purpose. But did the United States really think that Pakistan was under threat of attack?
5. RUSK said that his concern was not with maintaining any balance. But it was obvious that the strengthening of the armed forces of one side had effects on the other. Here we were concerned with the possibility of the Pakistanis getting F-104s; similarly they were concerned every time we got any military aid.

6. I said as far as their fears were concerned, we would be most happy to do anything that the Americans could suggest to allay them. I had asked AVERELL HARRIMAN quite seriously to tell us what the Americans thought we could do and I made the same offer to the Secretary of State. Furthermore, we would have no objection whatever to the Americans making a public statement that they would defend the Pakistanis in case we attacked them. This should take away all their fears and stop this waste of resources on armaments.

7. RUSK said statements like this would not take away all their fears. The Americans had told us many times they would not permit American arms in Pakistan to be used against us, but had not believed them. As far as the fear of an attack on Pakistan by Soviet Union or China was concerned, he agreed with me that today, in November 1963, there was none. But international situations went on changing, the global strategy of the United States could not be altered from day to day nor could arms aid be turned off or on like a tap. What they did with Pakistan was and would be related to their view of global strategy from time to time. It had nothing to do with keeping a balance between India and Pakistan.

8. For the rest of the time, we discussed internal American politics and sartorial history.
I lunched with GRANT yesterday and the following emerged:

(a) The U.S has had many indications that Pakistan is looking for trouble with India.

(b) Pakistan had delivered another aide-memoire to the United States complaining about us; but the US had refused to take any action.

(c) It would be helpful in these circumstances if we would exercise the maximum possible restraint so that if trouble started we could be able clearly to prove that we did not start it. In particular we might:
   (i) not alter status-quo of CHAKNOT and
   (ii) renew our offer to talk on the Assam influx troubles.

(d) TAYLOR’s visit had been cancelled not because of any protest by Pakistan, but because he was genuinely occupied. He would not go even to the Cento meeting at Ankara as:
   (i) CABOT LODGE was coming back from Viet Nam to report and
   (ii) the military budget for the Fiscal 65 had to be prepared.

(e) He would, however, come to India about 10th December via the Pacific and then go on to Pakistan. He would thus be able to speak more convincingly to the Pakistanis about the minimal nature of the American arms aid to India and it falling short of our requirements to meet the Chinese threat.

(f) General ADAMS, Commander-in-chief Strike Command, Florida (who accompanied AVERELL HARRIMAN) in whose command we now lay would visit India at the time of the Air Exercises. Presumably this has been cleared with you.

(g) The US consider that we needed no more than 12 divisions to face the Chinese and no more than 4 divisions to face the Pakistanis and for other duties. They would be loathe so to strengthen us that we could have a 21 division army even if technically the rest of the army equipment was financed by us. They did not consider that the Chinese were in any position to attack us in strength specially as the Soviets had cut off supply of spare parts to China and the Chinese Air Force was obsolescent.

(h) We would not at least now get the supersonic aircraft we wanted even though American military experts thought we needed them because-
(i) with the finance available other higher priority equipment had to be supplied and
(ii) of Pakistani objections.

(i) Pakistani F-86 aircraft was getting obsolescent. Spare parts were no longer available and could only be supplied through a world-wide cannibalization programme. These would have to be replaced by more modern aircraft. There was no intention, however, of giving Pakistani additional arms simply because India got arms aid.

(j) BALL had told AYUB and BHUTTO had been told here quite clearly that it was the unalterable policy of the United States to give India arms aid to the extent that they judged we needed it to meet the Chinese threat.

(k) That the Paks had also been told the Americans did not consider that there was any danger of any attack from India. They did however recognise that the Paks had such a fear.

2. The lunch lasted two and a half hours and the above was the essence of what GRANT said in my and not in his language. It does not also contain the arguments and counter arguments that went on. The general effect left on me was that the American were getting slowly more fed up than before at Pakistani antics. There was throughout the conversation no mention of Kashmir.

✦✦✦✦✦
1763.

SECRET

Telegram from Foreign Secretary Y.D. Gundevia to Ambassador in U.S., B.K. Nehru.

New Delhi, December 17, 1963.

TELEGRAM

From: Foreign New Delhi
To: Indembassy, Washington

IMMEDIATE

No.24305 17 December 1963

First of Two Parts

B.K. Nehru from Gundevia

Following is summary of General Taylor’s discussion with Defence Minister on December 16 afternoon. Bowles. Goodpaster, Kelly were present as also Secretary, Additional Secretary and Joint Secretary Defence Ministry.

2. Taylor said that he was hoping to get a clear picture of our assessment of the Chinese threat and the short term and long term plans we might have to meet the Chinese threat. He referred to forward programme based on five years Defence plan introduced by Secretary McNamara for planning and controlling major programmes of Defence services in USA.

3. Defence Minister stated that in our short term plan army was being expanded. The modernization of its equipment and development of defence potential to sustain the forces were the long term objectives. He referred to first phase of expansion of defence production base comprising the setting up of six new factories. Defence Secretary stated that in addition to the small arms ammunitions factory where 7.62 MM ammunition and 80 mm aircraft ammunition will be made. The three other major units would be (a) Engineering factory for producing mortar and artillery shells, (b) propellants factory and (c) explosives factory.

4. In regard to aircraft production, Defence Minister stated that HF-24 and Avro were under production and plans for establishing the production of MIG - 21 were under way. General Taylor enquired whether we would be only assembling the MIG-21 or we intend to produce various components and sub-assemblies. Defence Minister stated that the plan was produce the components and..........................
Second and Last Part

Reference was made to production of tanks in the Avadi factory. TAYLOR enquired about our policy on tank. Defence Secretary stated that air-portable light tanks were required for operating against China. The AMX light was found effective in Ladakh near Chushul. It can also be used in NEFA near foothills. General TAYLOR stated that in Korea the armoured tanks were not found effective.

There was some discussion regarding the capacity of China to sustain in Tibet troops in continuous combat. Defence Secretary mentioned that according to certain estimates prepared by U.S. and U.K. authorities, the Chinese can support 175,000 troops in battle continuously. The Chinese were also improving road communications in Tibet and building expensive military roads.

TAYLOR stressed the importance of reinforcing and improving the intelligence set up as timely intelligence could facilitate quicker response.

There was some discussion about the objective China sought to achieve when she launched the attack in October 1962. Defence Minister stated that apparently it was a show of strength to impress the countries in South East Asia. Building up defence potential in India which would enable us to throw back any aggression would counteract the damage done in 1962.
SECRET

Telegram from Indian Embassy in Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

TELEGRAM

From : Indembassy Washington
To : Foreign New Delhi

IMMEDIATE

N.1229 December 19, 1963

Gundevia from B.K.Nehru

General TAYLOR’s visit.

2. Many thanks for your Telegram 4596, 24304 and 24305.

3. I saw Acting Secretary GEORGE BALL last evening, the appointment having been arranged earlier on. He began by asking whether I had had reports about TAYLOR’s conversations in Delhi and I was pleased for once to be able to give an affirmative answer. He said he was sorry that this leak had taken place on the naval issue and thereby had unnecessarily complicated affairs. Anyway, everything had turned out all right and Prime Minister’s statement had been most helpful. It was desirable to keep this matter on a technical plane.

4. I asked him what the thinking behind this move was. He said that they desired to maintain an American presence in the waters of the Indian Ocean in order to demonstrate that the United States was interested in the defence of the area and American armed might would be available if aggression took place. There was no question of stationing any part of the fleet in the Indian Ocean or of having a base there. Ships would come and go at intervals. I asked whether this move was purely psychological or whether it had any great military value. He said it was only psychological for although the ships would not always be there, they would be available on call.

5. We than talked of many other affairs and then back to TAYLOR’s visit. He said that TAYLOR had been asked to discuss our long term military plan and what part the United States could play in it. Thinking here was that there should be arms aid for India on a regular, well worked out continuous basis in the light of her defence needs. However, the plan would have to be agreed upon as if India went round buying equipment from her own funds, this would diminish her capacity for economic development and would mean that the United States was financing armaments in excess of what she considered necessary. Also it would not be possible to agree to India purchasing Soviet arms and equipment in pursuance of this plan.

6. I said I could understand the importance of a plan being agreed upon. I should have thought that the same method should be followed in financing an arms plan as was followed in the plan for economic development viz., that we agreed upon the plan and then bought equipment from wherever aid was available. What was his objection to our taking Soviet aid. Surely he realised that a condition like this would mean the alteration of a major policy. He said that a plan for economic development was different from a military plan. His objection to Soviet equipment was one of security. Further the Soviets had not really given us any arms aid, The Soviet arms deals were really out of our own resources. Moreover use of Soviet equipment meant dependence on the Soviets and this was undesirable.

7. I said that as far as security was concerned I understood the objection. As for whether the Soviet purchases were on a commercial basis or not, this depended very much on what definition of aid one employed. As for wanting us to be exclusively dependent on the West for our arms, this he must well know was going to be a difficult proposition to sell. He said he had been very blunt about it: this is what they wanted, but obviously everything was open to negotiation. I said I was glad that he had been blunt; it was always better to know what the other fellow really wanted instead of having to waste one’s time on conjectures as to what he had in mind. He said the United States would also look for some reduction in the tensions with Pakistan for reasons well known. At this I laughed and said was that all? He said, yes. I said, no, he had forgotten a third condition which was that we should be prepared to use our Armed Forces to help the United States in South East Asia. He said, no, no, that was not a condition at all. I said it had often been talked about and perhaps would be put forward at the next round. He said he was aware that there was some thinking on these lines in the Department, but it certainly was not his. He realised that India had problems enough of its own and would not for a long time be able to take care of anybody else. As far as the United States was concerned its great interest was to enable India to defend herself militarily and become economically independent.

8. I then said that the United States view being that there was no danger of an attack from China, what was the necessity of our having any armaments at all. He said it was true that at this moment the American assessment was that there were no preparations in China to attack India. But if anybody said that China would never attack India again, he would be claiming a degree of prophetic power which he (BALL) certainly did not have. India should be in a position where they did not live in continuous fear of Chinese attack, but Indian armament should not be in excess of a realistic assessment of that danger. All these things, he repeated, were subject to negotiation and discussion. He was only alerting me to American thinking on this point.

* * * * *

(Para 9 and 10 dealt with Cambodia and Vietnam.)

11. I mentioned to him the recent provocation of Pakistan towards India, asked him whether he had any explanation for them and also what they had said to BHUTTO while he was here. He said he had no explanation for these provocations and could not decide how much of Pakistan's actions and behavior was due to internal political compulsions. The only effective conversation that BHUTTO had here was for ten minutes with the President in which the president had told him that Pakistan's flirtation with China was destroying the immense fund of goodwill which that country had in the United States. At the moment however, Pakistan was preparing to welcome their good friend CHOU-EN-LAI.

12. I am seeing RUSK and ALEXIS JOHNSON tomorrow. Please send me immediately information on any further TARYOR talks that might have taken place.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
2. I spoke to the American Ambassador about this today. I told him that there had been references in Parliament about the Pakistani planes crossing the cease fire line and there was some criticism in the country that American equipment was being used by Pakistan against us in Kashmir. Mr. Chester Bowles obviously resented my speaking to him about this and immediately said that he was surprised that I was raising this question with him. I told him that there was no suggestion in what I had said that America had a hand in this in this incident on the cease fire line; but since the intrusion of these planes across the border had been referred to in Parliament, I had to draw his attention to this.

3. Mr. Bowles then said, “Are you asking me this question officially?” I told the Ambassador that I was asking him no question at all, because I knew the answer. I could myself write out the answer in advance, which was that the planes were Pakistan’s property and were piloted by Pakistan pilots and not by Americans, and America was, therefore, not responsible for the intrusion. I was asking him no question, I repeated; I was only telling him, factually, that this issue had been raised and discussed in Parliament and agitated public opinion in the country.

4. Mr. Bowles, on this, turned to me and said that if I was asking him this question officially, he wanted to ask me a question, and that was that he wanted to know whether all the criticism of the USA that was being voiced by Mr. Chagla, of late, represented the official views of the Government of India. I was extremely surprised at the manner in which Mr. Bowles spoke about the Education Minister and I told him that I did not quite understand him. The Ambassador went on to say that there was far too much “needling” of the United States going on, today, and he felt it his business to tell me that it was “about time this needling was stopped”. He repeated the question whether everything that Mr. Chagla had said, recently, about the United States represented the view of the Government of India. I had to tell Mr. Bowles that since he persisted in the question, Mr. Chagla, as he knew, was not quite a private individual; he was a Cabinet Minister in the Government. But I added that the Ambassador seemed to be out to misunderstand the Minster, because, as far as I could see, he had not said anything, today, beyond what he had already said in the Security
5. I, naturally, did not want this discussion to go on any further and I tried to stop the conversation by changing the subject. Mr. Bowles, however, did not call off the discussion without telling me that he intended speaking to the Defence Minister about all this. “This needling has gone a little too far, I want to tell him”, said the Ambassador; and this was not going to be of much help, according to him, just when the Defence Minister was about to go to the States for important discussions.

6. I am sending a copy of this note to the Defence Secretary.

Sd/Y.D. Gundevia
14.4.64

* There was a Calling Attention Notice in the Lok Sabha on 13-4-64 on the reported intrusion by Pakistan Air Force plane across the Cease Fire Line in J & K and the members had demanded that since the aircraft involved had been supplied by the United States to Pakistan and it was being for Indian air violations, the fact of the use of US aided aircraft intruding into Indian air space be brought to the notice of the United States. Mr. Gundevia was speaking to the American Ambassador in fulfillment of the demand of the members of the parliament.
Note of the Call by the US Ambassador in India on the Secretary to Prime Minister.

New Delhi, April 29, 1965.

The U.S. Ambassador, Mr. Chester Bowles, called on me this afternoon. In a somewhat discursive conversation in which he referred to the visit of Ambassador Lodge and the Vietnam situation, he made a number of references to the Kutch border situation. The salient points are the following:

(a) The U.S. Ambassador in Pakistan had got scent of Pakistan using American tanks against India last Saturday itself and had spoken strongly to the Pakistan Government pointing out that while it was permissible to use such equipment in the event of an attack on Pakistan territory from any source, their use in what even Pakistan described as disputed area was contrary to the agreement and might lead to a cutting of Defence aid and supplies to Pakistan.

(b) The material and photographs supplied by the Indian Army left no doubt in the minds of U.S. Military experts in Delhi that the photographs were of American tanks and that the terrain was that of the Rann of Kutch. He stated that knowing the angle at which and height from which the photographs had been taken, experts in the U.S.A. would be able to locate the exact spot where these tanks were and the photographs were taken. It was only after this verification that the U.S Government could take any effective action. It was important that Pakistan should not be allowed to justify its action by the plea which it has just made, namely, that Indians were using American ammunition in this fighting. He urged that foreign press correspondents should be allowed to go and see things for themselves. The very fact that Pakistan was allowing foreign correspondents to go to the border, and India was not, could well be exploited to India’s disadvantage.

(c) India’s case was so strong that the verdict on the question of where the boundary between Sind and Kutch was, would undoubtedly be in her favour even if the matter was taken to The Hague or placed before any arbitrators. Having regard to this, India had an excellent opportunity of inflicting a crushing diplomatic defeat on Pakistan and getting international acceptance of her stand.

(d) On the other hand, if India had recourse to Military action at some other point which was not under dispute, the position could become confused and Pakistan would again be able to get some international sympathy and support.
(e) His own judgment was that Pakistan did not embark upon this adventure without some understanding with China and if India attacked Pakistan on any other point, China would take the plea of helping Pakistan against aggression and start another attack on India in which third countries would find it difficult to intervene.

(f) He had been in close touch with the U.K. High Commissioner regarding the ceasefire proposals. He was amazed that Pakistan had not yet accepted it. He was aware of our criticism and concern about the British proposal which might have the effect of freezing a ceasefire line with the Armies of the two countries on either side. The British, he said, had, however, agreed to sort this out.

2. These points were not made one by one, but emerged in a general talk about the border situation which, he said, had compelled him to cancel his holiday in the Kulu valley. I told him that the Prime Minister had, in his speech, spelt out our position in very clear terms. The United States could, it seemed to me, exercise a good deal of pressure on Pakistan to follow the path of peaceful negotiations. In any event, the United States could take prompt and firm action regarding the abuse of U.S. arms aid by Pakistan. This could greatly improve the U.S. image in India.

Sd/-
(L.K.Jha)
29-4-1965

Prime Minister
SECRET

Telegram from Indian Ambassador in Washington to Foreign Secretary.

TELEGRAM

From: Indembassy, Washington
To: Foreign, New Delhi

IMMEDIATE

No. 550. May 7, 1965

Foreign Secretary From Ambassador

KUTCH

I called on the Secretary of State yesterday.

2. I said I had come to discuss not the fighting in Kutch but the use of American arms against India. I gave him a large scale (American) map showing how the border was marked and where the fighting took place establishing thereby a clear case of aggression.

3. I then gave him the photographs of tanks etc, sent by you pointing out that this was evidence additional to what had already been given to their people in Delhi and by us to the State Department here. I pointed out that according to our information Pakistan had at first denied the use of American arms and refused to permit American observers to go to the area. Later it had agreed to American observers going but President AYUB had at the same time said publicly (according to press reports) that the arms were his and he intended to use them as he pleased.

4. This I submitted was in complete breach of the assurances which had been given to us by President EISENHOWER, Mr. DULLES and Ambassador BUNKER to whose exact words I drew his attention. This matter was of extreme importance to us because militarily one of the inarticulate major premises of our defence policy had been that the Americans would never permit the invasion of Pakistan by India. Politically it was important because of credibility of American assurances was in question. I drew his attention to the reaction of Mr. ATAL BEHARI VAJPAAEE whose party was completely pro-American in foreign policy and of Mr. FRANK MORAES (Editor of Indian Express) another pro-American.

5. He said that the Pakistanis had agreed to American observers now being sent. He was not aware of any statement by President AYUB that he was free to use these arms as he pleased that the Americans had taken up the question with “both sides” and that the important thing now was to see that the fighting stopped. I said I did not understand the reference to “both sides.” We had been scrupulous in our observance of the conditions on which we had got American military aid we had immediately permitted American observers in Kutch and they had reported that no American equipment had been used. Why this eternal equation of both sides when one was clearly in breach of the law and the other had clearly observed it? He said that there had been Pakistani complaints that we had used American equipment and therefore it was incumbent on the Americans to investigate. I said that I agreed that an investigation had to be made but that having been done and one side having been found innocent how did “both sides” arise any further? American action with Pakistan had so far obviously been inadequate for though they had taken up this question with Pakistan some time ago the tanks had been used even after American representations.

6. He said if we thought American action was inadequate what would we want the Americans to do? I said it was not for me to advise the Government of the United States on how to fulfill their assurances. He said that answer was not enough. If we thought certain action was inadequate what was our concept of adequacy? I said I did not know what my Government thought for I had no instructions on that but if he wanted my personal opinion I would say that thing to do would be to stop further military aid to Pakistan. As I had said to him before I did not for the life of me see why military aid went on being given to Pakistan and why in particular tanks were supplied to them? Where exactly were the tanks to be used against the Russians and the Chinese? He said if I wanted the Americans to break with Pakistan “this was not on”. I said I know fully that “this was not on;” — he had asked me for my opinion and I had given it and I hoped that at some time I would be able to change American policy.

7. He said that American action had not been inadequate because it had resulted in the fighting being stopped as a result of America reminding both sides that their arms were not to be used in this conflict. I said there were a variety of reasons for the lull in the fighting and though I would not presume to deny that American representations against the use of their arms might have had some effect on the Pakistani there was no question about their having any effect on us because we had neither used them nor intended to use them. To my mind the real deterrent had been the pressure on our Government to invade Pakistan at point of our own choosing. He said “with American arms?” I said “with our own”. He said there had been Indian troop movements of units equipped with American arms. I said I knew nothing about this. However the extent to which we went in honouring our commitments was shown by the fact that we went on being shot at in Dahagram without retaliating because the armies on that frontier had been American equipped we had to transport troop from elsewhere to return the fire.

8. The conversation was somewhat repetitive. He must have used the term
"both sides" at least half a dozen times and every time he did so I picked on the phrase. I told him that it was high time the State Department stopped behaving like a statue of justice blindfolded and holding the scales even that there was no reason at all to equate India with Pakistan that the difference between citizens who obey the law and those who break the law had to be recognized that it was not sufficient for a judge to limit himself to propounding the law to both the complainant and the accused particularly when the evidence was overwhelming etc. etc. etc.

9. He also went on saying that the important thing was to arrange for a cessation of hostilities. I insisted that this was not what I had come to talk about. The present hostilities might or might not be stopped. The important point was whether America was going to be able to stop the use of her arms in the future.

10. At one stage Deputy Assistant Secretary Ambassador HANDLEY who was present asked whether it would not be possible for the Government to quieten the press and Parliament in regard to their criticism of the United States for the use of American tanks. I said this would be difficult because Government itself was not convinced that the Americans had lived up to their assurances and if one were not convinced oneself it was very difficult to convince other people.

11. RUSK said in conclusion that he did not want to do anything which would interfere with the negotiations going on for a cease fire. He would wait for the report of the American observers from Pakistan and then see what further action might be required. I said I agreed that nothing should be done which would come in the way of the cessation of hostilities but I hoped adequate action would be taken and publicized in order to satisfy public opinion in India.

12. In the course of the discussion the point was made that we had used the 50th Para brigade which had been equipped with MAP equipment in Kutch..
Could you enlighten me on this please? Also give me some information on these alleged troops movements.

13. I have just received your 4445 dated May 6th. As I have already taken up the matter I am not doing anything further.

◆◆◆◆◆
1768.

SECRET

Telegram from Indian Ambassador in Washington to Ministry of External Affairs.

TELEGRAM

From :  Indembassy, Washington.
To :  Foreign, New Delhi.

IMMEDIATE

No. 562.  May 11, 1965

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador.

Rann of Kutch.

Over the week-end another officer of this Embassy and I had occasion to meet officers of the State Department. We made clear in these informal conversations that the position taken by RUSK with me was not satisfactory to us. We also learnt that RUSK was perturbed at the anti-America atmosphere building up in Delhi.

2. I was accordingly sent for by TALBOT this morning. He said he wished to give an oral reply to the note presented by the Ministry to the American Embassy in Delhi on the subject of the use of American arms. He assured me that the Americans had taken up this question with the Pakistanis with considerable vigor and they had reason to believe that these representations were a major factor in bringing about the cessation of hostilities in Kutch. This judgment was based on the reactions that the Americans have had from high quarters in Pakistan “including the highest”.

3. The American position was a difficult one. What Delhi apparently wanted was a public condemnation of the use of these arms by Pakistan. The Americans had considered this question but their judgment was that the situation required quiet diplomacy and not public condemnation. Critical statements made in public and sometimes even those made in private which leaked had a tendency in sovereign States to cause a hardening of the position rather than a relaxation. (As an example he cited the Prime Minister’s statement in Parliament on May 7th about American interference in our desire to retaliate). The Americans were more concerned with helping hostilities to cease than with making a public show of what they had been doing which, he again assured me, had been both vigorous and effective. When the dust settled on this conflict “we would all have to sit down again” and consider what should be done.
4. From my questioning it appears that the first time effective representation was made to Pakistan was on the 27th April (a few hours before I had seen him) by TALBOT to the Pakistan Ambassador. This message did not get to the highest quarters till the 30th April and at that time AYUB was still in East Bengal and his orders took some time to issue.

5. I pointed out to him that the points of view from which India and America seemed to be approaching this problem were different. America was concerned with stopping hostilities; we were concerned with the future. The Americans had given us assurance that their arms given to Pakistan would not be allowed to be used aggressively against us. Many people in India had doubted all the time and they still doubted that there were no means of enforcing these assurances. If now that a flagrant case had arisen, we did not see any action being taken, we would have to conclude that these assurances were not capable of being implemented. This would mean a major reexamination of our defence policy and the possibility of the creation of another army for the sole purposes of defending ourselves against American-aided Pakistan.

6. He said that if we ever did this, this would mean an addition to Pakistan Defence forces which they were now financially well in a position to undertake. An arms race of this kind would be disastrous. Though they could not tell us in exact terms what they had done it was obvious that the use of American arms had been stopped in Kutch. We should not therefore feel that America assurances would not be fulfilled. He hoped that the Government of India would understand the situation and try to calm down the press and the Public instead of going along with the present passions as they seemed to be.

7. I said I would faithfully pass on what he said. We might differ from their judgment in not making a public condemnation. However the assurance that whatever had been done was not the end and that the matter would be taken up as soon as the peace machinery started working in Kutch was valuable.

8. TALBOT went on to say that occasions of conflict should be avoided. Kashmir was perennial; the Kutch dispute had not gone beyond the 1960 stage and the Berubari affair was still pending after so many years. Would it not be possible to expedite hearing before the Supreme Court so that at least one cause of conflict would disappear? (This point has been held against us quite often. Could you kindly enlighten me on the position?)

◆◆◆◆◆
Dear Mr. President,

On April 16, 1965 Ambassador Chester Bowles conveyed to me your message informing me that for various reasons it would not be convenient for you to receive me in Washington on the 2nd June as previously arranged. In deference to your wishes, I had naturally and I must confess with some sense of disappointment, to cancel the visit to the United States which was scheduled for early June. You have suggested that I should visit the USA in autumn. I am, however, not able to say at present whether my parliamentary and other commitments will permit me to do so.

You have referred to our close association in many common endeavours. We greatly value this in a spirit of mutual understanding.

I was happy to meet Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge who also handed me your letter of April 15. I was interested to learn from him about the Vietnam situation. The situation is really depressing and dangerous. I hope that it might be possible for circumstances to arise which will permit of a dialogue and a peaceful solution of the Vietnam problem. I know the same thought must be uppermost in your mind also. In today's situation when China is pursuing an aggressive policy, it is difficult to anticipate with any degree of certainty, the likely course of events. But believe me, Mr. President, I do feel sincerely that the more rational elements might possibly respond well if it were possible for you to consider a cessation of the air strikes. In any case it would greatly strengthen the chances of a peaceful solution. Such a decision on your part would be a significant contribution towards the promotion of world peace and would be in keeping with the high statesmanship which the United States has displayed in moments of crisis.

We ourselves have been passing through a difficult situation. You are no doubt informed of the recent attack on us by Pakistan in the Kutch - Sind border area. This has roused a great deal of feeling. We are a peaceful nation wedded to the pursuit of peace and economic development but it seems our neighbours China and Pakistan are determined to provoke us. We are exercising a great deal of patience and we have responded positively to Prime Minister Harold Wilson's initiative to bring about a ceasefire and restoration of status quo ante. I am afraid Pakistan has been raising all kinds of difficulties regarding ceasefire and restoration of status quo as on 1st January, 1965 which have prevented an agreement being reached. The fact that Pakistan has been using United States armour and equipment against us has naturally caused much concern in our country. I know, however, that your Government has already taken up this matter with the Government of Pakistan.

With warmest personal regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Lal Bahadur

H.E. Lyndon B. Johnson,
President of the United States of America,
The white House,
Washington D.C.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1770.

SECRET

Letter from Indian Ambassador in Turkey Sadath Ali Khan to Foreign Secretary C. S. Jha.

Embassy of India
Ankara

No. ANK- 101(2)/66-PS April 29, 1966

My dear Foreign Secretary:

This is in continuation of my telegram No. 50 of today’s date regarding CENTO Conference.

2. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the CENTO Foreign Ministers meeting at Ankara from 20th to 22nd April, 1966, is that it brought into sharp focus the divergent views of participants over essential policy matters and the growing disenchantment of the Asian partners with the architects of the alliance – Britain and America. In fact, it would not be wrong to say that Iran, Pakistan and Turkey, each played or tried to play its own game regardless of the presence of the referees. The Anglo-American Foreign Ministers believe that CENTO is essentially a Military Alliance, designed to serve as a shield against communist “subversion and aggression”. The Americans who are keen on keeping up appearances at all cost and as long as possible, did not even receive the moral support they desired so fervently for their policies in Vietnam. Similarly, the British were isolated concerning Rhodesia. The Asian members, no longer docile and pliable, were self-assertive, disgruntled and dissatisfied. Their interest in a crusade against communism has declined considerably since the halcyon days of Dulles, but they would like to take advantage of the alliance to promote their own separate national interests and use CENTO’s military resources to combat their “enemies”. Thus, Pakistan’s main preoccupation was with the Kashmir problem; Turkey’s chief interest was Cyprus and Iran’s the Persian Gulf.

3. Bhutto, who arrived like a bird of ill omen on April 20, was discourteous and disdainful. According to reliable sources, he did not even care to give advance notice of his arrival either to the Turkish Foreign Office or to the CENTO Secretariat. In any case, he arrived late for the Conference which annoyed the senior and the junior members of Club alike. His performance as usual was fatuous and childish and the references in his opening speech (read out by the Pakistani Ambassador) to “treacherous attack” etc were deplored by practically all the delegations. While he succeed in browbeating his colleagues into making a reference to the Kashmir problem, for the first time, in the final communiqué, I understand that this led to a good deal of argument at the conference before Bhutto was allowed to have his way. Both the British Ambassador and the Iranian Foreign Minister, Abbas Aram, whom I saw on Friday, April 22, told me that Bhutto was far from satisfied. We understand from reliable Conference sources that other members while agreeing to the inclusion of the Kashmir item as a “regional” problem in the communiqué rejected Bhutto’s draft which would have had the effect of outright condemnation of India.

4. Bhutto is reported to have demanded increased American economic aid and resumption of military aid to Pakistan within the framework of CENTO and SEATO. He also strongly criticized the economic aid and reported resumption of military aid to India by USA. He stated the Treaties such as Cento and Seato are of not much use to Pakistan in safeguarding her sovereignty. Bhutto hinted that Pakistan may walk out of CENTO if USA continued military and economic aid to India, while the Kashmir dispute remained unsolved.

5. I believe that Pakistan’s relations with People’s Republic of China came up for discussion at the Conference. Bhutto reiterated usual Pakistani plea that his country’s relations with the People’s Republic of China do not come in the way of peaceful relations with the Western allies, specially USA and UK. Bhutto claimed that Pakistan had done nothing to lose the confidence and understanding of the West. On the contrary, he stressed that Pakistan’s friendly relations with China will ultimately be beneficial to the West because Pakistan could serve as a bridge between the West and Communist China.

6. Outside the Conference. Bhutto is reported to have told the other regional members, namely, Iran and Turkey, that he has brought a message from President Ayub Khan suggesting that a special meeting should be held among the Regional Cooperation Development countries on the question of “full cooperation in military and defence activities among the three countries outside the control and jurisdiction of USA and UK.

7. Bhutto is reported to have tried to persuade the Turkish Government to consider establishing, at an appropriate level, diplomatic relations with the People’s Republic of China. This however, was denied by Bhutto at a press conference in Istanbul.

8. The overall reaction is that the regional countries were unhappy with the outcome of the conference as they were not promised any military aid which is their main concern by either the UK or the USA. Their only reason for satisfaction is that in the final communiqué each country was able to include its dispute with its neighbouring country. For their part the Western Powers are satisfied that CENTO has survived a crisis.

9. I enclose herewith a copy of the communiqué together with a copy each of the inaugural statements made by the Foreign Ministers of the participating countries (not included here).

With kind regards.

Yours Sincerely

Sd/- Sadath Ali Khan

Shri C.S. Jha,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.
Statement by Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan in Parliament on Pakistan’s military build-up.

New Delhi, August 1, 1966.

Since a large number of questions have been asked by Hon’ble Members about the military build-up in Pakistan, I have considered it appropriate to make a brief general statement on this subject. As members will no doubt realize, I can only give broad indications. It will not be in public interest for me to discuss details.

Government are aware that ever since the period of Indo-Pakistan conflict in September 1965, Pakistan has been making all-out efforts to increase its armed strength. Very sizable new raisings of armed personnel have been taken up and equipment for the Pakistan Army, Air Force and Navy obtained. New fixed defences are being constructed and others improved. Ordnance factories are being set up and expanded.

In the Pakistan-occupied area of Jammu and Kashmir there has been an increase in the strength of Armed Forces. Communications improvement, from the military point of view, has also been going on apace. The training of irregulars has been continuing. Pakistan has also increased its troops and air force in East Pakistan.

In these large-scale preparations Pakistan has been receiving a large measure of help from China, by way of supply of equipment, including tanks and aeroplanes, and foreign exchange for purchase of arms elsewhere. Chinese assistance for training of armed personnel has also come to notice. Pakistan has also obtained assistance of one or two other countries for the supply of arms and equipment and, as intermediaries, for purchase of equipment in countries which would not directly sell to Pakistan.

We hope that Pakistan will honour its obligations under the Tashkent Agreement not to have recourse to force. As a step necessary towards this, Pakistan should normalise its relations with India. Be that as it may, the House may rest assured that Government are alive to their primary duty of maintaining the security and territorial integrity of the country and will deal with any development according to the needs of the situation.
Hon. Members have referred to certain Press reports that have appeared, both in India and the United States, regarding the resumption of arms aid by the United States to Pakistan.

We have been in touch with the U.S. authorities through our Mission at Washington and have conveyed our views to them. My colleague, the Minister of defence, informed this House yesterday about the nature of military equipment and sources from which Pakistan has been augmenting its arms arsenal and the grave consequences that follow from this. We have informed the U.S. authorities that the reported resumption of military supplies, such as spare parts for tanks and jet aircraft to Pakistan at a time when the U.S. Government cannot be unaware of Pakistan’s continuing belligerent postures against India, its massing of forces along the Cease-fire Line and acquisition of large quantities of Mig aircraft, bombers, tanks and ordnance factories etc. from China, will only encourage Pakistan in its aggressive and hostile designs against India. A second round of hostilities against India is being freely talked about in Pakistan and it has been proved beyond doubt that the aim of Pakistan in acquiring arms from the USA, is to use them against India and not against China or the Soviet Union or any other state. We have informed the US Government that the Indian Government and public opinion would, therefore, with good reasons regard the supply of arms to Pakistan, as a very serious threat to the security of India.

So far, we have been assured by the United States Government that they have not agreed to give any armaments or military supplies to Pakistan.
In pursuit of the recent conversation between the Indian Government and the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany with regard to a number of F-86 Sabre Jet planes, delivered from Germany to Iran and at present temporarily in Pakistan for overhauling and maintenance, the German Government took up the matter with the Iranian Government. Stressing the full confidence of the German Government, according to which the transfer of these planes to third countries is not permitted without German approval, the Secretary of the Foreign Office in Bonn, Mr. Rolf Lahr, recently informed the Iranian Ambassador in Bonn of the anxieties of the Indian Government in this respect. He stressed the German Government’s strong interest to avoid anything which might disturb Indo-German relations and consequently asked for the Iranian Government’s assistance to clarify the matter in the light of the questions posed by the Indian Government. At the same time Secretary Lahr mentioned a number of practical ways how this clarification could be brought about and how in future India’s anxieties could best be met.

The Iranian Ambassador responded immediately in the most cooperative manner. After informing and consulting his Government the Iranian Ambassador only a few days later formally reiterated his country’s willingness to honour the obligations agreed upon when the F-86 planes were sold to the Iranian Government. He appreciated the German Government’s position and was aware of the interest of all parties concerned to avoid any disturbance of the existing friendly relations between India and Germany. He thus approved the following points:

1. The number of F-86 planes at present in Pakistan for overhauling and maintenance shall be reduced.

2. In future planes sent to Pakistan for overhauling and maintenance should not exceed a number of 12 planes which each time should be flown in one group to Pakistan.

3. The German Military Attaché in Tehran will be continuously informed about the number of planes serviced in Pakistan and the duration of their stay.

The Iranian Government having agreed to the above mentioned points, the German Government feels to have done everything possible and compatible with normal diplomatic practice to meet the anxieties expressed by the Indian Government. It hopes that the steps so far undertaken by the German Government will be duly appreciated by the Indian Government.

According to instructions received from the German Government a further formal reply to the Indian Memorandum of August 12, 1966, will follow in due course.

New Delhi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1774. Letter from External Affairs Minister M. C. Chagla to Pakistan Foreign Minister Sharifuddin Pirzada.
New Delhi, February 25, 1967.

Excellency,

We have seen the text of His Excellency President Ayub Khan’s speech at the Pakistan Institute for International Affairs on January 28, in which the President, if I may respectfully say so, spoke eloquently on the need for diverting to the task of increasing the production of food and the necessities of life, the resources that are at present being used by both India and Pakistan on arms and armament. Agreeing with the sentiments of His Excellency the President, the Government of India consider that an earnest effort should be made by the two countries to reach agreement aimed at bringing about reduction in the expenditure on arms in both countries. They suggest a meeting at the level of officials to discuss this important question.

Accept Excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

(M.C. Chagla)

His Excellency
Mr. Sharifuddin; Pirzada,
Sitara-e-Pakistan,
Foreign Minister of Pakistan,
Islamabad.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Letter from Pakistan Foreign Minister Sharifuddin Pirzada to External Affairs Minister M. C. Chagla.
Rawalpindi, April 7, 1967.

Foreign Minister
Pakistan

Rawalpindi, April 7, 1967

Excellency,

I thank you for your letter dated 25th February, 1967, which was handed to me by your High Commissioner in Pakistan, His Excellency Mr. Samarendra Sen.

We have given careful thought to your proposal for a meeting of officials to discuss, the subject of reciprocal arms limitation. We have also had occasion to discuss with your High Commissioner the general question of relations between our two countries. He has, no doubt, conveyed to you our thinking on these subjects.

You are aware of our views that the question of arms limitation can be realistically tackled if an effort is made simultaneously to negotiate a settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, which has been and remains the cause of continuing ill-will and tension between Pakistan and India. It continues to be our view that any approach which ignores the necessity of reaching a lasting settlement of this basic dispute between our two countries would be unrealistic.

The Government of Pakistan have regretted the fact the cautious optimism expressed on this question in the communiqué we jointly issued at the conclusion of the Rawalpindi Conference last year was belied by subsequent developments. I must also express my disappointment at the fact that discussions held in the last year between our two governments at various levels have not led to a break in the deadlock. I can assure you that we remain ready nevertheless to enter into negotiations with your Government for the settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and on other matters including the question of bringing down the strength of forces on both sides to reasonable levels. I have asked our High Commissioner at Delhi to take up the thread where it was left. If you consider that more detailed discussions now be held on these matters, we shall be willing to depute other officials to assist him in these talks.

Yours sincerely

Sd/-

(Syed Sharifuddin Pirzada)

M.C. Chagla,
Foreign Minister
Government of India, New Delhi.
1776. Aide Memoire from the Embassy of the United States of America handed over by the US Ambassador in India to the Minister of External Affairs.

New Delhi, April 10, 1967.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The United States has concluded an extensive review of its military supply policy toward South Asia.

United States policies toward India and Pakistan are designed among other things to encourage the highest priority allocation of resources to agricultural and economic development, to assist in each nation’s effort to become economically self-reliant and to foster the reduction of tensions between the two countries by restraining military expenditures and arms acquisitions.

The record of American development loans, food, and technical assistance speaks for itself as to what the United States has done and is ready to do for India, a nation with which the United States shares a deep commitment to democratic values and aspirations. The United States Government believes that a viable and increasingly prosperous India is essential to a stable and peaceful Asia.

United States military supply policy is only one relatively small element of this larger United States Government policy, which is designed to contribute to the security, integrity and economic well-being of the Subcontinent and Asia as a whole.

With respect to India and Pakistan, the United States Government is guided by the conviction that the basic security and economic well-being of both countries depend on the two nations finding a way to lessen tensions between them and thus to reduce the share of their resources now going to military expenditures.

The United States Government wishes to reiterate in this connection its strong satisfaction over the recent letter from Foreign Minister Chagla to Foreign Minister Pirzada regarding arms limitation talks. The United States trusts that, as the larger power, India will continue to accept a special responsibility in an effort to assure progress in such talks.

In this general context the United States Government has established the following policy in regard to defense assistance.

1. The United States will not, under present circumstances, return to the military supply relationships it had with either India or Pakistan prior to September 1965.
2. The most important consequence of this decision is that grant military assistance, which has been suspended since September 1965, has been terminated.

3. The United States Government will continue to consider on a case-by-case basis requests for the purchase of non-lethal end items. New credit terms for such purchases call for 5½ per cent interest on a seven-year repayment basis which reflect the general increase in interest rates.

4. The United States will consider on a case-by-case basis requests for the approval of commercial purchases in the United States of spare parts for previously supplied lethal equipment. This brings United States policy on spare parts sales more closely into line with those of the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Canada and other nations.

5. The case-by-case determination will be based on three broad considerations: (a) the prevailing level of, and the effect of the proposed purchase upon, that nation’s military expenditures; (b) that nation’s continuing commitment to achieve and maintain a reasonable military balance on the Subcontinent and (c) the impact of the proposed purchase on such a balance.

6. The United States Government will extend to India a special 17 million credit at 3 per cent interest on a ten-year repayment basis for the completion of the Star Sapphire project. This concessional rate is available only for this project and is provided in recognition of the special importance of its completion.

7. The United States will reinstate a grant training program to cover training in the United States for a number of key Indian and Pakistani military personnel as each Government desires.

8. The United States will take steps to prevent the sale by third countries to Pakistan and India of military equipment which (a) includes United States technology and components; (b) is produced in the United States.; or (c) is co-produced with the United States, except when the United States has determined that such sales meet the three criteria which will govern the case-by-case review of its own purchase requests.

9. The United States will withdraw its presently constituted military missions in Pakistan and India during the next few months. Under the new military supply policy outlined above, a formal United States military mission such as the United States Military Supply Mission to India or the United States Military Assistance and Advisory Group in Pakistan will not be required. We are in the process of reviewing alternative arrangements for providing in India such military representation, inspection of previously supplied grant aid equipment, and consultation regarding future sales and training as may be appropriate. We will consult with the Government of India regarding these alternative arrangements in due course.

Ambassador Locke has told President Ayub in presenting this policy that the United States is prepared to help meet Pakistan's legitimate security requirements, but that the manner in which the Government of Pakistan deals in the coming weeks and months with the recent offer of the Government of India to begin talks on arms limitation could have a decisive impact on the way the United States will be able to respond to Pakistan's requests.

The United States intends to handle publicity relating to its new military supply policy in as low a key as possible, and hopes that both Pakistan and India will do likewise.

Embassy of the United States of America
New Delhi, April 10, 1967.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

1777. Aide Memoire from the Government of India to the United States Embassy in India.
New Delhi, April 12, 1967.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Government of India have studied the aide memoire handed to the Minister of External Affairs, India, by the US Ambassador in New Delhi. They note the sentiments expressed in the aide memoire regarding the US policy towards India and Pakistan and the expression given to the United States interest in the agricultural and economic development of both the countries. They further note that the United States Government are interested in the reduction of tension between India and Pakistan to be brought about by a restraint on military expenditure and arms.

2. They wish that the decision conveyed in the aide memoire accorded with these sentiments. The Government of India are constrained to observe that these objectives of the United States are likely to be placed in serious jeopardy by the US intention to resume military supplies in the shape of spare parts for previously supplied lethal equipment. The Government of India have brought repeatedly to the attention of the United States Government, and believe that this is also realised by the United States authorities themselves, that the military supplies given to Pakistan from 1954 to 1965 were subjected to flagrant misuse by Pakistan, who had no compunction in using these weapons against India, contrary to the undertakings given by Pakistan to the United States and negating the assurances given by President Eisenhower and the late Mr. John Foster Dulles to India that these weapons were not to be used against India and that in the event of their use the United States would take appropriate measures to prevent such misuse. The supply of spare parts for previously supplied lethal equipment by the United States to Pakistan will mean reactivation of the entire military machine of Pakistan, particularly aircraft and tanks, the sole purpose of which is, as so often declared by Pakistan, to be used against India. The Government of India are deeply disappointed that the United States Government, ignoring all the tragic lessons of recent history and the feelings and sentiments of the people of India, have decided to rebuild the military strength of Pakistan.

3. It is said that even in the absence of the supplies from the United States, Pakistan would be able to buy spare parts for its American weapons from elsewhere. This may or may not be so, but for the United States to agree to make supplies of such equipment in the face of the proven misuse of US weapons as late as 1965 against India, which is a friendly country to USA, will have a patent significance and will make the United States appear in a light in which, the Government of India feel sure the US Government does not wish to appear. There is no indication of any kind that the United States have demanded and obtained satisfactory and credible guarantees from Pakistan against misuse of US weapons supplied to Pakistan earlier and reactivated by the supplies contemplated now, against India.

4. The US Government have reiterated their strong satisfaction over the recent letter from Foreign Minister Chagla to Foreign Minister Pirzada regarding the arms limitation talks. The reply of Foreign Minister Pirzada to Foreign Minister Chagla has now been received. It shows no departure from Pakistan’s stand. Pakistan is not willing to talk on the question of arms reduction by both countries separately from what it calls the settlement of the Jammu & Kashmir dispute. The Pakistan Government have virtually maintained that they must continue to build up their armed forces to vindicate their point of view in regard to Kashmir. This is further confirmed by the statement by President Ayub in Lahore on April 3 that there can be no talks between India and Pakistan on reduction of armed forces till Kashmir is settled. President Ayub is further reported to have said that the “armed forces were created to support a certain policy”. Since the Government and people of India know from bitter experience what the Pakistan policy towards them is, they cannot but deplore this dangerous accession of strength to Pakistan armed forces which must inevitably result from the new US arms supply policy.

New Delhi, April 12, 1967.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1778. Letter from External Affairs Minister M.C. Chagla to Pakistan Foreign Minister Sharifuddin Pirzada.

New Delhi, May 6, 1967.

Excellency,

I thank you for your letter of April 7, 1967, which was brought by our High Commissioner in Islamabad, Shri S. Sen, a few days before my departure for a visit abroad.

2. On my return, we have given consideration to your Excellency’s communication. I was also expecting to know from your High Commissioner in Delhi the details of your idea in terms of the last paragraph of your letter. We have, however, not heard from H.E. Mr. ARSHAD HUSSEIN, and meanwhile we find that the texts of my letter of 25th February, 1967 addressed to you and your letter of April 7, have appeared in the Pakistan press. I, therefore, hasten to reply to your Excellency’s communication of April 7.

3. Our proposal for a meeting of officials to discuss the question of arms reduction by both countries was made in the sincere belief arising from H.E. President AYUB’s speech of the 28th January 1967 at the Pakistan Institute of International Affairs, that the Government of Pakistan were as anxious as the Government of India to see a reduction of the mounting burden of armaments in both countries and the diversion of the resources available as a result of such reduction to the promotion of increasing food production and the welfare of the people of the two countries.

4. I have read your Excellency’s letter carefully and have come to the conclusion that our simple and straightforward proposal is not acceptable to your Government. The question of arms reduction is relegated to a subsidiary position and is inseparably linked up with what you describe a settlement of Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

5. I must confess to your Excellency our disappointment at the response of your Government to our proposal. The question of arms reduction by both countries patently stands on its own merits. Any such reduction is good in itself and is bound to have a wholesome effect on the economy of both countries and to create a better atmosphere all round between the two countries. We are unable to accept the contention that a reduction in arms expenditure can only come about with or after the settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir question. Such a view does not seem to us to be helpful. It has the inevitable connection that Pakistan is interested in escalating its expenditure on arms for the purpose of achieving its aim in Kashmir. Any such implication is unacceptable to us; it negates the Tashkent Declaration in which both Pakistan and India have pledged to settle all their disputes and differences by peaceful means.
6. The Government of India have stated previously many times both in Parliament and outside that we are, without any pre-conditions or pre-commitments on either side, ready to discuss all questions between India and Pakistan including the Kashmir question, at any time and at any place mutually convenient to the Governments of India and Pakistan. We firmly adhere to that position and wish to reiterate that we are ready to enter into discussions with your representatives on all matters.

7. I was hopefully interested to learn that it is your desire that the threads should be taken up where they were left last year. We are most anxious that our Governments should start a dialogue and discussion through which alone a peaceful solution of our disputes, and differences can ever be reached. Your Excellency will agree that this is the meaning and spirit of the Tashkent Declaration. I am asking our High Commissioner to meet you and to discuss how and where the threads can be picked up again. We are ready to receive a team of your officials in Delhi to discuss questions that either side may wish to bring up. It is also our intention that the meeting between our officials should be on a quiet, continuing and confidential basis and we sincerely wish that both sides should try to reach agreement on various matters.

Accept Excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

(M.C. Chagla)

His Excellency
Mr. Sharifuddin Pirzada,
Sitare-e-Pakistan,
Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Islamabad.

♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦
Reply Speech of External Affairs Minister M.C. Chagla to the Half-An-Hour Discussion in the Lok Sabha on “US - Arms to Pakistan”.

New Delhi, May 29, 1967.

The Minister of External Affairs (Shri M.C. Chagla): …………………

“Having been unfortunately the victims of Pakistani military aggression, we have been consistently pointing out to the U.S. Government the dangers to our security which would result from any accretion to Pakistan’s military strength which will inevitably result from the reactivisation of Pakistan’s military machine built up of arms and armaments received as aid from the U.S.A. We have pointed out to them that Pakistan is the only beneficiary of the latest U.S. decision since we had not acquired any appreciable quantity of U.S. arms, while Pakistan would be able to restore and increase her offensive strength against us.”

Then comes their case that is the U.S. case.

“The U.S. authorities have informed us that the supply of spare parts is subject to a case-by-case examination of all requests and that each case will be decided bearing in mind various considerations. They have also assured us that this policy is directed solely to serve the interests of peace and to reduce tension, and that they do not intend to act to the detriment of our security interests.”

We have entirely disagreed with this and we have point out the implications. We strongly protested both here and in Washington that the new policy which the United States had initiated will be most prejudicial to India and far from working for peace will increase tension between Pakistan and India. Unfortunately the USA always equates India with Pakistan; that has always been the trouble. They say: we will give you the same as we give to Pakistan. We will study your requests case by case and we will give you spares as we give to Pakistan. The US forgets that the whole military establishment in Pakistan was built by American arms, we have hardly any American arms so that by giving spares to Pakistan, they are reactivising the whole military machine of Pakistan. What spares can we ask from the United States? We have hardly bought any arms; we have either bought them from the United Kingdom or from the USSR. Therefore, the whole fallacy lies in this. While saying, “Oh, we are impartial, we are objective, we are treating both the countries alike,” we have pointed out to them that in saying this, “you are in fact acting in a manner prejudicial to India”. I quite agree with Shri Banerjee that the result of the premise has been to increase the tension. Pakistan is in this favourable position. She has got arms from China who is the enemy of the United States; she has got arms on a large scale from there. She will now get spare parts from the United States which will make it possible to restore the military machine as it was before the Indo-Pakistan conflict. We have also pointed out as to Pakistan’s behaviour in the Kutch conflict and the Indo-Pakistan conflict. As the House will remember we had given us a solemn assurance that the arms supplied to Pakistan will not be used against India; they were intended to be used against communists and the communist threat. What happened? We know it to our cost. It was the American tanks, the American aircraft, which took part in the conflict in Kutch and more so in the conflict of September, 1965. It was with American arms that Pakistan fought us; it was due to the bravery of our jawans, it was due to the machines which we had, which were perhaps not as good as the American machines, and because of the will and determination of our people that we won that war. We pointed this out to them. We said, how can we trust a country which has violated an assurance given by it to you; and we have told them, “What is the guarantee that any assurance that you might get from Pakistan now will be kept”? Therefore, it is wrong to believe...

Shri Indrajit Gupta: So you still believe in the innocence of the Americans.

Shri M.C. Chagla: We have protested. We have said this is wrong. Again, it is very illogical.

Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta: Are you quite convinced about the US intentions?

Shri M. C. Chagla: The United States tells us that “We are very much interested in the reduction of arms in India and Pakistan. We are very much interested in seeing that this arms race does not go on. Cut down your arms and we will try to persuade Pakistan to do so”. While they say this on the one hand, they give spare-parts to Pakistan, which compels us in our defence for our own security to take measures for our security.

Shri S.S. Kothari: What about the arms promised to you at the time when the Chinese invaded us?

Shri M.C. Chagla: We did get.

Shri S. S. Kothari: Have you got them?

Shri M. C. Chagla: At that time, we did get. There is no doubt.

Shri S.S. Kothari: Only a part.

Shri M.C. Chagla: We got them. But that was intended for the specific purpose of mountain warfare against China. It was not intended for any fight which we may unfortunately have in future with Pakistan. These arms were specifically intended for any aggression by China.
Shri Ranga: Now, What is it you, are going to do?

Shri M. C. Chagla: My hon, friend asks, “What is it you are going to do”? There is one thing that this country can do, and that is what was suggested by the hon. Member there. We must learn to stand on our own feet and take every measure possible to see that our defence is strong, that we are vigilant, and we are not caught napping by the strength that Pakistan is building up. It was said, “Have we made diplomatic representations to countries which are supplying arms to Pakistan”? Let me make this clear. Pakistan is shopping all over Europe for arms. When we come to know of some country supplying arms, we take up this question, as we did in the case of Germany. Shri Banerjee referred to this. Germany sold aircraft to Iran which we found had gone to Pakistan; we took up that question.

Shri Piloo Mody: The hon. Member is surprised that you did not know about it before.

Shri M.C. Chagla: West Germany gave us an assurance that the craft were with Pakistan only for servicing and they will go back to Iran. We are told both by West Germany and Iran that barring 10 or 12 of the Sabre jets, the rest have gone back to Iran.

Shri P. Venkatasubbaiah: So, Iran is the villain of the Piece.

Shri M.C. Chagla: Let me make one thing clear. Very often arms are purchased from private commercial firms dealing in arms, over which we have no control. In many countries, there is no control over sale of arms. I think it is a shameful thing, the fact that a private concern should make money out of endangering peace is a disgraceful thing, but there it is. In many European countries there are private manufacturers manufacturing arms and they are entitled to sell it to any country. Therefore, if Pakistan goes shopping around Europe buying arms there is nothing we can do, except to take the necessary steps to safeguard our interests.

Shrimati Sushila Rohatgi: In spite of the various assurances given by the US Government and in spite of the various protests lodged by our Government, if Pakistan still takes action against India, is the US Government prepared to give a commitment that it will come to our assistance in that case?

Shri M.C. Chagla: As I said, the assurance was given to us last time by President Eisenhower. But I do not believe in any assurance. I believe in our own strength. If we are strong, we can defend ourselves. Assurances depend upon political considerations.
Note on the meeting between Foreign Secretary Rajeshwar Dayal and the United States Ambassador Chester Bowles.

New Delhi, April 1, 1968.

Ministry of External Affairs

Foreign Secretary raised with the American Ambassador, Mr. Chester Bowles, this afternoon, the question of supply of US Patton tanks through Italy to Pakistan. F.S. said that the U.S. Aide Memoire delivered to the Government of India in April last year gave us to believe that only lethal spares would be sold to Pakistan, either directly or through third countries. The sale of tanks appeared to go beyond this understanding. Mr. Bowles interjected to say that he felt the Aide Memoire covered such end items but he would check. The Pattons were being supplied to replace Sherman and Chaffe tanks which would be destroyed. When F.S. said that the new tanks were more powerful and were being fitted with 105 mm guns, Bowles did not contradict but said that there were built-in guarantees to assure that the old tanks were destroyed.

F.S. then said that the justification given by the Americans for selling US arms to Pakistan was to wean away Pakistan from China. But it was to be wondered whether submitting to Pakistani black-mail was the best way of doing so. Indeed judging from the continuation in the growth of Sino-Pakistan relations during the past year, in spite of many American efforts to wean away Pakistan, this American policy did not appear to be working. F.S. quoted Chen Yi’s recent statement on Pakistan, the care China had taken to maintain relations with Pakistan during the Cultural Revolution and the many Sino-Pak agreements reached last year to illustrate his point. Mr. Chester Bowles said that the argument in Washington was that Pakistan was on the verge of joining China and something had to be done to prevent this happening. He, however, agreed that the Chinese argument did not really hold and had indeed pressed this view on Washington. He suggested we should take advantage of the visit of Messrs Heck and Hamilton of the State Department, who were to be in Delhi in a day or two, to impress upon them our point of view.

F.S. said that Mr. Handley of the State Department in a conversation with our Ambassador in Washington had referred to a recent Indian decision to purchase Mig-21. The fact of the matter was that there had been no such decision and no deal had been concluded. Mr. Bowles said that the Americans had received this information from Pakistani sources.

F.S. then referred to Pakistan’s intransigence in discussing the normalization of relations or even arms control with us. F.S. referred pointedly to the Pirzada - Chagla correspondence in which Pakistan refused to discuss arms control.

Mr. Bowles said than the trouble was that there were constant irritants from our side which clouded Washington's judgment about these things. The Security Council debates on West Asia were widely televised and the impression created was that India was working hand in glove with the Soviet Union against American interests. Then misunderstanding had recently been created by the Telco oil deal, the American Foundation affair and the rejection of a scheme to irrigate Bihar etc. He said that issues such as Vietnam, where American emotions are involved, did not help matters either. The Administration fully realizes that India was the one country which could stand up to China; but it was somehow difficult to establish greater parallelism between India and America.

The American Ambassador then said that Rusk had spoken to Ambassador Ali Yavar Jung (Indian Ambassador) recently on the possibility of an early ministerial level talk. He said such talks might help to clear some of the misunderstandings. Mr. Bowles mentioned June as a possible time and suggested Washington for the first round. He said that China, South-East Asia and economic problems could, among other topics, be taken up. Bowles said that Pakistan and the arms question could be added to the list. F.S. said that he would consult with the Government and let Mr. Bowles know. F.S. then said that we had wished to avoid, as far as possible, a strong public reaction on the American arms sales to Pakistan. But it would not be possible to do so for long, especially with the foreign affairs budget debate coming up in Parliament. He, however, hoped that it would be possible for the Americans to hold up the sales at least pending further talks. This would certainly help to enable the two sides to examine the questions involved thoroughly. The American Ambassador replied that he would try to get a decision from Washington on FS’s suggestion.

During the conversation Mr. Chester Bowles said that there was now no pressure from America on India regarding Kashmir. This should be seen as a positive development. He said that another positive development was the considerable appreciation of the progress made in Indian agriculture and the impression that this year’s good crop would help India.

Sd/-
1-4-1968
Pakistan

Coming to our two neighbors, Pakistan and China, even with Pakistan, our relations to-day are better than they have been during the last few years. We have been able to solve some of the peripheral problems like telecommunications. We are willing to talk with them in the letter and spirit of the Tashkent Declaration on any subject of mutual interest. Unfortunately, Pakistan's response has not been as forthright as we would have wished, but we are confident that sooner or later Pakistan will also realize, as we do, that it is in our common interest to improve our relations and develop cooperation in various fields to our mutual benefit. In this respect, I very much regret to notice some new trends which will not help friendly relations between India and Pakistan. I am referring to the arms aid which Pakistan is receiving, which the Defense Minister declared the other day while replying to the Grants of the Defense Ministry. In this matter we have tried to convince the United States Government that they have been changing their policy. They first said that they will give only non-lethal weapons which had no relation to military hardware. Then they started giving lethal weapons.

Now, the recent report about 100 Patton tanks being given to Pakistan or the reported decision of supply of another variety, B-47 tanks, that is definitely going to damage or upset the military balance between India and Pakistan. This is a very serious situation that has developed and it neutralizes all that we are trying to build up and it affects our close relations with Pakistan. It will be our effort to bring it home to the Government of the United States that this particular factor is going against the spirit of Tashkent and is coming in the way of having friendly and good-neighbourly relations with Pakistan.
SECRET

Telegram from High Commissioner in Pakistan to Foreign Secretary.

Islamabad, June 27, 1968.

TELEGRAM

From: Hicomind Islamabad.
To: Foreign New Delhi.

IMMEDIATE

No. 235. June 27, 1968

Foreign Secretary From High Commissioner.

Personal

Rumour reported in my telegram No. 197 of 3rd June regarding supply of Soviet military equipment to Pakistan seems to be confirmed. Please see in this context London Times report of 24 June 1968. I am not aware that KOSYGIN durante his last visit agreed in principle to arms supply to Pakistan. Did he mention anything like this in Delhi? General YAHYA has not only been invited to visit Russia but obviously expecting great change in Soviet policy. Some say that he would pitch in for Soviet supplies equal to what that country gives to India. And others think that U.S.S.R. will supply significant quantity of purely "defensive" equipment and material e.g. surface to air missiles. ARSHAD HUSSAIN's statement in National Assembly on 22 June suggesting greater appreciation by Soviet Union of Pakistan's defence needs is also significant. Grateful for Ministry's appreciation of likely Soviet reaction.

❖❖❖❖❖
1783.

SECRET

Telegram from Foreign Secretary to High Commissioner in Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 29, 1968.

TELEGRAM

From: Foreign New Delhi.

To: Hicomind, Karachi.

29 June 1968

High Commissioner From Foreign Secretary.

Personal.

Your 235 of June 26. Possibility of supply of Soviet military equipment to Pakistan.

KOSYGIN did not tell us on his last visit that Russia had agreed to supply arms to Pakistan in principle. As a matter of fact, our assessment has been that no commitments were made by KOSYGIN in his talks with AYUB in April. General SIDOROVICH told SARIN (Defence Secretary): "We have not promised anything to Pakistan that would endanger the interests of India". Although one cannot rule out the possibility of Russia beginning a modest programme of arms supplies to Pakistan, it is by no means certain that General YAHYA's visit will result in such an arrangement. Certainly we do not think that Russia has the intention to equate India and Pakistan on the question of supply of arms. Unlike the Americans, the Russians do not accept the thesis of balance between the two countries. KOSYGIN told us quite clearly that Indian defence preparedness was justified in view of the Chinese menace and that Pakistan cannot pose a threat to us. We are, of course, keeping a careful watch.

So far as the ballon d’essaï launched by Arshad Hussain and others we might remember the following. First, Pakistan probably hopes that once expectancy on Soviet arms is raised within Pakistan, Russia, which is keen to win over public opinion in Pakistan, may feel obliged to do something to satisfy it. Secondly such speculation might help Pakistan to improve its bargaining position with the Americans and also perhaps the Chinese. And thirdly if it all creates an anti-Russian reaction in India, so much the better.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Statement by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi in the Lok Sabha on the supply of Soviet Arms to Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 22, 1968.

I have already publicly expressed my own and the Government’s concern at the Soviet intention to supply arms to Pakistan. This concern has been voiced throughout the country. We have also conveyed our feelings and reaction to the Soviet Government.

Before I refer to the exchanges which have taken place between the Soviet Union and ourselves on this subject, I should like the House to bear in mind that international relations, as a whole, are in a particularly fluid state at the present time. The old landmarks, the rigid divisions between rival blocs, appear to be in the process of disintegration, although they have by no means disappeared. Every nation, whether member of a bloc or not, is trying to assert its own individuality in the conduct of its policies. The U.S.A. and the Soviet Union, conscious of the need to reduce the danger of a direct clash between them, are evidently reshaping their policies in accordance with the changing conditions. In these circumstances, our policy of peace and friendship with all, and of freedom to assess every issue on its merits while firmly upholding our own national independence and dignity, which is the essence of non-alignment, has been fully vindicated.

About three weeks ago, we received an indication from the Soviet Government of their intention to supply some military equipment to Pakistan. I wrote to Chairman Kosygin expressing our concern and pointing out the possible consequences and dangers of such a move.

We had explained to the Soviet Union that Pakistan had no reasonable justification to seek the augmentation of its armed strength. We also pointed out that Pakistan had received, by way of gift, vast quantities of arms and equipment between the years 1954 and 1965 as a member of military alliances. And, as we had apprehended, Pakistan did eventually use these against us.

The attention of the Soviet Government was also drawn to the fact that Pakistan was getting arms not only from her allies, but also from China, in large quantities. Inevitably, this accretion of strength had the effect of encouraging Pakistan in its intransient and aggressive attitude towards India.

We further pointed out to the Soviet Union that Pakistan does not, in fact, face external threat. During the last twenty years Pakistan had committed aggression against us on three occasions. Pakistan is accumulating arms only for use against India. We also pointed to our successive offers of a no-war pact which Pakistan had repeatedly rejected. As for Pakistan’s protestations of peaceful intentions, we have pointed out to the Soviet Union that in spite of the assurances given to us by the U.S.A., Pakistan was not inhibited in using American arms against India in the Kutch conflict, and subsequently in August 1965. The U.S.A. could not prevent it from so doing.

In these circumstances, we cannot but view with concern this further accretion of armed strength to Pakistan. The unavoidable consequence would be to accentuate tension in the sub-continent and to add to our responsibilities in regard to the defence and security of our country. It will make Pakistan even more intransigent than she has been. Indeed, some recent pronouncements made by leaders of the Pakistan Government confirm this.

The Soviet Union, like any other country, is entitled to form her own judgment as to where her interests lie and how to promote them. But we are bound to express our misgivings and apprehensions to the Soviet leaders in all frankness.
We do not question either the motives or the good faith of the Soviet Union, but we are convinced that this development cannot promote the cause of peace and stability in the sub-continent.

The Soviet Union have reassured us regarding the firm foundations on which their friendship for our country is based. They have further assured us that they would not do anything to weaken friendship with our country or to injure our interests. They have also informed us that they have told the authorities in Pakistan that they will stand by their agreements with India and fulfill all their commitments to us.

The relations between India and the Soviet Union are many-sided.

They embrace many fields of our national endeavour. The new development should therefore be seen in the context of the totality of these relations.

We have to face this development as it presents itself. We do not know whether the Soviet Union has yet formalized an agreement with Pakistan for the supply of arms, nor do we have indications of the quantum or character of these arms or the terms and conditions of their delivery.

As I have earlier said, we view this development with concern. I have no doubt that Parliament and the nation will react to the situation with composure and dignity. As always, the defence and security of the country will remain our paramount concern. We are confident that we can ensure this with the full support of a united people.
This Motion was to consider the decision of the Soviet Union to supply arms to Pakistan and the Government of India’s stand on this matter. As you know, and the House knows, Government always welcomes an opportunity to state its point of view and to listen to the views of the hon. Members. This discussion has ranged over a very wide field, not only the whole question of Indo-Soviet relationship, the entire field of foreign policy, the running of the various Ministries of the Government of India, even domestic policy and even the use of diplomacy in the toppling of various State Governments. It is indeed a very wide field and I do not think the House will expect me to wander so far myself.

There is the usual quota of amendments, some obviously written in haste. I am sure the hon. Member, Mr. Mandal, will excuse me for drawing attention to his amendment. He says that the Government misinterpreted the Tashkent Agreement. Actually it was a “Declaration” during the Indo-Pak conflict. What can I say in reply to this because for my hon. friend history evidently moves backward?

I need hardly refer to the hon. Member, Shri Yadav’s amendment. It is entirely wrong to suggest that the Government has withheld any information from this House or from the country. Both he and the hon. Member opposite, Shri Bhandari, have really sought through their amendments to bring into this House the much debated proposition about a Resolution by the other House. I think there has been a misleading impression, perhaps deliberately created, that there was some dispute about the word “regret”. I have tried to clarify this on another occasion but I should like to say so again. There was no dispute about the wording of any Resolution. The dispute was about the desirability of Parliament passing such a Resolution. I gave my reasons for it which were, firstly, that we have never done it before. This does not, obviously, mean that the House can never do something new but that in the present context it would certainly create misunderstanding if we were to pass a Resolution on the Soviet selling of arms when we did not do so even on the occasion of the getting of a vast amount of arms and when Pakistan has been buying arms from many other countries.

The hon. Member, Shri Dahyabhai Patel, has his own sources of information. I would really be interested to know what they are. He made one comment; hon. Members will remember the number of times that I have visited the Soviet Union. Perhaps the House knows that now in America there is something called new mathematics in which two and two do not always make four. Perhaps that is the kind of reasoning which guided the hon. Member. But anyway I thought that since he had taken a special interest in this matter, I should also do a little research, and I tried to look back to count how many times I had been to which country. And I was interested, this was not deliberate — I can assure the House, to find that by a strange coincidence the number of visits to the U.S.S.R and the United States of America are exactly equal.

He also alleged that Chairman Kosygin had whispered about his intention to supply arms to Pakistan when I had gone to Moscow. I am not quite sure of the exact date of that particular visit but it was very soon after Mr. Kosygin took over as Prime Minister. I can assure the hon. Member that he was then far too preoccupied with domestic affairs and the new situation in the Soviet Union to discuss the supply of arms to Pakistan, or any other such matter with somebody whom he did not know at all.

Some hon. Members have alleged that either the Government was unaware of what was happening or wanted to keep the country in the dark. This, as I have said earlier, is quite incorrect and I shall deal with the matter later on.

* * *

Farakka Barrage

Another matter which is connected both with the communique and with the letter which I have received from Chairman Kosygin was the question of the mention of Farakka Barrage. Now there was no specific suggestion that this matter should be settled in the same way as the Indus waters dispute. The suggestion in the letter was that we should find some mutually acceptable solution of this matter. The letter referred to many other questions, not only between India and Pakistan but to many other areas and problems and other matters of interest to us throughout the world. There was this mention of Indo-Pakistan relationship and it was stated that the Soviet Government wished that our relations should be normalised and should improve. This is what we also say. But I should like to make our position quite clear that there can be no question of any mediation or arbitration or third party intervention. Neither do we think that there is any comparison between the question of the Ganga waters and the question of the Indus waters. The Ganga is almost entirely an Indian river.

The Farakka project is vital to our needs and especially to the very survival of the Calcutta Port. But we have always been willing to talk to Pakistan about their legitimate interests. Therefore we had agreed to an exchange of technical data and information but there should be no delay in carrying on the work or completion of the barrage.
The hon. Member just now asked about pressures. Now if by pressure he means that they have said that we must do this, that or else something will happen, there has been no such pressure. It is true that some people have been talking about these matters, and not only the Russians. But, as I said, it is a question for us to see how far we are prepared to listen and we have made our attitude very clear. My hon. friend from this side just now said something about telling them our views gently; I want to assure him that we have told this not only gently but very firmly and in the strongest of terms.

The natural questions asked in this debate have been, why have the Russians entered into this deal, when did we know about it, could we have prevented it, why did we not prevent it and so on. Such an occasion is always used for blaming the Government for the failure of its policy. I do not think it would be proper for me to enter into any speculative analysis about the reasons why the Soviet Union decided to take this step. Many viewpoints have been put forward and there may be truth in some of them.

Hon. Member Shri Jairamdasji rightly said that each country must look to its own interest and act in what it considers to be its interest. It is our misfortune that hon. Members sometimes take it for granted that we are the one country where we are not at all concerned with our self-interest. Well, I must emphatically say that there is no truth whatever in this. We may not agree with the Soviet assessment of the situation or their assessment of their interests in this matter. Perhaps they will find out that they were wrong. But I do not think it is right to question their motives. The possibility of this arms deal was in the air for some considerable time; Hon. Members know that there were speculations in the Press and that is why we had taken the matter up with them on several occasions previously even though there was no indication from them or other definite information....

And here I would like to say one more thing. One or more Members have asked: did we have the Intelligence; did we know anything about this matter apart from what was in public knowledge? Hon. Members will surely understand that it is not possible always to give such information; even if we hear of something we would certainly not like other people to give out such information about us and therefore it is not proper that we should do so ourselves. But as soon as we had some definite indication, we took the matter up with the Soviet Government and I was the first person to give Government’s reaction when I was asked about it by the Press.

The Soviet Government have assured us that this would not in any way affect their relations with us, their friendship with us, nor would it injure our interests. Now obviously we have our own views about this and that is what I have expressed to them. We have our misgivings, we have our apprehensions, and as I have said, I have given public expression to them in the House and also to the Soviet Government. The whole nation is naturally most concerned.

With all our understanding of Soviet policy we cannot but view this decision with concern and some disturbance. We are apprehensive because of the past record of our neighbour. The Soviet Union has assured us that it will not allow these arms to be used against us but as Hon. Members have pointed out we have received such assurances before from other quarters.

Bellicose Attitude of Pakistan

We did not believe it then and it is we who have proved to be right and not the others. So we find it difficult to believe that this new acquisition of arms will not strengthen the bellicose attitude of Pakistan. Already there are some signs. First there were the bellicose speeches, but immediately afterwards there was also a declaration that there would be no trouble whatsoever between the two countries. If there is sincerity in this change of attitude that there will be no trouble, well, we would certainly welcome it.

As I think it was the Honourable Shri Jairamdas Daulatram who has mentioned that many countries have been changing. I myself have been speaking about this change for sometime. Naturally I could not put it in more specific terms. But I think that if people had read between the lines they could have got some indication of my thinking. Why should we look either at friendship or enmity in such total and absolute terms? I think that, as Jairamdasji has said, this is a rather unrealistic way of facing the world. It does not mean that we do not believe in friendship and I don't know whether changing the word from friendship to cooperation would make any difference because that would also be interpreted in many different ways.

We accept friendship and we do not wish to do anything against friendship but this should not mean that we are complacent or that we closed our eyes to what is happening. I am afraid, this is what always seems to happen here. If we think a country is against us then we are not willing to give even a little leeway nor are we allowed to make bridges with that country. If we think that a country is friendly then we expect that country to give up everything even its own interest for the sake of our friendship.

As I said just now, I think this is not a realistic attitude. We must accept friendship as it is; it may be more; it may be less. I for one cannot understand the argument that trusting a country or believing in its friendship has done us harm. Had we declared previously that the Soviet Union is giving arms or selling arms to Pakistan, would that have helped situation? Would they have been friendly towards us? How would it have changed the situation?

* * *
Kashmir

One question which is very important and which I seem to have left out is with regard to Kashmir. The Soviets have not mentioned Kashmir at all to us. Somebody just now said that we have been told to come to a settlement about Kashmir and so on. This is far from the truth. But here again we are firm and we must remain firm in our stand. Previously we were anxious and we were seeking assurances. I think that we must give up this attitude. We know what we want and we should stand firm by it and I do not think that anybody can push us around.

I have also previously said that defence and security will remain our paramount concern and that we can ensure this with the full backing of a strong and united people.

Now, Madam Deputy Chairman, I should like once more, before I end, to go back to the question of non-alignment. As I said, the essence of non-alignment is independent judgment, judging each issue on its merit, and nothing could be less rigid than that. It is a flexible approach, one which cuts across the rigidities of alignments. The price of independent thinking is that we annoy somebody or other, but the price of alignment is the curtailing of true independence. Madam, with your permission and the indulgence of the House I should like to read what I have said in the other House about how we implement this non-alignment or what is our approach to international affairs. I quote;

“I believe that where there is friendship we must enlarge it; where there is indifference we must remove it; and where there is hostility we should try to blunt it,

What are permanent and set are certain values and above all our national interests about which there can be no compromise.”

Let me in the end pick up the common thread which ran through all the speeches and which I think made this debate very much worthwhile, which was the idea of national solidarity, the idea of self-reliance and internal strength. If we can catch this and work towards it and if we have a united view on this, then I think that the Soviet Government may well have done us a favour in forging this kind of determination amongst us to stand united, to stand on our own feet, and to be firm in our resolve about our national interests.

◆◆◆◆◆
SECRET

Letter from Ambassador of India in the Soviet Union Kewal Singh to Foreign Secretary Rajeshwar Dayal.

Moscow, July 28, 1968.

Kewal Singh
Ambassador

Embassy of India
Moscow

No. MOS/SEC/109(2)/68 July 28, 1968

My dear Foreign Secretary,

When I called on Fomin on July 23rd for the purpose of discussing the Farakka Barrage issue, he gave me with obvious relief the information (that they had just heard) that the motion in the Lok Sabha to discuss the Soviet Arms Aid to Pakistan had been defeated by a large majority. He and his colleagues had been evidently worried because of the press and public reaction in India and expected a crisis in the Parliament on this subject. I told Fomin that the Prime Minister and the Government had been placed in a most difficult situation as a result of the Soviet decision to supply arms to Pakistan. It was not merely the press, the Parliament and leaders of all political parties who are deeply agitated at what is regarded to be a totally unexpected and inexplicable development. In fact the Soviet action has come as a blow to the confidence which every man and woman in India had in India’s special friendship with the Soviet Union. The Prime Minister had indeed made a very firm statement and had risen to the occasion to handle the situation in a statesmanlike manner; the fact, however, remained that a very serious complication had been created in India’s friendly relation with USSR with its inevitable repercussions on the internal political scene. Even four months ago, I said no leader in India could have imagined that the Soviet Union would so drastically change its policy and decide to supply arms to Pakistan in the face of the latter’s past record. It has, therefore, been not at all easy for the Government to give a rational explanation of this to the Indian public. I added that although the Parliament discussion was over, the public was still to be convinced and their confidence restored.

2. Fomin was at great pains to assure me about the reasons for the Soviet decision. He said the arms supply was only “symbolic”; moreover, there were strong guarantees about the non-use of these weapons against India. I cautioned Fomin that it would be useful for them to recall our past experience in similar circumstances, which was within their knowledge. In 1954, Mr. Dulles gave military aid to Pakistan and persuaded them to become a member of the regional military blocs in that area. Pakistan readily joined. And she still is a formal member of these military blocs. When we protested against American military aid, we were offered by the Americans three times the quantum of aid given to Pakistan provided we too joined these military alliances. Prime Minister Nehru refused to do so. On the other hand, he warned the United States that their weapons would never be used by Pakistanis against the supposed enemy north of Pakistan but only against India. Americans too gave us the unconvincing explanation that there were guarantees that these weapons would never be used against India. Everyone knows what happened in 1965. I told Fomin that the Indian nation had every reason to feel concerned and indignant.

3. Fomin argued that the intentions of the Soviet Government were only positive to both countries in the sub-continent. This had been proved during the Tashkent negotiations, and after. The present Soviet move was mainly inspired by the desire to wean away Pakistan from the influence of the United States and China. For this purpose, some sort of Soviet presence was essential in that country. I expressed my total scepticism about the success of this rather dubious strategy. I pointed out that nothing which has happened during recent months lends credence to the view that Pakistan is drifting away from China. Arshad Hussain has already declared his intention to make a pilgrimage to Peking. There has been nothing at all in the statements of Hussain or President Ayub to indicate a willingness to adopt a less bellicose attitude towards India. All their public statements continue to be belligerent. I also reminded Fomin that we made a standing offer to Pakistan of a ‘No War’ declaration; and there had been no response to this.

4. I added that in the difficult situation created by the Soviet decision they should use all their influence to persuade Pakistan to normalize relations with India. It is only if Pakistan adopts a more conciliatory attitude and agrees to normalize and improve relations with India that the Indian anxiety over the Soviet decision may be allayed to some extent. Fomin’s reply was that they would certainly do their best. He added that during Chairman Kosygin’s recent visit to Pakistan, President Ayub told them in unequivocal terms that Pakistan had no intention to commit any aggression on India. Ayub frankly told Kosygin that he would be mad to think of such a thing. He also said that he was willing to try the step by step approach for the solution of Indo-Pakistani differences. He had in effect committed himself to refrain from insisting on the prior discussion of the Kashmir dispute before minor matters could be settled. It was against this background that the Soviet Union felt that by giving this token assistance they would be able to have sufficient influence in Rawalpindi to encourage such positive tendencies and to neutralize China’s hostile schemes.

5. Fomin was obviously eager to utilize this opportunity to give us every possible reassurance on the subject and to allay our apprehensions about possible misuse of the arms aid. It was noticeable that he carefully refrained from making any reference to the demonstrations in India. I made it clear in the end that, while the Soviet side seemed to have embarked on this risky course with perhaps the best possible motives, all our experience of Pakistan during the last 20 years led us to think that Soviet optimism was unfounded and would instead of lessening tension in the sub-continent, lead to new complications which would defeat the noble purposes of promoting peace and understanding for which they had been working so far.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

(Kewal Singh)

Shri Rajeshwar Dayal,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1787. Aide Memoire from Indian Embassy in the United States to the US State Department.

Aide Memoire

The ties between the United States and India date back to the days of India’s fight for political freedom. These ties have been strengthened and their scope enlarged since India’s independence in 1947. As the most advanced democracy in the world, the United States has occupied a special place in the hearts of the freedom minded people of India. Moreover, the United States has contributed substantially to India’s economic development. The United States has proclaimed its interest in the rapid normalisation of relations between India and Pakistan and has recognised India’s efforts to deal peacefully with the problems that exist between the two countries.

2. Unfortunately, Indo-US relations have often been affected by actions that involve third countries. A major irritant during the 1950’s, which caused great bitterness in India, was the massive military assistance given by the United States to Pakistan in pursuance of the 1954- Military Assistance Pact and as a military ally in CENTO and SEATO. This massive military assistance, which was objected to all along by India as a threat to peace in the sub-continent, was ultimately used by Pakistan for aggression against India twice in 1965. The subsequent embargo on U.S. military aid to the sub-continent was welcomed by India as a step in the direction of establishing peace in the sub-continent. This relief has, however, remained short lived and U.S. policy has been progressively modified to provide Pakistan with military hardware through third countries.

3. Supply of U.S. arms to Pakistan was one of the subjects discussed at the recent Indo-U.S. talks in New Delhi which made a contribution to Indo-U.S. understanding. India’s position regarding further accretion to Pakistan’s armed strength and the implications of such a development were fully explained. It was explained that to support Pakistan to maintain a balance of strength with India, a far larger country, was tantamount to supporting Pakistan against India. As it is, the present ratio between India and Pakistan is roughly 2:1 even though India is 4 to 5 times Pakistan’s size and population. Further, while India faces a hostile China, Pakistan by its own admission faces no military threat from outside the sub-continent. Further, accretion to Pakistan’s armed strength will strain India’s defence capabilities to such an extent that India’s strength vis-a-vis China will be reduced.

4. The supply of U.S. weapons to Pakistan is likely to encourage it in its policy of confrontation with India and increase its demands. The cause of peace in the sub-continent, as well as in Asia, which is dear both to India and the United States, will not be served by it.

5. It was the impression of the Government of India that the views expressed by them at the Indo-U.S. talks on this question were well understood and appreciated. It was, therefore, with surprise and regret that the Government of India recently learnt of the U.S. decision to agree in principle to the supply of undisclosed number of M-47 tanks, located in Turkey but belonging to the United States, to Pakistan.

6. Pakistan not only continues its refusal to normalise relations with India but is interfering daily in India’s internal affairs by training and arming Naga and Mizo hostiles, by inflaming communal passions and pressing its claims on Indian territory. It loses no opportunity to increase tension in the sub-continent and adheres to its hostility towards India. Any further supply of arms to Pakistan will only encourage those elements in Pakistan who are resolute in their hostility towards India.

7. It is often said that the supply of U.S. arms to Pakistan will help to wean that country away from China but experience has shown that this is not so.
Pakistan’s relations with China remain unimpaired and Pakistan continues to get military assistance from China as evidenced from the results of the recent visit of a Pakistani military delegation led by General Yahya Khan to China. Any further supply of lethal equipment by the United States at this stage would seem to suggest that the two powers are entering into a race for arms supplies to Pakistan which is also receiving military assistance from China. The net result of this, in view of the known hostile attitude of Pakistan, would be to further aggravate the military threat to India. This, it is presumed, would not be the end result which the Government of U.S.A would desire.

8. The U.S. Government’s earlier authorisation to permit the sale of U.S. arms through certain NATO countries without Pakistan having fulfilled the criteria laid down in the U.S. policy declaration of 1967, and against the understanding regarding this given to the Government of India, had come as a surprise and was objected to by the Government of India. It appeared to us that what was ostensibly a preventive clause in the 1967 U.S. memorandum was being turned into an enabling one and at the same time a beginning was being made to reestablish the old military relationship between U.S. and Pakistan. The implications of the present deal are even more serious. It is understood that Pakistan will not have to make any payment towards acquiring the U.S. tanks located in Turkey. This will amount to a resumption of free U.S. military aid to Pakistan however; indirect it is made to appear. India cannot obviously view the resumption of arms aid to Pakistan without deep concern since it is bound to have serious implications for India and for Indo-U.S. relationship.

9. The Government of India hopes that the United States Government will reconsider its decision to sell to Pakistan M-47 tanks from Turkey.

Embassy of India
Washington D.C.
December 16, 1968.
Aide Memoire from the US State Department to Embassy of India in the United States.

AIDE-MEMOIRE

On December 16, 1968, the Embassy of India left with the Department of State an aide-memoire which discussed United States relations with India and Pakistan and, more specifically, the United States role in a proposed arrangement involving the transfer of military equipment from Turkey to Pakistan.

As the Embassy is aware, it is the policy of the Government of the United States not to discuss the details of our military supply arrangements with representatives of countries not parties to them. For example, officials of this Government have never mentioned to representatives of Pakistan the decision made in June 1967 to approve the transfer from Britain to India of Hawker-Hunter fighter bomber aircraft. This Position has been reiterated on several occasions to Embassy officers. The Department believes that the Embassy has come to understand that it is the best approach to what are obviously matters of some sensitivity.

In light of this position, the Department is unwilling to become involved now or in the future in a detailed discussion of military supply arrangements. It does believe, however, that it is important to correct a number of misunderstandings which appear in the Embassy's December 16 aide-memoire about the role of the United States.

The most serious of these is the misapprehension that Pakistan will receive tanks gratis and that the transfer of the Turkish equipment will thereby amount to a resumption of United States grant aid to the Government of Pakistan. This is not correct. Present United States policy, which dates from April 1967, rules out grant military assistance to both India and Pakistan. It remains in effect. Should the proposed arrangement be finalized, the tanks which Pakistan would acquire from Turkey would represent neither direct nor indirect grant aid from the United States.

The Embassy has also seriously misjudged the implications of the proposed arrangement when it speaks, in its aide-memoire, of “a beginning... being made to re-establish the old military relationship between US and Pakistan.” There are no such implications.

The Embassy’s attention is also called to the fact that the tanks now being considered for transfer are not “US tanks”, as stated in the aide-memoire, but Turkish tanks. The tanks were manufactured in the United States and their transfer to any third country must be approved by the Government of the United States, but they are not US tanks any more than the 105 mm howitzers used by Indian Army mountain divisions are US guns. It is the Government of Turkey and not the Government of the United States which is considering selling them to Pakistan.

Finally, the Department is surprised by the suggestion that the United States is entering a race with the Chinese Communists to supply weapons to Pakistan. Since September 1965, the United States has sold no lethal end-items to Pakistan nor has the Government of the United States approved in final form any third party transfers. The few agreements to third party transfers made “in principle” have been duplicative. The Government of the United States continues to be guided in its approach to the Subcontinent by a desire to do what it can do to discourage an arms race and the diversion of resources from development to military expenditures that such a race implies.

Department of State,
Washington
December 20, 1968.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1789. Statement made by the External Affairs Minister Dinesh Singh in the Lok Sabha on US military aid to Pakistan.
New Delhi, July 23, 1969.

Government have been informed that the Government of United States have not yet taken any decision to supply arms to Pakistan. U.S. Secretary of State has in-formed the Minister of External Affair’s that there is no proposal under their consideration to supply 100 tanks to Pakistan through Turkey.

Government have made it clear that arms assistance to Pakistan will increase the threat to the security of India, encourage Pakistan in its ambitions and demands on Indian territory and consequently retard the chances of normalization of relations between the two countries. It will also go against the idea of economic cooperation in Asia and will add to tension in this part of the world.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1790. Statement by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on Arms supply to Pakistan by the USA and the USSR and Pakistan’s Declaration to use the arms against India.

New Delhi, November 9, 1970.

Government appreciate and share the concern of all parties in Parliament about the latest announcement by the U.S. Government regarding American supply of arms to Pakistan. The result of this decision may well be that Pakistan, which is already over-armed, will use this accretion of armed strength to threaten India instead of trying to settle differences peacefully through bilateral discussions.

The House will recall that in 1965 the U.S. Government had imposed a ban on the supply of lethal weapons to Pakistan and India. On September 30, 1970, we were officially informed that the United States Government had decided to make an exception to this ban and to supply to Pakistan some aircraft and armoured vehicles in replacement of losses and natural attrition. We lodged protests with the U.S. Government through their Ambassador here as well as through our Ambassador in the United States. The U.S. Government had given us an assurance, and later made a public statement, that this sale would be a one-time exception to the ban.

The American Government has told us that they have offered to sell to Pakistan six F-104 type star fighter-interceptors, 300 armoured personnel carriers, seven B-57 bombers and four maritime patrol aircraft. These are sophisticated offensive military hardware.

In reply to our protest, the American Government has tried to justify its decision by saying that no great significance should be attached to this replacement of items of equipment and that this sale was to meet Pakistan’s defence requirements. We have pointed out that we are unable to accept these arguments. Pakistan has repeatedly asserted that India is her only enemy. As the House is aware, India has, apart from signing the Tashkent Declaration, made repeated offers of a No-War Pact to Pakistan and has taken several initiatives for normalising relations with her. Pakistan has therefore, no ground to apprehend any threat from India; on the other hand, it is Pakistan that has committed aggression against India thrice since independence. Certain Pakistani leaders who held high office in 1965 have been proudly asserting during their recent election campaign that it was under their leadership that Pakistan had started these conflicts with India.

According to reliable estimates, American military aid to Pakistan from 1954 to 1965 was of the order of 1.5 to 2 billion dollars. What is particularly disquieting for us in this deal is that the United States tries to justify it on the ground that they are replacing the equipment supplied by them which has become unserviceable with use and time. The mere acceptance, in principle, of any responsibility for replacement becomes a cause for grave concern. But for American arms aid to Pakistan, the sub-continent might have been spared more than one destructive war.

Past assurances that U.S. arms to Pakistan would not be used against India proved worthless, and this time even such an assurance has been omitted. This shows that U.S. Government itself believes that these arms will be used against us. Such a step will not only increase tension on the sub-continent and lead to an arms race, but will also make Pakistan more intransigent towards India and render normalisation of our relations with Pakistan more difficult. The U.S. decision therefore, is all the more regrettable particularly at this juncture when we were beginning to see some hope of normalising relations with Pakistan in some fields.

When the U.S.S.R. supplied arms to Pakistan in 1968-69, we protested to them. We pointed out to them that their military equipment, in addition to what Pakistan had already received from America and China, was obviously for use against India. At that time the U.S.S.R. Government assured us that their arms supply to Pakistan was not intended to hurt India but might help in persuading Pakistan to normalise relations with India. We did not agree with this assessment. We, therefore, continued our objections with the Soviet Government. We are glad that the Soviet Government have given consideration to our representations and informed us that they have not supplied — and do not intend to supply — any military hardware to Pakistan in addition to that already supplied in the past.
1791.       SECRET
Note recorded by Defence Secretary and Foreign Secretary on their Meeting with US. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State.

New Delhi, November 20, 1970.

Ministry of Defence

I give below relevant extract from the Defence Minister’s morning meeting held on 17th inst. at which I reported the talk which I had with Mr. Hollen the night before:

‘Def. Secy stated that he had met Mr. Hollen, Deputy Assistant Secretary, US State Department at a dinner on 16.11.70. He had mentioned to him that he was surprised that the US Govt. could not visualise that the reaction in India to the US arms supply to Pakistan would be strong. He also explained that the Indian authorities cannot understand any policy which makes good losses sustained by Pakistan during the war with India. This was tantamount to approving the aggression of Pakistan against India. Mr. Hollen referred to the supply of Hunters and Canberras from UK and stated that the aircraft supplies from USA were not larger in number. He had mentioned that the APCs were also not very sophisticated equipment. Mr. Hollen gave the following aims as the main reasons for USA to supply arms to Pakistan:

(1) U.S had supplied only what they had considered as the genuine requirements of Pakistan.
(2) To improve relations with Pakistan.
(3) To restrict supplies of equipment from USSR and China.
(4) To improve Pakistan’s relations with India.

To an enquiry, Mr. Hollen admitted that only the second aim may be said to have been achieved as a result of their decision. Mr. Hollen could not say, to an enquiry, whether the MR aircraft proposed to be supplied are the same type as the aircraft supplied earlier, or a more modern one. Mr. Hollen, however, stated that on the type of MR aircraft to be supplied to Pakistan a decision had not yet been taken. He also evaded answering the question what the value of the equipment supplied to Pakistan would be – 15 m or 40 m dollars.

2. I was under the impression that Pakistan had been supplied Maritime Reconnaissance Aircraft earlier. I now understand that this is not the case. MR aircraft (Maritime Patrol Aircraft as the US call them) are a new item of supply. To this extent, therefore, the understanding given by Mr. Keating has not been observed.
3. I repeatedly told Mr. Hollen that it would be a serious matter if MR aircraft to be supplied have an offensive capability against submarines or surface ships.

Sd/-
H.C. Sarin
20.11.1970

Foreign Secretary

Note by Foreign Secretary

I was present at the dinner where this conversation took place. Mr. Van Hollen was on the defensive all the time. However, on one point he expressed his “disappointment” i.e., while he could understand the reaction of the Indian press and Parliament, his Government had hoped that the Government of India at least would have shown some appreciation of the restraint and limitation on supply of arms shown by U.S. Government to Pakistan’s requests. I told Mr. Van Hollen that this was not the first time U.S. Has supplied arms to Pakistan. Looked at in the context of the over $2 billion worth of military supplies, which USA had given to Pakistan since 1954, and particularly of the ban after the 1965 conflict, the resumption of such supplies could not but be considered as a threat to India and, therefore, cause grave concern and resentment both in the Government and among the people of India. He replied that the present Administration was not responsible for the acts of previous Administrations. I said that this did not make any difference to the threat to India. I said that if someone had supplied only one gun, instead of two, to my enemy, I could not but look upon such an act with concern and displeasure.

2. When I asked him whether Senator Saxby’s estimate of $150 million was nearer to the mark than $15 or $40 million, he replied that Senator Saxby’s estimate was highly exaggerated. However, he would not quote any particular figure. Nor would he give any direct reply to my query whether the arms were being supplied as surplus arms at concessional rates or at their market value. He could not also give any assurance on how long the so-called “one-time exception” would be valid for. It is thus obvious that we cannot take the United States government’s assurances at their face value and will have to further watch developments.

Sd/-
(T.N. Kaul)
24.11.1970
1792. Statement by External Affairs Minister in the Lok Sabha on the Reported Supply of Arms to Pakistan by the U.S.S.R. and France.

New Delhi, July 6, 1971.

Government have seen Press reports to this effect. Government have been in touch with the Governments of the USSR and France both in New Delhi and their respective capitals.

The Soviet Ambassador has told us that the press reports about USSR Government having supplied arms to Pakistan after the military action in Bangladesh are incorrect.

The French Government had informed us that they have not entered into any new contracts for the supply of arms to Pakistan after the military action in Bangladesh. They had also informed us towards the end of June that they would not make any deliveries of arms even on old contracts. We have, however, expressed our grave concern to the French Ambassador about the reported supply of arms to Pakistan. We have asked our Ambassador in Paris and the French Ambassador in New Delhi to take this matter up with the French Government.

In view of the prevailing practice of clandestine sale of arms through private parties in Western Europe, the possibility of Pakistan acquiring arms through such sources cannot be ruled out.
1793. Statement by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on arms supply by the United States to Pakistan in reply to a Calling Attention Motion.

It was officially announced in Washington yesterday by the State Department that with immediate effect the United States is lifting the embargo on the supply of arms to Pakistan. As a result, Pakistan will immediately receive 300 armoured personnel carriers reportedly valued at 13 million, and Aircraft engines, military spare parts and parachutes valued at 1.1 million according to U.S. statement. It is clear from the announcement that the United States Government will permit Pakistan to acquire non-lethal military equipment as well as spare parts for lethal weapons given to Pakistan earlier by the United States.

I had reiterated our grave concern yesterday over the American supply of arms to Pakistan and had expressed the hope that the United States Government would carefully consider the implications of such arms supplies and refrain from this action. The Foreign Secretary also conveyed our strong feelings on the subject to the American Ambassador in New Delhi yesterday, as this would have a negative effect on Indo-American relations and on the process of normalisation on the sub-continent. Our Ambassador in Washington is also taking up the matter immediately with the United States Government to convey our grave concern on their decision.
On March 12, Assistant Secretary of State for Near East and South Asian Affairs, Mr. Joseph Sisco, told the House Foreign Affairs Sub-Committee that the United States would like to find a way to fulfill what he called ‘long standing arms commitment’ to Pakistan which had been suspended since the outbreak of the hostilities in 1971. The Government of India views this development with the utmost concern and is taking up the matter with the United States Government.

It has been our policy to promote peace and good neighbourly relations among the countries of the sub-continent. Despite the 1971 conflict imposed on us, we are making earnest endeavours to normalise relations with Pakistan and to establish durable peace. The Simla Agreement embodies the aspirations of the two nations to live in peace and friendship. The withdrawal of troops, under the Simla Agreement, has already been completed and this has resulted in the lowering of tensions.

The United States intention to resume arms supplies to Pakistan will jeopardize the process of normalization and adversely affect the chances of establishment of durable peace on the sub-continent. In the light of past record of Pakistan’s aggression against India, arms shipments to that country will once again pose a grave threat to India’s security.

We have in recent months, expressed our desire to have friendly and normal relations with the United States of America which has been reciprocated by the United States Government. In my statement in the Rajya Sabha on November 30, 1972, I referred to this desire. However, as I said on that occasion, in the past, the U.S. military assistance to Pakistan had been a principal cause of strained relations between India and the United States of America as it encouraged the anti-Indian and militaristic policy of Pakistan. We hope that the United States would carefully consider the implications of such an action and refrain from supplying arms to Pakistan.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
New Delhi, January 28, 1975.

AMBASSADOR OF INDIA
WASHINGTON, D.C.

January 29, 1975

Dear Mr. Secretary,

I have the honour to convey the following message from my Foreign Minister, Mr. Y.B. Chavan, addressed to you:

"New Delhi
January 28, 1975

Dear Mr. Secretary,

During your visit to New Delhi last October, we had occasion to discuss our common purposes of strengthening peace and stability in this region and to end two decades of tension between India and Pakistan which in turn had cast a shadow on the relations with USA. From our side we conveyed to you India’s desire to promote reconciliation with Pakistan on the basis of the Simla Agreement. We were gratified at your renewed support to the Simla Agreement and welcomed your public assurances that the United States would not participate in an arms race on the sub-continent.

2. The United States Government is aware that as a result of painstaking negotiations over the last two years, India and Pakistan have concluded Agreements on some of the specific subjects envisaged in the Simla Agreement to normalise relations between the two countries. It is on the implementation of these Agreements that confidence can be created to establish good neighbourly and friendly relations on a firm foundation. We look forward to the continuation of this process resulting in the early restoration of diplomatic relations and strengthening of all round cooperation thus securing a structure of peace on long term basis so essential for this region. These objectives are certainly in the vital interests of the peoples of the two countries and, indeed, are in line with the declared policy of the United States Government. Any change of U.S. arms policy at this stage would be exploited by belligerent elements in Pakistan and is bound to encourage all those who are opposed to Indo-Pakistan detente and amity. It would certainly revive tensions on the sub-continent and be a serious set-back to the slow but hopeful process of normalisation.
3. We were deeply distressed to read the interview given by the Prime Minister of Pakistan to the New York Times in which he made a totally unfounded allegation that India was contemplating an attack on Pakistan. We could only interpret these imaginary charges as an endeavour to justify demands for the resumption of military supplies by the USA.

4. Mr. Secretary, on the basis of facts and background, the United States Government will agree that Pakistan’s fears about military threat from India are wholly fanciful and unwarranted. We have given a solemn pledge in the Simla Agreement to work for durable peace in the Sub-continent and to settle all our differences peacefully and through bilateral negotiation. Besides, we have publicly declared that as a neighbour, we are deeply interested in Pakistan’s integrity, stability and progress. You may be aware that a hot line between Army Headquarters at Islamabad and Delhi has been functioning since the signing of the Simla Agreement. There exists also an understanding along the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir for bilateral Flag meetings to sort out allegations on the incidents of violations. May I add that we are even willing to take further steps to assuage such irrational sense of insecurity, if genuinely harboured, on the part of Pakistan. We are prepared to agree to direct talks between Indian and Pakistani officials in order to evolve some mutually acceptable form of disengagement along the western border. The prospect of such concrete steps is bound to be jeopardized with a revival of militarism or the induction of fresh (lethal) weapons.

5. Mr. Secretary, you are aware that in recognition of the importance of Indo-US relations not only on the bilateral plane but in order to promote better understanding on wider international issues, we have been engaged in sincere efforts to place our relations on a mature and constructive basis. Your recent visit to Delhi created a better atmosphere and held the promise of greater understanding between our countries in the future. It would be most unfortunate if prospect of improved relationship should now be arrested or receives a setback. In the background of the past, our parliament and public opinion are bound to react strongly against the United States Government’s decision to supply of arms to Pakistan which would be considered as the revival of old discredited policies. Mr. Secretary, the long term interest of peace and stability on the Sub-continent has such an overriding importance to our region that these objectives should (will) not be sacrificed for any narrow short term considerations advanced by the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

6. Since the United States Government’s decision on the supply of arms to the Sub-continent can have serious repercussion, I thought I should in all frankness share my concern with you.
With kind regard,

Sincerely
sd/- Y.B. Chavan

Please accept, Mr. Secretary, the assurances of my highest esteem.

(T.N. Kaul)
Ambassador of India

Hon’ble Dr. Henry A. Kissinger,
Secretary of State,
Washington D.C.

The Ambassador before transmitting the letter to Mr. Kissinger made two slight changes in paragraphs 4 and 5 as per the telegram of 29th January 1975 which is reproduced below:

“Kewal Singh from T.N. Kaul

Personal

Received your telegram 0919 and telex message last night. Shall deliver today or tomorrow. I am taking liberty of omitting the word “lethal” from last sentence in para 4. This would not change the general sense and would prevent U.S. an excuse for supplying offensive weapons which may not be termed as “lethal”. Also in the last sentence in para 5 the word “will” after the word “objectives” may be changed to “should”. Presume no objection.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
SECRET

Telegram from Ambassador in the United States T.N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

You may have seen our telex message about various toasts proposed and speeches made last night at my dinner for SAXBES at which KISSINGER was also present. I deliberately made a reference to the serious repercussions that any change in US present policy on avoiding arms race in sub-continent would have on efforts of two governments for improving relationship and on Simla process in sub-continent. KISSINGER reaffirmed in his toast that “America did not wish to encourage arms race or rivalries in sub-continent and supported Simla process. India was a major power and America’s friendship with other countries in sub-continent would not be allowed to obstruct progress of Simla process’.

2. During and after dinner, KISSINGER told me that he agreed entirely with what I had said. He added “Many of my colleagues want to get on your back but they know you have direct access to me and I am discouraging their efforts”. I told him I had a letter for him from my Foreign Minister which I would like to deliver to him personally. I was to have seen him this evening but got a message from him in the afternoon that owing to unexpectedly prolonged conversation with HAROLD WILSON he could not see me today but would see me tomorrow or the day after. He also sent me following message “No decisions are to be taken or recommendations made until I have seen you”.

3. I saw new Chairman of Senate Foreign Relations Committee SPARKMAN and Chairman of Sub Committee on South Asia, Senator McGovern, this morning. Former was sympathetic and said that if Administration had given us assurance that there would be no change in policy, he did not see any reason why there should be any now. McGovern was more forthcoming and told me in confidence that BHUTTO and US Ambassador to Pakistan BYRODE had been contacting various members of Administration and Congress for lifting of embargo and supply of arms to Pakistan, on the ground that present embargo was “discriminatory against Pakistan”. I told McGovern that the embargo applied equally to both India and Pakistan. If there had been any discrimination like the one-time exception it was in favour of Pakistan and against India. Pakistan had also received about 2 billion dollars worth of US military assistance grants from 1954 to 1965. McGovern said this was a good point to make which was unfortunately not known to many Senators and Congressmen. I also left with them an unofficial note.
4. I am seeing other leading Members of Foreign Relations Committee and Foreign Affairs Committee tomorrow and on next Monday and Tuesday. I am also seeing a few Diplomatic Correspondents of US Press. Shall telegraph to you after seeing KISSINGER.

1797.

SECRET

Telegram from Ambassador in the United State T.N. Kaul to External Affairs Minister Y. B. Chavan.

Foreign Minister from Ambassador - Personal

I had sent a copy of your letter of 28th January to Dr. KISSINGER on 1st February in order to prepare him for my meeting with him today. Saw him for 35 minutes this morning and emphasised in particular the positive elements in your letter regarding “steps to assuage irrational sense of insecurity in Pakistan and possibility of mutually acceptable from of disengagement along the western border and early restoration of diplomatic relations and all round cooperation.” I also gave him a brief note on progress achieved under Simla Agreements so far - vide CHIB’s telegram 27201 of 17th January. I referred to KISSINGER’S remarks at yesterday’s meeting at National Press Club where he had said “The question of arms to Pakistan, an ally, which is in the curious position of being subject to American embargo, is always before us”. I said that KHRUSHCHEV had also told me once in late 1962 that China was their ally and brother while we were their friends and yet Soviet Union had given us arms during and after the Sino-Indian conflict and refused them to China although the two were ideologically in the same camp. I asked KISSINGER what was the difference between ally and friend, and whom did they consider more important.

2. KISSINGER replied “We would not want India to be a militarily ally of USA. India is the predominant power in the sub-continent and I have recognised this publicly. We do not wish to do anything that would encourage an arms race in the sub continent. However BHUTTOis bound to raise this question of embargo. I assured you that no final decision has been taken about it so far and I am going to see the President when he returns from Miami this afternoon. No announcement will be made during BHUTTO’s visit and nothing will be done that would upset the military and political balance in the Sub-continent”.

3. I told KISSINGER that it was not the question of upsetting the so-called military and political balance in the sub-continent which had already been upset by large scale military grants to Pakistan from 1954-1965—arms which in spite of President EISENHOWER’s assurances to our prime Minister had been used against us by Pakistan in three conflicts. Even a symbolic change in the embargo policy would have serious repercussions in our Parliament, press, public opinion and government. It could be the thin end of the wedge, Apart from the arms that Pakistan had received and may receive in the future through third countries such as the Gulf and the Middle East, where she had presence, any change in US embargo policy towards Pakistan would strengthen militaristic trends in Pakistan, weaken the civilian and democratic trends there which wanted normalisation of relations with India, give a set-back to the Simla process and what was more important seriously jeopardize the improving relations between India and USA. If USA attached importance to India’s friendship she should in her own interest and in the interests of stability and progress in the region desist from such action. I reminded him of what he had told me here and you in India that America did not wish to see any expansion of Soviet, or American or Chinese influence on the sub-continent. Any symbolic change in the US embargo policy was likely to lead to this very result which America did not desire to have.

4. KISSINGER replied “You are getting arms from Soviet Union and Pakistan is getting arms from China. France is also selling arms to Pakistan and yet that has not adversely affected your relations with France.” I replied that France had always followed a policy of selling arms on a commercial basis. US policy from 1954 to 1965 had done great damage to stability on the sub-continent and to Indo-US relations. Besides, US possessed most sophisticated armaments and stood in a different position. I added “it is my duty to tell you very frankly, as a friend, that should you make even a symbolic change in your embargo policy it will jeopardize all the results produced by your visit to India and wash out the possibility of any improvement of relations through the Joint Commission.” I further said that I was not sure whether in the light of repercussions in India you would even be able to attend the meeting of the Joint Commission. I expressed this as my personal misgiving.

5. KISSINGER was rather taken aback and said “you have done excellent work here and I am grateful to you. That is why I have attached so much importance to meeting you so frequently. I would sincerely hope that at our relations will further improve. We have no desire or intention to upset the Simla process on the sub-continent or the improvement of our relations. I shall see you soon after BHUTTO departs and discuss the matter further with you”.

6. I told him that I had heard from reliable Senators and Congressmen that US Ambassador to Pakistan BYRODE had been lobbying support for lifting the embargo at the Hill and even some members of the State Department had been trying to sabotage KISSINGER’s Policy towards the sub-continent. The Defence Secretary had also told me that the question of arms supply to the sub-continent was a policy matter for the State Department to determine and the Pentagon only implemented that policy. I wanted to strengthen KISSINGER’S new policy towards the sub-continent and therefore would like to meet the President and make him personally aware of the implementation of any change in the US arms embargo policy. KISSINGER replied “I also heard of BYRODE’s lobbying. He had only been told to meet some Senators and Congressmen to brief them about Pakistan but not to canvass support for any change in the embargo policy. I have, however, ordered him last Friday to stop going to the Hill.” He added “I shall convey all that you have told me to the President today and arrange for you to see him soon”.

7. I then gave KISSINGER a brief unofficial note comparing the military strength of Pakistan and India and pointing out the proportionately larger scale of military expenditure in Pakistan than in India. He read it carefully and said “In any case you should have no fear of Pakistan attacking you. They are incapable of doing so”. I replied that while I had every confidence that we would be able to defeat Pakistan in any future conflict, should one unfortunately arise, we were trying to remove the possibility of any such eventuality. A further conflict would damage both countries, Pakistan much more than India. We wanted to encourage the Simla process and achieve positive concrete results and expected America to help in this process and not to hinder it in any way.

8. KISSINGER said that he could assure me that America would not do anything to hinder this process.

9. I then asked KISSINGER not to link the Gulf situation with the sub-continent and in particular with Pakistan. Pakistan already had its military presence in some of the Gulf States which was looked with suspicion by Iran. KISSINGER raised his eye-brow and asked “Is that so?” I told him in any case we would like to be assured that there will be no third country transfer of arms from the Gulf or the Middle East or other countries to Pakistan as it had happened in the past. He replied “I am not aware of any such transfers at present. Jordan had sent some planes to Pakistan during the last conflict but they have come back to Jordan.” I told him that Pakistan was trying under the cover of setting up a repair facility base in Pakistan to get planes etc. from the Gulf and Middle East countries and we could not ignore this possibility in the future. I hoped that he would impress on the countries concerned and Pakistan not to do this as it would be a violation of US policy. He seemed to rule out any such possibility in the future.

10. I then asked KISSINGER whether it would not be better to work for detente and normalisation of relations in the Gulf area – a sort of an international agreement between the countries concerned guaranteed, if necessary, by USA and USSR. A similar agreement could be discussed between India, Pakistan, Iran, Afghanistan and Bangladesh. This was an idea I had mentioned to him last year and he said he remembered it and had spoken to the Shah of Iran about it.

11. My general impression was that your letter has had an impact on KISSINGER’S thinking and he is in two minds whether to give some symbolic arms to Pakistan or not. I mentioned in this connection that USA had made a one-time exception in the case of 300 armed personnel carriers and I had heard rumours that they might give unarmed personnel carriers to Pakistan. This was self-deception as Pakistan could easily mount arms on such carriers. Without replying to my specific reference to this matter, KISSINGER said “I can assure you that nothing will be done to encourage an arms race”.

12. My information is that the armaments lobby, some members of the Pentagon, some members of the State Department are pressing for a change in the US embargo policy towards Pakistan. KISSINGER is in a difficult position. That is why I am anxious to see the President. If there is no objection I would suggest that Prime Minister may consider sending a message for President FORD through me which I can deliver verbally when I see him after BHUTTO’s visit. The message, I would suggest, could emphasise the positive aspects of Indo-American relations and the Simla process and be couched in general terms suggesting the desirability of strengthening these trends and not doing anything to negative them.

13. Have already seen a dozen leading members of Senate and Congress and am seeing some more this week. General impression I gathered from my talks with Congress leaders is that the Congress is not going to take any initiative in this matter. It is purely for the executive. While the Congress could veto such a change in US policy, it is unlikely to happen at this time when they are concerned with more important problems both internal and external. However, it is not unlikely that some members both in the House and the Senate will express their views against such a change.

◆◆◆◆◆
Media briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on supply of arms by US to Pakistan.

Islamabad, February 5, 1975.

A Foreign Office spokesman said that the “orchestrated Indian campaign against any sale of arms to Pakistan could only serve to emphasize apprehensions about India’s expansionist aims”.

Commenting on the statements given by the Indian Defence Minister in Calcutta on February 4 and the Indian Ambassador to the United States in New York a day earlier, the spokesman said that constant Indian interference in Pakistan’s efforts to purchase arms, essential for its defence, contradicted New Delhi’s professions of respect for the independence and integrity of Pakistan.

The spokesman added that “the hostile Indian propaganda campaign on the eve of the Pakistan Prime Minister’s visit to the United States was a blow to the prospects for normal, good neighbourly relations between India and Pakistan.” He regretted that India constantly “interfered in Pakistan’s efforts to maintain its defence capability.”

The spokesman pointed out that, “India had greatly expanded its domestic production of arms, including tanks and aircraft, imported massive supplies of sophisticated weapons and, despite the economic hardships facing its people, even developed a nuclear device.”

“Yet it raised a howl as a matter of habit whenever Pakistan needed arms for self-defence and not for any position of military dominance or even parity”, he observed.

“Since Pakistan posed no threat to India,” the spokesman said, “the obvious conclusion was that India did not want Pakistan to have a credible defence capability.”
Remarks of Pakistan Advisor on Foreign Affairs Agha Shahi on Indian response to Pakistani proposal for a “Mutual and Balanced Reduction of Force”.

The Chief Martial Law Administrator’s Adviser on Foreign Affairs, Mr. Agha Shah, said at Karachi on August 29, 1978 that Pakistan had not received “a concrete response” from Indian to her proposal “for a mutual and balanced reduction of forces” by the two countries. Speaking at the silver jubilee celebrations of the Pakistan Association of World Federatists, Mr. Shahi said that Pakistan had made the proposal originally in 1974 and reiterated it on several occasions after that, but “we have not as yet obtained a concrete response”.

Another important proposal advanced by Pakistan in the wake of the nuclear explosion conducted by India in 1974 was aimed at establishing a nuclear weapon-free zone in South Asia. Since all the States in South Asia had unilaterally renounced nuclear weapons, it should not be difficult to commit themselves to this policy in binding regional agreement. The concept had been repeatedly endorsed by the UN General Assembly, but it had encountered objections from India. “It is our hope that these objections will be overcome through mutual consultations”, he said.

On the broader context of the Indian Ocean, he said Pakistan had proposed a balanced approach to the objectives of creating a zone of peace, an approach which aimed both at eliminating the military presence and rivalry of the great powers as well as establishing conditions of peace and security among the littoral states of the Indian Ocean. Integral to the concept of this zone of peace was the proposal that the entire area of the Indian Ocean including, the territories of hinterland states, be free of nuclear weapons.

Criticizing the policies of nuclear supplier states, he said that these were “discriminatory and less than even handed” to prevent the transfer of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes to the Third World even under strict international safeguards.

Reaffirming that Pakistan was committed to the goal of non-proliferation and had accepted international safeguards over her peaceful nuclear facilities, he said that the major powers should themselves first set an example by reducing their nuclear weapons to achieve this goal. “Secondly, it is necessary to apply uniform and non-discriminatory safeguards over the nuclear facilities of all non-nuclear states, especially South Africa and Israel, which have both the ambition and the capability to develop nuclear weapons”.

“Instead of countering this immediate danger, the nuclear supplier States have imposed unilateral policies to prevent the transfer of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes to the Third World countries even under strict international safeguards”. It was difficult to accept such policies which meant a concept of lesser sovereignty for the developing countries, he pointed out.

Stressing the need for adequate and credible guarantees to non-nuclear states against the nuclear threat as an issue of special importance to Pakistan, he said unless such assurances were extended to non-nuclear states, the danger of proliferation of nuclear weapons was not likely to be forestalled.

“We believe that the nuclear powers should undertake to act jointly or individually to come to the assistance of a non-nuclear weapon state which is likely to be victim of nuclear threat or attack. The nuclear powers have so far refused to consider such guarantees. Even on the more limited demand pressed by Pakistan that the nuclear powers should undertake at least not to use or threaten the use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapon states, their response has been hesitant...”

“The global race in armaments continues to gather momentum. It consumes nearly 400 billion - five to six per cent of the world’s total output of goods and services. The major proportion of these expenditures - about 60 per cent — is incurred by the two super powers.”

“But the arms race is increasingly becoming, a worldwide phenomenon, including the regions of the Third World. Even more disturbing than the growing nuclear arsenals is the continuing process of qualitative improvements in the range and destructive power of their weapons, both nuclear and conventional.”

He reaffirmed that Pakistan did not wish to become embroiled in the global arms race. “We wish to divert our limited resources to more constructive uses. At the same time and to the extent that Pakistan cannot insulate itself from world developments, it is also essential that we contribute to the international endeavors for arms control and general and comprehensive disarmament.”

He said the economic and social cost of the diversion of more than a billion dollars a day to the arms race was incalculable. It distorted the economic development of all states - large - and small, advanced and underdeveloped - and contributed to the current problems of inflation, balance of payments deficits and energy shortages.

“The distortion in priorities it entails can be illustrated by a few examples. The unit price of a fighter aircraft is $ 10 million today. The cost of a squadron of fighter aircraft is more than $85 million: spent by the World Health Organization for its en-tire smallpox eradication programme in 10 years. And this will not suffice to buy a single strategic bomber.”
Mr. Shahi said the world arms race today was absorbing a volume of resources equal to two-thirds of the ‘Gross National Product (GNP) of the countries with the poorest half of the world of four billion human beings.’

He said the conception of a world federated for achieving permanent peace was in full consonance with the Islamic world view and vision that animated Pakistan’s’ internal and external policies. “As Muslims it is our duty to promote peace and harmony among nations and peoples and contribute to the resolution of the differences which divide the world.”

1800. Expression of Concern by Pakistan on Indian decision to purchase Jaguar Aircraft.

Pakistan’s Foreign Affairs Adviser Agha Shahi conveyed to Indian Foreign Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee at the United Nations on October 10 the “deep concern”, of the Pakistan Government over New Delhi’s decision to purchase 200 deep-strike Jaguar aircraft.

Mr. Shahi met the Indian Foreign Minister soon after Mr. Vajpayee addressed the U.N. General Assembly. This was their second meeting in two weeks. Ambassador Niaz A. Naik was also present.

Mr. Shahi rejected India’s contention that Pakistan had already acquired F-5E aircraft from the United States, a reason India is advancing to justify the purchase of the Anglo-French war planes worth $ 2 billion.

During the 40-minute meeting, Mr. Shahi is reported to have told Mr. Vajpayee that the acquisition of 200 sophisticated aircraft was bound to start an arms race in the sub-continent, and the responsibility for this would rest entirely with India.

Mr. Vajpayee however defended his Government’s decision to this effect on the ground that the aging fleet of the Indian Air Force had to be replaced with aircraft that could match Pakistan Air Force’s Mirages.

Mr. Shahi persisted with his stand that there was no justification for India to purchase the Jaguar aircraft. He said the bulk of Pakistan Air Force comprised F-86 aircraft belonging to the Korean war period and that the aircraft like Hunter and Canberra in service of the Indian Air Force were superior to them. Besides, the Indian Air Force was far bigger than that of Pakistan.
Meanwhile the President's Adviser on Foreign Affairs, Mr. Agha Shahi said at Karachi on October 16 that during his stay in New York he had had a brief meeting with the US Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on October 2, at which he had also discussed the purchase of Jaguar jets by India. “Our concern on the situation arising out of the purchase of Jaguar aircraft by India has been fully expressed to the US Government,” he added. Asked what the reaction of the US Government was, Mr. Shahi said it would be known in due course. He, however, added that high-level talks were essential to discuss such a matter. Such talks could not take place at short notice. “We are keeping the subject under constant review”.

New Delhi, December 3, 1978.

A Foreign Office spokesman was asked to comment on Indian External Affairs Minister, Mr. A.B. Vajpayee’s statement in the Rajya Sabha on November 24 that Pakistan was keen on buying aircraft more sophisticated than the F-5E and the expression of hope by Mr. Vajpayee that the U.S. Government would ensure that sophisticated planes did not reach Pakistan through third countries.

The Spokesman recalled that in order to cover India’s decision to acquire Jaguars, the Indian leaders had stated last October that the U.S. had started supplying F-5E aircraft to Pakistan. In partial modification of those statements, Mr. Vajpayee now spoke of the U.S. Government’s willingness to sell F-5E aircraft to Pakistan.

The spokesman referred to the continuous acquisition by India of all kinds of sophisticated armaments, including the Jaguars, for which it had no use except against smaller neighbors. He expressed astonishment that the Indian Government should not only wish to dissuade America from selling military aircraft to Pakistan but also seek U.S. interference in Pakistan’s relations with third countries.

Whereas the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan has decided to withdraw from the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO) as announced by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on March 12, 1979.

NOW, THEREFORE, I Agha Shahi, Adviser to the President for Foreign Affairs with the rank of Minister of States, do by this instrument formally notify Your Excellency’s Government of the above-said decision.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF I have signed and sealed this instrument.

DONE AT ISLAMABAD, this twenty third day of March, one thousands nine hundred and seventy nine.

(AGHA SHAHI)

Adviser to the President and Secretary-General to the Government of Pakistan for Foreign Affairs.
1803. Reaction of the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the statement of Prime Minister Charan Singh.

New Delhi, January 1, 1980.

Pakistan has deeply regretted the statement by Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Charan Singh, in which he expressed concern over the reported U.S. decision to lift the arms embargo against Pakistan, saying that the arms will be used against India.

Foreign Office spokesman said that the Indian Ambassador was called to the Foreign Office and his attention was drawn to Prime Minister Charan Singh's statement of 31st December reported by All India Radio, expressing concern over the reported U.S. decision to lift the arms embargo against Pakistan and his apprehension that the arms will be used against India.

It was pointed out to the Ambassador that far from desiring conflict or confrontation, Pakistan had been consistently seeking improved relations with India and other neighbouring countries and remained firmly committed to this policy. It was, therefore, a matter of deep regret that the Government of India continued to cast doubts on Pakistan's peaceful intentions and to oppose Pakistan's efforts to acquire even a minimum defensive capability. On the other hand, India itself was embarked upon a major programme of modernization of its armed forces and was engaged in acquiring the most sophisticated weapon systems from various sources. In his latest statement, Prime Minister Charan Singh himself had favoured strengthening of India's defence forces in a "big way" and said that the prosperity of a developing country was linked with a secure border. It was pointed out to the Ambassador that this consideration was equally valid in Pakistan's case.

The Ambassador was reminded of Pakistan's long-standing offer to enter into negotiations with India for a mutual balanced reduction of forces.

The Ambassador was reassured that Pakistan would continue its efforts to build better relations with India and other neighbouring countries on the basis of the principles of sovereign equality, non-interference in each other's internal affairs and peaceful settlement of differences.

◆◆◆◆◆
Statement made by the External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao in the Rajya Sabha on the serious development arising out of the decision of the United States of America and China to extend massive arms aid to Pakistan in the wake of Russian intervention in Afghanistan.

New Delhi, January 24, 1980.

Mr. Chairman, Sir, according to reports that have come to the attention of Government, the US Government has decided to expedite military supplies to Pakistan worth $150 million as part of cash sales already in the pipeline. The US Government has further announced a package aid of $400 million for the next 20 months — $200 million in economic aid and the other $200 million in military aid. Further, following the recent visit to Peking by the American Defence Secretary, Mr. Harold Brown, and the just concluded visit to Pakistan of the Chinese Foreign Minister, Government have seen press reports that China also may be considering increasing the supply of military equipment to Pakistan.

INDUCTION OF ARMS

Government fully shares the serious concern of this House over the moves to augment Pakistan’s military capability. It is our apprehension that induction of arms into Pakistan could convert the South-Asian region into a theatre of Great Power confrontation and conflict and threaten the security of India. Government has also expressed their concern that the induction of arms has a potential of decelerating the process of normalization which the Governments of India and Pakistan have fostered in the spirit of the Simla Agreement. These views have been impressed upon the Governments of USA, China, Pakistan and other concerned countries.

Sir, the developments in the region around us in the last few months have rightly given rise to much concern in this country, which is shared by the Government. The underlying causes are not far to seek. Tensions and problems have existed between neighbours, and even inside nations. A dangerous dimension is added when the great powers start using these nations in their quest to gain advantage in their global strategy or to seek to secure their perceived interests or against when governments in the region render themselves amendable to this strategy for some short term gains an in the process defeat the very objectives they are seeking to achieve. The need of the hour is to defeat this ominous process and return to the tried and tested path of settling problems in an environment free of great power influence or confrontation.
AFGHANISTAN

In this context, Sir, recent developments in Afghanistan have naturally been engaging the serious attention of the Governments. India has close and friendly relations with the Government and people of Afghanistan and we are deeply concerned and vitally interested in the security, independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of this traditionally friendly neighbour of ours; and we believe that they have every right to safeguard them.

It is our hope that the people of Afghanistan will be able to resolve their internal problems without any outside interference. As the Prime Minister has clearly indicated, we are against the presence of foreign troops and bases in any county. We have expressed our hope that Soviet forces will withdraw from Afghanistan.

Our entire stand is consistent with our commitment to peace and non-alignment. All the countries in the South Asian region are members of the Non-aligned Movement and consistent with the principles of non-alignment, it is our hope that the entire area will be free of tensions.

THREAT TO PEACE

The induction of arms into the region and the introduction of great power confrontation would further threaten the peace and stability of the region including the security of India. In this evolving situation our effort has been to take steps to defuse it rather than permit its further escalation. The Government of India has been in touch with the countries of the sub-continent, the Soviet Union, USA, China and other countries to stress that no action should be taken that could lead to an enhancement of the dangers and heightening of confrontation as we feel no worthwhile solution is otherwise possible. In this context the Foreign Minister of the USSR and the representative of the President of the United States are expected to visit India in the near future. The Foreign Secretary of India will also visit Islamabad shortly at the invitation of the Government of Pakistan.

We deem it important to have a continuing dialogue with Pakistan as indeed with the other countries of the region, to ensure that this region does not become the theatre of great power confrontation. It is vitally important that the Governments of India and Pakistan have a clear understanding of each other’s perception and that nothing is done in the meantime that could damage the interests of our region or cause a set back to the process of normalization between India and Pakistan.

PEACEFUL CO-EXISTANCE

We welcome President Zia-ul-Haq’s reference to the Simla Agreement in his message to the Prime Minister (of felicitation on her assuming the office of the Prime Minister of India). This Agreement in our view is the basis of the efforts to normalize relation between India and Pakistan. The Agreement States that relation between the two countries shall be governed by the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations. Both counties have further committed themselves to peaceful co-existence and respect for each other’s territorial integrity and sovereignty. There are, in our opinion, positive and obvious advantages in cooperation between our two countries though the process of normalization. It must be our hope that we will jointly be able to travel further along this path of reason.

Mr. Chairman, Sir, our region and our neighbourhood have been in turmoil over a long period. Working together in harmony and cooperation, we can do much to establish a climate of peace and stability in order to promote development for our collective benefit. It be clearly understood that in pursuit of this vision, we will steadfastly oppose all attempts by and poser to turn the clock back and revert to an era of confrontation and cold war. Government is confident that the House and the people of India stand united behind it in supporting their efforts to gain these objectives.

 DDS

1805. Press Release issued by the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi denying that Pakistan was trying to acquire fresh arms.

New Delhi, May, 31, 1980.

The Moscow-dateline UNI report about Rs. 20,000 million arms shopping by Pakistan is certainly false and possibly fictitious. Its timing suggests it may be dishonestly concocted and diversionary in motivation.

Pakistan has no desire and obviously not the resources to embark on an arms race. Constraints on its foreign exchange resources and other needs of the economy have not permitted Pakistan to spare funds even for the import of essential defence requirements. Pakistan’s industrial capacity for indigenous manufacture of arms is in its infancy.

A few months ago Pakistan was offered a credit of $200 million for purchase of arms from USA. Pakistan did not accept that offer. It has strictly maintained its non-aligned status by not entering into an aid relationship with any super Powers for the acquisition of weapons.
1806. Extract from the Speech of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi while speaking on the Demands for Grants of the Ministry of Defence.

New Delhi, July 19, 1980.

I would be failing in frankness if I did not give expression to our uneasiness at the reported plans of various countries to arm Pakistan. Even as it is, Pakistan's per capita expenditure on defence is well over double of ours. Reports of Pakistan's nuclear programme have caused widespread disquiet throughout our country. I hope that the absence of mechanisms of public opinion and public accountability in Pakistan will not serve as an encouragement to confrontation. The possibility of Pakistan developing nuclear weapon capability in the near future has come up for discussion in various forums recently. Government is aware of the serious implications of Pakistan acquiring this capability. We hope that the Government of Pakistan will live up to its pledge to gear its nuclear programme only to peaceful purposes.

1807. Interview of Pakistan Foreign Affairs Advisor Agha Shahi on Pakistan’s Defence Needs to an Indian news magazine as published by Pakistan Times.

Lahore, March 2, 1981.

Pakistan’s Foreign Affairs Advisor Agha Shahi has said that India’s realisation of Pakistan’s needs as a nation to arm itself and to modernise its forces could go a long-way in convincing Pakistan of its sincerity in building friendship between the two countries.

[In an interview with the magazine during his recent visit to India in connection with Non-Aligned Ministerial Conference, Mr. Shahi was asked to spell out four things he would most like India to do to convince Pakistan and its sincerity.]

Mr Agha Shahi said the four things India could do would be:

Most important, to reiterate that the Indian Government is not unmindful of Pakistan's concerns over the situation in Afghanistan, that Pakistan need have no security apprehensions regarding its eastern border at this time; that India realise Pakistan's needs as a nation to arm itself; and to modernise its forces in view of India's own programme of modernisation and her greater resources.

The feeling of the people of Pakistan at this time because of the continuing revolution in Iran, the occupation of Afghanistan, the attitude of the Soviet Union towards Pakistan and the close relationship between India and the Soviet Union was sought to be intimidated, he said. "Pakistan has refused to be intimidated", he emphatically declared, adding that at the same time it had not taken up a rigid position of refusing negotiations. "We believe that the basis outlined by us for a dialogue on Afghanistan is reasonable."

Replying to a question, Mr. Shahi said Pakistan had repeatedly stated that it did not seek arms parity with India, nor was it going to enter into an arms race with India. Pakistan was not manufacturing nuclear weapons either. "We would be ready to sit down with India to exchange mutual reassurances on the question of nuclear programme in the two countries. In the light of all this I think India could in its stand make a profound impact on the situation in Pakistan," he said.

Questioned as to what the peaceful purposes were for which Pakistan needed enriched uranium, Mr. Shahi said it was for use as a reactor fuel in a light water reactor. Pakistan had been trying to negotiate for this 600-megawatt reactor. "All the enriched uranium that we could produce would be barely sufficient for this reactor." Now there had been some resource constraints because of the continuing rise in oil prices. "Besides we feel that if we can enrich uranium we have done something which is creditable from the point of view of a developing country. If we are able to enrich uranium before we get a reactor, why cannot we sell it to countries which have light water reactor? There are very few countries which sell enriched uranium, America being one of them and the Soviet Union the other. So, there is this feeling that a Third World country is developing this capability. This is causing some tribulations. You can enrich uranium by one method or another. I think other countries are engaged in similar processes and Pakistan is not the only country. We think this in sense that concentration on Pakistan to the exclusion of almost all countries is not accidental. It is because of the propaganda of Zionist elements in the United States that Pakistan will make the bomb and give it to Col Gaddafi or this country or that country.

Answering, a question about possible cooperation between Pakistan and India in nuclear field, Mr. Shah said, "As we have said, in principle, we are ready for a dialogue with India in nuclear matters."
Mr. Venal Aryan observed you are making enriched uranium at Kahuta, but you don’t have a reactor. We have a reactor at Tarapur and we need enriched uranium so very badly. We are making heavy water and I am sure it will be useful for your nuclear power projects at Karachi and Chashma.

Mr. Shahi replied in regard to nuclear cooperation. “I think what you have said is very interesting. You have proposed very right coopera-tion and this is something that has to be deeply studied.”

Replying to a question on the possibility of summit meeting between President Zia-ul-Haq and Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Mr Shahi said: “Let us have discussion and good preparations. We should identify the issues and then draw position papers for our leaders so they can have a fruitful summit. We can certainly try.”

When the interviewer asked if he could assume, in the course of this year, a meeting between President Zia and Mrs. Gandhi, Mr. Shahi again said, “Well, we have to work for it. It depends on the wishes of the two leaders. It is not for us to say, but we will certainly try.”

Replying to another question, Mr. Shahi said Pakistan’s refe-rence to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute in international forums should not be construed in India to mean that Pakistan does not desire India’s friendship or that Pakistan is embarked on raising international discussions on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. “What we do concerns the interpretation of the Simla Agreement. I have explained more than once that until we reach a settlement of the dispute it could be permissible for both parties to refer to what has been the historical or traditional position.”

Answering another question, Mr. Shahi said the Simla Agreement provided for progressive normalisation of relations between two countries and several steps have been taken under this agreement, some of them of major significance, in India there had been a feeling for the last two years that Simla process has come to stand still. “We do not think so. I think Indian feeling, is due to the fact that private trade does not come up to the level that seems to have been expected by the private sector. But there are fears in Pakistan on the part of those who are developing basic industries about the unbalanced results of more private trade.”
1808. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, March 27, 1981.

Pointing out that tendentious and misleading reports had been put out during the past few days about a United States military aid offer to Pakistan, a Foreign Office spokesman said at Islamabad on March 27 that it was, therefore, necessary to clarify the situation.

Pakistan and the United States had been engaged over a period of time in an exchange of views at various levels in order to arrive at a mutually acceptable basis for a durable bilateral relationship consistent with Pakistan’s status as member of the Islamic Conference and the Non-Aligned Movement, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said that Pakistan greatly valued its friendship with the United States and the current talks were part of a continuing process as was normal practice among friendly countries. He confirmed that discussions were taking place over certain proposals put forward by the United States including military sales, but denied that any agreement on an aid package had been reached. He characterized as totally baseless suggestions emanating from certain quarters that a secret agreement had been concluded in this connection.

He reiterated the underlying principles of Pakistan’s foreign policy on the basis of which relationships of friendly co-operation were maintained with all countries, and specially those in its neighbourhood.

He also reaffirmed Pakistan’s commitment to the objectives, policies and principles of the Islamic Conference and the Non-Aligned Movement.

◆◆◆◆◆

Ambassador called on Secretary of State Mr. Alexander Haig on March 31, 1981. Shri G. Parthasarathi and Shri A.N.D, Haksar, Deputy Chief of Mission, were present on the occasion. Shri Parthasarathi was visiting the United States in his capacity as co-Chairman of the Indo-U.S. Sub Commission on Education and Culture and he was asked by Prime Minister to avail of this opportunity to convey at the highest level in the U.S. Administration her concern about the reported U.S. plans to resume arms supplies to Pakistan. He had asked for a separate meeting for Shri Parthasarathi but in view of the busy schedule of the Secretary of State it was suggested by them that if he so desired Shri Parthasarathi could meet the Secretary together with the Ambassador. From the U.S. side Assistant Secretary Veliotes and Deputy Assistant Secretary Mrs. Jane Coon were present.

* * *

The Secretary said that since this was a first meeting it might be helpful for him to say something about the U.S. policies. He said that there had been an important change of national mood in America which had resulted in the election of President Reagan. There were four or five aspects which he would like to mention:

(a) The United States was greatly concerned with increasing risk-taking by the Soviet Union and violations of international law. If the world continued to overlook violations of international law and violent changes, we would risk the possibility of becoming victims of it ourselves. Haig referred to Soviets thrusts in Africa and Asia, especially mentioning Afghanistan and the Gulf and even into neighbourhood of the United States in Latin America. He painted a rather over-drawn picture of Soviet expansionism.

(b) While the United States would work more closely with their allies, they are also keen to do so with countries like India which are friends and with whom the USA had relations of historical friendship. He thought that there should be more consultations between our two countries.
(c) USA believed that before policy abroad can be reinvigorated, it was necessary for America to solve its internal economic problems, particularly checking inflation. The Administration was now pre-occupied with this essential task. It was their conviction that American diplomacy would be credible and arms control efforts successful only if there was internal strength in the United States.

(d) They had differences with the preceding Administration on the application of the principle of human rights in international relations. However, the new Administration attached no less importance to the principle of human rights.

Commenting on the Secretary’s remarks the Ambassador said that risk-taking by USSR was a matter of concern. He added that India has been always opposed to transgressions of international law. Ambassador then explained that in our own region India has tried to create an area of peace and stability. He was happy that the Secretary of State considered India as one of the historical friends of the United States. He explained that India has succeeded in establishing a reasonable degree of stability in the vast area of its territory that it has a functioning democratic system and besides India is not an area of great power contention. This, the Ambassador said, is an important strategic factor in favour of peace as well as in the interest of the United States. As a matter of fact by virtue of its internal and external policies, a situation has been created in India which does not give strategic headaches to the United States or pose any threats to U.S. security and interests. With Pakistan, he admitted India has certain historical differences, but even here cooperation has been gradually growing between India and Pakistan since the Simla Agreement. At present we were concerned about the future of Indo-Pakistan relations. Recent developments indicate the possibility of retardation of the progress towards normalization. We were now hearing of large-scale induction of arms into Pakistan from the United States. India was greatly interested in the stability and security of Pakistan. That is why we are concerned about the consequences of large-scale induction of arms into Pakistan, which would come in the way of normalization with India and also create internal problems for Pakistan. At this stage Ambassador requested Shri Parthasarathi to speak further on the subject.

Shri Parthasarathi said that he had come to USA for the meeting of the Indo-US Joint sub-Commission on Education and Culture. A useful programme of cultural exchange was being put into effect. The Prime Minister had instructed him to take the opportunity of his visit for speaking at the highest level possible about our grave concern about arms supplies to Pakistan. We were encouraged to know that the Secretary would like to have consultation among historical friends. Our relations with Pakistan had been progressing. We would like to have a stable Pakistan. But any large scale induction of arms could make the region a cockpit of great power rivalry. We would like to avoid having, an arms race with Pakistan; we did not have the resources for it. But if sophisticated arms were given to Pakistan, we would be obliged to make efforts to match them. In the 70s, Pakistan had obtained about $2 billion worth of arms from abroad, from China and through funds supplied by the oil rich countries. We had not protested at the time. At present, there was some kind of a natural balance in South Asia. If it was upset it would divert resources, increase tensions and retard growth of relations. He hoped that the Secretary would take into account our concerns and we were glad that he had talked about consultations.

The Secretary said there had been a material change in the situation, viz., the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the creation of a puppet regime there. This had placed unusual pressures on Pakistan. He knew that India had made efforts to get the Soviets out of Afghanistan. The U.S. impression was that the Soviets had got into a quicksand situation there, more than what they had expected. But this had also resulted in pressures on Pakistan. The Soviets had already disturbed the balance to which Shri Parthasarathi had referred. The insecurity of Pakistan had increased. One option for it was the path of nuclear weaponry. The U.S. would regret it as it had regretted what India had done. The problem was that of a fundamentally threatened Pakistan, threatened by USSR with its sense of isolation, its varying relations with USA and dependence on China. It was US’ feeling that they had to create a sense of concern about Soviet activity. Ambassador and Shri Parthasarathi would have seen the press reports about proposed assistance to Pakistan. The US would be happy to render assistance but this would depend on the decision of Pakistan. He noted that Pakistan was also having a dialogue with Saudi Arabia.

The Secretary continued that these instabilities went beyond the bilateral balance to which reference had been made by us. US help to Pakistan or other moderate Arabs was not intended to be deleterious to U.S. friendship with others. He added that the US would like to promote equilibrium. They had never questioned India’s non-alignment, which they consider healthy, and India’s constructive role. But he would be less than frank if he did not say that they were concerned about Pakistan’s nuclear activities. Hectoring and cajoling it had not worked as it had not with India. The only way was to alleviate its sense of insecurity.

Ambassador said that with regard to nuclear development, in India and Pakistan there was one difference. India’s nuclear policies were peaceful but the Pakistan programme is a weapon-programme. Bhutto had once said that they would manufacture the bomb even if Pakistan had to eat grass. Pakistan’s nuclear programme had been started in 1972, before India’s peaceful explosion and was not the consequence of the Indian programme.
The Secretary said that the basic problem was that Pakistan felt insecure. It felt that, its neighbour is a “have” nation. A country whose sense of security can be enhanced would be more amenable to counsel and guidance. He referred again to the US concern about USSR. He then expatiated on the problems faced by the Soviet Union — its grave economic problems, demographic problems, and the centrifugal dangers it has been facing. He particularly drew attention to the problem of Poland.

Shri Parthasarathi enquired if the Secretary felt that the international situation was deteriorating. The Secretary answered that he would not say that the situation had deteriorated, but it was rather experiencing the consequence of various forces. The USSR despite great accumulation of military power was suffering from internal contradictions which he had already mentioned. It was the convergence of these factors with Soviet military interventions which created a dangerous situation. The US had to make clear to the Soviets that they could not make up for internal failures by successes abroad. The Soviets had in the past suggested carving out of areas as spheres of influence by the two powers but it was not possible to have a situation of condominium in the world. The Ambassador at this stage said that India did not believe that it is an area to be carved out by other countries as their sphere of influence—that was the essence of our policy of non-alignment and independence. Shri Parthasarathi enquired if the Secretary did not find that the cost of confrontation at various levels, be it USA-USSR, China-Vietnam, India-Pakistan, was becoming increasingly unbearable for the international community and if the world could afford this confrontation.

The Secretary said that the worst situation would be to get immobilized by a sense of inevitability. Unless the Soviets recognize that the US had the ability to punish them -- and the US had this ability now -- with their internal problems and the problems in Afghanistan and Poland, they may take dangerous action. The US had to act responsibly. It had to police its global responsibility. He felt that if the US had exercised its responsibility in Angola it could have avoided the subsequent situation in Ethiopia, the changes in Afghanistan, Cambodia, etc.

Referring to Poland, Ambassador enquired if it was not remarkable that people there had been able to assert themselves and put a great power like the Soviet Union on the defensive. He recalled that at the time of Hungarian crisis, Nehru had said that the mystique of communism had been broken; but the best way to let liberal forces grow within Communist camp was to abstain from outside intervention. He added that the growth of people’s forces in Poland was due mainly to an evolutionary internal growth.
Ambassador observed that the problem in our own region was whether a predominantly military method would secure the best result. The Secretary replied that he did not think so. Ambassador then said that our assessment was that provision of large scale arms to Pakistan would only enfeeble the Pakistan regime instead of strengthening it.

Secretary said that he wished to assure that their assistance to Pakistan also included economic aid and aid for refugees. They were very conscious of this aspect. Only to provide arms was the approach of the Soviet Union. It was an inorganic approach which would fall by its own weight. But not to provide arms, which he described is the Andrew Young approach, also overlooked these realities. It overlooked the impact on non-aligned nations. It overlooked the Soviet strategic grand design for securing control of international communication lines. Most important, if one wished ones values of peaceful change to be accepted, how could one ignore blatant violation of those values.

Ambassador said no one wanted to ignore violations of international law; the question was how to deal with such developments. Our view was that a military approach was not the effective method. Ambassador then pointed out that from the middle fifties Pakistan was an aligned country, but now she is non-aligned. Today there is a dichotomy in Pakistan’s attitude towards military ties with USA. They want the arm, but they want to maintain their non-aligned image for the world and also for their own people.

Massive induction of US arms will not be seen as in accord with Pakistan’s non-alignment. The feeling in the Gulf States was also the same. Ambassador referred to the meeting of the Council of Gulf States which declared that the security of the Gulf and of the sea-lanes was the sole responsibility of the Gulf countries and foreign military presence was not constructive. The Islamic Conference also took the same stand. Ambassador then said that soon after India achieved independence it had been suggested that India inherit the British responsibilities of providing security in the Gulf region. But Nehru had said that if we had a military presence there it would only boomerang against us in the long run. The factor of nationalism had to be taken into account. These are developing countries with a feudal set-up but with a growing sense of nationalism among the people. This nationalism must be taken into account in fashioning policies. We have grave apprehensions regarding the consequences of a high military profile of the United States in the region.

The Secretary said that they could not impose their presence on nations that did not seek it. But they had already experienced destabilising developments like the fall of the Shah and the Soviet activity in the Horn of Africa and the two Yemens with regimes established with no organic viability. This made other governments in the area feel more insecure. The US was not seeking a huge presence in the area, more so as it would have to pick up the bill for it. But it would like to help the moderate Arab States, Pakistan and even Iran where its long term objectives would not be displaced by short term developments. USA had to react to Soviet activities.

Ambassador observed that there was once Soviet presence in countries like Egypt and Somalia, but these had been easily removed. The Secretary said that Somalia was not a good example. It had been easy for the USSR to itself decide that it would support strategically more important Ethiopia instead of Somalia. (He was implying the removal of Soviet presence from Somalia was at Soviet volition and not due to the efforts of the Somalis themselves. He forgot that in Egypt Sadat took the initiative in breaking with USSR.)

Shri Parathasarathi enquired about the present state of US talks with Pakistan on arms assistance. The Secretary described them as "very undeveloped" but said that the talks would continue. Shri Parthasarathi said that once there was an arms race, one could not say where it would end. Also, the Pakistan regime had serious internal difficulties.

Secretary Haig said that they were and would continue to remain sensitive to Indians concerns. On the other hand the present situation had to be corrected. He added that the Soviet Union was taking advantage of Pakistan’s difficulties. It had, for instance, provided automatic weapons to the hijackers of the Pakistani plane.

Ambassador said that the Secretary should know that Pakistan has also been dealing with the USSR as the USSR had been dealing with Pakistan without of course telling us. In fifties when Pakistan received western arms, ostensibly in the background of the Chinese communist threat, Pakistan Prime Minister had told Zhou En-lai at the Bandung Conference that the arms were not directed against China but India. Ambassador observed that he would not be surprised if Pakistan were not telling the Soviets the same thing now that the arms now being got from the United States are not intended against the Soviet Union but for India. We know that the type of sophisticated equipment mentioned are not relevant for fighting on the Afghan border, but can be used effectively against India.

The Secretary said "Let me assure you that as we go on with our discussions we will do so in a way that we are sensitive to your concerns. I welcome the opportunity to know them at first hand. It is my conviction that India’s objectives for international peace and stability are very close to ours. Though we may have differences of approach, we do not wish to disturb our traditional friendship which we cherish."
In taking leave at the end of the meeting, Shri Parthasarathi said that US and India should have more consultations before US decides its policy. As General Haig was escorting the Indian party out of his room he recalled how when he was young his father had wanted him to join the Church; instead he joined the army which greatly upset his father. Ambassador remarked jocularly that now as Secretary of State he is working for peace which would have pleased his father.

1810. Statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi.

Islamabad, April 17, 1981.

The Prime Minister, as well as, the; External Affairs Minister, of India have issued several statements over the past-three weeks, raising the spectre of a Pakistan armed to the teeth, posing a danger to India. The Foreign Minister also said in Parliament that Pakistan was being sucked into something. These charges, are as unwarranted as they are gra-tuitous; nor is there any valid reason for the declaration of the Foreign Minister of India that the process of normalisation is in “jeopardy”. These statements have created an atmosphere of artificial crisis in bilateral relations.

We regret that India has launched a campaign at home and abroad directed at the possible acquisition by Pakistan of some defence equipment, in the recent past, India itself has entered into agreements with the Soviet Union and with countries of Western Europe for the acquisition of the most modern weapon systems, including deep penetration strike aircraft, the latest MIGs, tanks, missiles and other weapons with offensive capability. The value of these armaments, taking into account the concessional terms extended by the Soviet Union, is estimated at around $10 billion.

We did not question India's right to acquire these weapons even though we were deeply perturbed over such massive inductions of armaments into an already vast military establishment, far in excess of legitimate defence requirements. The furor in Indian official circles over a possible small-scale purchase by Pakistan of arms, to replace to some extent its obsolete military equipment, is devoid of any justification.

It is regretted that India's obsession of a non-existent military threat from Pakistan verges on the surreal and is the main source of complications in developing, a rational bilateral relationship. It is inconceivable that Pakistan which is a small State compared with India, should constitute a threat to India which has such an overwhelming advantage in size, population, resources, industrial strength and military might.

The Government of India has ascribed imaginary motives and purposes to the discussions between Pakistan and the United States. The talks which I shall be support the littoral States on whatever measures they took for Gulf security. The integrity and security of Pakistan was, however, of vital importance, both to the Gulf States and to the Islamic world and, in fact, the entire world. If in this light, the US made any pronouncement that would be welcome. Whosoever, extended support and help to Pakistan for its security, would contribute to world peace. Pakistan would like to see such a support from other States also. He, however, did not mention any particular country. He, however, made it very clear that Pakistan did not contemplate any military relationship with the US for Gulf security. Asked if he was taking a shopping list of arms to Washington, Mr. Shahi said 'such a situation would arise only when there is an agreement'. Pakistan he added in reply to another question would not become a conduit for passage of foreign arms to Afghan Mujahideen. "This has been our policy all along," he said.

Mr Shahi said the US leaders had made statements showing interest in Pakistan's security and describing Pakistan as the "cornerstone" of US foreign policy. He said he welcomed them and would like other countries too, to feel the same way.

Meanwhile Pakistan Foreign Office Spokesman said Pakistan had lodged a protest with the Indian Embassy in Islamabad on April 17, over Indian External Affairs Secretary Eric Gonsalves' accusation that Pakistan was sending mercenaries in the service of what he called "America's gunboat diplomacy" in the Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf region. The spokesman stated that India's military preponderance was well known as its naval forces was 11 times than of Pakistan, air force five times and land forces three times bigger than Pakistan's.

While criticising the sale of American arms to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, Mr. Gonsalves also spoke against the proposed "heavy American arms deliveries to Pakistan". The Spokesman Said: "Following the example of certain chauvinistic circles in India which feign alarm at any prospect of arms sales to Pakistan, Mr Gonsalves had tried to make out that the India-Pakistan military balance of power was basically in Pakistan's favour, both in manpower and deployment." The Spokesman accused New Delhi of trying to explain away India's own purchase of sophisticated aircraft as a step taken "only after India found itself weaker than Pakistan" and described these statements as patently false.
holding shortly in Washington with Secretary of State Alexander Haig will relate entirely to bilateral relations and will provide an opportunity for exploring the possibility of making good a part of our most urgent defence needs. A military procurement relationship would in no way affect the course of Pakistan’s foreign policy as it has evolved during the last few years. India, which has itself acquired a vast arsenal on concessional terms from a super-Power, should not adopt double standards.

In the interest of preventing misunderstanding and of ensuring the continuation of the process of improvement of bilateral relations, Pakistan and India have maintained a constant dialogue. I am glad that there will be an opportunity to continue this dialogue when India’s Foreign Minister Mr. Narasimha Rao visits us next month.

I would like to reaffirm that on its part, the Government of Pakistan will persevere in its efforts to develop and strengthen normal, good-neighbourly relations with India. The Simla Agreement remains a cornerstone of our policy.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Extract from the note of the Embassy of India of the call by Ambassador K. R. Narayanan on US Deputy Secretary of State William Clark.

Washington, D.C., May 9, 1981.

Ambassador called on Deputy Secretary of State William Clark on Tuesday, May 19, 1981. He was accompanied by Counsellor (Political), Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Jane Coon and Deputy Director, Bureau of Near East & South Asian Affairs, Harold Lucius were also present.

2. Welcoming Ambassador, Mr. Clark said that successive Indian Ambassadors seemed to have a tradition of good relations with the person holding the number 2 spot in the State Department. He hoped this would be continued and that Ambassador was free to call on him whenever he so desired. Mr. Clark added that he had heard that Ambassador was returning to India for consultations. Ambassador said that he was planning to leave for India for consultations in a week’s time. He expected to be in India for about 10 days. The main reason for his return was to explain to decision makers in India the thrust of the new Administration’s policies and also to get a first-hand idea of our own thinking.

3. Ambassador said that he had, just prior to his meeting with the Deputy Secretary, met with the Assistant Secretary Veliotes. He had taken this opportunity of conveying to Mr. Veliotes some of our aspirations and apprehensions. Ambassador said that we have some apprehensions not so much about the objectives of U.S. foreign policy, but about the consequences, perhaps unintended, of U.S. policies and actions in our region.

4. Mr. Clark said that the U.S. did have a concern for regional security in South Asia and the Gulf. He was not aware of the details of the thrust of U.S. policy in South Asia, but was of the view that a weak Pakistan would only invite more Soviet aggression. In his view, a strong Pakistan, which was not too strong to threaten India, would deter the Soviets. Ambassador said that contrary to the belief in some circles in the U.S., that India would somehow desire to see a weak Pakistan, he would like to stress that we believed that a strong and stable Pakistan was in India’s interest. We were not insensitive to Pakistan’s requirements for legitimate modernisation of its armed forces. However, we did have our apprehensions about a militarization of Pakistan which could lead that country to be adventurist actions. Our differences with the U.S. arose out of differing perceptions on how Pakistan can be strengthened and what effect large-scale military aid will have. Our view was that Pakistan’s problems arose because successive military governments had really not taken the trouble to build up a viable economic infrastructure. They had instead tried to perpetuate themselves by diverting attention from real economic problems to issues pertaining to relations with India.

5. Ambassador said that during the Presidential election campaign, President Reagan had in a speech stated that India was hostile to Pakistan. It is true that this statement had been made before the new Administration assumed office, but it nevertheless was reflective of a general misconception in the U.S. about our attitude towards Pakistan. The very fact that (our political leaders agreed peacefully to the partition of India in 1947, was a manifestation of our desire to live in peace with Pakistan. If we had then decided to fight a civil war to maintain unity, we could have easily succeeded in that period of time. It should thus be evident that India does not intend to take advantage of Pakistan’s difficulties and indeed believes that a strong and stable Pakistan is an asset to our own security. The U.S. would have to understand that if Pakistan’s stability is in the interests of India’s security, the best guarantee for Pakistan’s security was India, and that Pakistan can be defended ultimately with India’s cooperation and support. The best signal which could be given to the Soviet Union would be for India and Pakistan to come closer together not under the auspices of great power arrangements, but merely as two neighbouring and two non-aligned countries. Large scale and unbalanced military aid to Pakistan, especially of the weapons which could only be used against India, would come in the way of Indo-Pakistan cooperation. Ambassador expressed the hope that a situation would not be created where there would be a setback to the improvement in relations which had taken place between India and Pakistan over the last several years. He added that in spite of the difficulties and complications posed by the military aid programme which the US was envisaging for Pakistan, India was committed to improving relations with that country.

6. Clark said that he agreed with Ambassador that it was important to promote better relations between India and Pakistan and suggested that Ambassador should discuss the question of supply of sophisticated weapons to Pakistan with Under Secretary Buckley. He said that he would himself speak to the Under Secretary on the subject. Ambassador said that he hoped to see Under Secretary Buckley soon.
1812. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, September 15, 1981.

Our dialogue with the United States has taken a positive turn with the recent visit to Pakistan of Mr. Peter McPherson, Administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, and Mr. James Buckley, U.S. Under Secretary of State who brought with him a personal letter addressed to President Zia-ul-Haq by President Reagan.

The programme of U.S. economic assistance to Pakistan over the next five years, was discussed in detail with Mr. McPherson and his delegation and mutually satisfactory agreement subject to congressional approval, was reached.

Similarly, talks with Mr. James Buckley were also concluded on a positive note. As is known, an agreement in principle had been reached during Mr. Buckley’s earlier visit in June in regard to the acceptability of the US economic and military sales package which was offered at the time.

Soon after Mr. Buckley’s visit, a Pakistan military delegation visited Washington to discuss details of the military sales programme to Pakistan.

During these talks, certain issues relating to the delivery schedule, of some essential defence items, had remained unresolved. During his recent visit, Mr. Buckley clarified these issues to our satisfaction. As a result of our detailed exchange of views with him on this occasion, we were able to convey our formal acceptance of the US package as modified and revised in the consultative process which has now been completed.

Accordingly, these proposals will be put before the Congress as required by the US legal procedure. We have been greatly reassured by the fact that the US Administration fully understands our essential concerns and that there is a genuine desire to build a new relationship between our two countries on the basis of trust, mutual respect and sovereign equality.

We wish to reiterate that our acceptance of the US package does not affect in any way our commitments as a member of Islamic Conference and the Non-Aligned Movement. Our well-known position on major international issues in regard to which our foreign policy has consistently maintained a principled stand.

Similarly, the development of bilateral relations with the United States will not affect our relationship with any third country.

We would like to reaffirm, particularly in regard to our relations with India, that there would be no weakening of our efforts to develop a relationship of mutual trust and confidence with this important neighbouring country. We are not in competition with India in an arms race and the modest quantity of arms that we may acquire during the next five years is solely meant to achieve partial replacement of our obsolete defence equipment. All we propose to do is to acquire a minimum defence capability to ensure the security of Pakistan in the context of the regional situation which is far from reassuring.

Although, it is Pakistan as a small country which needs assurances from its larger neighbours in regard to its security, particularly from India, which, despite its over-whelming military superiority, has embarked on a programme of acquiring the most modern offensive weapons including Jaguars, MIG-23’s and MIG 25’s and Mirage-2000 aircraft, in large numbers from Western sources, and on concessional terms from Soviet Union, we are prepared on our part to do whatever we can to promote mutual confidence. We would like to convey the assurance that in expressing our desire for a friendly and tension-free relationship, we are not indulging in a propaganda exercise.

If India is inclined to banish its unfounded fears and is ready to grasp the hand of friendship which we extend, it shall not find us wanting in fully reciprocating any gesture on its part for establishing good-neighbourly relations.

On our part we are prepared to enter into immediate consultations with India for the purpose of exchanging mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Record of Discussions between Secretary (East) Ministry of External Affairs Eric Gonsalves and US State Department Politico-Military Affairs Director Richard Burt.

Embassy of India
Washington

Record of discussions between Secretary (East) and Richard Burt, Director, Politico-Military Affairs, Deptt. of State held on 13.11.1981.

Ambassador and Counsellor (Political) were also present. Howard Schaeffer, Director, NEA was present from the U.S. side, along with Burt’s Executive Assistant.

2. Welcoming Secretary (East), Burt said that he hoped that the Tarapur issue could be resolved and got out of the way as it would remove an irritant in bi-lateral relations.

3. Secretary (East) said that he had wanted to meet Burt and to quite frankly voice our unhappiness at the wording of some of the testimony on Capitol Hill given by Administration officials on the question of arms aid to Pakistan. Secretary (East) said that he had read Buckley’s statement on November 12 in which he had said that Pakistan was being strengthened in order to build up its capabilities against an attack by the Soviet Union or a “well-armed Soviet proxy”. Secretary (East) also drew Burt’s attention to the objectionable references to India in the Pentagon booklet on Soviet military power.

4. Secretary (East) said that all the above references were not only unfortunate, but also had their impact on bilateral relations. Such references gave us the impression that U.S. was perhaps putting us in its “enemy camp”, which was just not warranted.

5. BURT said that while there were certainly differences in perception between India and the U.S., there were also shared interests. Both countries shared an interest in stability in the Persian Gulf. He added that he had taken note of what Secretary (East) had said about Buckley’s testimony, but it had to be borne in mind that nobody referred to India in these terms. Buckley’s reference was obviously to Afghan troops. Secretary (East) said that he found it difficult to accept this explanation that the Afghan army constituted “a well-armed Soviet proxy” when the U.S. itself was claiming that the Afghan army was in shambles with growing dissatisfaction and desertions. Burt said that India and the U.S.
are both democratic countries. Both governments have to respond to public opinion. It was important that both sides avoid public recriminations. He added that Indo-U.S. relationship was a “love-hate” relationship. This was because, while there were similarities in their democratic systems, there were differences of perceptions on international issues.

6. Secretary (East) said that, while we obviously could not control what appeared in our press, we had bent over backwards in order to avoid saying things which could cause offence to the United States. Referring to Pakistan, Secretary (East) said that we do not object to that country obtaining its legitimate defence requirements. However, we do have some reservations about the U.S. decision to supply F-16s to Pakistan.

7. Secretary (East) told Burt that he wanted to give him an idea of our overall threat perception which did not seem to correspond with U.S. thinking. Pakistan had only two neighbours. We have six or seven. While in our defence preparedness, Pakistan naturally had a high priority; it was not the exclusive factor. Secretary (East) referred to our long borders with Bangladesh, Burma and China and the deployment of troops on our border with China. He said that while we are trying to improve relations with China, we had to maintain a certain level of troops on that border. This resulted in a situation that while there was a rough parity on either side of the Indo-Pakistan border, the Pakistanis had 8 corps deployed on this border. We also had an equivalent amount. Both countries had two armoured divisions presently. It had to be seen how the tanks now being supplied by the U.S. would affect this balance. It had also to be borne in mind that our troops were deployed at a greater distance from the border than in the case of Pakistan.

8. Referring to relative air force strengths, Secretary (East) said that while much was made of the so-called current war vintage of the Pakistani air force, it had to be borne in mind that Pakistan had five squadron of Mirages. We had purchased some Migs and Jaguars to bring back a measure of parity. When we were looking into the question of acquiring Jaguars, we had also considered the possibility of acquiring aircraft like Tornado, Mirages, etc. We had even then come to the conclusion that around the end of this decade, we would have to replace the Jaguar. We now feel that in view of developments in the region, it would be preferable not to acquire the entire quantity of Jaguar aircraft that we had envisaged earlier. We feel that it would perhaps be better to obtain some Mirage 2000 aircraft instead. Secretary (East) made it clear that reports that we were envisaging the acquisition of 150 Mirage aircraft were grossly exaggerated. He added that the Mirages we were possibly acquiring would make up for the Jaguars we would not now be acquiring as envisaged earlier.

9. Burt said that it was his personal view that India would be making a terrible mistake if it went in for Mirage 2000 aircraft to replace Jaguars that it was planning to acquire. It just did not seem to make military sense to him to acquire Mirages. He felt that the Jaguar is a very good aircraft.

10. Referring to Secretary (East)'s statement about concern in India over the acquisition of F-16s by Pakistan, Burt said that the F-16 is primarily an interceptor aircraft. It was true that there could be a perception that it could be used against Indian nuclear establishments, but it had to be borne in mind that its primary role was not that of an attack aircraft. Burt said that it would have been understandable if there had been far greater concern in India if Pakistan had been supplied A-7 aircraft as former Secretary of State Kissinger was contemplating earlier while in office. Burt said that the main purpose to supply the F-16s to Pakistan was to give Pakistan the capability to maintain its air superiority over its own territory.

11. Secretary (East) said that it had to be borne in mind that after the use made by the Israelis of F-16s during their attack on the Iraqi nuclear reactor, there were inevitable apprehensions about its capabilities in India. We also had to bear in mind our past history when U.S. supplied arms had been used against us. We were just being compelled to go into the arms deals which we really did not want to undertake.

12. Burt said that it had to be borne in mind that the strategic environment had now changed. The Soviets who were now positioned in Afghanistan, were applying military and political pressure on Pakistan. It would be dangerous for India itself to ignore the consequences of such pressure by the Soviet Union on Pakistan. Burt said that the U.S. was keen on having some form of military supply relationship with India. They had tried their best to be as accommodating as possible in meeting Indian requests for the supply of TOW missiles and Howitzers. He was interested in seeing that provisions were made in the IMET (military training) programme in spite of an acute shortage of funds to keep open such links with India. He hoped that symbols like this would help to defuse some of the political concerns in India about U.S. policies.

13. Secretary (East) said that he felt that it is important that there should be a dialogue between the two countries. It was our feeling that we had contributed to building an environment of stability and cooperation in our region. The emphasis of the United States on a military response to developments in the region had, however, caused a setback to hopes for an improvement in the political environment in the region.

14. Burt said that he felt that there was considerable common ground in the perceptions of India and the United States, especially in regard to developments in the Gulf. It had to be borne in mind that the U.S. was responding to a changed strategic situation. He alluded to the fall of the Shah of Iran, the increase in Soviet military capabilities, and the actions of countries like Libya and Cuba with Soviet support to which the U.S. had to respond. He said that it would be seen as a wrong signal if the U.S. had not responded expeditiously. If there was not an opportunity to consult in the past, then the time had perhaps come to initiate closer consultations between India and the United States.

(G. Parthasarathy)
Counsellor (Political)
13.11.1981

1814. Letter from External Affairs Minister Narayan Datt Tiwari to Member of Parliament Kapil Verma.

External Affairs Minister
India

March 25, 1987

Dear

I am writing to you in connection with your Special Mention in the Rajya Sabha on 25th February, 1987 regarding the threat posed to India’s security by joint US-Pakistan naval exercises.

We have noted that during recent testimony to Congress in February/March 1987 by US officials, US Ambassador-designate to Pakistan Arnold Raphel said, in reply to a question from Senator Humphrey, “there have been joint exercises” between USA and Pakistan. Raphel retracted this statement in his subsequent testimony before a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 26th February 1987, but we have also noted the Sub-section of Secretary Weinberger’s annual report to the Congress, on “exercises and training” which states, “We have established several bilateral consultation groups to improve defence cooperation between the United States and friendly States in South-West Asia, the Middle East, South Asia and North Africa. These groups met periodically to consider issues ranging from combined planning for joint exercises to pre-positioning of US military equipment”.

On other issues like joint military contingency planning and intelligence sharing with Pakistan, Raphel had reportedly refused to answer in the open session of the State Foreign Relations Committee on grounds that these were classified issues. The US Embassy in Delhi, when asked by us to clarify officially reports regarding joint exercises and intelligence gathering, made the following statement after prior clearance of the State Department:-

— “USA does not share intelligence about friendly countries with other countries;
— USA does not conduct regular exercises with other countries”.

The USA’s Security Assistance Programme to Pakistan is a matter of serious concern to us since it envisages the introduction into the sub-continent of highly sophisticated state-of-the-art defence technology particularly exemplified by the proposed sale of AWACS. The capability of AWACS to monitor aircraft movement deep into Indian territory will provide Pakistan with a significant edge in both defensive and offensive capability. India will have no option but to acquire matching facilities. Given the serious military implications and the financial burden resulting from the introduction of AWACS into the sub-continent, Government intends to explore all options in trying to dissuade the US Government and Congress from supplying AWACS and other sophisticated military armaments to Pakistan.

Government has seen a number of other reports which indicate that there is a growing military linkage between USA and Pakistan. Recent media reports indicated that the USA and Pakistan have signed a secret agreement providing for the deployment of US Rapid Deployment Force on Pakistani territory. These reports said that the agreement, signed during the visit of the US Defence Secretary Mr. Casper Weinberger to Pakistan last October, is to be implemented in the first few days of March 1987. Both the USA and Pakistan have denied that there has been any such secret agreement. However, Government is concerned about developments in this regard, because it wants to prevent super-power rivalry on India’s door-step. It is for this reason that it has proposed to Pakistan that the comprehensive Treaty of Peace, Friendship should include a clause relating to the non-grant of bases.

As regards taking up the matter in the Non-Aligned Movement, it is doubtful if this would be particularly useful since the Pakistan Government will declare from the platform of that Movement that it has not granted bases to the USA. However, I would like to assure you that Government is keeping all the developments mentioned under review and is taking appropriate measures to ensure full defence preparedness.

Yours sincerely,

(Narayan Datt Tiwari)

Shri Kapil Verma,
Member of Parliament,
Rajya Sabha, New Delhi.
1815. Extract from the interview of Mr. Rajiv Gandhi with Pranoy Gupte of News Week regarding US Arms Aid to Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 31, 1987.

Mr. Gupte: What are your concerns about the possible sale by the United States of sophisticated early warning radar planes to Pakistan, and how do you view recent reports that Pakistan now has the capability to go nuclear?

Prime Minister: I am convinced that sophisticated early warning systems will be used by Pakistan against us. Their military deployments have always been focused on our borders. Afghanistan has not changed and I do not see them taking on the Soviets in Afghanistan. What really bothers me is that the introduction of these systems will escalate the arms race to a qualitatively new level. It will add to tensions and mean a serious set-back to our efforts at normalizing relations with Pakistan. And it will divert more of our scarce resources from development. There is clear evidence that Pakistan is going ahead full steam with its nuclear weapons programme. Statements have been made by their nuclear scientists and the statements of their leaders have done nothing to dispel fears. Instead of wavering with waivers, the United States has the power to restrain Pakistan. Perceptions of Pakistan’s strategic usefulness which are in themselves questionable seem to prevail over a larger concern for non-proliferation. We are baffled at the attempt to treat this as a bilateral issue between India and Pakistan. After our peaceful experiment in 1974, we have done no further work in that direction. Our nuclear programme is wholly confined to energy and medicine.
My dear Joint Secretary,

Through my telegram No. 82 of today’s date, I have reported to you a part of my conversation with the Deputy Assistant Secretary in the Department of Defence Mr. E. W. Gnehm, regarding US military assistance to Pakistan.

2. I took the opportunity of my meeting with Gnehm to probe him on possible changes in US-Pakistan military relationship in the Post-Afghanistan situation. I pointed out that a justification for the massive military aid being given by the US to Pakistan mentioned to us repeatedly in the past was Pakistan’s role in Afghanistan. There is expectation, I said, that following a political settlement in Afghanistan, US will review its military relationship with Pakistan, also taking into account its own relations with India in the context of recent positive developments. While India cannot have any objection to normal relations between the US and Pakistan, we expect that US will show sensitivity to India’s concerns in its future military and arms supply relationship with Pakistan. Gnehm, for most part, evaded a direct response apart from saying that US-Pak military relationship pre-dated Afghanistan and that US would like to have good relations with both India and Pakistan. He seemed to suggest that unless there is a reappraisal of its threat perception on the part of Pakistan, US will not be in a position to either qualitatively or quantitatively seek a change in its military relationship with Pakistan. When I pointed out that at least some equipment being supplied to Pakistan has been justified uniquely in the context of Afghanistan, Gnehm responded by saying that most equipment was defence oriented and India should not have any concerns given her own military strength.

3. Perhaps this could be a recurring theme in our dialogue with the Americans at all levels both in New Delhi and in Washington. We must continue to put pressure on the Americans so that they are forced to reevaluate their military relationship with Pakistan even as the process of political settlement in Afghanistan is under way. I have already mentioned in my letter No. WAS/DCM/246/88 dated March 4, 1988 that I personally do not expect now any major shift in US military relationship with Pakistan except perhaps in small and symbolic measure. However, persistent pressure on the US will at least have the advantage of keeping the question in discussion and constant evaluation. What is needed is to engage the Americans in a dialogue with us on this subject and to ensure that our concerns and sensitivity are constantly brought to their attention.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely

(A.N.Ram)

Shri P.K. Singh,
Joint Secretary (AMS),
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

1817. Monograph issued by the Inter Services, Public Relations Directorate of the Pakistan Army on a briefing given by the Chief of Army Staff of Pakistan, General Aslam Beg to the Pakistani press on September 13, 1989 and subsequently handed over to the Service Attaches of the Foreign Missions while brief them on the exercises code named “Zarb-e-Momon” on November 16, 1989 in Rawalpindi.

COAS TALK WITH JOURNALISTS

13 September, 1989

(SYNOPSIS)

The COAS, initiating his talk with the recitation of the Quranic dua attributed to Musa ‘Alaih Assalam’, appropriately chosen for the occasion, set the emotional tone for the message he wanted to convey.

In his preliminary remarks the COAS said that the Army had initiated a process of interaction with the media. In that connection a Seminar was held earlier in the morning had apprised them of the scope and objectives of the Exercise Zarb-e-Monim to be held in the coming winter. The process, he asserted, was solely meant to bridge the communication gap between the Armed Forces and the Media, which unfortunately had contributed to various crises in the past. A frank exchange of views with the media representatives would help create a climate of openness—glasnost—and promote better understanding and harmony between the nation and their armed forces. As the hearts of the people of the country and of the armed forces beat in unison, there would always be a prompt response on the call of the nation.

Before inviting questions from the media representatives, he urged that such questions as might have a political bearing be avoided, for it would not be appropriate for him to indulge in politics. His objective was not to hold a Press Conference but only the furtherance of the objective which he had spelt out earlier. He made it unequivocally clear that the armed forces were subordinate to the Government in power, and would carry out the orders given to them. Their mission was clear. It was to provide security to the country from internal threats and external aggression and, he asserted, they were quite competent to meet the challenge under all conditions and circumstances. The decision that was taken on 17 August last year, in the wake of the tragedy which resulted in the killing of the President and the Chief of the Army Staff, as well as many other friends, had widely been appreciated both at home and abroad and the image of the Army had considerably improved since them. It was but natural that the Army would continue to live up to that “image” and ensure that, in the overall climate of security provided to the nation, the process of democracy set in motion would thrive and strengthen. He made it explicit that his allegiance was not to any individual or political party, but to the system or the political process, which, he said, has its own inherent dynamics to correct itself, should the situation so warrant.

The question-answer session covered a fairly large array of issues and subjects which were forthrightly and cogently answered by the COAS. These are covered in subsequent pars.

ZARB-E-MOMIN

Scope and Objective

The queries regarding the scope and objectives of the scheduled winter manoeuvres were answered comprehensively and the COAS said that the exercise would be held on an unprecedented scale because, due to the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan, a reserve of troops had become available enabling the Army to go in for strategic gains. Moreover, the Army, he said, had also brought in many organizational changes, sophisticated weaponry had been inducted and the quality of the officer cadre at every level of command had considerably enhanced due to total commitment to professional tasks and obligations and the process of continual training and education imparted through esteemed institutions like National Defence College and Staff College. He took special pride in the fact that by the grace of Allah he now had a group of officers capable of higher direction of war, effective planning, coordination and competently handling large formations. Unlike the Iraq-Iran war, which entailed mainly tactical operations without achieving any strategic goal, the forthcoming exercise, he said, was aimed at testing new strategic concepts and doctrines – which aimed at shedding our out-rightly defensive orientation of the past and adopting an offensive-defensive posture to carry the war into the enemy territory in any future encounter.

Timing and Location of the Exercise

About the timing of the Exercise, the COAS dispelled any apprehensions and said he was quite willing to adjust it, should it coincide with the election period in India. Indian Government, however, had not responded to the offer made to them and he was still awaiting their response. The DGMOs of the two countries were in touch with each other and our DGMO had apprised them of the objectives of our exercise. If required, the exercise could be postponed for a month or so, or held prior to the election in India. There was no element of ‘secrecy’ in the exercise. It was ‘above-board’, and open to inspection. Even an Indian team, if deemed expedient, could be allowed to witness the exercise. He said that his approach was quite opposite to what Indian military commanders had exhibited on the occasion of “Brasstacks” exercise. They conducted their maneuvers without informing us about its dimensions and location, nor did we know its objectives. He said that the minimum distance at which exercise Zarb-e-Momin would be conducted would be 200 to 250 kilometers away from the borders and hence there was no reason for any apprehension whatsoever.

Comparison with ‘Tezgam’ Exercise

As to comparison with Exercise Tezgam, conducted 35 years ago, the COAS said that the quantum of troops involved this time would be massive as compared to Tezgam, when only a division plus had taken part, whereas the present one would involve 7 infantry divisions, an armoured division, a couple of armoured brigades, artillery brigades, engineer brigade, Ack Ack brigades – totaling around 200,000 people participating in the exercise.

Comparison with “Brass Tacks” of the Indians

The COAS commented that Zarb-e-Momin was different from the Indian “Brass Tacks”. The outgoing Indian Chief of Amy Staff was eager to achieve something before his tenure ended and therefore he had rushed into the exercise, which proved counter-productive. The present Indian Chief, he said, had already discarded many of the ideas and thoughts propounded by his predecessor. On the contrary, our exercise, he said, was being planned for the last two years. Specially during the past one year every aspect of the exercise was receiving careful attention and there was total involvement of the Army in that endeavour. The first phase of the exercise was completed in the War Game already held, he said, and the winter exercise would be testing these innovative concepts and ideas on ground. Holding troops would not be moved from their positions and vulnerable areas and only reserve troops would be involved in the exercise.

Cost of the Exercise

India is believed to have spent 300 crores of rupees on exercise “Brass Tacks”, he said, but we would be spending not even one-tenth of it. The Government had provided the Army only rupees 16 crores, out of which rupees 10 crores had been set aside for maintenance and up-keep of the equipment and transport. We were thus left with only 6 crores of rupees, he said, and out of it nearly rupees 70 lacs would be paid as compensation to the farmers whose crops would be affected.

Army’s Major Role in the Exercise

It was a fact of life, he said that in any future war with the enemy, Army would have to play the most crucial role. India had superiority of 5 to 1 in the Navy, 3 to 1 in the Air Force and 2 to 1 in the Army. So far as Navy was concerned they could only fight a battle of survival; the Air Force could survive and also support the land forces. It was only Army which, he said, was capable of not only thwarting the enemy’s aggression, but also launching sizeable offensives. To enable the Navy to safeguard our maritime interests the Government was investing correctly and “Insha Allah” in the months and years to come, our Navy, he said, would be strong enough to maintain the correct balance of forces. The Army, therefore was to take the major brunt and therefore we had selected the area of exercise which was sandy and desert-like in the south. As nearly sixty percent of the area was cultivated, that was similar to the plains of Punjab. The future battles, he said, would be fought in the plains of Punjab and south of it, therefore, we had not selected the marshy areas –the peripheral land, he said.

The Strategic Scarlet-thread in the Scheme of War Dispassionate appraisal of our failures both in 1965 and 1971 wars, he said, had given us ample insight into how not to fight a war. The plans for the coming exercise, he said, were thoroughly coordinated from the lowest level up to the GHQ. We had also worked out the linkage between the defensive and offensive operations and it was that vital strategic idea which must run like a “Scarlet Thread” through the entire scheme of war. Through that well-integrated and singular Army plan we were quite capable of providing strategic gains to the nation, he asserted. When we had such large forces employed, quite naturally it entailed a lot of logistical problems, which we had meticulously and ingeniously resolved. We had even changed the total concept of employment of guns. New headquarters with new echelons of command had been created, all with the purpose of swift mobilization of resources at the required time and place. We had, by the Grace of Allah, one of the best air defence systems in which we could take pride. We were fielding five air defence brigades, he said, which would provide the umbrella of protection, besides the PAF, with whom we had fully coordinated our plans.

Electronic Warfare

The most crucial unseen threat was the threat of electronic warfare. Control of the electro-magnetic spectrum was the major element of future wars, and we had made significant strides in that domain as well. We were quite capable of countering enemy’s efforts as well as developing our own offensive capability. In other words, every conceivable area having any bearing on our operation gains had been fully taken into account.

Jihad-e-Afghanistan

On the subject of Jihad-e-Afghanistan, many pertinent and sensitive questions were raised which the COAS quite candidly and lucidly answered. His major contentions are contained in the succeeding paras.

Intimate Understanding and Appraisal of Afghanistan Situation

The COAS said that as Chief of General Staff in 1980 and subsequently as a Corps Commander in Peshawar he had been very intimately involved with the war in Afghanistan. It was ironic, he said, that the Army assessment of war had been at variance with that of the official assessment and their contention had mostly proved to be correct. Unfortunately, there was no orchestrated viewpoint, as the Government looked in a different direction, the Foreign Office had its own perspective, whereas the Army had a different approach to the problem. From 17th of August till November-December 1988 when the new elected Government came into power, the responsibility to conduct the affairs of Afghanistan had fallen on his shoulders, and it was during that period that certain marked trends occurred which indicated that the Soviets were prepared to drop Najibullah, and that was the precise condition on which the Mujahideen had agreed to talk to them. The Soviet position subsequently changed, but it the trend had been effectively exploited at the opportune moment the story might have been different.

Wrong Decision by the Soviet Union

Like the initial mistake of 1979, when the Soviets hoped that through naked aggression they would annex Afghanistan, which they subsequently repented, they had made another grave error in deciding to back the Najibullah Government. No matter what the world might say about dissension among the Mujahideen, the COAS was of the firm view that they would ultimately triumph. He said they had demonstrated to the world that they were quite capable of defying a super power no matter what price they might have to pay. Despite the loss of lives of nearly twelve lacs of people and many more wounded their spirit and zeal was still supreme, and this was precisely what was important. They belonged to a tribal society and their concept of time and space, he said, was quite different.

The Option for the People of Afghanistan

The COAS said the solution lay in going back to the process which was initiated during the months of August and November 1988, and we must make endeavours to bring the Russians and the Mujahideen back to the negotiating table. The pre-condition should be that the Soviet agree to take Najibullah out along with some more people, who were the bone of contention. Only then could the remaining PDPA element and Mujahideen sit down and resolve their differences among themselves. Any talk of using the Zahir Shah option, was irrelevant. The Mujahideen must be allowed to exercise the option that they select for themselves. Their Jihad should, Insha Allah, bear fruit, because Allah never disappoints those who stand up and fight for His cause.

Wrong Decision to go for Jalalabad

The COAS stated that the decision to go for Jalalabad was a faulty one. The strategy that Mujahideen had worked out for themselves was the strategy of ‘strangulation’ based on the very basic concept of fighting a war of liberation through a series of small action reaching strategic depth and ultimately leading to strategic results. To take a well fortified garrison like Jalalabad was a difficult task even for a very trained army. That was beyond the capability of the Mujahideen, and now, the COAS said, there was a change of thought and the Mujahideen had reverted to their original strategy, which would undoubtedly pay dividends. He hoped the Russians would ultimately give up Najibullah’s support and there were indications to that effect.

US Support to Mujahideen

The COAS said the Americans had no option but to support the Mujahideen, in view of their own intrinsic interest and not for the love of Afghanistan, or for that matter for the sake of Pakistan. But it must be remembered, the COAS said, that the Mujahideen fought for the initial two-and-half to three years without assistance from anybody. It was only in 1983, that the Americans came in From January this year till April, there was no support from USA and it was only from May and June onwards that Mujahideen started getting military hardware.
DEFENCE ISSUES

Siachen
When the issue pertaining to Siachen was raised, and the futility of this war was mentioned, the COAS provided a very comprehensive back-ground alongwith the current situation.

Background to Siachen Issue
It was said that we came to know of Indian’s coming into Siachen. It was in January 1982 that we asked the 10 Corps Commander to send troops in that area and ascertain the situation. Because of bad weather, and because of being poorly equipped, the troops could not cross over the Saltoro Range. The following year the GHQ decided to send a company (Special Service Group) not the Siachen glacier. The company was moved in August 83, and crossed over the Siala Pass (which the Prime Minister lately visited). This group spotted some troops camped, and under our directions, they went for eliminating them. But the Indian elements-the Laddakh Scouts deserted the place. Our troops remained there till 10th of September and when the weather started worsening we directed them to fall back, which they did via Bela Fond La approach route. The Indians, on the other hand, had better experience of fighting on high mountains, as they faced China, which required developing of troops at great heights. They had also gained some experience through their expeditions, trials and experiments n Antarctica. India had another advantage, which we did not have India had the Lamas which they were making themselves and which enabled them to lift troops and position them wherever they liked. It was around the middle of April 1984, that both India and Pakistan started moving to occupy the vantage positions. They were only a few days ahead of us the marching distance from Densom upward.

Pakistan in a Favourable Situation
The situation that existed today was very much in our favour. It was a question of just staying there-it was mainly a logistical battle, battle against bad weather. In the past five years, we had been able to develop truckable and jeepable roads to the west of our forward positions, and by the mid of next year, Insha Allah, we would have jeepable roads to allour gun positions, and all the four passes we were holding. That meant that we would not be using our helicopters and only porters would be used for supply of logistics and the helicopters would be used only for casualty evacuation or for an emergency. India was suing a fleet of helicopters. On the average, they were spending about a coroer of rupees a day to maintain their troops in the area. We were spending about 25 to 35 crores annually. From our viewpoint it was an ideal fixation of large troops in that area as compared to ours, which was very small in number. The Chief said he wished the Indian remained stuck in Siachen. The Indian had lost nearly twelve hundred soldiers, as against ninety-seven of our own. Two hundred of our men had died because of bad weather. But the spirit of our soldiers was very high and no matter the price, every soldier was prepared to defend Siachen.

Nuclear Issue

As India had exploded a nuclear device in 1974, COAS was asked if that aspect had been taken into account in planning Zarb-e-Momin. He remarked that the Prime Minister and previous heads of Government and State had expressed their views quite explicitly on this issue and there was no need to dilate any further. But, he said, as long as others believed that we had nuclear capability that was a great deterrence.

Pakistan’s Response to India’s Missile Producing Capability

It was in February last year that the Indians fired Prithvi of 250 kilometers range. But we had nothing in hand as answer to that. Luckily, we had been pursuing a programme of our own, totally indigenous and we succeeded in our efforts. He said he had planned to fire the missile on the day Mr. Rajiv Gandhi was first here in Pakistan, but we could not do so because of some technical problems, COAS said we had acquired two types of missiles, one that could reach 80 kilometers and the other that had a range of 3000 kilometers. The third one, he said, was in the process of development and could reach up to 600 kilometers, but that was not as sophisticated at present as it lacked proper “guidance system”. But we would be very soon acquiring the technology form brother countries. India’s Agni missile, with its range of 2000 to 2500 kilometers, did not really mater, as with the 600 kilometers range we could reach all the sensitive targets of India.

Strategic Consensus

The concept of strategic consensus between Pakistan, Iran and Afghanistan, which he propounded nearly a year ago, was becoming a reality whether one liked that or not. The one common feature binding all those countries was the commonality of the objective, which was the supremacy of ‘Deen’ over all issues. There might be difference in approach and method, but there was a distinct common perspective among those countries which might include Turkey, Iraq and Saudi Arabia. This unity, in his view might bring greater stability and balance in the region. Soviet Union should welcome that as that would ensure tension-free Afghanistan on her borders. There super powers would find it convenient to deal with a regional power block rather than dealing with them individually. USA had already lost its option in Iran, and if they were not carefully, they might as well lose their option even in Afghanistan. Moreover, that regional group would also be able to effectively counter Indian hegemonic ambitions.

Martial Law Impact on Professionalism in the Army

Dealing with the sensitive question of impact of long Martial Laws in the country on professional competence of the Army, the COAS commented that the impact had only been marginal in the sense that the COAS and some others did not have the requisite time to concentrate on professional work. But down below, he said, that did not have much effect. The grip of discipline was very strong, as that had always been. It was on that account, he said, that any talk of coup was out of question. But we must ponder as to why the Army was dragged into running the affairs of the state from time to time? Why did the Army become so impatient and did not let democratic process settle down? In this own assessment, he said, it was due to the fact there existed a big information gap between the nation and the Armed Forces. A similar thing could have happened in 1988, which, he said, we fully resisted. That was our collective decision not to intervene, as we strongly felt that that produced more negative results than positive ones. It was the nation which had to learn to correct itself, and it was not in the realm of the Army to do so. He emphatically asserted he knew his constitutional roe and he would never transgress it. He said if occasionally he offered advice or made statements that were primarily to seek harmony and understanding in the nation so that we did not reach a “point of no return”. It was that frightening situation that he wished to avoid. He had no intention other than that: “If our intentions were maladies, we would let the situation deteriorate”. Therefore, during abnormal conditions, when the situation was not fully stabilized, he was constrained to intervene occasionally and meet people with a positive motive to let democratic order prevail and political institutions strengthen in the country, so that our decision of 17 August reached its logical culmination.

Pre-emptive Capability of the Army
The COAS, in answering how much time Army would take to be mobilized for action, said that the Indians would take 14 days despite the fact that they had brought cantonments close to the borders. Out timing initially, he said, was twelve days and now that had been reduced to 8 days. That advantage, he said, provided us an opportunity for pre-emption.

Junior Leaders Academy
The system of junior commissioned ranks in the Army was the legacy of the British. Unfortunately the performance of JCOs, as compared to men and officers, had not been of the required standard, had not been of the required standard. By the time they rose to JCO ranks they were fairly old- and as such they could not keep up with the people they had to command. We had corrected that system and since last year we had established a Junior Leaders Academy for the first time in Pakistan Army. The prospective junior commissioned offers were jingo that institution as Lance Corporals and Corporals to undergo rigorous training to become future leaders at the junior level. He was confident that the weaknesses would be corrected in a matter of a few years.

Education and Religious Training in the Army
The COAS said education in the Army had two dimensions. One was professional education and the other higher education which was linked up with professional education. We had given special attention to that aspect, he said, and it was a matter of great pride and satisfaction that whereas only a few years back there was only one officer having a Ph.D degree (who was Chairman WAPDA and now retired), now we had ten such officers and there were fifteen others who were studying abroad for their Ph.D degrees. It was hoped that by the end of next year we would have twenty-five officers with Ph.D qualifications. We had trained around one hundred and fifty M.Sc's, and nearly seventy-five were in the process of completing their education. That, undoubtedly, was going to affect the quality of our officer cadre. In reply to a question on religious education COAS said we had not made any special arrangement. Whatever we did we did with a spirit of sincerity and honesty and whatever our 'deen' demanded of us was being emphasized at every level, be that our academy, or a unit or a formation. The basic driving idea was that we became true Muslims and remained faithful to our cause.

Induction of Sindhis in the Army

It was a sad reality that people from Sindh did not come forward to join the Army in large numbers despite our consistent efforts in that regard. Sindh Centre had been established for that specific purpose. People did come, but they mainly came as officers, whereas we also required men as they constituted the bulk of the Army. Several recruiting centers had been established, but despite that the response was relatively poor. Similar was the situation in Baluchistan. In view of that problem, the COAS said, he had recommended to the Government to raise local forces, on the same pattern as we had in Azad Kashmir. Those units after having served in Kashmir for fifteen to seventeen years and afar having acquired the requisite discipline and training had now been integrated into the regular battalions of the Army. Similarly, the local forces might be raised in Sindh and Baluchistan. That recommendation, he said, had been made to the Government, and if he was allowed to implement that, he would do so. That way, he hoped, in the next five to seven years the imbalance would largely be corrected.

Concluding Remarks

After patiently listening and replying to a volley of questions with great frankness and sincerity the COAS thanked the participants and hoped that the process of dialogue and face-to-face communication with the media men that he had initiated would continue in future in the interest of promoting greater understanding and confidence between the armed forces and the nation.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Joint Declaration by the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan on Complete Prohibition of Chemical Weapons.

New Delhi, August 19, 1992.

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan;

Reaffirming their commitment to durable peace and the development of friendly and harmonious relations;

Conscious of the role of confidence building measures in promoting such bilateral relations based on mutual trust and goodwill;

Reaffirming their respective unilateral declarations on non-possession of chemical weapons;

Convinced that a complete and effective prohibition of chemical weapons will contribute to the security of all States;

Reaffirming their respective commitments to the Protocol for Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, poisonous or other gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed at Geneva on 17th June, 1925 and recalling the relevant Resolutions of the General Assembly upholding the validity of the 1925 Geneva Protocol;

Reiterating the need for the early conclusion within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament of a global convention for the complete and effective prohibition of the development, production, stockpiling and use of chemical weapons and their destruction;

Hereby declare that:

1. They undertake never under any circumstances: -
   a) To develop, produce or otherwise acquire chemical weapons;
   b) To use chemical weapons;
   c) To assist, encourage or induce, in any way, anyone to engage in development, production, stockpiling or use of chemical weapons.

2. They would cooperate with each other, in finalization and adoption of a comprehensive Chemical Weapons Convention which ensures the security of all States and encourages the full utilization of achievements in the
3. They reiterate their resolve to become original states party to the proposed Convention currently being drafted in the Conference on Disarmament.

4. They would exercise their right to develop their chemical industry and related applications and products only for peaceful purposes and for the welfare of their people.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the duly authorized representatives of the two governments have hereeto signed this Declaration and affix thereto their seals.

Done at New Delhi on this nineteenth day of August, of the year one thousand nine hundred and ninety two.

Sd/-
(J.N. Dixit) (Shaharyar M. Khan)
FOREIGN SECRETARY FOREIGN SECRETARY
For the Government of the For the Government of the Republic of India Islamic Republic of Pakistan

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Statement by the Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on the Amendment passed by the US Senate permitting transfer of substantial quantities of military equipment to Pakistan by waiving Pressler Amendment.

New Delhi, September 22, 1995.

The Government of India has noted with regret and grave concern the amendment passed in the US Senate on September 21, 1995, permitting the transfer of substantial quantities of advanced military equipment to Pakistan by waiving the provisions of the Pressler Amendment.

2. The US Government and Congress have all along been made fully aware of the views of the Government of India on this matter. We firmly believe the proposed US action would not be conducive to promoting peace, security and stability in South Asia, was likely to trigger an arms race, and would be seen as legitimising Pakistan’s clandestine acquisition of nuclear weapons even while receiving massive US military and economic aid.

The proposed transfer of US military equipment will also be viewed in the light of Pakistan’s widely acknowledged acquisition of ballistic missiles from third countries and its major and direct involvement in International terrorism.

3. The Government of India is committed to taking all necessary measures to counter the adverse effect on our security caused by the proposed transfers. We hope the US authorities will reconsider the issue and reflect on the consequences before taking any further steps. They should also take note of the very strong public reaction in India against this measure.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1820. Statement by External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee on Proposed US Supply of Arms to Pakistan.

New Delhi, October 25, 1995.

We are disappointed that our serious concerns and the strong reaction of Indian political and public opinion have not been taken into account during the endorsement by the House-Senate Conference of the US Congress on October 24, 1995 of the proposal to transfer a package of sophisticated military equipment to Pakistan through the waiver of provisions of the Pressler Amendment. The Government's position was clearly stated in the official statement of September 22, 1995 and the US Government and Congress have all along been made fully aware of our views on this matter.

We would like to reiterate that the proposed transfer of advanced military equipment to a country which has always used such weaponry against India in the past, and which is in the forefront in training and directing international Reacting to the Indian statement Pakistan on October 26 rejected Indian contention that the US decision, to ease sanctions on military equipment to Islamabad would spark a regional arms race. "There is no rationale in the Indian criticism," Foreign Secretary Najmuddin Shaikh told a news conference in Islamabad. He said Pakistan had stated repeatedly that the supply of a limited quantity of military equipment to Pakistan could not in any way affect the military balance in the region. Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto had laid "the basis for considerable efforts made by the Clinton administration, the Foreign Ministry and the embassy in Washington, said the Pakistan Foreign Secretary. "The result was achieved in the teeth of an intense Indian campaign to block the amendment," he said and added "The Prime Minister's 10-day visit was highly successful as she was able to muster support for Pakistan's vital interests."

Speaking about Ms. Bhutto's Paris visit, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary said Ms Bhutto had meetings with President Chirac and Prime Minister Alain Juppe in France. Besides discussions on economic cooperation, Pakistan and France have both indicated granting of political clearance for the sale of Mirage 2000-5 aircraft to Pakistan "and it was agreed that technical discussions on specifications, price and other details could now be carried out in detail by the Dassault Corporation", he added.

Another report said "With Paris politically nodding in positive to sell 40 high-tech Mirage 2000-5 to Islamabad, wide-ranging talks between Pakistan and France on defence cooperation will be held in Islamabad on October 31."

Without mentioning the date for the talks, Mr Najmuddin also confirmed that the French-Pak teams would meet shortly to work out various aspects of the sale of Mirage 2000-5. He said the French President and the Prime Minister indicated to Ms Bhutto during their meetings with her that they had granted political clearance to the sale of Mirage fighter aircraft to Pakistan.

The government-to-government level talks, according to officials would be held at the forum of Pakistani-French Joint Committee on Armament Collaboration (PFJ-CAC) — the third meeting of this defence cooperation mechanism which the two countries established in 1993.
DEFENCE ISSUES 4451

terrorism and financing such activities through narco trafficking, will not promote peace, security and stability in South Asia. Pakistan’s clandestine acquisition of nuclear weapons technology and materials as well as ballistic missiles from third countries, while receiving massive US military and economic aid, should also be noted in the context of the proposed transfer.

3. The Government of India will have to take all necessary measures to counter the adverse effect on our security of the proposed transfer of arms to Pakistan. The diversion of additional resources for defence, which may now become inevitable, is an unfortunate consequence which could and should have been avoided.

4. We continue to attach importance to improving Indo-US bilateral relations. The approach of both Governments has been to strengthen cooperation to the fullest extent possible, and not to permit differences where they exist to prevent cooperation in areas of mutual benefit. These are elements that we feel both sides would wish to preserve and build upon in the future.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1821. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding transfer of US Arms to Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 21, 1996.

Responding to queries regarding articles in the Washington Post and the Washington Times of 20th March, 1996, according to which the US had decided to transfer the Brown Amendment package of sophisticated military equipment to Pakistan, the Spokesman said that he could only reiterate that infusion of such large quantities of sophisticated arms into the region notionally valued at $368 million but worth, in terms of current acquisition cost, considerably more, will seriously impact on the security of countries of South Asia, which could instigate the first arms race since the end of the Cold War forcing US to divert scarce resources from much needed developmental activities. The assertion that supply of the arms package would enable greater influence over Pakistan, including over the latter’s nuclear weapons programme, and thus enhance stability in the region, is clearly belied. Nor have such supplies in any way helped to contain Pakistan’s nuclear weapons programme.

2. We expect that the full facts and consequences of the nuclear weapons related acquisitions by Pakistan will be determined, including of the recently acquired ring magnets, and the implications taken into account before transfer of the arms package is considered.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1822. Statement issued by the External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukerjee on the US decision to transfer US $ 368 million package of sophisticated arms to Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 16, 1996.

The U.S. decision to transfer the US $ 368 million package of sophisticated arms to Pakistan under the Brown Amend-ment has not come as a surprise to the Government of India. It had been evident from recent statements by high US officials that the US was bent on pursuing this unfortunate and unwise course of action, despite being fully aware of Pakistan’s long record of clandestine acquisition of nuclear weapons technology, ballistic missiles and related materials from third countries for uranium enrichment at Pakistan’s nuclear facility at Kahuta. The requests of numerous well-known and influential US Congressmen to the Administration to withhold the shipment in the light of the above reports were ignored.

The expectation expressed by the spokesmen of the US State Department that the supply of the arms package would provide the US greater influence over Pakistan’s policies, including its nuclear weapons and missile programmes, and thus enhance stability in the region, is quite baseless. It is contrary to Pakistan’s past record of repeatedly using US-supplied weapons against India, and proceed-ing uninterruptedly with its nuclear weapons and ballistic missile acquisition programmes while continuing to receive massive US economic and military aid conditioned on halting such programmes. The inevitable and unfortunate effect of the proposed US action will, therefore, be to instigate the first arms race since the end of the Cold War, and thus seriously and adversely affect not only peace and stability, but also divert scarce resources for developmental programmes which should take priority.

Earlier on March 21 the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs had also issued a statement on these lines seeking to convey the concern of the Government of India on this move of the United States.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1823. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs expressing “alarm” at what it called “India’s relentless purchase of military equipment”.

Islamabad, February 18, 2002.

Pakistan has expressed its alarm at what it calls relentless purchases of military equipment by India saying that not only does it create tension but also damages the cause of peace in the region. On February 18, Foreign Office spokesman Aziz Khan said: “The Indian build-up is well known and we have drawn the attention of the world community towards this. This does not augur well for peace in the region but Pakistan can defend its territory”.

Mr. Aziz was responding to reports which quoted head of the US armed forces General Richard Myers as saying that strong Indo-US military ties were also central to maintaining long-term stability in Asia.

He said it was too early to assess what kind of military equipment India would receive from Washington as the visit of Gen Myers had just started. “Let us see what happens at the conclusion of the visit”, he said.

Referring to President Pervez Musharraf’s visit to the USA, Mr. Aziz alluded to the joint Press conference by Gen Musharraf and Mr. George Bush, and said that Pakistan would see to it that what had been agreed upon would be advanced.

To a query as to what kind of military agreement the Pentagon had signaled for Pakistan, Mr. Aziz replied: “The Defence Consultative Group will discuss this issue as it has now been reconstituted. We will know then (about any future agreements)”.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦ ✦
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

SECTION - IV

NUCLEAR
MR. MOORE – My question is directed to the Minister for Foreign Affairs. I refer to reports that Pakistan is developing a nuclear arms potential. Are these reports correct? If so, what does the Government intend to do to check the growth of nuclear arms on the Indian sub-continent.

MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS - There is considerable concern internationally that Pakistan is constructing a centrifuge uranium enrichment facility, outside of international safeguards, which would provide it with nuclear explosive capability. Australia shares that international concern. There can be no doubt that achievement of a nuclear explosive capability by any additional state would endanger not merely the security of the region concerned but also international stability generally. It would continue to increase the risk of further proliferation, while obviously international cooperation and trade in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy would be seriously jeopardized. Australian concern has been made known to Pakistan. Pakistan has stated that its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes only. The Government considers that if there is evidence to indicated that a country is planning to develop a nuclear explosive capability, broadly based international pressure should be brought to bear to dissuade it from proceeding with those plans. Consequently, Australia has been in close and continuing contact with a number of concerned governments on the matter. We have also informed a wide cross section of states of our very deep interest and have sought their views. Adherence by all states to a treaty prohibiting nuclear weapons testing would obviously greatly assist international efforts to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons to additional countries. As a country with impeccable non proliferation credentials, Australia will continue to urge that such a treaty be concluded as quickly as possible.
India has been at loggerheads, in one way or another, with practically all its neighbours. Most serious differences have been with Pakistan and China. As far as we are concerned, we set in train the process of normalizing relations with India at Simla two years ago and there has been a step by step progress in that direction. As far as China is concerned, it has officially declared that with the implementation of the Security Council resolution 307 (1971), it is looking forward to the establishment of normal relations with all States of the sub continent. Unless India seeks to reverse this evolution we cannot see relevance of this nuclear exercise to the immediate political setting of the sub continent.

Moreover, we must realize that the exercise of nuclear threat by a nuclear weapon Power against a non nuclear weapon country is something which affects not only the victim but also the entire international community, particularly the Great Powers. Let us not, therefore, feel that we cannot secure political counter measures against a potential nuclear threat from India. We shall not let ourselves be alone in facing this challenge. India has dynamited and shattered to pieces the Non-Proliferation Treaty. This is bound to embolden Israel and South Africa to further work of demolition. It is not only we, therefore, but the Asian African community that has been exposed to a new menace.

There is, therefore, no reason why Pakistan should abandon its efforts to explore the possibility of a political action against nuclear threat. Inasmuch as proliferation of nuclear weapons is a danger to the whole world, the United Nations has a clear and pressing duty to address itself more vigorously to the question of credible security assurances against nuclear threat or blackmail to all non nuclear weapons States. The existing assurances extended by the Security Council lack credibility. Nor can be the United States - Soviet statement to act jointly to prevent nuclear weapons inspire sufficient confidence among victims of would be nuclear aggressors. What is needed is a joint undertaking in the nature of an obligation by all the permanent members of the Security Council to act collectively or individually on behalf of the threatened state. In other words, a nuclear umbrella of all five great Powers, or, failing that, of at least one of them is the irreducible minimum of protection that is required to give State like Pakistan a real assurance of security against nuclear threat or blackmail.

It has to be understood by all concerned Powers that Pakistan’s anxiety in this respect cannot but be unparalleled. No two among the five great nuclear weapon powers -- United States, Soviet Union, China, France and Britain -- have had a history of confrontation and wars between them in contemporary times or in the past remotely comparable to the relations between India and Pakistan. In barely a quarter century between 1947 and 1971, India has gone to war three times against Pakistan. Throughout this period India has spurned all possible methods of peaceful settlement of its disputes with Pakistan. The last war was the result of India’s armed intervention in order to bring about disintegration of Pakistan. Against this background which is unique in the present age, we repeatedly warned the great Powers and also Canada that India would betray its assurances and its bilateral agreement with Canada and explode a nuclear device in order to claim status of a nuclear weapon Power. These warning went unheeded. Meanwhile over two decades India steadily acquired nuclear know how, built Plutonium device of the type it exploded in Rajasthan on Saturday, 18 May 1974. This production took place in Canada - India reactor which was supplied on the express understanding that it would be used for constructive purposes only. I am not surprised and hardly relieved that the Canadian Government has expressed itself as very disturbed by the announcement of the Indian explosion and has termed it as a severe setback to international efforts to prevent nuclear testing and proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Such statement, while welcome in intent, cannot assuage our fears. Given the brutal fact of 18 May explosion, Pakistan cannot be expected to rest on technicalities and protocol. It would be unfair, indeed immoral, that India’s flagrant violation of non-proliferation assurances should make nuclear weapon Powers resort to the double perversity of not only condoning it but also giving it a blessing by putting a stop or imposing restrictions on normal nuclear programmes of other States.

Indeed at this stage we are taking steps to secure a political insurance against India’s use of nuclear threat and I can announce some of these steps; we are formally approaching the Secretary General of the United Nations and I am also sending the Foreign Secretary to China, France and Britain to explain our position to their Governments. I am visiting the Soviet Union myself and will take up this question with the Soviet leaders. I have asked the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and Defence to raise this issue at the CENTO meeting, Washington D.C., and to hold urgent discussions with officials of the United States Government. He will thereafter go to Canada, which has made singular contribution to India’s nuclear capability. I am also addressing letters to Head of States and Governments of all nuclear weapons States.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1826. Official Announcement made by Brajesh Chandra Mishra in the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament regarding the underground Peaceful Nuclear Explosion conducted by India.

The Atomic Energy Commission, Government of India, announced today that it carried out a peaceful nuclear explosion experiment using an implosion device. The explosion was carried out at a depth of more than 100 meters.

As part of the programme of study of peaceful uses of nuclear explosion the Government of India had undertaken a programme to keep itself abreast of developments in this technology particularly with reference to its use in the field of mining and earth moving operations.

The Atomic Energy Commission, Government of India also stated that India had no intention of producing nuclear weapons and reiterated its strong opposition to military uses of nuclear explosions.

India has consistently affirmed its inherent right to use nuclear explosion technology for peaceful purposes and declared its intention to pursue experiments in that direction. The Government of India has repeatedly made its position clear in policy statements in Parliament and in various international forums that India planned to utilize all applications of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, including peaceful nuclear explosions.

The Government of India has been and remains firmly committed to a policy of using nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, and in that context, of studying and working on all meaningful applications of economic significance. The development of peaceful nuclear explosion technology is an integral part of that policy.

Some press reports have mentioned that India has become the sixth nuclear Power. I should like to take this opportunity to clarify the position. All countries developing uses of nuclear energy are nuclear Powers; those which develop or possess nuclear weapons are nuclear weapon Powers. India has no intention of becoming a nuclear weapon Power. At the same time, India maintains its right to promote the fullest development of all peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

✦✦✦✦✦
1827. Statement issued on behalf of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh on India’s Peaceful Nuclear Experiment.

New Delhi, May 21, 1974.

We are happy to note that the peaceful nuclear experiment which took place on May 18, 1974, represents a step forward on the road to peaceful uses of nuclear energy for the welfare of our people. I would like to congratulate our scientists and others who have made it possible for this achievement by our country. This experiment is an important landmark in the development of nuclear technology for peaceful and economic uses. We have no intention of developing nuclear weapons.

Indian scientists and technologists have been active in this field for two decades; and it is well known that already two atomic power plants are supplying nuclear energy into our national power grid, for the use of our people. The present experiment is important, because it represents our resolve to develop our indigenous resources of energy for the benefit of our people through our own efforts. In performing this scientific test India has not violated any of her international obligations. We are heartened by the enthusiastic support which we have received in this endeavour from the countries of developing world.

It is singularly unfortunate that the peaceful nature of this nuclear experiment of ours should be misconstrued and misread in Pakistan. The apprehensions aroused in Pakistan are unfounded. We value our commitment under the Simla Agreement to settle all our differences with Pakistan by peaceful and bilateral means. Moreover, both countries have resolved that the past policies of confrontation and conflict are banished forever.

We hope, therefore, that whatever mis-conception has arisen in Pakistan about this experiment will be replaced, after cool reflection, by a more objective and realistic assessment. India has always supported the development of cooperation amongst countries of this region on the basis of sovereign equality. Pakistan’s allegations of hegemonistic designs have no basis at all, and are, to say the least, uncharitable.
1828. Letter from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to Pakistan Prime Minister Z. A. Bhutto.

New Delhi, May 22, 1974.

I was planning to write to you when reports of your recent statement in Lahore regarding India’s peaceful nuclear explosion test were brought to my notice. I am sorry that you should have assumed, in spite of our categorical declarations that the nuclear test which our scientists have conducted entirely for developing nuclear technology for peaceful and economic uses, somehow poses a threat to Pakistan’s security.

Our Foreign Minister, Sardar Swaran Singh has already made a statement but I also should like to assure you that we remain fully committed to our traditional policy of developing nuclear energy resources entirely for peaceful purposes. The recent underground nuclear experiment conducted by our scientists in no way alters this policy. The underground test was conducted in carefully controlled conditions and is designed to develop technology for various economic uses of nuclear energy. Every country has the right to develop its natural resources and this is especially so at a time when the world crisis in raw materials and energy resources has demonstrated that the tapping of all forms of energy resources is essential to our survival. India has advanced sufficiently in nuclear research to develop its nuclear technology for the utilization of its indigenous resources for peaceful and economic purposes. We have entered into collaboration with several developing countries for the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

I am aware that in popular parlance a nuclear explosion evokes an awesome and horrifying picture. However, this is because our minds have been conditioned by the misuse of nuclear energy for the development of weapons and by the use of these weapons in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. We in India have condemned and will continue to condemn military uses of nuclear energy as a threat to humanity. However, the development of the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, rather than posing a threat, provides a ray of hope for mankind, faced as it is by the specter of dwindling energy resources.

It is strictly in this context that our scientists have launched on this experiment. Every care and precaution was taken to conduct the test underground in such a way as to preclude any risk of pollution or radiation hazards either to our own people or to those in neighbouring countries.

There are no political or foreign policy implications of this test. We remain committed to settle all our differences with Pakistan peacefully through bilateral negotiations in accordance with the Simla Agreement. Moreover, both countries have resolved to break away from the past history of confrontation and conflict.
and to work to develop normal relations and establish durable peace. I am sure you will acknowledge that the agreements which have been worked out between our two countries in the last two years, have been reached on the basis of absolute equality. There is no reason, whatsoever, to give up this healthy trend or for a change of policy on the part of either country merely because we have conducted a test for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

You have shown statesmanship in dealing with the problems of the sub continent. We welcome the announcement of the forthcoming meeting of the officials of our two countries to discuss matters of common interest.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1829. Reply Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Z. A. Bhutto to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
Islamabad, June 6, 1974.

We have taken note of your assurance that you remain fully committed to the development of nuclear energy resources for peaceful purposes only and that you will continue to condemn the military use of nuclear energy as a threat to humanity.

You will, however, appreciate that it is a question not only of intentions but of capabilities. As you know, in the past we received many assurances from India which regrettably remained un-honoured. India’s categorical assurance regarding a plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir in order to enable its people to freely decide their future is the most outstanding example.

It is well established that the testing of a nuclear device is no different from the detonation of a nuclear weapon. Given this indisputable fact, how is it possible for our fears to be assuaged by mere assurances, assurances which may in any case be ignored in subsequent years? Governments change, as do national attitudes. But the acquisition of a capability, which has direct and immediate military consequences, becomes a permanent factor to be reckoned with. I need hardly recall that no non nuclear-weapon State, including India, considered mere declarations of intent as sufficient to assure their security in the nuclear age.

Furthermore, the Indian nuclear explosion is an event which cannot be viewed in isolation from its surrounding circumstances. Your rapidly developing programme for acquiring medium range missiles and, with external assistance, placing a satellite in orbit, thus obtaining a delivery system for nuclear weapons, and your projected building of nuclear Navy are most pertinent in this context. These are matters of concern not only to Pakistan but to all countries which border on the Indian Ocean.

Pakistan's reaction to India's nuclear explosion is therefore, in no way abnormal shared by practically all impartial opinion. Indeed our reaction is throughout the world. Pakistan has additional reasons for a unique anxiety because no two among the five nuclear weapons States, have been involved in the kind of confrontation and unresolved disputes which have bedeviled relations between India and Pakistan. You have mentioned, rightly too, that agreements between India and Pakistan worked out during the last two years were reached on the basis of absolute equality. However, the fact cannot be dismissed that these agreements were but a sequel to the act of armed intervention by India which brought about the dismemberment of Pakistan.

You have referred to the economic compulsions behind your nuclear test. Since Pakistan faces economic problems broadly of the same kind as India, we cannot be unsympathetic to attempts at achieving a breakthrough in their solution. No one can disagree with the proposition that nuclear energy can be an immense boon. But one can have access to nuclear technology and nuclear power without having to conduct nuclear explosions. In fact it has been made entirely possible for the non nuclear weapon States to use nuclear explosives for peaceful application under procedures of international control. I am, therefore, at a loss to understand why a developing country like India should choose to divert immense resources to the acquisition of a nuclear weapon capability when these could be utilized for the alleviation of poverty and disease.

Our policy for the last two years has been to make every effort to establish relations between India and Pakistan on a rational neighbourly basis. We do not wish to be deflected from that policy, as said in my statement in Lahore on the 19th of last month. Your nuclear explosion, however, introduced an unbalancing factor at a time when progress was being made step by step towards normalization of relations between our two countries and we had reason to look forward to equilibrium and tranquility in the sub continent. When Pakistan's attempts to obtain even spare parts under treaty commitments cause an outcry in India not only unjustified but totally disproportionate, it would be unnatural to expect public opinion in Pakistan not to react to the chauvinistic jubilation widely expressed in India at the acquisition of a nuclear status.

We find it difficult to believe that the deleterious effects of this new phenomenon can really be removed unless the nuclear weapon powers undertake the obligation jointly or individually to defend a non-nuclear-weapon State against the nuclear threat and unless also a nuclear State, which wishes to forsake the development of nuclear weapons, does so through one or more concrete and binding international instruments. Since you have declared that India does not want to develop nuclear weapons or to exercise a nuclear threat against any state, neither of these two components of a solution of the problem should be disagreeable to you.

The question of a binding agreement between a nuclear State and one or more non nuclear weapon States which would preclude the use or threat of nuclear weapons is something that can be taken up between the States concerned. The question of credible assurances to non nuclear weapon States is, however, one of global implications and, therefore, of direct concern to the United Nations. In the sixties, India was among the first to put forward the idea of a joint nuclear umbrella for the non-nuclear weapons states. I have, therefore, addressed the Secretary General of the United Nations, who has the over riding responsibility in this field, and the five permanent members of the Security Council asking them to give this question their urgent attention.

You will agree that this matter is of tremendous importance to both your people and ours. In view of its extraordinary nature, I propose to release to the press your letter and my answer after it will have reached you in Delhi. This has become all the more necessary since the press has already reported the substance of your letter.
1830. Statement issued by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh following the exchange of correspondence between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan on the question of India’s peaceful nuclear explosion.

New Delhi, June 7, 1974.

The Prime Minister of Pakistan has today responded to the message of our Prime Minister, sent to him on May 22, regarding India’s peaceful nuclear explosion.

In view of Prime Minister Bhutto’s decision to release the text of both messages, we are taking similar action. Our Prime Minister’s message of May 22 was in the nature of a constructive and friendly effort to reassure Pakistan and to convey India’s firm resolve to use nuclear technology for peaceful and economic uses. It is, therefore, unfortunate that Mr. Bhutto, in his reply, has reverted to his style of making baseless allegations of a propagandistic nature.

In July 1972, India and Pakistan signed the Simla Agreement which provides for the settlement of all differences peacefully and through bilateral discussions. This included the question of Kashmir which was to be settled in the context of normalization of relation and the establishment of durable peace. Regrettably, instead of implementing the Simla Agreement, Prime Minister Bhutto has now started making accusations of broken assurances. It is well known that in 1947 Pakistan armed forces had invaded Kashmir after the State’s Accession to the Indian Union. In this context, the question of continued illegal occupation by Pakistan of a part of Jammu and Kashmir is a matter to be settled in accordance with the Simla Agreement.

It is strange that so soon after recognizing Bangladesh and after concluding the Tripartite Agreement with Bangladesh and India, the Pakistan Prime Minister should deem it fit to make the unwarranted allegations that India was responsible for bringing about Pakistan’s dismemberment. The entire world remembers and Prime Minister Bhutto has himself acknowledged that the brutal and inhuman repression of the people of Bangladesh, by the Pakistan military junta headed by General Yahya Khan started the chain of events, that resulted in the resurgence of the people of Bangladesh, leading the country to freedom. As to who commenced the war in 1971, this is no longer a matter of doubt or dispute. Even a senior Pakistani General, General Fazal Muqeem Khan, now their Defence Secretary, has acknowledged in his book that on December 3, 1971, Pakistani troops crossed the western border into India according to a pre-conceived plan. Simultaneously, Pakistan Air Force had subjected Indian airfields to an unprovoked and concerted attack.
In a vain attempt to build up the bogey of India developing a nuclear weapons capability, Prime Minister Bhutto has even gone to the extent of distorting the nature and purpose of our scientific experiments in space research. India’s programme of space research is open and well known to the scientists of the world. Its basic objective is to explore new avenues and methods of disseminating scientific and educational knowledge. Pakistan in deliberately trying to distort and mis-represent India’s programme of peaceful uses of nuclear and space technology by imputing military motives.

It is difficult to understand how a peaceful nuclear experiment could be considered a factor leading to the upsetting of the equilibrium and tranquility in the sub continent as alleged by Prime Minister Bhutto. India continues to believe firmly in the principle of sovereign equality of all her neighbours. The success of the nuclear experiment does not in any way alter this position.

1831.

Record of discussions between External Affairs Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee and Secretary General of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs Agha Shahi.

New York, October 6, 1977.

Mr. Agha Shahi began by referring to Foreign Minister’s speech in the general debate. He said Pakistan had noted the underlying good spirit of FM’s statement. They had noted FM’s reference to the Prime Minister’s pledge that India would not produce nuclear weapons. Pakistan welcomed this development. In fact, Pakistan wanted to discuss a few issues relating to disarmament with India, including this issue earlier. However, due to internal developments in Pakistan as also the process of elections in India, they had not been (able) to hold any consultations on this subject. Mr. Shahi recalled Pakistan’s proposal for a nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia. While continuing to believe in the desirability of that proposal, Pakistan felt that perhaps a gradual approach may be more productive. Mr. Shahi then spoke about the idea of a joint declaration by countries in South Asia stating that they would not acquire nuclear weapons. Shortly after the Indian nuclear explosion, Mrs. Gandhi had written to Mr. Bhutto, conveying that India did not wish to acquire nuclear weapons. The same pledge could be spelt out by all countries of South Asia viz. India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Nepal and Bhutan in a joint declaration. Mr. Shahi felt that such a joint declaration would be in the spirit of India’s declared policy on the subject.

2. Mr. Shahi then raised the question of security assurances for non-nuclear weapon states. He recalled that in the early sixties following the first Chinese nuclear weapon test, it was India which had put forward this idea. Even during the discussions preceding the NPT India had emphasized, on one hand its demands that the Treaty should not be unequal but on the other the question of joint security guarantees for non nuclear weapon States. India had put forward these ideas in 1968 when the Security Council was discussing a resolution on this subject. Mr. Shahi added that Pakistan was now trying to carry that idea forward. So far some of the nuclear weapon states had only given declarations of intent not to use nuclear weapons against non nuclear weapon States. However, such declarations of intent were conditional. Last year Pakistan had tabled a resolution on this subject after preliminary exchange of views with countries like India and Yugoslavia. Both India and Yugoslavia had abstained on the voting on that resolution. Mr. Shahi felt that the Indian and Pakistani position on the question of guarantees to non nuclear weapon States was similar. He, therefore, requested that the resolution that Pakistan proposed to table this year should receive India’s support. Such Indian support would be a positive development and extend the already existing cooperation in the economic field to the field of disarmament also.

3. Mr. Shahi said that Pakistan was considering drafting some principles on transfer of technology. It hoped to draft these principles in the context of IAEA. They had already discussed this idea with the Yugoslavs and would be happy to do so with India. Mr. Shahi said that on all these issues, India and Pakistan could get together and take coordinated steps. He repeated that the cooperation between the two delegations in the economic fields should be extended to other fields such as disarmament.

4. Foreign Minister enquired about the letter from Mrs. Gandhi to Mr. Bhutto referred to by Mr. Shahi. He said that he had not seen it so far. Mr. Shahi clarified that in substance the letter gave a pledge that India would not produce nuclear weapons. He recalled that he had inconclusive discussions on this subject with both Mr. Kewal Singh and the present Foreign Secretary. Foreign Secretary, who was present, stated that a joint declaration on the lines suggested by Mr. Shahi would prove problematic for India. India’s intention not to produce nuclear weapons was clear and was explicitly stated. Also, India’s position on any international treaty being non discriminatory was also well known. The principle of non discrimination was a universal one. However, either the joint declaration envisaged by Pakistan or its concept of a nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia referred only to a particular region. We were, therefore, not in favour of mixing the two together. The Foreign Minister added that China was not covered by any initiative envisaged for South Asia. He wondered why India and Pakistan should limit themselves to thinking about only nuclear weapons. They could look beyond this. In this connection, he recalled the old offer of a no war pact with Pakistan which he himself had repeated in the Rajya Sabha sometime ago. The reaction in Pakistan press to this offer was, strangely enough, not favourable. Mr. Shahi said that the Pakistani press reaction to this offer was governed by the past history of this proposal. In fact, the Simla Agreement was really a no war pact in a sense. However, the proposal in the form of no war pact always evoked memories of the past and hence unfavourable reaction in the Pakistan press. FS then referred to the improving bilateral relations between Pakistan and India. We looked forward to cooperation with Pakistan. However, the joint declaration idea posed a problem because it restricted itself only to South Asia. Mr. Shahi said that he was aware of India’s problems in this regard. However, he requested that the matter should be given another thought. It was a matter of satisfaction that the present Government of India had stuck to the previous Government’s stated policy on the production of nuclear weapons. However, a joint declaration would give a greater feeling of assurance of security to India’s neighbours including Pakistan. The trouble with unilateral declaration was that they could change with changes in Government. He was happy about the present Indian Government’s stated policy and hoped that the Government would stay in power indefinitely. But since these things could not be taken for granted, Pakistan preferred a joint declaration. It would be a modest but good step in the right direction. Mr. Akhund, Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the UN who was present, said that perhaps the following modus operandi could be considered; All countries in South Asia could make unilateral declarations denouncing the production and use of nuclear weapons. Thereafter a meeting could be called of these countries, perhaps in Delhi, where they could issue a joint declaration based on their unilateral declarations. F.M. said that India’s assurances about non acquisition of nuclear weapons were totally sincere. The Government definitely meant what it said on this subject. When he was in the Opposition, his party was for acquisition of nuclear weapons. However, this position had now changed. It was a moral commitment of the Prime Minister that India should not possess nuclear weapons. Mr. Shahi stated that Pakistan would like to see moral commitments become a tenet of India’s policy. Foreign Secretary said that both India and Pakistan were against discriminatory treatment regarding transfer of technology. They could cooperate in this field to their mutual benefits. Mr. Shahi stated that if the countries in South Asia made a joint declaration as suggested by him, “it would not be difficult to get China to respect such a declaration and a nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia”. Foreign Minister enquired whether this matter was discussed by Pakistan with China. Mr. Shahi hastened to say that Pakistan had not done so as yet because before there was agreement in the region, it would be premature to do so. Mr. Akhund said that if such a declaration was issued by all countries in South Asia not only China but all the five nuclear weapon states could be asked to consider to respect South Asia as a nuclear weapon free zone.

5. Mr. Shahi then turned to Indian press reports regarding the differences between Pakistan and the United States on Pakistan’s acquiring a reprocessing plant from France. He wanted to make it clear that Pakistan’s contract with France was not motivated by any ambition for producing nuclear weapons. Apart from Pakistan’s motives, the safeguards agreed to were such that even if Pakistan want to, it could not use the facilities provided by the contract for production of nuclear weapons. Although these safeguards were stringent Pakistan decided to go ahead with the contract because it considered that it would probably be its last chance to acquire a reprocessing plant. In about 20 years time, Pakistan hoped to produce its own breeder reactor but even these would be subject to the same safeguards as was envisaged under the contract with France. Mr. Shahi said that at the time when the contract was being finalized, an inter-ministerial team in Pakistan had gone through its details very carefully. They had come to the conclusion that “it would be a pipe dream” to think of utilizing this contract in terms of weapons capability. Whatever fuel was saved from the reactor installed in Pakistan with Canadian help was also subject to strict safeguards. It could, therefore, not be diverted to any weapons production programme. Pakistan could have got a reprocessing plant quite cheaply in the 60s. However, its priorities then were different. The Indian press had made much about Mr. Bhutto’s ambitions to produce a nuclear bomb. Pakistan did not have the technology necessary to produce a nuclear bomb. Also, as explained, the safeguards were extremely strict and therefore it was “impossible for Pakistan to produce nuclear weapons.” Mr. Shahi said that the question should legitimately be asked why then Pakistan was going ahead with the purchase of this reprocessing plant, particularly when the US seemed dead against it. He clarified that when Pakistan was negotiating the purchase with France, US had taken no position. It had not indicated its views, if any, to Pakistan at that stage. However, after the contract between Pakistan and France was signed, this issue had come up in the context of the Presidential election campaign there. Knowing Candidate Carter’s well known position President Ford had then decided to come out against it. Kissinger had then begun to apply pressure on Pakistan to abandon the contract. However, the issue had assumed importance in the context of internal situation in Pakistan also. Mr. Bhutto was then expecting to go to polls shortly. It was considered that his independent foreign policy was one of his strongest assets in the election campaign. Had he backed down in the face of the American pressure, it was thought, it would not rebound to his credit, and consequently his election prospects would suffer. The fact that Kissinger had spoken publicly about this issue turned it into an explosive political issue involving prestige and sovereignty of Pakistan. When the interim Government came to power, America renewed its pressure for cancellation of the contract. The interim Government had then explained that it simply could not cancel this contract because it had publicly stated that it stood by all the international commitments made by its predecessor. It should also be remembered that despite the fate of Mr. Bhutto, his party was an important political force to reckon with and any change of policy on the Government’s part would convert this issue into a major electoral issue. Even the parties constituting PNA had said that they stood by the contract. Therefore, neither the interim Government nor any future Government either belonging to the PPP or the PNA had any maneuverability left in the matter and the contract would have to be gone through. USA had hinted that if Pakistan decided to stick to its position, the question of US assistance to it would have to be reviewed. If the US wanted to take this attitude, Pakistan had no alternative but to do without US assistance in order to stick to a position which simply could not be reversed at this stage. Mr. Shahi said that he had given this lengthy explanation to make the point that Pakistan had neither the intention nor the possibilities of misusing the provisions of the contract to produce nuclear weapons. Pakistan’s future energy requirements and also its national pride demanded that it should go through with its decision. Foreign Minister enquired what the precise position regarding the contract was. Mr. Shahi said that both France and Pakistan were keen to implement the provisions of the contract. There was American pressure on France too. However, if France went back on its word it would have to face loss of credibility which would affect its dealings with other countries also. Mr. Shahi felt that the reason why the US was against Pakistan acquiring this plant was the existence of pro Israeli lobby in this country which feared, wrongly, that Pakistan would acquire nuclear weapons and pass them on to Arab countries.

Foreign Secretary said that India faced another variation of the same problem. President Carter’s policy appeared to be discriminatory in this regard. Prestige and national sentiments were also involved in our dealings with the USA. We had made the unilateral declaration of our intention not to produce nuclear weapons. But we could not understand attempts at repudiation of existing contracts. India wished to develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. However, there appear attempts to control its efforts. Both India and Pakistan therefore face this problem of restrictions. Mr. Shahi enquired whether the existing stocks of heavy water for the Tarapur plant would last for one or two years. Foreign Secretary said that they would last up to December. We were not yet certain that we would get further supplies at that time. Mr. Akhund enquired what precisely the American conditions were. FS replied that the American side wanted to change the terms of the contract. They wished to place under safeguards all our capabilities FM said that it was strange that while the American did not allow inspection of their own facilities, they should seek to impose such conditions on others. Mr. Shahi agreed. He referred to the loss of several tons of plutonium from the US as reported in the press. The matter had not been heard about further. This episode showed that the lack of responsibility was on the part of those countries which had nuclear weapons. Mr. Akhund said that against this background when unilateral declarations of intent were doubted, a joint declaration might prove useful. FS said that both India and Pakistan resented that while restraints were sought to be placed on them, nuclear weapon powers were free from them. National sensitivity in both countries therefore hurt. If we did not focus on this aspect, we would be weakening our arguments.

6. The meeting ended with Mr. Shahi requesting the Foreign Minister to consider carefully the proposals he had outlined. FM agreed to consider them.
1832. Letter from General Zia-ul-Haq to Prime Minister Morarji Desai.

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad

3 March, 1979

His Excellency
Mr. Morarji Desai,
Prime Minister of India
New Delhi.

My dear Prime Minister Desai,

I thank you for your letter of February 8, and wish to assure you that I fully share your concerns over the dangers of nuclear proliferation in general and the threat it poses to the peace of our region in particular. You have also expressed concern over the possibility of Pakistan's developing nuclear technology "to the point of acquiring explosion capability" which could upset the balance for peace in this region and lead to a nuclear arms race between our two countries. Forgive me if I am not able to go along all the way with this view which appears to be based on misleading reports about our nuclear programme.

I would like to begin by assuring you that our entire nuclear programme is geared to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy and that Pakistan has no intention whatsoever of acquiring or developing nuclear weaponry. Pakistan's decision to acquire the plutonium reprocessing plant, under safeguards far more stringent than those prescribed by International Atomic Energy Agency, is part of our programme of nuclear power generation. This programme has been designed to meet the country's growing energy requirements and to ensure the availability of the necessary technology which will enable us to meet the inevitable short-fall in conventional fuel supplies in the future.

We believe in the right of all states to develop their programmes for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy in conformity with their own interests and needs. We are convinced that developing countries must be free to acquire nuclear technology, equipment, and material for peaceful purposes, subject to an agreed and non-discriminatory international safeguards system. I may add that this view is supported by almost all developing countries.

Our commitment to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy is amply borne out by our unqualified acceptance of international safeguards for the reprocessing plant as well as for the Karachi nuclear power reactor. Pakistan's acceptance of international safeguards effectively guarantees that these facilities will not be misused for the manufacture of nuclear weapons. India, on the other hand, has an entirely un-safeguarded nuclear fuel cycle, which includes three reprocessing plants, a plutonium production reactor, several heavy water plants and other related facilities. This gives future Indian Governments a ready option to use India's nuclear capability for military purposes at any time of their choosing. India has already demonstrated its capability, by conducting an underground test of a nuclear device, close to our borders.

The Government of India is well aware that Pakistan has actively supported moves in the United Nations and other international forums aimed at curbing nuclear proliferation. Over the years, we have taken several initiatives in that direction. The most important of these relates to the question of security assurances to non-nuclear-weapons states and the establishment of nuclear-weapons free zones. Regrettably, it is India's opposition which has impeded progress in this field.

I welcome your assurance that India's policy is uncompromising in favour of using atomic energy for peaceful purposes and that you have unilaterally eschewed any resort to explosion even for peaceful purposes. I am genuinely impressed by the sincerity of your personal assurances. At the same time, however, we are disturbed by your Foreign Minister's observations to the BLITZ weekly, in a recent interview. He spoke of India's readiness to resume nuclear "blasts or explosions", for peaceful purposes, adding that India "cannot for all time to come foreclose its nuclear option." He further said, "so far as the benefits of atomic weapons are concerned, Mr. Karanjia, you know I belong to the party which was for the Bomb."

You will agree with me that a country's policies are liable to change with the changes in government. Unilateral declarations and assurances must, therefore, be embodied in binding multilateral agreements in the interest of lasting peace and stability. I would, therefore, wish to urge you to reconsider your views in this regard and lend your government's support to the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia. Any doubts and reservations can be dispelled through mutual consultations. For our part, we would be prepared to accept international inspection of all nuclear facilities in South Asian region, or if your government prefers, a system of bilateral inspection on a reciprocal basis. India is also in a unique position to make a lasting contribution towards curbing nuclear proliferation by accepting full-scope safeguards covering all its nuclear facilities or acceding to the Non-Proliferation Treaty. Let me assure you that we shall promptly follow your lead in this matter.

In the meantime, Pakistan is prepared, as a first step, to make a joint declaration with India and other states in South Asia, to renounce the manufacture or acquisition of nuclear weapons. Such a joint declaration, which will have
With profound regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/-

General (M. Zia-ul-Haq)

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1833. Press Release issued by the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi quoting the Statement issued by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs declaring “Pakistan’s Nuclear programme for peaceful purposes”.

Islamabad, March 6, 1979.

Replying to a question about Mr. Atal Bihari Vajpayee statement* in the Rajya Sabha on March 2, that reports had reached India about Pakistan’s nuclear programme not being entirely for peaceful purposes, a Foreign Office spokesman expressed surprise that Pakistan’s modest nuclear programme which was being carried out under strict safeguards, should be debated in the Indian Parliament and its peaceful purpose questioned by India which has an entire fuel cycle outside all safeguards and has already staged a nuclear explosion close to Pakistan’s borders.

The spokesman also drew attention to the Indian Foreign Minister’s statement in the Blitz Weekly of February 3, in which Mr. Vajpayee denied that India had given up its nuclear option and reminded the Editor that he belonged to a party which was for the Bomb.

The spokesman stated emphatically that Pakistan’s nuclear energy programme was not oriented towards non peaceful purposes and cited as evidence Pakistan’s initiative in the United Nations to establish a nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia which would involve renunciation of acquisition of nuclear weapons as well as international inspection of all nuclear weapons as well as international inspection of all nuclear facilities existing in all the countries of this region. He regretted that India was adamantly opposed to this proposal as well as to the proposal for acceptance of full scope safeguards on a reciprocal basis. In these circumstances, the spokesman said, it is incomprehensible that India should feel uneasy about Pakistan’s peaceful and safeguarded nuclear programme.
Rather it was Pakistan and other countries in South Asia which had every reason to feel concerned over India’s intentions in the nuclear field. The spokesman added that India could make a lasting contribution to the peace and stability of the region by agreeing to the establishment of a nuclear weapons free zone in South Asia or acceding to the nuclear non proliferation treaty. Pakistan, he said, will be only too happy to follow India’s lead in this matter.

Referring to Prime Minister Desai’s statement in the Rajya Sabha that he had written a letter to President Zia ul Haq about Pakistan’s nuclear programme, the spokesman confirmed its receipt and said that a reply from the President was on its way to Prime Minister, Mr. Desai.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1834. Statement by Minister of External Affairs Atal Bihari
Vajpayee in Lok Sabha while responding to the ‘Calling Attention Notice’ on the ‘Reported Situation Arising out of Pakistan Going Nuclear’.

New Delhi, March 30, 1979.

[The Minister of External Affairs, Shri Atal Bihari Vajpaye, made the following statement in the Lok Sabha on March 30, 1979, regarding the reported situation arising out of Pakistan going nuclear with the help of China and other foreign countries. He was replying to a Calling Attention by Shri Yadendra Dutt and four others:]

A number of reports have come to the attention of the Government regarding the efforts of the Government of Pakistan to purchase equipment which could be used for a programme to develop Nuclear explosive capability.

* Replying to a question in the Rajya Sabha External Affairs Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee had said: “Government of India has consistently stood for the use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and it is opposed to its use by any country for making nuclear weapons.” Answering a supplementary question he had said: “We have received reports that Pakistan has embarked upon a nuclear programme which may not be totally for peaceful purposes.”
As the House is aware, Pakistan concluded an agreement with France in January, 1976 to secure a nuclear reprocessing plant. It was reported that US Government had urged that the Pakistan - French programme for reprocessing should be suspended. Some months ago reports appeared that the French Government had decided to suspend further supplies under the agreement. It is not known what equipment and design had already been supplied. In addition, it was reported that the Government of Pakistan also imported from United Kingdom “Variable Frequency Inverters”, an equipment which is used both in synthetic fibre manufacture as well as in gas centrifuges for uranium enrichment. This matter was brought up in the House of Commons in July 1978. We understand that the UK Government have taken steps under the Export Control regulations to stop further supplies to Pakistan. We have however, no information of China giving assistance for Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

In any case, in the light of these reports, it was felt that the matter was grave enough to be brought to the attention of the Government of Pakistan. The Prime Minister accordingly took the initiative to write to President Zia on February 8, 1979 expressing India’s concern over Pakistan’s efforts for acquiring nuclear technology to the point of explosion capability. A reply to this letter has since been received from the President of Pakistan. In his reply dated 3rd March, President Zia has stated that Pakistan’s entire nuclear programme is geared to peaceful uses of atomic energy and that Pakistan has no intention of acquiring or developing nuclear weaponry.

The Pakistan media quoting official sources in Islamabad said that President Zia’s reply to the Indian Prime Minister’s letter expressing concern at Pakistan’s efforts to acquire nuclear explosion capability said that the President had suggested a joint declaration renouncing the manufacture and acquisition of nuclear weapons. Gen. Zia asked Mr. Desai to lend his support to the establishment of the nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia and accept international or bilateral inspection on reciprocal basis of all nuclear facilities in India and Pakistan. The media reports said that ‘in the views of Gen. Zia, India could make a lasting contribution towards the curbing of nuclear proliferation by accepting full scale safeguards for nuclear facilities or by acceding to the non proliferation treaty. He has assured Mr. Desai that Pakistan would promptly follow India’s lead in this matter. Pointing out that Mr. Desai’s apprehensions about the implications of Pakistan’s peaceful nuclear programme were based on misleading reports, Gen. Zia is stated to have reiterated that it is entirely geared to peaceful uses of nuclear energy and his country has no intention to acquire or develop nuclear weapons. Pakistan has also accepted cast iron international safeguards to dispel any doubt about its nuclear programme’. The reports said that on the other hand, ‘India has an entire fuel cycle outside any safeguard and which means that future Indian Governments have the option to use nuclear capability for military purposes at any time of their choosing. In reiterating Pakistan’s commitment to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, Gen. Zia’s letter said to ‘recounts various initiatives taken by Pakistan to curb nuclear proliferation. These include the security assurances to non nuclear States and the establishment of nuclear weapon free zone. Regrettably, the progress in this field has been impeded by India’s opposition.’
The policy of the Government of India on the nuclear question is well known and has been reiterated on several occasions in this House as well as outside. We have unilaterally announced our intention to gear our nuclear programme only for peaceful purposes. The possibility of Pakistan developing explosion capability is of understandably grave concern to India. We earnestly hope that the assurance given by President Zia in his letter to the Prime Minister would be adhered in the acquisition of nuclear technology.

1835
SECRET

Letter from the British Prime Minister James Callaghan to Prime Minister Morarji Desai regarding Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

10, DOWNING STREET

THE PRIME MINISTER

My dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your recent letter about Pakistan’s nuclear weapons programme. The issue is one which has been causing me increasing concern and I agree that evidence of Arab involvement would make the matter even more serious.

We became aware last year of Pakistani efforts to acquire equipment for her centrifuge programme in Britain and have taken a series of steps to deny her key items. The information which you provided (and that passed to us earlier) has both confirmed and supplemented the information on which we were working.

We have made three separate amendments to our Export Control Order to cover inverters and their components and specially designed tools essential for the manufacture of centrifuge parts and components. One of these amendments was a direct result of the information provided by your officials; the firm concerned is now under investigation. We are also keeping a close eye on a number of front organizations in this country being used by the Pakistanis.

In parallel with this we have detained a consignment of another sensitive component which was in transit through London Airport from a foreign supplier and subject to licensing under regulations. We have also been in touch with a number of other supplier governments to whom we believed Pakistan could turn. Both in Europe and elsewhere we have found wide support for our concern at the situation and the need to take steps to withhold key components.

In all this we have concentrated what we estimate are the critical items. Many of these which you list are equipment with a wide range of industrial uses. It is not possible to impose effective controls on all of them. Neither would it add materially to the effect we can have on the Pakistani programme.

I believe that in the light of the supply problem which we and others have created for Pakistan she will not be in a position to explode a nuclear device for at least three to five years. But the best that we can achieve in this way is not by itself enough. A country really determined upon a nuclear weapons programme will manage in the end to secure or manufacture the essential equipment. There is no complete technical solution to this problem; there must be political solution. What we and others have done should have gained time to pursue one. I am considering whether there is anything we can do to help on the political level as well.

With warm good wishes

Yours sincerely

James Callaghan

Honourable Mr. Morarji Desai
Briefing by the American Embassy in Islamabad to American Journalists on Pakistan’s Nuclear programme.

Islamabad, April 8, 1979.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

[On 8th April there was a briefing of journalists by the Foreign Office on US Government’s decision to cut off Pakistan's development aid for the current year and next fiscal years because Pakistan's nuclear research programme was directed towards non-peaceful purposes.

Just before this briefing, the US journalists (who were in a large number in Islamabad in connection with Bhutto’s execution) were asked to come to the US Embassy for a briefing. Some of the American journalists who attended this briefing as well as that by the Foreign Office gave the following account.]

AMERICAN BRIEFING

1. The briefing was given by Mr. Herbert Haggerty, Counsellor (Political)
2. The briefing was very “precise, incisive and clear”.
3. It was made clear that the US Government was “absolutely certain” that Pakistan was going with a project to develop a nuclear device or a bomb. There was no doubt about this.
4. The method being used was the gas centrifuge process of making enriched uranium.
5. This plant was in addition to the three already existing nuclear facilities — Karachi Nuclear Power Station, Chashma Reprocessing Plant and Pinstech Nuclear Reactor. The fourth, i.e., the gas centrifuge process plant was either attached to one of the above plants or was a separate unit. In all probability, the journalists felt that it was a separate plant, as the Americans stated that this plant unlike the others had been kept a complete secret from the Americans. However, the American Embassy was fully aware of it through intelligence sources and knew where it was. But this they could not reveal.
6. The centrifuge plant had been obtained from Holland.
7. The financing of the plant has been almost entirely with Libyan help. Saudi’s know about the plant and are willing to assist.
8. The Pakistanis are well advanced in their project. They have the resources, the facilities and the capability.
9. The rate at which they are advancing they will have the bomb by 5 years at the latest, though in all probability they will be able to do it between two to three years.

10. The parts required for the plant were bought from commercial companies in Europe. Purchases were made “very cleverly” through Pakistani front companies and through some foreign agents.

11. By themselves each of these parts can have dual purposes – i.e., for peaceful and non-peaceful purposes. However, when put together there is no doubt, whatsoever that these purposes can be only for one objective – i.e., the bomb.

12. Pakistan can easily have the delivery system. They can do so by making fairly easy modifications of their Mirages.

13. Americans acknowledge that the aid cut off is symbolic. It really does not create any practical problem for the Pakistanis to make the bomb. They hope that this will not affect any other part of Pak-American relationship including bilateral security arrangements.

14. If, however, Pakistan goes ahead and there is every indication that they will – all aspects of Pak-American relationship including the bilateral security arrangements will be affected. There was a hint that this would mean (stopping?) the supply of arms to Pakistan.

15. The American spokesman repeatedly stressed the seriousness of American intentions.

16. Other nuclear aid giving donors had been consulted. They had privately expressed their concern while the American have not put any pressure at this stage on cutting off aid, when their respective aid programmes come up for renewal, possibilities of these countries reconsidering and reviewing does definitely exist. This may affect particularly Pakistan’s request for debt rescheduling.

17. Americans are not going to have any new aid programme in Pakistan. A few of the on going projects like one for Eradication of Malaria would continue. Others which have begun and are not advanced will be wound up.

18. The subject was “attempted to be discussed” by Christopher during his visit to Islamabad. In spite of best American efforts, there could be no discussion as Zia would simply say that they have no such project and that their nuclear development is totally oriented towards peaceful purposes.
19. Christopher had pointed out that if it was matter of equilibrium with India, this just could not happen. India was far advanced and by the time Pakistan had one bomb, Indians would have fifty.

20. In fact Christopher had stated that it would be far better not to have one or two bombs. If Pakistan had no bombs, USA would guarantee her nuclear security. However, if she went ahead, USA could give her no guarantee.

21. The Americans had explained to Pakistan that there was no double standard vis-à-vis India. The Indian contractual agreement was long before the symington Amendment. It will not be renewed once it expires unless India abides by the conditions. Moreover, India was a nuclear power before the efforts of USA on this issue were seriously directed. Finally, there was tremendous pressure on India from the USA to accept safeguards.

22. The decision to cut off aid had nothing to do with Bhutto’s execution.

1837. Statement by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

Islamabad, April 8, 1979.

[The briefing was done by the Advisor on Foreign Affairs Agha Shahi who was assisted by Foreign Secretary Shah Niwaz.]

A spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs categorically denied that Pakistan’s Peaceful Nuclear Programme had behind it the intent or purpose of developing a nuclear weapon: its aim and orientation were directed solely towards peaceful ends, he said.

The spokesman made this statement in reply to the allegations made by a US State Department spokesman in Washington on 6 April and published in newspapers that the Carter Administration had decided to cut off developmental aid because the US suspected that Pakistan’s activities in the field of peaceful uses of nuclear energy were directed towards non peaceful purposes. The Foreign Office spokesman regretted the decision to cut off US aid which he said was an act of discrimination against Pakistan. He said other countries which had either exploded a nuclear device or had clearly acquired the capability to manufacture nuclear weapons and had rejected the application of international safeguards to their nuclear fuel cycle facilities including plutonium reprocessing and uranium enrichment plants were being aided or armed by the United States. On the other hand, Pakistan which had subjected its nuclear facilities to international inspection was being deprived of economic assistance. Such a policy could not be termed even handed, he said.

The spokesman of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs insisted that Pakistan’s concern over the danger of spread of nuclear weapons was second to that of no other country. This was a matter of international record from 1966 to date. He recalled Pakistan’s initiatives in the United Nations, the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament, the United Nations Security Council, the Conference of Non Nuclear Weapons States and the Conference of the Organization of Islamic States, and also in other forums, to alert and activate the international community to address itself effectively to the prevention of proliferation of nuclear weapons states against nuclear threat or blackmail.

In this context, the spokesman referred to Pakistan’s proposals in the General Assembly of the United Nations, which were adopted by overwhelming majorities on a nuclear weapons free zone for South Asia and nuclear guarantees for non nuclear weapons states. If accepted and acted upon by all the nuclear weapons powers and the countries of this region, this recommendation would ensure against the danger of a spread of nuclear weapons. The Foreign Office spokesman reiterated the readiness of Pakistan to accept full scope safeguards to cover its peaceful programme of nuclear research if such safeguards were applied on a non discriminatory basis in other words, if the United States was willing to ensure its application without preferences and exclusions to the nuclear programmes of other countries which are known to have acquired or are on the threshold of acquiring nuclear weapons capability. The spokesman noted the US spokesman’s statement that the US policy was a global one and not confined to Pakistan. If so, he said, the threat of nuclear proliferation called for a global response which could best be mounted in the United Nations forum on a basis of universality, non discrimination and sovereign equality of states, whether large or small. To approach the problem on an individual or selective basis and apply different standards to different states would imperil regional security and strengthen the forces of hegemonism in various parts of the world.

The Pakistani Spokesman summarily rejected as false the charge that Pakistan was developing its nuclear programme with assistance from or in partnership with Libya or any other country.

In reply to question from a British journalist that as to what the Pakistan would put the enrichment uranium, the Spokesman asked the questionnaire if he was aware of all the nuclear programmes of his country, including the programme for manufacturing chemical weapons and bacteriological weapons programme? The spokesman added that the nuclear research programme of Pakistan was for peaceful uses of the atomic energy and it must be approached in this connection on the basis of sovereign equality. He said Pakistan was alive to nuclear threat. Asked if Pakistan was importing some equipment for nuclear research programme, he said he was not informed about it, but many countries were importing.

The Spokesman emphasized that Pakistan was ready to allow inspection of nuclear facilities on the basis of equality and non-discrimination. Asked why the USA had taken this decision, he replied, he did not know but it had something to do with the fact that Pakistan is an Islamic country. The Spokesman said Pakistan had not imported enrichment uranium. Replying to another question he referred to the State Department that US decision had nothing to do with Mr. Bhutto’s case. Asked the effect of the US decision on Pak-US relations, he said, “it seems an impediment in the area of primary concern to us.”

◆◆◆◆◆
Savingram from Ministry of External Affairs to its Missions' abroad.

New Delhi, May 7, 1979.

SAVINGRAM

From : Foreign, New Delhi
To : All Heads of Mission

MOST IMMEDIATE

No. 25624 – Sav. May 7, 1979

Heads of Mission from Foreign Secretary

Pakistan has launched a propaganda campaign in many countries particularly Muslim ones, to defend its stand regarding the recent disclosures of its clandestine efforts to acquire nuclear weapons capability through the enriched uranium method. While denying that its own nuclear programme has any non peaceful dimension, Pakistan is also apparently seeking to focus on India’s nuclear explosion and capability and our refusal to subject our nuclear facilities to international safeguards. They are also stressing their oft-repeated proposal for declaring South Asia as a nuclear weapon free zone and/or a joint Indo-Pakistan declaration along with other regional states to this effect. ZIA had again mooted this in his reply of March 3 to our Prime Minister’s letter of February 8 expressing concern at reports of Pakistan’s efforts to acquire nuclear weapons capability.

Pakistan’s claim to accept safeguards against presence and acquisitions of nuclear capability in contrast to our “unreasonableness” is devious and should be exposed and counter attacked.

Following points may be stressed in your conversations:

1. India has unilaterally made a firm and public commitment not to manufacture nuclear weapons even though China has a well known nuclear weapons capability. If Pakistan is serious about her protestations she should make a similar public declaration unilaterally without trying to obfuscate the issue.

2. It is well recognized by all interested powers that our nuclear programmes are geared entirely for peaceful purposes and unlike Pakistan all our nuclear projects have economic utility. Pakistan’s Kahuta uranium enrichment plant had no immediate economic utility. It is geared to produce weapon grade uranium (Pakistan’s only operational nuclear plant uses natural uranium).
3. Our commitment to the objective of non proliferation is not new and should be stressed. We have sought to emphasise that in our view all efforts should be non discriminatory and apply to both horizontal and vertical proliferation.

4. As far as the idea of nuclear free zone in South Asia is concerned, South Asia is already an area free from nuclear weapons. PM has repeatedly urged that the aim should be to turn the whole world into a nuclear free zone. UNGA at its special session in 1978 had declared that all nuclear free zones in parts of the world should be on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at amongst the states of the region concerned. This does not apply in South Asia.

5. Despite China’s nuclear weapon capability India has not deflected from its peaceful commitment. If South Asia is an artificially restricted area for any agreed restraint, nuclear free Asia or Pacific Area – as was once proposed by China – would be more appropriate area if such a proposal is to be realistically pressed.

6. BHUTTO in his testament had mentioned that he had started and intensified the Pak nuclear programme. He referred to an Islamic bomb like the Hindu, Christian and Zionist bomb. It looks to be Pakistan national effort whatever indirect financial support may have been received. ZIA has clearly continued this policy. Recent disclosures about attempts of Pakistan to acquire uranium enriching capability by clandestine imports of equipment from several West European countries belie their protestations about their nuclear programme being for peaceful purposes only. That this kind of purchases could go on, also speaks of how similar equipment and in the past even fissionable material has been acquired and diverted despite NPT and London Club controls.

7. Pakistan’s efforts to acquire nuclear weapons capability are totally out of proportion to its resources and requirements and irrelevant to its problems. This has been clearly accepted by the Americans as well as evidenced by their recent decision on 6 April to cut off economic aid to Pakistan.

8. Pakistan’s apprehensions about threat from India are not justified. The thrust of our policy has been to create climate of mutual confidence and trust and to convince Pakistan that we want their stability and strength. Pakistan’s problem is politico-economic and internal and not any imagined threat from India.

Please keep us informed of your efforts in this regard and the attitude of the country of your accreditation on this matter.
The US Ambassador, Mr. Goheen, called on FM yesterday. He said he had been instructed to take up two pints with the Foreign Minister.

2. The first point was related to the US anxiety with regard to Pakistan’s nuclear development. Both the Secretary of State and the President of the United States were extremely worried about this subject which had been discussed during Foreign Minister’s visit to Washington recently. He had come to enquire whether we had given any thought as to how Pakistan’s efforts towards building up a capacity for nuclear explosions and nuclear weaponry subsequently could be contained. He had no programme to offer and wished to know what our thinking was.

3. FM said in reply that a joint declaration with Pakistan was not possible as this would lead to a demand for inspection of India’s nuclear facilities and Indian public opinion would never accept this. Unfortunately, Pakistan’s general attitude towards India had not changed. Not merely was this true of their position on the nuclear question, but their general approach to India was not encouraging. He felt that despite India’s good neighbourly policy and efforts to normalize relations, Pakistan did not seem to have finally decided to live in peace with India. Nor do they seem to have accepted that India has no expansionist designs. Against whom does Pakistan want nuclear bomb? Did they require it for prestige purposes? If this were so, they could not be prevented. Indian public opinion felt very strongly that Pakistan’s nuclear programme must not be used to pressurize India.

4. Mr. Goheen said that he agreed with FM that there had not been any radical change in Pakistan’s attitude towards India. Neither the President nor the US Administration had any desire to pressurize India and had made this point very clear in Washington. They were, however, very concerned as to what would happen if Pakistan was able to go ahead. This would open up the door for Israel and South Africa on whom the US Government had exercised considerable pressure against going the nuclear-weapons way. Was it not possible for India and Pakistan to put together their unilateral declaration against building nuclear weapons?

5. The Foreign Minister said that he wished the situation in Pakistan would settle down. The invitation to the Pakistan President to visit India to discuss various problems still stood, but even without this, Pakistan could show some signs. India had made various offers with regard to increasing trade on terms advantageous to Pakistan, but the latter continued to be reluctant. (The US Ambassador commented that the Indian economy was so strong that the Pakistanis feared that it could overwhelm them). FM said that Pakistan could decide what they would want to purchase from India. They maintain that trade could take place only with the public sector in Pakistan and the private sector would be debarred. It was understandable for a socialist's country to take such a stand. The real reason for the Pakistanis to come together. (Sic) This was their great fear. This attitude of hostility made it extremely difficult to deal with them and to do anything about the nuclear question.

6. The US Ambassador said that according to their Ambassador in Islamabad, there was a great demand for Indian goods at competitive prices and Pakistanis were afraid that too much would be imported from India and consequently pose a danger to Pakistan's manufacturers. He agreed that Pakistan's attitude made matters difficult.

7. In reply to Foreign Minister's question regarding Agha Shahi's visit to Washington recently, the American Ambassador said that Secretary of State Vance had tried to discuss the nuclear question with Shahi who maintained that Pakistan was carrying out only (non) military research and had no intention of making a bomb. Vance had pointed out that evidence available to the United States did not support such a thesis and he made it clear that while he sympathized with Pakistan's fears regarding the situation on its borders and would like to support Pakistan, the extent of such support would be limited. The discussions ended in a statement. It was partly because of this reason that he had been asked to come and talk to us to see if any Indian initiative was possible. Was there any chance if China could be brought in, to curb Pakistan's nuclear activities and persuade it to be more friendly towards India? He added that FM must have talked about Pakistan during his visit to Peking.

8. FM replied that Pakistan's nuclear programme was not discussed during his visit to Peking, but it was his impression that China was not encouraging Pakistan. Shah Nawaz from Pakistan might be visiting India fairly soon, possibly after PM's European tour since the Foreign Secretary would be accompanying PM. The US Ambassador said that we could try and bind Pakistan not to have any kind of explosion if India signed an agreement against development of nuclear explosives. That would be going in the direction that Pakistan has been seeking. India and the US have means of surveillance to check whether Pakistan would be living up to its pledges. He recognized India's difficulties in this regard, but they were getting desperate about the situation. He said that India had opposed the idea of a nuclear free zone for South Asia partly because China would not be included in it. Would it help if China were brought in and agreed that they would not introduce nuclear weapons into the South Asia nuclear free zone?

9. The Foreign Minister replied that this would be a two tier arrangement where China was a nuclear-weapons power. While China had said that they would not be the first to use nuclear weapons, they were free to go ahead with the development of such weapons. There would have to be an international agreement against the use of nuclear weapons anywhere. Such proposals had been made, but it was doubtful if nuclear weapon countries would be prepared to agree to this. The US, for example, had rejected such proposals.

10. The US Ambassador said that they could not accept such a proposal because of their interest in Western Europe which was under the Soviet threat. They would be prepared to accept such a proposal for any area outside of Europe. In reply to FM, he said that they felt that the Pakistanis were still two to three years from having nuclear explosion. He would like to keep in touch with us on this subject. The Foreign Minister concluded by saying that something had to be done to stop a nuclear arms race. India had, however, to contend with its public opinion which felt that India would be discriminated against. If any tightening had to be done, it should not be at Tarapur, but in other areas from which Pakistan had clandestinely obtained nuclear equipment and expertise. The US Ambassador said that the United States had done everything that it possibly could to close holes in other countries as well as in the United States.

11. The second point which the US Ambassador raised was with regard to MONEX. He said that there had been long and detailed negotiations which had now been concluded and a draft agreement had been settled. The Experiment had already been delayed and the first plane should have started work a few days ago. Every day that went past meant less of valuable data and they were eager to start as soon as possible. Allegations that US planes were based in Diego Garcia were totally incorrect. They were greatly troubled at the possibility of further delays. He understood that this matter was to be considered by the Cabinet that evening. FM replied that they were equally anxious to get the Experiment started and hoped that the Cabinet would approve the proposal.

Sd/- U.S. Bajpai,
Secretary (West)
16.5.79
1840.  Letter from the Ambassador of the Netherlands to Secretary (West) in the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

New Delhi, May 17, 1979.

No. 4406 New Delhi, May 17th, 1979

Dear Mr. Bajpai,

With reference to the interesting conversation we had on 26th April last or i.e. nuclear energy matters, I have the honour to send you herewith an unofficial translation of parliamentary questions, submitted to the Ministers concerned and the answers of the Netherlands Government, dated May 3rd, 1979, on Pakistan and the ultracentrifuge project.

I hope that the answers will clarify the position of my Government in this matter.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Leopold
Ambassador of the Netherlands

Mr. U.S. Bajpai
Secretary (West)
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

**************

PAKISTAN AND THE ULTRA-CENTRIFUGEPROCEDE, PARLIAMENTARY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Hereunder are following the questions put forward by the Second Chamber members Jansen and Waltmans about the above mentioned subject together with the answers of the Minister of Economic Affairs, also in the name of the Minister of Foreign Affairs given on May 3rd 1979.

1. When did the West European intelligence services discover that the Government of Pakistan is secretly engaged in building a factory for the enrichment of uranium in order to be capable of producing atomic weapons? When were you informed about this? Which steps have you taken since then?

2. Can reasonably be assumed that, in view of the close ties between Pakistan and Libya, atomic weapons can in this way come within reach of Libya?
3. Are there indications that also other countries, which did not sign the non-proliferation treaty, are developing similar activities?

4. Is it known to you that it is presumed that Pakistan obtained the knowledge of the uranium enrichment technology directly from URENCO Nederland?

5. Is it true that Pakistan is obtaining materials and equipment needed to build an uranium enrichment plant from different private firms in the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany?

6. Is it known to you that so called invertors are included in this equipment, which are ordered in the United Kingdom under the pretext that these are meant for a textile factory whereas the invertors of the type ordered are completely unusual to that end?

7. How do you supervise the contacts between URENCO NEDERLAND and third countries concerning exchange of know how? How do you explain that the indicated exchange of know how with Pakistan could occur?

8. Will you investigate whether at URANIT (FRG) and URENCO LTD (UK) sufficient procedures are ascertained to prevent exchange of know how, unwanted from a proliferation point of view?

9. Are you willing to approach your colleagues in the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic to prevent as yet as far as possible the export of sensitive material to Pakistan?

EXPLANATION

See “ZDF MAGAZINE” of March 28th and “DE VOLSKRANT” of April 9th 1979.

ANSWERS:

1, 5, 6, and 9

At the end of the month of October 1978 the Government’s attention was drawn to the attempts from the side of Pakistan to acquire materials and equipment abroad, probably meant for a Pakistani project for uranium enrichment. This relates particularly to the invertors mentioned in question 6. The British Government has now made the obtainment of a license a condition for the export of such invertors. Also in the Federal Republic of Germany a license is required to export invertors which can be used for uranium enrichment. The Dutch firms which could supply such invertors or frequency transformers are for safety’s sake sent a written warning that for the possible export of those a license is needed under the ministerial order on the export of strategic goods. Also the attention was drawn to the nuclear energy act and the ministerial order on secrecy nuclear energy act based there upon.
2. Indications confirming these speculations are not at our disposal.

3. According to information obtained from different sources among the non N.P.T. countries – not taking into account France and the People’s Republic of China – only South-Africa has at its disposal an uranium enrichment capacity, which is not subject to the IAEA safeguards.

4. It is not true that Pakistan got information about uranium enrichment technology directly from URENCO NEDERLAND. It is possible that rumours in this connection started because in the years 1972 – 1975 a Pakistani was engaged as metallurgist at one of the Dutch companies supplying UCN (Ultra Centrifuge Nederland). By further investigation it became known that the know how which could have been obtained thereby covers only a trivial part of the ultracentrifuge technology.

7&8.

URENCO (NL) is not entitled to maintain contacts with third countries with regard to exchange of know how. The same applies to URENCO (UK) and of course to UCN, BNFL and URANIT, while it will also apply to URENCO LTD which therefore needs approval in advance from the Joint Committee. Up till now such exchange of knowledge has not taken place.

◆◆◆◆◆
Letter from Ambassador in Islamabad K. S. Bajpai to Foreign Secretary J.S. Mehta.

Islamabad, July 1, 1979.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

The persistent – indeed, proliferating – rumours about Pakistan’s nuclear explosion plans have been given a fresh spurt by the coincidentally simultaneous publication of the magazine of the UAE Ambassador in London, “Eight Days” and the assaults on the French diplomats and the BBC correspondent here, who were supposed to be snooping too persistently in the area where the new Pakistani nuclear facility for enriching Uranium is supposed to be coming up. I am sending separately an account of the attack on the French and Agha Shahi’s comments on the “Eight Days” article. It is commonly supposed here that the officials responsible for the security of this new facility – i.e. one of the Intelligence Agencies – deliberately decided to administer these sharp warnings to those foreigners who were too inquisitive about the nuclear programme. It would have been simple enough to declare the area out of bounds and not resort to such extreme and crude methods, but, as Etemadi used to say, Pakistan’s five rupee Intelligence Wallahs can ruin any relations by the way they behave. The French Ambassador (whose right arm is still visibly bruised all over, which he tells me is nothing compared to the state of his own back or generally of his concussed First Secretary) has no doubt whatsoever that the Pakistani “Security” men wanted to teach a lesson, did not realize the Ambassador himself was in the car and fled when his repeated cries of me France Sefir (I am French Ambassador) penetrated their minds. He – and everyone else here – takes it as a confirmation that Kahuta is indeed the site where Pakistan is putting up its new plant, and further evidence to this effect was inadvertently provided by Finance Minister Ghulam Ishaq: at his June 29th Press Conference to explain the budget. He was asked by the BBC man whether the funds allocated for atomic development (Rs. 478 million) were for the new plant at Kahuta, and in his reply he blurted out “You should know, you have been snooping around our new site there”. He hastily covered up by saying he didn’t know where it was, but the obvious – perhaps too obvious – conclusions are universal here.

2. More important than this question of where the new installations are coming up is the growing certainty that Pakistan is going ahead regardless of the costs either in money or in relations with other countries. The senior-most Americans here are convinced that despite their almost desperate need for a dialogue with Americans about new defence arrangements following the changes in Afghanistan (and Iran), the Pakistanis have committed themselves to defying Washington on this issue. The Americans reciprocate – perhaps one should say stimulate – Pakistan’s eagerness for a dialogue, and they expect continued strong pressure from their President on the nuclear issue as a precondition, but they do not think either this or any foreseeable successor regime here will yield, and several even thoughtful officials are beginning to think in terms of “how to live” with a Pakistan whose nuclear programme will, they feel, not only give it a weapons capability but compel us to go in for it too.

3. The main programme is still believed to be a matter of about 3 years, but of course rumours abound of some sort of device being put together in order to boost Zia’s prestige before November 17. A fairly respected Lahore leader who sees Zia regularly claims that, when he asked whether Pakistan was making the necessary “fuel”, Zia told him recently “we are not presently making it but we have got hold of it.” The decision here rests with people of such limited and selfish capabilities that any act of irresponsibility is possible.

Yours sincerely

K.S. Bajpai

Shri J.S. Mehta,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.
1842. Media Briefing by Pakistan’s Foreign Affairs Advisor Agha Shahi on reports of Pakistan’s nuclear research programme.

The Foreign Affairs Adviser, Mr. Agha Shahi, has described as “false and baseless” Western Press reports that Pakistan’s nuclear research programme is tuned to the making of an atomic “Islamic bomb”.

Briefing journalists in Islamabad, Mr. Agha Shahi, specially referred to an article which appeared in the new London Weekly “Eight Day Middle East International” on the idea of an “Islamic Bomb”, and said the article was tendentious.

The article stated that Pakistan reacted to the Indian nuclear explosion of May 1974 by embarking of a crash programme to acquire nuclear weapons capability. Fact of the matter was that Pakistan reacted by undertaking a campaign to intensify in international forums its efforts to strengthen its security against threat of nuclear attack or blackmail, through nuclear guarantees to non nuclear states by nuclear weapon or would be nuclear weapon powers. To this end, the former Foreign Minister visited Washington and London and Foreign Secretary went to Peking. Later in 1974, Pakistan proposed to the United Nations General Assembly establishment of a nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia. This proposal entailed the total renunciation of nuclear weapons by countries of South Asia and international inspection of their nuclear facilities and a corresponding obligation on the part of nuclear weapon powers not to threaten countries of zone with nuclear weapons.

Allegation of Libyan or Arab money being received by Pakistan to manufacture “Islamic Bomb” was an utter falsehood. Pakistan was not in any financial collaboration with any other country and was pursuing its peaceful nuclear programme on the basis of self-reliance.

Article made the reckless charge that Pakistan was producing a hydrogen bomb. Even a few moments sober reflection should convince an informed person that this would be impossible for Pakistan. Even the super powers had to spend years on research and development to master this technology: Pakistan was only a developing country.

Allegation that hydrogen bomb was being fabricated at Nilore and implicating Arab countries was pure imagination. No work on fusion technology was being conducted at PINSTECH (Pakistan Institute of Nuclear Sciences and Technology). There was a small research reactor there which was being operated under IAEA safeguards since 1963 and under its regular inspection.
No Pakistani had ever worked at Almelo Plant, nor had access to it. This had been confirmed by URENCO itself.

No banned item of equipment had been purchased by Pakistan in foreign countries. This had been confirmed by several West European Governments after enquiries at the request of the United States.

The report that a site near Multan or, according to Tass, in Chitral had been chosen for a nuclear blast was utterly false as also the statement that explosion was scheduled to be carried out in Autumn this year. Mr. Agha Shahi stated a fear psychosis was being whipped up by those suffering from a crusades syndrome. “Islamic Bomb” was a bogey and a figment of imagination.

The Adviser said that we could not but take a very serious view of the tendentious article published in Eight Days Magazine. It has been noted that the Journal was owned by the Ambassador of the United Arab Emirates to U.K. The UAE is a country friendly to Pakistan and, therefore, it was shocking that a publication owned by the Ambassador should lend itself to a smear campaign against Pakistan to bring about its political isolation at behest of circles which were openly hostile.

Mr. Shahi reiterated Pakistan's commitment to peaceful uses of nuclear energy and unassailable right of all states for equal access to peaceful nuclear technology. Massive and malicious propaganda campaign was aimed to tarnish Pakistan's image as a peace loving country, to depict it as villain and transgressor and thereby to stop it from exercising a sovereign right. Why was it that not a word was being said or printed about other countries which were carrying out far more advanced nuclear research?

In case of Pakistan certain quarters and news media had gone to the extent of inciting aggression against Pakistan by suggesting that pre-emptive attacks could eliminate its nuclear facilities within 14 minutes. Such statements were instigatory and irresponsible and would fail to achieve their criminal purpose.

Replying to a question from the BBC correspondent regarding the supply of enriched uranium to PINSTECH, PAEC Chairman said that the small research reactor there was operating under IAEA safeguards and that its fuel supply was being maintained through the IAEA.

The correspondent then asked about the nature and purpose of the Special Works Organisation. The Adviser replied that it was unfair and misconceived to put tendentious questions of this nature. Would he put such questions in regard to nuclear research and development being carried on by any other government or even the British Government? The correspondent replied that he had been allowed to enter the nuclear plant at Kindscale. The Adviser asked if he had been given access to the other nuclear installations in the U.K. concerned with R&D. We could no more let him inspect our nuclear facilities than our POF Ordnance factories at Wah.

The correspondent admitted that journalists had considerable freedom and access to information in Pakistan and that the purpose of this question was to “arrive at the truth” in order to dispel the confusion that had been created. The Adviser replied that we had nothing to hide and would gladly throw open our research facilities as long as this could be ensured on a non discriminatory basis. It was unfair and discriminatory to single out Pakistan and to put it under pressure to throw open its research centres: why was it that such demands were not being made on South Africa and Israel? Why was no interest being shown in the hijacking of a consignment of uranium some years ago? Why were the findings of investigation being suppressed? Why was no notice being taken of the unsafeguarded reprocessing of plutonium in Israel and the method of enrichment of uranium perfected by South Africa? On the other hand, Pakistan which had neither the technology to manufacture a nuclear weapon nor had conducted a nuclear test was suspect, not taken at its word and subjected to pressure. The BBC Correspondent evaded answers by saying that as they were in Pakistan, their interest was in finding out what exactly Pakistan was doing. The Adviser replied that there were limits to their right to gather news. It could not be extended to allowing them to create tension between Pakistan and the Soviet Union as in the case of reports filed on Afghan refugee camps, or to claiming the right of access to nuclear research and development. You may not approve of our peaceful nuclear programme but you cannot proceed from there to make wild accusations against us, the Advisor concluded.

Nothing secret

Another foreign correspondent interjected that the clandestine and devious manner in which hardware was purchased in the West and the inappropriateness of certain of these items for Pakistan’s development needs suggested ulterior motives. The Chairman of PAEC replied that all countries were obliged to make purchases abroad for their research programmes and that we had done the same in a very straightforward manner. There was nothing clandestine or ominous about our purchases. Orders had been placed with foreign firms for items on which there were no local export restrictions. The correspondent asked whether when placing the order for inverters, it was stated they were required for the textile industry? The Chairman PAEC rejoined that the inverters were accepted by everyone as multi purpose and with a wide range of application.
Replying to another question from the same correspondent the Chairman PAEC said that the supersonic wind tunnel was a basic facility required for a wide range of research. Such tunnels were commonly found in U.S. universities. They were a basic research tool, like a computer.

1843. Letter from the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the US House of Representatives to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance regarding recent nuclear developments in Pakistan.

Washington, August 1, 1979.

Dear Mr. Secretary:

We know you share with us deep concern about recent nuclear developments in Pakistan and write to express our hope that you will continue to give energetic and high level attention to the task of finding a constructive solution to this problem. Certainly all possible options need to be considered.

The acquisition of a weapons capability by Pakistan would transform regional rivals into nuclear armed adversaries creating not deterrence, but rather the very real prospect of nuclear war. The acquisition of nuclear arms by Pakistan would, moreover, profoundly destabilize not only the subcontinent, but quite possible the Persian gulf and the middle east as well. Such an event would also do grave damage to our broader non proliferation program by demoralizing those groups and nations who are at this very moment consulting on ways to restructure and improve existing mechanisms of international nuclear control.

We had hoped that the State Department’s proposal for a nuclear free zone might provide a basis for resolving this complex situation. At the moment however, the proposal’s prospects do not appear to be good, as India’s attitude remains discouragingly negative. While this approach deserves continued attention, prudence demands that we (do) not place under reliance on it.

We recognize, too, that some sanctions have been applied by the US and that still sterner measures may prove necessary in the end, if only to demonstrate to other would be proliferators that the political costs of going nuclear are high, and likely to go higher. Had rigorous collective action been taken after the Indian Explosion of 1974, we might not now be facing the situation we face today. Sanctions alone, however, are unlikely to provide a sure or immediate solution to the current problem.
There remains, of course, the possibility of trying to understand and more effectively treat Pakistan’s underlying security concerns. Pakistan, a country that has been closely allied to the US for over three decades, now faces: new threats to its territorial integrity, the possibility of externally supported secessionist activity in both Baluchistan and the northwest province frontier, the growing and armed involvement of the Soviet Union in neighbouring Afghanistan, the disappearance of security assurances once provided by the Shah, the disintegration of the CENTO and the detonation of a nuclear device by India, which also is now purchasing from Europe a highly sophisticated force of attack aircraft.

As long as the Pakistanis feel they cannot credibly defend their borders and population by conventional means, nor rely on others to provide some supplementary assurances against external aggression, their desire for nuclear arms is unlikely to abate. This suggests then the importance of trying, through an imaginative, serious, and measured combination of diplomacy and security support, to bolster Pakistan’s sense of self security in the face of new and compelling dangers.

It would be unwarranted for critics to characterize any such initiative as a stark trade of conventional arms in return for a freeze on nuclear weapons work — although as to the relative danger of the two we cannot see how there can be much room for doubt. We would hope that US assistance and acts of reassurance would instead be seen in their broadest sense as a modulated response to disturbing new regional developments and a part of an effort by the US to provide a basis for self-confidence, so that friendly and threatened states are not driven to the unwise embrace of nuclear arms out of pure desperation and fear.

In the long run, we would hope the US might give diplomatic attention to the resolution of existing border disputes between not only Pakistan and India, but India and China as well. This would remove an important source of tension and instability and would enable each of these Governments to begin to apply resources, energy and attention to more immediate and more fundamental concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Celment Zablocki
Jonathan Bingham
William S. Broomfield
Paul Findlay
Lee H. Hamilton

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Record of the discussion between Indian External Affairs Minister Shyamnandan Mishra and Foreign Affairs Advisor of the President of Pakistan.

Havana, September 1, 1979.

Agha Shahi began by saying that he would be glad to arrange for FM to call on the President of Pakistan immediately on the latter’s arrival in Havana. He said that he himself was very happy to meet the FM because this gave him an opportunity to reiterate Pakistan’s desire to continue the process of normalization of relations between the two countries. This process which had started during Mrs. Gandhi’s and Bhutto’s time, had continued in spite of changes in the two countries and he hoped that the new Government of India would carry the process forward. He said that the Foreign Secretary had personally witnessed the continuity in the policy of the two countries over these years of changes in Governments. Foreign Minister said that it was indeed his government’s intention to continue the process of improvement of relations even during the next few months it was expected to be in office. India greatly valued Pakistan’s desire to cooperate in the process.

Agha Shahi said that Pakistan was very concerned about the propaganda unleashed in the West particularly in the United States about Pakistan’s nuclear programme based on an erroneous assessment of Pakistan’s nuclear intentions. He was particularly concerned that it seemed that India was on the threshold of changing its nuclear policy because of this propaganda. While India was free as a sovereign nation to pursue any policy of her choice, he was keen that a change in India’s policy should not be based on wrong information. He said that he would deny with all the emphasis at his command that Pakistan had any intention to manufacture nuclear weapon. Pakistan had modest facilities for enrichment of uranium with the use of light water reactors. It was nowhere near explosion capability. He said that President Zia had recently written to Prime Minister Charan Singh giving his categorical assurance that Pakistan’s nuclear programme was entirely geared to peaceful purposes. Pakistan was ready to discuss its nuclear policy with India to demonstrate its peaceful intentions. He expressed the hope that India would not change its nuclear policy though it was known that India had the capability to undertake nuclear explosions.

Agha Shahi went on to say that Pakistan felt outraged by the recent statement of Senator Percy that Calcutta would soon be within the range of Pakistani nuclear attack. No one could have made a more irresponsible statement. He had known that officials of the US Embassy in India had met Indian Members of Parliament and others to express surprise at the general apathy towards reports about Pakistan’s nuclear programme. He said that the American efforts were aimed at demonstrating to the American public that President Carter was putting pressure on potential nuclear powers to abjure acquisition of nuclear weapons. He said that India should not take US apprehensions seriously.
NUCLEAR

FM said that the Prime Minister’s independence day speech should be seen in perspective. What the Prime Minister said was that if Pakistan manufactured the Bomb there would be serious repercussions and perhaps India might have to review its policy. A review of India’s policy was clearly linked with Pakistan’s plans. India had received persistent reports for some time that Pakistan had embarked on a nuclear weapons programme. Such reports had caused public reactions in India and no government would be able to ignore these reactions. FM said that he was glad that President Zia had written to Prime Minister Charan Singh reiterating that Pakistan had no intention to manufacture nuclear weapons. This letter would be of value because of possible review of India’s nuclear policy was contingent upon Pakistan manufacturing the Bomb. If Pakistan did not go in for nuclear weapons there was no need for India to review its policy.

Agha Shahi said that he felt reassured by what FM stated. He said that at a moment’s notice Pakistan was willing to enter into consultations with India on the nuclear question. Speaking of American propaganda, Agha Shahi said that CIA had got hold of an official of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Agency who had become disgruntled because of bureaucratic intrigue. HaHa

Having obtained bits and pieces of information from this officials, US Government made a demand on Pakistan to stop its nuclear programme and threatened to cut off aid. Despite Pakistan’s assurances USA passed on their impressions to several western countries and appealed to them not to sell any nuclear equipment to Pakistan. The return of a Pakistani scientist from the Netherlands for personal reasons was misinterpreted, but an enquiry conducted by Dutch Government proved beyond doubt that the scientist had no access to any classified scientific information. None of the equipment Pakistan had bought abroad was embargoed.

Foreign Minister said that it was possible that Pakistan had become the object of false propaganda but it was a matter of satisfaction to India, and it should be so to Pakistan too, that there was no such apprehension about India’s nuclear programme being directed towards nuclear weapons. World opinion had, we believe, accepted India’s assurances about her peaceful intentions.

Agha Shahi said that the propaganda that Pakistan was making an Islamic Bomb was totally false. US should have known that Pakistan would never be able to catch up with Israel’s nuclear technology even if it wanted to manufacture an Islamic Bomb to help Arabs fight Israel. Would United States remain idle if there was a nuclear threat to Israel? Pakistan was also being accused of receiving money from Libya. In fact Gaddafi had once said that he was willing to cooperate with Pakistan in the nuclear field but this offer was rejected because Pakistan felt that Gaddafi’s revolutionary policy was not conducive to such cooperation. At the present state Pakistan’s nuclear programme cost only around 15 to 20 million dollars a year and this expenditure could very well be afforded by Pakistan. There was no question of Pakistan embarking on a “nuclear jihad” against Christians and Jews. He said that a section of the US press had even spoken about para-military action to sabotage Pakistan’s nuclear establishments.

Foreign Minister said that at one time India had undertaken a PNE but Prime Minister Desai decided to give up even the kind of research. The present Prime Minister’s statement on a possible change in policy referred to a hypothetical situation when Pakistan embarked on a nuclear programme but if Pakistan had no such intentions India would also not have to review its policy.

Changing the subject, Agha Shahi said that about 170,000 refugees had entered Pakistan from Afghanistan. Pakistan was unable to seal the border and it would not be right to push the refugees back. In the circumstances, it was not possible for Pakistan to effectively prevent some of the refugees re-entering Afghanistan to carry out raids. Afghanistan was in a false position as Pakhtoons, whose cause Afghanistan was supposed to be championing, had turned against them. Afghanistan was now trying to implicate Pakistan for their troubles, and USSR was trying to intimidate Pakistan. Agha Shahi said that he had to postpone his visit to Afghanistan because it was clear that Afghanistan’s intention was to humiliate him by asking him to hold discussions with their Agriculture Minister. A militant Marxist Afghanistan presented its own problems in the area.

FM remarked that the refugees would have proved a heavy burden on Pakistan and asked whether any international assistance was forthcoming. Agha Shahi said that the Islamic group had given some assistance and the UN Agency for Refugees had also promised some help.

Foreign Secretary stated that India was scrupulously correct in dealing with the present situation. India treated Pak-Afghan problems as purely bilateral and would not seek to take advantage of the situation. Agha Shahi said that Pakistan was convinced of this and was appreciative of India’s stand.
1845. Press Release issued by the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi offering reciprocal inspection of nuclear facilities.

New Delhi, December 15, 1979.

Pakistan has renewed its offer to India to enter into a bilateral, multilateral or international agreement to ensure that the nuclear facilities and installations in the two countries are used strictly and solely for peaceful purposes.

The offer was made by Mr. Munir Ahmed Khan, Chairman of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission, at the 23rd regular session of the General Conference of International Atomic Energy Agency which concluded in New Delhi.

Mr. Munir said Pakistan attaches the highest importance to the prevention of further spread of nuclear weapons and its concern about proliferation is no less than that of any other country. He said some of the countries which talk most loudly against imaginary threats of proliferation have been strangely silent over the real proliferation which has occurred over the last few years and is taking place even today. He said deliberate propaganda is being carried out against some to divert attention from those who may actually be making the nuclear weapons.

He said the failure of nuclear weapon states to achieve concrete progress towards reduction and eventual elimination of nuclear weapons was a very serious problem. He said Pakistan noted with increasing dismay the continuing testing and development of nuclear weapons and further vertical proliferation. Their stand about non-proliferation was further compromised by lack of action on their part to enforce nuclear discipline on these states with which they had special relationship.

Mr. Munir informed the conference that Pakistan was committed to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and it had repeatedly declared at the various international forums that its programme was for peaceful purposes only.

Mr. Munir said Pakistan believed that the security of developing countries large or small was not enhanced by nuclear weapons as they took away vital resources from the immediate task of development. Pakistan constantly advocated the strengthening of the non-proliferation not only on a global basis but also in Pakistan’s own area.

He said Pakistan had declared in unequivocal terms that it would not acquire or develop nuclear weapons. The same assurance had been communicated bilaterally by the President of Pakistan to the two Prime Ministers of India. However, he said since India despite its nuclear explosion had repeatedly stated at the highest Governmental level that it too did not wish to make nuclear weapons, it would only be logical to formalize these unilateral declarations in a binding joint declaration to make South Asia a nuclear weapon free zone and bar the development, manufacture and entry of nuclear weapons in this region.

The PAEC Chairman said the denuclearization of South Asia would be a positive step towards strengthening the non proliferation in the world and it would also be welcomed by the people of Pakistan as it would give them some hope for the future and help remove the constant fear of mutual destruction.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1846. Statement of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying reports that Pakistan proposed to carry out a nuclear test.

Islamabad, April 2, 1980.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs today categorically refuted the false report by India’s Institute of Defence Studies and Analysis regarding Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

The attention of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs had been drawn to a REUTERS report datelined New Delhi March 30th which states that according to a study by India’s Institute of Defence Studies and Analysis, Pakistan may carry out its first atomic bomb test by the end of this year or early in 1991. It goes on to state that India would have to decide what her role should be in view of, what the report claims to be, the grave atomic threat emerging in South Asia.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, also categorically declared that Pakistan does not possess the capability of carrying out a nuclear explosion in the near future.

The publication of such a report at this time may well be an attempt to lend justification to India’s own nuclear intentions and a prelude to a second Indian nuclear explosion. In this context, it is pertinent to recall that Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi, in a recent statement has stated that her Government would carry out nuclear tests if they were necessary in the national interest.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs totally rejects the aspersions cast on Pakistan’s peaceful nuclear programme. Pakistan has time and again stated that its nuclear programme is peaceful in nature and that it does not intend to acquire or manufacture nuclear weapons. In proof of its peaceful intentions and its dedication to non proliferation, Pakistan has proposed to India a number of possible courses of action to keep the region free from nuclear weapons. These proposals include:

1. The declaration of South Asia as a nuclear weapons free zone including the renunciation of nuclear weapons.
2. A joint declaration by South Asian countries to renounce nuclear weapons.
3. Reciprocal inspection of each other’s nuclear installations.
4. Placing of all nuclear facilities under non discriminatory safeguards.
5. Signing of NPT by both countries.

None of these concrete measures has been acceptable to India which possesses a complete nuclear fuel cycle free of international safeguards which enables it to acquire nuclear weapons.

The Government of Pakistan is prepared to enter into serious discussions with India either bilaterally or in a multilateral forum like the U.N. to ensure that this region is kept free of nuclear weapons.

These concrete proposals made by Pakistan and rejected by India are pointers to the direction from which the ‘grave atomic threat’ to this region can arise.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1847. Comments by the Official Spokesperson of Pakistan Foreign Ministry on the statement of External Affairs Minister PV Narasimha Rao on Pakistan acquiring nuclear weapons.

Islamabad, August 1, 1980.

A Foreign Office spokesman reiterated at Islamabad on August 2 that Pakistan’s modest nuclear research programme was devoted exclusively to peaceful purposes and Pakistan had no intention of developing nuclear energy for military use.

The spokesman was commenting on a statement made by the Indian Minister for External Affairs in the Rajya Sabha on August 1 in which he was reported to have said that the acquisition of nuclear weapons capability by Pakistan would only increase the tension in the region.

Mr. Rao was quoted as having said that Pakistan had assured that its nuclear programme was directed towards peaceful purposes and he hoped that Pakistan would abide by its assurance.
The spokesman said that Pakistan’s repeated assurances regarding the peaceful nature of its nuclear research programme should not be doubted. Pakistan’s bona fides were established by the following proposals which it had put forward:

(a) India may agree to the establishment of a nuclear weapon free zone in South Asia.

(b) India and Pakistan should both accept international inspection of all their nuclear facilities or if this was not acceptable India and Pakistan should reciprocally inspect each other’s nuclear facilities.

(c) Pakistan and India should sign the non proliferation treaty.

(d) In the meantime, Pakistan and India should jointly, with other countries of South Asia, declare their renunciation of the manufacture or acquisition of nuclear weapons.

Voicing concern over recent official statements in the Indian Parliament that India reserved the right to carry out further nuclear tests, the spokesman expressed the hope that there would be a positive response to Pakistan’s constructive proposals so that South Asia could be kept free of the danger of nuclear weapons.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1848. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs describing as mischievous a report that India in collusion with Israel intended to attack Pakistan’s nuclear facilities.

New Delhi, July 29, 1981.

The attention of the Government of India has been drawn to a mischievous and false report datelined ‘London’ alleging that India has been in consultation with Israel and was planning an attack on Pakistan’s nuclear facilities. The report alleged that the Indian military establishment was in touch with their Israeli counterpart to get the details of their attack on Iraqi nuclear facilities.

The spokesman recalled his statement of June 9 wherein Government of India expressed grave concern and deep indignation about the destruction of Iraqi nuclear facilities by Israeli planes. India condemned Israeli action as ‘stark adventurism and a blatant act of intervention and aggression’.

In this context the report emanating from London is patently ridiculous. It is even more surprising and regrettable that this type of story should have been given wide publicity in Pakistani newspapers over the last two days. There is no truth whatsoever in this dispatch from London. It is deplorable that the Pakistani press has chosen to give currency to such a fantastic and tendentious and utterly baseless report. One cannot but seriously question the motivation behind it.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1849.
SECRET

Record of discussions between Eugene Rostow, Director of the Arms Control & Disarmament Agency at the US State Department and Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs Eric Gonsalves on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

Secretary (East) began by saying that the Tarapur question was now the only bilateral problem between India and the US. We had been very patient about it, and had refrained from going too fast and rocking the boat. Now we were in some ways at the end of the road. While we hoped to solve this question next month with as little fall out as possible our public opinion had also to be kept in mind, and the fact that our Parliament would insist on maintaining Indian independence and on not compromising the national honour. The extent to which we valued the bilateral relationship with the US was clear from the fact that we preferred to sort this out once and for all rather than strain our overall ties because of an annual tug of war over fuel supplies.

2. Mr. Rostow hoped that the announcement of the termination would include as strong assurances as possible from India about peaceful uses; this would help the Administration internally. They appreciated what the Indian side had told them about the test site. They hoped that there would not be any explosions for the next one or two years, which would help. Secretary (East) replied that we had no immediate plans for an explosion, but we necessarily had to reserve the right to have one if we felt it necessary for peaceful purposes. He also wished to point out that we did feel that there was a certain favouritism displayed by the US towards Pakistan on this question. We in India were amazed at the way in which India was being held up as a horrible example, and that the full rigour of the law was applied to India, while the laws were bent to help Pakistan so that they could continue with their nuclear programme that had obvious non peaceful implications. We in India, on the contrary, had said that we did not believe in deterrence, and that even if Pakistan manufactured nuclear weapons, we would examine the issue in its own light.

3. Rostow said that the Pakistan nuclear energy programme was being watched very carefully in the US, especially by the Senate. There was no question of any favouritism. The US, while it pressed Pakistan very hard on this question, agreed with Pakistan that they needed nuclear energy. Pakistan, because of the Afghan situation, was a frontline state, and had very real security problems. Assisting them with these was in the interest of the West as a whole, not to speak of the residual US obligations under the Manila pact. If the US – Pak relationship developed well, the US would have greater chances of influencing their nuclear energy programme. While the US valued its good relations with India and would try its best to avoid giving an impression of discrimination against India, the very real issues concerning Pakistan could not be neglected. The US was, however, very concerned with limiting nuclear proliferation in general.

4. Secretary (East) replied that all the evidence we had shown, (there was) no slackening in either the enrichment or reprocessing aspects of the Pakistan nuclear programme despite US strictures against these. We were also dismayed at the Administration’s desire to go ahead with the aid programme for Pakistan even if they had a nuclear explosion, though this had been changed by Congress. Pakistan could have an explosion today if they wanted to; they did not do it only because they wished to tie up and obtain the US aid package. There was also the question of Pakistani violations of the Karachi reactor safeguards. All this weakened the credibility of Pakistani assurances to the US about their programme being peaceful; they did not carry much weight with us.

5. Rostow said that in the US assessment somewhat more time was available before a Pakistani explosion, which would give the US some time to struggle further to bring matters under control, though they could not promise success. They felt that an Indian explosion within that period would push the delicate situation in the wrong direction.

6. Secretary (East) replied that while India realized that it had to alleviate Pakistan’s insecurity to the extent possible, and had indeed tried to do so, the Pakistani response was totally inadequate. Despite difficulties at home, we had sent our Foreign Minister to Pakistan, and 48 hours after his visit, the F-16 purchase was announced, which had created problems for us at home. The difficulty was partly due to the Pakistan psyche, and we could not do much about that. But it was also due to what others did to tackle Pakistan’s insecurity; given US and Chinese backing, Pakistan tended to cock a snook at us, and adopted a very negative attitude to our proposals for sub-continental cooperation. The US too had a responsibility to get Pakistan to understand that in the long run their security in depth could not be assured by US weapons or Chinese weapons, but lay in the sub continent.

7. Rostow referred to a recent lunch he had with the Secretary General of the Pakistan Foreign Office, Shah Nawaz, at which, he said, Shah Nawaz had mentioned three or four Pakistani proposals to India on a South Asian Nuclear Weapons Free Zone, on a non aggression agreement, etc, and had complained about their being rebuffed by India. Secretary (East) pointed out that the Pakistani Proposals on the NWFZ in South Asia were part of an attempt to establish that the only problem was an Indo Pakistan one. This was not true. India was never given any credit for refraining from exercising its nuclear option despite hostile relations with China and a Chinese nuclear weapons programme. This last made it impossible for India to be a part of a NWFZ before our relations with our neighbours were settled. Such a zone should include the whole continent and not just three countries. Any such attempt was a gimmick, and meant to take advantage of the feelings of the non proliferation lobby here and abroad. As for a non aggression agreement, we had first proposed it in draft form in 1949 and several times thereafter. As recently as this summer, General Zia had said that it would not be worth the paper it was written on. Now a casual addition of this idea to a major Pakistani statement on the US aid package was being falsely presented as a formal new proposal that we had rejected. The Simla Agreement was a comprehensive one that had worked fairly well. There was no reason why India and Pakistan could not come closer. But Pakistan would have to make a difficult transition and come to have much greater faith than they now had in India as a factor of their own security.

8. India had given no guarantees to its other neighbours either, but we lived with them on the basis that we were not likely to have problems with each other. India was now in a situation that somewhat resembled that of the US in the 1870’s. In the future, we hoped to move faster than the US has done – while we had started out after partition resembling for example, Palestine, Ireland or Cyprus, we had in 30 years made much greater progress in solving our problems than they had, and were confident of being able to continue to move forward.

Sd/- C. Cowsik
First Secretary (Pol)
19-11-1981
1850. Extract from the interview of Pakistan President Zia ul Haq with the Christian Science Monitor relating to Pakistan’s nuclear programme. (as published in Pakistan Times, on December 2, 1982)

Islamabad, December 2, 1982.

Q: On the nuclear programme, you have said, on the record, that Pakistan is enriching uranium. According to Western experts, the enrichment process is highly expensive, too expensive for a limited nuclear power programme. This - combined with your efforts to buy a reprocessing plant, your purchases of “yellow cake” (uranium) from Niger, your attempts to acquire other nuclear weapons technology in Europe – indicates, according to the some experts, that you, in fact, are making the bomb. Is that a correct assumption?

A: No. That is not a correct assumption. We are enriching uranium, yes. We are enriching uranium as a modest, humble programme in order to acquire technology, which can be used later in a nuclear power reactor. It certainly does not enable us to give us weapons grade enriched uranium.

Pakistan is facing a very critical situation with regard to its energy requirements. We have practically reached full capability, except for a little scope in the hydroelectric means of producing electricity. We have not got enough to continue to provide thermal power plants. It costs something like 300-400 million dollars.

We did not have to import ‘yellow cake’ from Niger, because Pakistan itself has uranium.

Now, if you would talk to an expert, and ask him “what are the steps required for a country to have military nuclear capability”, the description that he would give you would indicate very clearly that Pakistan, without the reprocessing plant and having a very modest enrichment plant, does not acquire the capability of making a bomb...

I don’t think Pakistan is that naïve, or that irresponsible a nation that we would have this destroyer on our hands, and would be offering it to Qaddafi or somebody else."

I categorically state to you that Pakistan is not indulging in acquiring any other capability than a capability which can be used for pure and simple peaceful purposes and for meeting our energy requirements.

Q: But I have heard that your uranium enrichment programme falls under the Ministry of Defence rather than under your Atomic Energy Commission.
A: That is wrong. That is totally wrong. The Ministry of Defence has nothing to do with this. It is part and parcel of Pakistan's Atomic Energy Commission...

Yes, like many other countries, you may have some military officers working on the construction of buildings, looking after security aspects, but that does not turn the programme into a defence programme, or a defence oriented programme.

Q: Why then has Pakistan not signed the nuclear non proliferation treaty? Why have you not permitted the International Atomic Energy to inspect the facility at Kahuta (the reported site of Pakistan’s uranium enrichment plant)? And why have you refused to accept international safeguards at the Kahuta site?

A: Purely on the matter of principle, we do not like to be discriminated against. The Kahuta facility is not covered, by international safeguards. It is a facility which has been created by us through beg, borrow and steal. And, therefore, we have no intention of bringing it under any international safeguards, unless similar facilities elsewhere in the world are also brought under control.

There are next door (in India) three reprocessing plants which are under no safeguards. So, all we say is that Pakistan will sign the nuclear non proliferation treaty tomorrow if other countries sign it. I don’t name them, but, as you know, there is more than one country – India, South Africa, and many others – I won’t name them.

Q: If India signed the treaty, would that be enough for Pakistan?

A: For Pakistan, it would be enough. Yes, I would grant you that.
Comment by Pakistan President Zia ul Haq on intelligence reports that India intended to carry out a preemptive strike on Pak nuclear facilities.

Washington (D. C), December 20, 1982.

President Mohammad Zia ul Haq has said that although Pakistan has taken adequate security precautions around its nuclear installations, he considered it unlikely that India would make a preemptive strike on them.

At the same time, Pakistan “naturally has concern” about an Indian military attack on its nuclear facilities, particularly in the light of Israel’s strike in Iraq.

“But under the present environment, I don’t think there is a necessity of India to be that hostile”, Gen Zia added.

Gen. Zia, was responding to a question about the reported contingency plan prepared by Indian military leaders to strike in case Pakistan appeared on the verge of acquiring a nuclear weapons capability.

[The four – column, front paged report in Washington Post on December 20, 1982 had quoted US intelligence sources to say that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had decided against carrying out an attack, without foreclosing the option.]

Gen Zia said: “We are not in competition with India. We have not developed, are not capable of developing and have no intention of developing an atomic bomb.

While Gen Zia acknowledged that “there may be some concern” in India about Pakistan’s nuclear programme, he said that the subject “never came up” when he met Mrs. Gandhi at New Delhi on November 1 last.
Gen Zia further said that he told President Reagan categorically that Pakistan was not attempting to acquire a nuclear capability in military field.

“Pakistan is trying to acquire in a very humble way nuclear technology for peaceful purposes…”

“We have no reprocessing facility whatsoever. Pakistani scientists are experimenting with how to reprocess one ounce of plutonium. As scientists, you cannot deny scientists the right to experiment.”

Gen Zia said Pakistan was building an enrichment facility but described it as “a very humble, modest programme…”

“We have devoted a very meager percentage of our budget to this.”

The Washington Post also quoted Finance Minister Ghulam Ishaq Khan as having said that the Government’s “total expenditure on the nuclear programme” came only to “$50 million to $55 million annually” and that sum included uranium exploration activities and production of radio isotopes for medical and other purposes.

1852. Statement by Minister of External Affairs P.V. Narasimha Rao in the Lok Sabha, on a Calling Attention Notice regarding the situation arising out of the reported nuclear collaboration between Pakistan and China and the reaction of the Government in regard thereto.

New Delhi, March 30, 1984.

Mr. Speaker Sir,

The possibility of Pakistan’s nuclear programme having a non peaceful dimension has naturally been a matter of concern for India. It is in this context that Government noted reports of Sino Pak nuclear collaboration and the recent claim made by a leading nuclear scientist of Pakistan about the ability of the Pakistan nuclear establishment, if required, to produce nuclear weapons. This was denied after the interview was widely publicized.

There have been reports from time to time pointing towards possible Chinese collaboration in Pakistan’s efforts for developing nuclear weapons. In an interview published in August, 1982 in a New York journal “Nucleonics Week”, Mr. James Malone, the then Assistant Secretary of State and Chief Nuclear Negotiator of the US Administration, had stated that China had apparently supplied to Pakistan material other than fuel related items, which he had declined to specify. Mr. Howard Shaeffer, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State in the US Government, in a testimony in early 1983 before the Sub Commission on Asian and Pacific Affairs of the House of Representatives, had confirmed that there was a nuclear relationship between China and Pakistan. Though details of this relationship were not discussed, the Sub Commission received an Intelligence briefing on the subject. Recently Mr. Paul Leventhal, President of the Nuclear Control Institute of Washington, has also testified that China has transferred sensitive nuclear weapons design information to Pakistan. These statements by senior US officials and experts speak for themselves.

Pakistan spokesmen have explained that Pakistan wanted to acquire nuclear technology only for peaceful purposes and that it had no intention of manufacturing nuclear weapons. While there has been no categorical denial by the Chinese Government of different reports about Sino Pak nuclear collaboration, the Chinese Prime Minister, during his visit to the United States in January, 1984 had stated: “we do not engage in nuclear proliferation ourselves, nor do we help other countries develop nuclear weapons”.

Keeping all aspects of the matter in view, we cannot but note with concern reports of contacts between Pakistan and China in the nuclear field. I would however like to assure the House that Government have been keeping a constant watch on all developments having a bearing on India’s security. Government would continue to do so with utmost vigil.
Statement by Pakistan’s Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Zain Noorani in the Senate regarding comments of Indian Prime Minister on Pakistan’s nuclear Programme.

The Government has received the transcript of the Indian Prime Minister’s references to Pakistan at his Press Conference on July 7, 1985.

On the nuclear issue he was asked a number of questions. The point on which the honourable member has moved this adjournment motion arose in the context of a question whether the nuclear issue was discussed between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan. Mr. Gandhi stated: “He (Yaqub Khan) has taken the stand that they are not making a weapon. We pointed out that if they do have a weapon it will change the situation in this region and we would have to react in some manner.”

The honourable member has construed the Indian Prime Minister’s statement as a “threat”, “warning” and “interference in Pakistan’s internal affairs.” Now that the text of Mr. Gandhi’s statement is available, the honourable member may wish to reconsider his interpretation.

The Government of Pakistan has noted Mr. Gandhi’s observations in their totality. It is a matter of satisfaction that Mr. Gandhi reiterated India’s desire for normalization of relations with Pakistan. His assessment of the progress made at the recent meeting of the Pakistan-India Joint Commission was “good”, although he added that India would have liked “some major advances in trade.”

As for the nuclear issue, Mr. Gandhi said that in India’s assessment Pakistan was “fairly close to manufacturing a weapon.” He had made similar statements during his foreign tours in May and June, 1985. The Government of Pakistan has often declared its policy on this subject. As our Foreign Minister reiterated the position during his visit to New Delhi, our programme is entirely peaceful in nature. It aims at meeting our growing energy requirements. We have no intention of producing nuclear weapons. What is more important and what distinguishes our declaration of intent is our willingness to join with India bilaterally or with other non nuclear weapons states on a regional or global basis in a solemn treaty to renounce nuclear weapons.

Unfortunately, in contrast the Government of India has shown no willingness to convert its unilateral declaration into a binding international commitment. The Indian stance not only lacks credibility but could generate suspicion and concern. The fact is that India maintains a large nuclear programme outside international inspection and safeguards. It has accumulated a very substantial quantity of fissile material. It even tested explosion technology in 1974. In order to reduce and remove concern about its nuclear programme, India should be prepared, like Pakistan, to assume solemn obligations, and give fool proof assurances concerning its nuclear programme.

I join the honourable members in expressing concern over the statement made by Prime Minister Gandhi that India would have to “react in some manner.” It could betray an inclination in New Delhi in favour of nuclear weapons and cast doubts on India’s commitment to peaceful use of nuclear energy.

While we do not wish to read into the Indian Prime Minister’s statement more than what he has actually said, we should like the Government of India to note that this issue can be better resolved through a serious and purposeful dialogue than through propagandistic allegations.

To synchronies with Rajiv Gandhi’s unfounded allegations certain foreign media have been orchestrated by some anti-Pakistan lobbies to claim that Pakistan has obtained a trigger mechanism to set off nuclear bombs and has carried out tests for an explosion.

On behalf of the Government of Pakistan, I most categorically deny this fairy tale and assert that Pakistan does not have a nuclear bomb, has never had one, and does not intend to have one.

Ours is a nuclear programme for peaceful purposes and shall always be so.

I would like to tell those who take every opportunity to make untrue allegations against Pakistan, that a falsehood remains a falsehood, no matter how often it is repeated.

◆◆◆◆◆
Interview of Pakistan President Zia ul Haq with Tom Brokaw of N.B.C. on Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

(The interview was conducted for the NBC through satellite.)

Q: President Zia, you deny having a nuclear device and say you don’t intend building one. But there are all the evidences that Pakistan is now capable to have a bomb and they hope that it will have one very soon. What is the situation? Do you have a nuclear bomb?

A: Mr. Tom Brokaw, your question I expected. I can be very categorical. Pakistan has neither the intentions nor the capabilities of having a nuclear bomb. We do not have it, we do not intend to have it.

ON KAHUTA NUCLEAR FACILITY

Q: And yet you have a major nuclear facility at Kahuta that has been designed to enrich uranium which is bomb grade material. A number of knowledgeable persons form other countries believe that you are only enriching that uranium because you want to make a bomb.

A: No sir, this is not correct. In the first case, we haven’t got a very large facility in Kahuta. Our programme is a modest research programme to acquire nuclear technology for peaceful purposes. There are three areas in which we can make full use of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes: for our energy programme, for health purposes, and for agriculture.

ON URANIUM ENRICHMENT.

Q: President Zia, in 1984, Dr. Abdul Qadeer Khan, who heads the Kahuta programme, said that by the grace of God, Pakistan is now one of the few countries in the world that can enrich uranium. You only enrich uranium if you want to build a nuclear weapon. It is not necessary to do that if you want to have peaceful uses of nuclear power.

A: Mr. Tom Brokaw, you know it fairly well, and I think so do the scientists, that there are various grades of enrichment. Pakistan’s capability of enrichment of uranium is of a very low grade, which we want to use for our nuclear power reactor. Now, your next question would automatically be: “Do you have one”? I say, no, we haven’t yet got one but having had a very bad experience with our previous nuclear programme, we have decided that we should now have a foolproof arrangement of self reliance so that if and when Pakistan is able to get a light weight nuclear power reactor, we should be able to provide its fuel by ourselves. That is all there is to it.
President Zia, you have proposed a mutual treaty with India and an inspection programme. Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has said that you have stored enriched uranium somewhere and it could be used for the production of a bomb and, therefore, it would not be subject to inspection that you have offered.

NO ATOM BOMB TUCKED AWAY

A: I do not know if he has said so. But, of course, I have no reason to disbelieve you and what you attribute to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. But I must tell you that I also had a conversation with him when I went to New Delhi to attend the last rites of the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, I offered some mutual guarantees and measures that could generate mutual confidence. At that time, I thought he had responded positively. Now, as I said, I see no reason why I should disbelieve you, but if this is true, then I must say that Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi is under some disillusion, misunderstanding like their famous scientist author, Mr. Subrahmanyam who says in one of his recent articles that who know whether India or Pakistan could have made a bomb by now and must have tucked it away somewhere. I want to assure you and through you I want to assure Mr. Rajiv Gandhi that Pakistan has not tucked away or stored away any bomb. Unless my offer to Mr. Rajiv Gandhi is tested, how can you say that it is only for the sake of saying. The test of the pudding is in eating. Here is my offer, accept it, try it out and then, of course, you will be able to have a critique on it.

ON INSPECTION OF PAK NUCLEAR FACILITIES

Q: Are you going to have an open international inspection of Pakistan’s nuclear facilities, specifically of the Kahuta nuclear processing plant?

A: Yes, Sir we had offered it long ago. But what we object to is the discriminatory attitude or discriminatory application by the International Atomic Energy Agency of full scope safeguards only to Pakistan. It must have a universal application.

WHY PAKISTAN DOES NOT WANT ATOM BOMB

Q: President Zia, why should you not want a nuclear weapon of some kind? After all, you have a Soviet occupation just to your west, an old adversary in India just to your east, and you have the Soviet Union hovering over your country to the north. Had I been in your place, I would have wanted to have a nuclear weapon for defence.

A: Mr. Tom Brokaw, you are right, but in Pakistan we do not think in that manner. In Pakistan, we think more in terms of what is good for the mankind, in terms of Islamic teachings and also in terms of international humane civic sense, if I can call it that. We want nuclear non proliferation to exist and be strengthened. We want that the world should live in peace and we want that humanity should be saved from another disaster. And that is a very strong reason that we are not wanting to have the capability or the intentions of having a bomb.
Q: If you reaffirm your hope and your intentions, why don’t you sign the nuclear non proliferation treaty?

A: We are prepared to sign it tomorrow but not on a discriminatory basis. We want its application to be at least on a regional basis. The projection of the nuclear non proliferation in South Asia, we propose, should be on a regional basis and Pakistan will be the first country to sign.

ON CHARGES OF STEALING NUCLEAR TECHNOLOGY

Q: President Zia, as you know, there are a number of allegations from a variety of sources that Pakistan’s nuclear capacity, whatever it is, is a capacity based on stealing nuclear technology from Netherlands and from Canada. How do you respond to those charges?

A: Negative: Incorrect: based on misunderstanding and a bad Press that Pakistan unfortunately has in the European world: As far as Canada is concerned, we are very greateful to Canada for signing with Pakistan the establishment of a natural uranium heavy water nuclear power plant. This is still running in Karachi. We had gone into the agreement with Canada in 1965. The facility was completed in 1972. In 1976, Canada unilaterally withdrew all assistance. It was Pakistan’s own sense of responsibility which made us unilaterally accept International Atomic Energy Agency’s full scope safeguards on this facility. With regard to the Netherlands, all I can say is that we have the capability of having a centrifugal system of enrichment of uranium on a very modest research scale.

Q: Do you mean that you reserve for yourself the idea that you can have enriched uranium but have no intentions of building a bomb?

A: Never, Sir our enrichment programme is purely and simply for a future light weight enriched uranium reactor, if and when we can have it. We have already floated some tenders and there are one or two very encouraging responses. I hope Pakistan one day can get this and can boost up its productivity which is now hampered because of lack of energy.

ON PAKISTANI INITIATIVES

Q: President Zia, if there was a concrete proposal to make this sub-continent, that is India and Pakistan in your part of the world, a nuclear free zone with international control, will you go along with that?

A: Mr. Tom Brokaw, for your information if I may be allowed to say, Pakistan has taken a number of initiatives in this respect so far. If you believe that the application of nuclear non proliferation in South Asia can be on a regional basis, Pakistan on its own has taken initiatives and offered to India five definite proposals. We have offered that let us sign the nuclear non proliferation treaty together, jointly. If this is not acceptable, let us have bilateral nuclear non proliferation treaty between our two countries. If this is not acceptable, let us have an international inspection team to inspect each and every nuclear facility in each of the two countries. That is, in Pakistan and in India. Pakistan is also the exponent of the idea of having a nuclear free zone in South Asia. We also offered to India that let us jointly renounce the use of nuclear weapons altogether. Five proposals, Mr. Tom Brokaw, that we have made to India. We have not yet received any response. If it is said, as you said a little while ago, Pakistan’s initiatives, Pakistan’s proposals, are only a P.R. effort, why not try them? Give it a try. Accept Asia a real, ideal, nuclear free zone.

ON SINO-US NUCLEAR AGREEMENT

Q: President Zia, the United States and China have signed a new nuclear agreement for peaceful purposes. You have had a good relationship with China. Do you expect you would be able to share this technology as a result of this agreement?

A: No, sir, not at all Pakistan and China have a relationship in many fields, but in the nuclear field we have no cooperation whatsoever. Pakistan’s programme and Pakistan’s efforts so far are totally indigenous and we do not want to get in touch with China for any nuclear assistance, whether it is for peaceful purposes or for any other purposes. We welcome what China has been able to get from the United States of America and we wish China and the United States all the best in forging ahead their relationship which in my opinion will eventually be good for humanity and mankind.

NUCLEAR ALLIANCE WITH LIBYA DENIED

Q: President Zia, what is your comment on reports that Pakistan’s efforts to build a bomb were started by your predecessor, Mr. Bhutto, who said that Pakistan will make a bomb even if it has to eat grass. Was that his goal? Then there is considerable evidence that you have a real alliance with Libya in an effort to build a bomb.

A: Negative, Mr. Tom Brokaw. There is no truth in this. I know it and you must give me the credit for at least that much of knowledge and information on the subject. Pakistan and Libya have no relationship whatsoever in the nuclear field.

Q: And you don’t expect it in the future?

A: None whatsoever. As I said, Pakistan’s programme is totally indigenous and for peaceful purposes.
Q: I offer my personal assurances and will make sure of that. We can give you a tape of our programme and you can check for yourself if you are satisfied.

A: Thank you. I have full regard and respect for you and I trust you. It need not be checked by me. I am fully satisfied. Thank you so much. Come to Pakistan and be my guest if it is not embarrassing, if it is not something unusual.

Brokaw: Thank you very much, sir.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1855. Response of Pakistan’s Minister of State for Foreign Affairs to the Indian Prime Minister’s observation about Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

Islamabad, October 12, 1985.

“Let me once again make it clear that we do not have any such bomb and we have no intention of making one,” Mr. Noorani said while speaking on an adjournment motion in the National Assembly.

He said India had accumulated a substantial stockpile of plutonium. It had already tested the explosion technology in 1974. In June 1985, the Indian Prime Minister had publicly admitted that India could make the nuclear bomb in “months or weeks”.

He said India had kept its options open. This was stated by the Indian Minister of State for External Affairs in August 1985. Any objective observer could see that it was India which posed a real threat to non proliferation in South Asia. However, New Delhi was engaged in a raucous propaganda against Pakistan. hardly a day passed when the Indian Prime Minister did not declaim on the issue.

He said: “One day Mr. Rajiv gives an interview to NEWSWEEK making a false accusation that Pakistan is making a bomb. The next day he repeats the same charge when speaking to Indian Army commanders. Again the next day he warns the Indian Defence College about ‘inadvertent use of the atom bomb by Pakistan’.

Mr. Noorani said no less a person than the President had time and again stated in clear terms that Pakistan’s nuclear programme, modest and experimental as it was, had been designed to meet energy requirements of the country.
He added: “If India is truly committed to exclusive peaceful uses why does it not join Pakistan in renouncing nuclear weapons? India only makes pious proclamations. We are prepared to back up our declarations by assuming solemn obligations in a treaty. We have made concrete and specific proposals to India. Every now and then New Delhi tries to pick holes in our proposals. But has it come forward with any constructive or positive idea of its own? We have not received a single one. And why does it not do so? It is because India does not want to commit itself to an era of peace and tranquility in the region,” he observed.

He noted “that it is also because New Delhi does not want to lose the chance of performing the snake charmer’s dance for the benefit of the international media to hypnotize it into believing that Pakistan is in the wrong, while India hides its own intentions behind a veil of innocence.

“How long does India expect to get away with this sham. I am sure intelligent people all over the world have seen through India’s game and nobody gives credence to these rancorous outbursts from New Delhi,” he added.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Dr. Abdel Qader Khan, father of the ‘Islamic bomb’ said in his first interview with a foreign journalist: ‘America knows it. What the CIA has been saying about our possessing the bomb is correct and so is the speculation of some foreign newspapers’.

In confirming that his country has gained entry to the exclusive world nuclear club that includes the Big Powers, India, Israel and probably South Africa, he declared: “they told us that Pakistan could never produce the bomb and they doubted my capabilities, but they now know we have done it.”

For the first time, he said, these labs are producing highly enriched or weapons grade uranium. We have upgraded it (the uranium) to 90 percent to achieve the desired results, he revealed.

Asked if Pakistan had tested the bomb, he replied: “Is it necessary? America has threatened to cut off all its aid. The testing does not have to be on the ground. It can be done in a laboratory, through a simulator. Planes are often flown after their capability in simulators."

During the hour long interview, Khan made a point of referring to an observation by a former Indian atomic energy chairman that Pakistan lacked the technical ability and manpower to make its own nuclear bomb.

Indeed it was difficult, particularly when America and other Western countries had stopped selling anything which could be used in manufacturing the bomb; he said. ‘Embargoes were put on such small things as magnetic and maraging steel (a very tough steel used for centrifuges), but we purchased whatever we wanted before Western countries got wind of it.

Khan said that Pakistan had taken only seven years to assemble the bomb, whereas an Indian team which carried out a nuclear test in 1974 took 12 years. The Indians have carried on with their nuclear weapons research, he claimed and they now have a much bigger bomb. They had not tested it on the ground, he added, but they have tested its other capabilities.

He poured scorn on India’s claim that it had carried out only a peaceful test in 1974. The word peaceful associated with the nuclear programme is humbug. There is no peaceful bomb.

Once you know how to run reactors, how to produce plutonium and reprocess it — all of which Pakistan has mastered as well— it becomes a rather easy task to produce nuclear weapons.

Khan spoke with obvious pride of the Kahuta plant, almost as if it were his third child, and described it as a mechanical miracle. It took three years to complete, he said, and became fully operational at the beginning of 1979. The procedure involved a sequence of ideas, decision making, feasibility report, basic research construction of a table model, of a pilot plant, and then of the facility.

The technology at Kahuta has been mastered only by highly industrialized countries, and Khan said Pakistan deserved credit for accomplishing a Herculean task that required expertise in metallurgy, engineering electronics and nuclear physics.

We took a very bold step and started with all the steps simultaneously. While preliminary work was being done at Rawalpindi and procurement was being done for the most essential and sophisticated equipment and materials, we were manufacturing the first prototypes.

Scientists at Kahuta started by enriching uranium to between 3.0 and 3.5 per cent – the ‘safe’ level for commercial purposes. Now, at 90 per cent, the uranium is weapon grade.

When I reminded Khan that a Dutch court had sentenced him for trying to gather secret information -- a sentence later overturned on appeal -- he claimed he never had a chance of presenting his side of the case to the public prosecutor who tried him in absentia.

The Dutch Minister of Justice told the country’s Parliament last year that fresh charges would not be filed against Khan. But he will not be welcome if he should return to Holland.

I never received any answer to my letters, Khan said, but was prosecuted without my knowledge. The information I had asked for (from former colleagues) was ordinary technical information. I submitted certificates from six world renowned professors, from Holland, Belgium, Britain and Germany, that the information requested by me was not classified.

At the same time in an extraordinarily frank aside, Khan made clear that Pakistan would be prepared to beg, borrow whatever was required for its nuclear programme.

Having said that, I can tell you that the Western world never talks about its own hectic and persistent efforts to sell everything to us. When we bought inverters from Emerson, England, we found them to be less efficient than we wanted them to be. We asked Emerson to improve upon the parameters and suggested the method.

At that period, we received many letters and telexes, and people chased us with figures and details of equipment they had sold to Almelo, Capenhurst, etc. They literally begged us to buy their equipment.

Khan is aware of India’s interest in Kahuta. A military attaches at the Indian embassy in Islamabad tried unsuccessfully to recruit two of our boys, he claims. India knows what price it would have to pay for attacking Kahuta. In any case the plant is well protected and we have not put our eggs in one basket.

Nobody can undo Pakistan or take us for granted. We are here to stay and let it be clear that we shall use the bomb if our existence is threatened.

Khan’s fervent hope is that Pakistan and India will hold back from using nuclear weapons against each other. I personally think that the only way to stop nuclear warfare between us is to come to an agreement. Whatever arrangement India suggests, we are willing to accept, provided it is equally applicable to both.

Islamabad, March 1, 1987

“My attention has been drawn to an article in some newspapers by an Indian journalist, Mr. Kuldip Nayyar, containing an alleged interview with me. The article is mischievous, false and concocted and is an attempt to malign Pakistan.

“I never gave an interview to Mr. Kuldip Nayyar and never used the words attributed to me.

“To put the record straight, a Pakistani friend of mine living in Islamabad came to my house some 1-1/2 months ago to deliver an invitation for his marriage ceremony. He was accompanied by a person unknown to me and who was introduced as Mr. Nayyar. Since my friend had come personally to deliver the invitation, as a matter of courtesy I asked him to have a cup of tea with me. While having tea Mr. Nayyar, who I then learnt was Mr. Kuldip Nayyar of India, asked casually my views about Pakistan’s nuclear programme. I told him about Pakistan’s policy of its readiness to sign Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty simultaneously with India and to renounce the manufacture and use of nuclear weapons. In response to a question I also told him that Pakistan’s policy on this subject had been reflected, in unambiguous terms, more than once by our Prime Minister, Mr. Mohammad Khan Junejo.

“As stated earlier, this coincidental meeting with Mr. Kuldip Nayyar was without prior arrangement. The disclosure of this informal meeting and discussions by Mr. Kuldip Nayyar is a breach of trust and is professionally un-ethical. I regret Mushahid Khan, Editor of the Muslim paper to say that he has misused my hospitality and has, unfortunately, indulged in unfair and bad journalism.

“I want to reiterate that our modest nuclear research and development programme is solely for peaceful purposes and is geared towards meeting our energy requirements for a fast growing industry”.

◆◆◆◆◆
1858.

Note recorded by Joint Secretary and Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs after his meeting with Journalist Kuldip Nayyar, who interviewed Pakistani Nuclear Scientist A. Q. Khan.

New Delhi, March 2, 1987

Ministry of External Affairs
(JS-XP)’s Office

As approved by FS, I spoke to Shri Kuldip Nayar yesterday, with regard to the article he had written in the ‘Observer’ (London) about his interview with AQ Khan in Islamabad. Nayar told me that the interview with AQ Khan took place on January 28 or January 29 at the latter’s residence. Nayar informed me, in the strictest confidence that the interview had been arranged for him by Mushahid Hussain, Editor of the Muslim.

(I personally know that Mushahid Hussain has close links with the Pakistan’s military establishment. He is a strong advocate of Pakistan going nuclear. While he professes a certain degree of independence of views, especially with regard to US–Pakistan relations, he has close personal relations both with President Zia and with President Zia’s former Information Secretary, Lt. Gen. Mujibur Rahman).

2. Kuldip Nayar told me that while he had given his article on his meeting with AQ Khan to Shyam Bhatia sometime ago, the Observer wanted to check out certain details before going to print. I might mention that AQ Khan has invariably taken an extremely militant and anti Indian positions in his press interviews. In press interviews which he has given over the last two years or so, he has invariably suggested that, should the nuclear establishment in Pakistan be asked to produce nuclear weapons for the defence of the country, then they would not fail to live up to the expectations of the nation. It is interesting that Kuldip Nayar should have been provided the opportunity to interview AQ Khan at the height of the Indo Pak tensions on the border and just prior to the visit of Foreign Secretary Sattar to India. The Pakistan perhaps did not expect that there be such a substantial delay in printing the interview. As Nayar was not allowed to record the interview, it is quite clear that the interview was given in a manner which make it “deniable”. I have spoken to both our High Commissioner in London and our Ambassador in Washington. I have advised our Mission in London to immediately air freight 100 copies of the newspaper to Washington. Ambassador Kaul mentioned me that he would arrange to have the copies of the newspaper distributed expeditiously to members of the Congress, media, etc.

(G. Parthasarathy)
Joint Secretary (XP)
2 – 3- 1987

Foreign Secretary

[arrangement for distribution of newspaper]

1859.

SECRET
Letter from Embassy of India in Pakistan to Ministry of External Affairs.

T.C. A. Rangachari
Counsellor (P & E)
Embassy of India
482- F. Sector G.6/4
Islamabad

No.ISL/110/1/87 3 March 1987

My dear Satish,

We had telexed to you Kuldip Nayyar's story published here in THE NATION on 1 March, on his interview with A.Q. Khan: you would have also seen the London OBSERVER story. He had accompanied a Pakistani journalist (since confirmed to be Mushahid Hussain, editor of THE MUSLIM to A.Q. Khan's house. (Kuldip Nayar had com to Pakistan at that time to attend Mushahid Hussain's marriage).

Not unexpectedly A.Q. Khan has issued a vehement denial stating that he never gave an interview to Kuldip Nayyar though he confirms the meeting as reported by Kuldip Nayyar. He accuses Kuldip Nayyar of breach of trust, lack of professional ethics, misuse of hospitality and of unfair and bad journalism; no interview was fixed in advance and, he says, he learnt of Kuldip Nayyar's identity only during the meeting. His denial has been followed up by a statement put out by the Foreign Office spokesman (Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar). This too, is a direct attack on Kuldip Nayyar accusing him of indulging in “irresponsible mischief mongering” and “motivated journalism”; it also links the timing of its publication with the debate on the 1987 -- 93 US aid package to Pakistan now before US Congress.
2. A.Q. Khan is known to be a braggart and a publicity seeker. He would like to be regarded as the biggest benefactor of Pakistan after Quaid-e-Azam. He has given several interviews in the past boasting of his achievement in putting Pakistan on the nuclear map and in enabling Pakistan acquire the capability of making the bomb. The most recent was his interview published in HURMAT weekly of 7 January (our letter of even number dated 27 January refers). The Observer story brings out A.Q. Khan’s personal involvement with and pride in Kahuta. What is new in Kuldip Nayar’s report, therefore, is the open admission that Pakistan has actually made the bomb.

3. Ambassador spoke to Mushahid who confirmed the interview; he also said that A.Q. Khan did not permit the conversation to be tape recorded. THE FINANCIAL TIMES also telephonically checked with Mushahid Hussain and he backed the Observer story saying that the meeting lasted one hour and also that such meetings cannot take place without prior notification, at which point, the telephone line reportedly went dead. In an editorial this morning, obviously written by Mushahid, Muslim says that the contents of the interview are not surprising and tend to confirm what people in Pakistan had generally felt; the national interest has been served by the interview and the Government need not feel unnecessarily defensive or peevish over A.Q. Khan’s “candid comments on the nature and progress of our nuclear programme”.

4. This view is obviously not shared by the Government. Speaking to MNAs of the ruling PNL, Prime Minister Junejo said that the interview was against the interests of the country and assured them that necessary action will be taken. The Government owned NPT papers have sprung to the defence of the father of the Pakistani nuclear programme accusing India, (not merely) Kuldip Nayar of engineering a fabricated and fake story to malign Pakistan.

5. Not everyone is, however, buying the official explanation so readily. THE FRONTIER POST, for example finds the official explanation about ‘a chance meeting’ unbelievable recalling the fate that befell BBC correspondent, Chris Sherwell, who sought an interviews with A.Q. Khan as also the treatment meted out to the French Ambassador and First Secretary when they got too near Kahuta some years ago. It also refers to the policy of ‘ambiguity’ maintained by Pakistan which has helped US put pressure on India to sign the NPT.

6. We have surely not heard the last on this subject. A number of Adjournment Motions are being tabled in the National Assembly. The press is most agitated that a foreign journalist, and “that too an Indian” as the Delhi based correspondent of Time, Rose Munroe rather infelicitously put it in his message to a local correspondent, has walked away with world headlines. They will have much to say.

7. An interesting twist to all this is the description of Kahuta plant as a bluff by former Chairman of PAEC, P.H. Usmani. In an interview to THE MUSLIM on 24 February, he has acknowledged that capability to produce enriched uranium is no small achievement but to say that the Kahuta plant has provided Pakistan with a nuclear option and it was only a matter of decision whether or not to make the bomb, is like playing poker. While President Zia has repeatedly stated that Pakistan is not making a bomb at Kahuta, it would be more appropriate, according to Usmani, to say that Pakistan is not capable of making a bomb at Kahuta. Some other reports have also quoted similar remarks reportedly made by Dr. Raja Ramanna in the recent past.

Yours sincerely
T.C.A. Rangachari

P. S.

4 March 1987

A.Q. Khan has now put out a clarification retracting his earlier statement that meeting with Kuldip Nayar was without prior arrangement and acknowledged that he had been informed earlier about his identity and he agreed to see him. Mushahid has, in turn, stated that the statements attributed to A.Q. Khan are mis-quoted and irresponsible. This is very different from what he has said in THE MUSLIM editorial of 3 March. Obviously pressure has been exerted on both sides: on A.Q. Khan by Mushahid since his earlier statement made it appear that Mushahid was party to something clandestine and sinister; and on Mushahid by the Government to help salvage some credibility for A.Q. Khan. In fact, the clarification is being seen as confirmation. And Mushahid has been forced to fall on the sword: his ‘resignation’ has been accepted with great regret” by the management of THE MUSLIM.

2. I have just been told by a Pakistani journalist friend that A.Q. Khan openly referred to his conversation with Kuldip Nayyar at a Press club function in Islamabad last month at which my friend was also present. He says he remonstrated with him that he should be more discreet.

3. The Prime Minister reportedly summoned the IB Chief and also Interior Ministry officials and has questioned them about this incident. As a consequence, Mushahid has been put on the Exit Control List. Publisher of THE MUSLIM Murtaza Pooya was summoned by the Minister for Information and Broadcasting. Government has stopped its advertisements to THE MUSLIM with immediate effect; there is also talk of some other threats against the paper.

4. So far, each episode of this serial has been more interesting than the previous one. What will the morrow bring?

T.C.A. Rangachari
1860.  Note from Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan in Singapore to diplomatic missions in Singapore.

Singapore, March 5, 1987.

The Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Diplomatic, Consular and Trade Missions in Singapore and has the honour to draw their attention to a news item appearing in the Straits Times of March 2 on page 26, on the development of the atomic bomb by Pakistan.

The Embassy wishes to state that the news story of the Sunday Observer London is a malicious propaganda which has been going on against Pakistan for sometime. Pakistan Government has reaffirmed a number of times and would like to do so again that the nuclear research in the country is solely aimed at development of fuel grade uranium for power generation.

The Embassy wishes to quote herewith the following statement issued by Dr. Abdul Qadir Khan, the scientist who has been quoted in the above referred story published in the Sunday Observer London of 1st March:

“I understand that the Sunday Observer, London is publishing an article in which it is attributing to me a false and concocted statement. Furthermore, some of my remarks have been taken out of context to mislead the world into believing that Pakistan possesses a nuclear weapon and that we have enriched uranium to 90 per cent or more.

As I have so often before stated, Pakistan’s enrichment research is solely aimed at the development of fuel-grade uranium for our future power reactors.

The Government of Pakistan has made it abundantly clear that it has no desire to produce nuclear weapons. It follows that our modest research and development enrichment programme is geared only to meeting our growing energy requirements”.

The Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Diplomatic, Consular and Trade Missions in Singapore the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Diplomatic, Consular And Trade Missions in Singapore.

◆◆◆◆◆
The following is the text of the interview:

Question: Kahuta remains surrounded by deep mystery. It does not have much to show for all the years it has been there. Would you like to comment?

Answer: All sensitive or high technology projects all over the world are kept away from the approach of every Tom, Dick and Harry. Kahuta is no exception. You can’t go to Harwell, Karlsruhe, Los Alamos or Bhabha Atomic Centre. Our government has so often spoken about the work being done at Kahuta. In addition to the difficult task accomplished in the field of uranium enrichment, we are now producing some sophisticated weapon systems for our armed force. I believe we have shown more than enough to the nation to worry about our image or credibility.

Question: How much of the Pakistani bomb is fiction and how much of it is reality? Don’t you think, as time passes, it is becoming something of a dream than a matter of substance?

Answer: It is all fiction and a creation of the minds of the anti-Pakistan lobby. Our governments all along have been solemnly declaring that our nuclear programme is peaceful. I have not been asked to do otherwise. We are a poor country and very short of electric power. All our efforts in this field are aimed at producing nuclear power in the country.

Q: Besides bomb making what, are the uses of the kind of enriched uranium you are making at Kahuta particularly when we don’t have any light water reactors?

A: The 3.3 - 5 per cent uranium we are making at Kahuta is mainly meant for making fuel for light water reactors (LWR). When we started Kahuta, we were hopeful that by the time we start producing enriched uranium, we will be having our own LWR. This unfortunately has remained a dream. If we had a LWR, we would be saved from so much insinuation and doubts about our peaceful nuclear programme. We have been let down in this case.

Q: Can you build LWRs? If you can why don’t you go ahead with that?

A: Technically speaking, yes. As an engineer I do not see any problems in it. Why we don’t go ahead, well we can do only those things which the government asks us to do. We can’t initiate any projects on our own.

Q: What are the chances of collaboration between Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission (PAEC) and Kahuta Research Laboratory (KRL) now renamed Dr. Abdul Qadeer Khan Research Laboratory (A.Q. KRL). Why can’t the manufacture of LWRs be undertaken as a joint PAEC-KRL project?

A: Under the present circumstances, this is not possible. We have different norms and approaches to work. If I accept a job or if I am asked to do a certain project, I make sure it will be successfully completed within a definite time and for this you should be free to handle the job on your own. In this country working with others means delays, obstructions, failures, etc. We are not yet mature enough to work honestly and as colleagues.

Q: the existence of a certain amount of bitterness between PAEC and KRL is becoming increasingly clear. Would you like to say something on that?

A: If the politicians can have difference of opinions, why not scientists and engineers. I am not bitter about anybody. I have been entrusted with a very important, difficult and sophisticated job and by the grace of Allah my colleagues and I have done our job very well. The government is satisfied and happy and we are proud of our achievements.

Q: Don’t you think any unseemly debate between two or more scientists is best avoided?

A: I guess so, but you and other Pakistan friends know the reasons behind it. I do not want to go into details.

Q: How long might it take you to present the finished product under development in Kahuta? In case you can’t in the foreseeable future, it might seriously compromise your credibility as a scientist-engineer.

A: I do not know what you mean by the finished product. As far as we are concerned we have been producing the finished product, viz. 3.3 - 5 per cent enriched uranium for many years and the government and the whole nation know about it. We have established our credibility on a very solid foundation and on truth, and we are not worried about the few mischievous or concocted articles or gossips by selfish journalists or PROs. You should judge our credibility from what the whole world, friends and foes alike, say about us. Pick up any foreign journal or magazine and see what respect Kahuta commands at the international level.

Q: Would you like to comment on the reported downgrading of Kahuta and its potential for weapon-grade enriched uranium?

A: This is a highly mischievous and false propaganda. Kahuta is meant for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. We are working exactly the same way and with the same tempo as before. The government is keen to get rid of load shedding and Kahuta will play the pivotal role in it.
Q: Do you find the references made to you as James Bond, Dr. No, Dr. Strangelove, etc., flattering or embarrassing?

A: I would say it is amusing to see how infertile brains can work and concoct things and stories. It does not bother me what the Western Press says about me. They dislike our God, they dislike our Prophet, they dislike our national leaders, and no wonder they dislike anybody who tries to put his country on an independent and self-reliant path. As long as I am doing a good job for my country I will ignore all such insinuations and concentrate on my work.

Q: Would you like to say something about your achievements in fields other than nuclear enrichment?

A: Yes, in addition to the Herculean and impossible task of establishing a uranium enrichment plant, we have been helping our armed forces with some modern weapon systems. We have been supplying them with surface to air, anti-aircraft shoulder-fired missiles, handheld laser range finders (the first and the only one approved by the Pakistan Army and in use with it), special anti-tank munitions, multi-barrel rocket launchers, etc. We are also developing sophisticated anti-tank missiles and some other weapon systems. We are also making all the sophisticated equipment and instruments for our facilities at Kahuta, thus keeping it totally self-reliant and safe from political pressures or blackmail.

KULDIP NAYYAR’S INTERVIEW FALSE AND CONCOCTED

Q: Would you like to throw some light on the circumstances of your interview with Kuldip Nayyar? You would agree it caused much embarrassment to the government at a time when the US Administration was about to consider the question of military assistance to Pakistan.

A: This is now an old story but I want to reiterate that it was never an interview. That was the biggest mischief perpetrated by a Hindu and was a sham on journalism. You know Mushahid Hussain was a dynamic editor of the daily MUSLIM. He wrote good editorials and commanded a lot of respect. Whenever we ran into each other, it was pleasant experience. One day he phoned me and said that a good friend of his, Mr. Nayyar or Kuldip Nayyar – I honestly don’t remember and it does not matter anyway—from India was coming to attend his marriage and would be in Islamabad the next day. He was one of my admirers and would love to see me. I asked Mushahid Husain to check with me the next day at about 5 p.m. as I had visitors and had arranged a dinner for them at 7 p.m. Mushahid phoned the next day and I agreed to receive him and his friend at about 6.30. They came the next day. It was almost dark. I guided the two gentlemen into the house. My wife prepared some tea and brought some biscuits. We talked on general topics and Kuldip Nayyar said that he was from Sialkot and was in India and I was from Bhopal and was in Pakistan. I told him that was history and we were happy that we had a land of our own. Then he said that Pakistan should not indulge in nuclear weapons programme as India could make hundreds of them and Pakistan could never match that capacity. I responded by saying that India could use only 3 or 4 bombs against us and we did not need more than 4 and 5 against them either and as such the numbers did not play any role. Moreover, we should concentrate on improving the conditions of our poor people. They left at about 7 and I went straight to the nearby Guest House to attend the dinner. Kuldip Nayyar went back and after more than a month published that piece of yellow journalism. If I had said we had an atomic bomb, Mushahid Husain would not sit on it for one month and let Nayyar get away with the prize. No newspaper in the world wanted to buy this fictitious story but another Hindu Shyam Bhatia Sunday Observer came to Nayyar’s help and managed to get the consent of Mr. Trelford, Editor of Observer, to publish it. You already know about the stories of illicit relations of Observer’s Editor with an Indian call girl, Pamela Borders. All these things led to the publication of a concocted and false interview. The respectable and noted American nuclear expert Mr. Leonard Spector has recently exposed this yellow journalism in his new book and shown how Nayyar used my Dawn article and other publications to concoct and fabricate that article. It caused some inconvenience to our government but in the end the truth prevailed and the Indians failed to sabotage the US aid to us.

Q: How would you substantiate your claim that Pakistan is 10 years ahead of India in the nuclear enrichment technology?

A: I meant what I said. You know all the nuclear experts of the world have described enrichment technology as the most difficult of the whole nuclear fuel cycle. Only eight countries in the world can enrich uranium and out of them only five can enrich with the most modern ultra-centrifuge method being used at Kahuta. I know for sure that the Indians have been trying very hard for the last 15 years to master this technology and have not yet succeeded. That’s why I say that we are way ahead of India in this important and sensitive field.
1862. Statement of Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo.

The Pakistani Prime Minister, Muhammad Khan Junejo, has offered to allow India to inspect the controversial Kahuta uranium enrichment plant near Rawalpindi in exchange for a similar inspection by Pakistan of an Indian nuclear installation.

“We will go to the extent India does,” Mr. Junejo told Kyodo News Service in an exclusive interview yesterday, when asked if Pakistan would agree to the inspection of the Kahuta plant where India suspects it is building nuclear weapons.

He said the question of nuclear non proliferation had been discussed on different occasions by Pakistan and India with Pakistan offering to open all its nuclear facilities “without reservation,” if India allows the same.

We will do what India does,” he said, recalling a set of six proposals made by Pakistan to contain proliferation. These proposals include simultaneous signing of the Nuclear Non proliferation Treaty and declaring South Asia a nuclear weapons free zone.

Mr. Junejo gave the 20 minutes interview to Kyodo before his official visit to Japan from July 12 to 16.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

A Journalist on July 24, asked the Indian Official spokesman about India’s reaction to Pakistan Prime Minister Mr. Mohammad Khan Junejo’s suggestion for mutual inspection of nuclear plants in India and Pakistan. the official spokesman stated that there was no question of equaling nuclear programme of the two countries. He said that while no one had said that the Indian nuclear programme was weapon-oriented, there was no secret about Pakistani intentions. No Indian had been arrested for stealing nuclear components for manufacturing weapons.
Pakistan Institute of Strategic Studies (grateful if you can ignore the resultant acronym!) organized a Conference on Nuclear Nonproliferation in South Asia, at Islamabad on 1-2 September, 1987. Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan gave the inaugural address and former Foreign Minister Agha Shahi made the concluding remarks.

2. Participants were: 6 from Pakistan, 6 from SAARC countries including two from India (Bhutan sent an observer, who did not speak), 5 from Western countries, one from China, none from USSR, and rather low caliber officials of the IAEA, Vienna and the UN’s, Department of Disarmament in New York.

3. The texts of prepared papers, discussed at the Seminar are separately being sent to the Disarmament Division of the Ministry, as also to the IDSA.

4. This Seminar was quite obviously part of Pakistan current P.R. campaign of explaining away the suspicions and apprehensions generated by its pursuit of nuclear weapons options through clandestine means. Pakistani participants were obviously hand picked, and with great care. Almost all of them echoed the official line. (List of Pakistani participants is attached) (not attached here).

5. India was the prime target of all criticism, which itself was packaged as policies, entreaties, appeals, and proposals and suggestions.

6. Sahebzada Yakub Khan made this absolutely clear in his inaugural address, by stating that the recommendations of the conference would have a salutary influence on the policies of the states within and outside the region. He categorized the states which have not acceded to the NPT mainly as those blame worthy and those not so blame worthy. The hesitation of some (i.e. India) arose, in his perception, “not so much from the treaty’s inequality” as from “specific ambitions or threat perceptions. To such states nuclear weapons were a status symbol which would enable domination of other regional states. He spoke of three possible nuclear scenarios; a nuclear monopoly; a nuclear confrontation; and de-nuclearisation. One finds little that was new in his statement. He repeated the oft stated Pakistan “proposals” for India and Pakistan to simultaneously accede to NPT etc. He offered to consider enlarging the scope of the proposed non aggression treaty, so as to include some aspects of bilateral non proliferation arrangements.

7. The presentation by the Pakistani participants and the question answer sessions made it patent that it was a conference to persuade India to sign NPT or Accept the Blames for Fuelling a Regional Nuclear Arms Race!

8. There was broad criticism of the terms and concepts of the NPT itself as discriminatory and unequal, a treaty that had permitted unbridled vertical proliferation, notably by the two super powers. There was occasional demand lament by the Pakistani participants that Pakistan’s assurances were not being taken at their face value, while Indian assurances were being accepted. Not everyone, however, accepted that Pakistan’s nuclear programme was devoted solely to peaceful purposes. Whether it was a direct thrust by Mushahid Hussain, or hints and innuendos by Gen. Ezaz Azim and Sajjad Hyder, there was significant and obvious accent on Pakistan’s undoubted capacity to make nuclear weapons. Against this background, Agha Shahi’s remark that the Pakistani programme was not aimed at peaceful nuclear explosion, and that it did not go counter to non proliferation, sounded hollow.

9. None of the participants found the courage to say openly that Pakistan lacks the kernel of political independence; and that this must necessarily inhibit her decision-making in this as in other fields. Each speaker glossed over the fact that Pakistan is susceptible to US pressure, and that this is not the case with India.

10. It was left to the Indian participants – M.K. Rasgotra and Bhabani Sengupta – to put this across plainly and without too much varnish. Both of them made the point that Pakistan’s current problems were due to the ambiguity, in which it had chosen to wrap up its nuclear programme. This caused problems between USA and Pakistan, which both of them, for slightly varying reasons wished to shift on to India, were this possible. Indian nuclear programme was more than four decades old; it was autonomous; it was independently conceived and developed; and, most importantly Indian decision making was independent. They candidly advised Pakistan, therefore, to take its own decisions in the light of its own national perceptions possibilities; including, as Mr. Rasgotra said bluntly, to build the bomb and be done with it.

11. Many found the line taken by the two Indian participants sobering. Most Pakistanis in the audience applauded the Indian statements. Western participants squirmed a bit. Everyone could see that India was not willing to be lured into the trap of a possible regional solution. What all of them found surprising was the Indian candour that Pakistan should go nuclear if they wished to, or could.
There was in all this an implicit warning: that India can cope with this situation. It is well enough understood in Pakistan, as Gen. Azim put it that if the choice were between U.S. aid and a nuclear programme, Pakistan may have to forego the former. We are back at square-one, i.e. the Bhutto period theme of eating grass and building the bomb! Therefore, Pakistan has been unable to calm the suspicions and apprehensions of the USA. Pak-USA dialogue on NPT has nothing to do with the nuclear business. It is all about US’s strategic perceptions in this region: vis-à-vis USSR and Afghanistan; the Gulf war: the future of Western influence in Iran and Pakistan’s potential role in that; Indian Ocean considerations and India’s burgeoning role in this area. India has not been much moved by the non proliferation propaganda, through means like this seminar and has, therefore, refused to budge. The participants have gone home. And the Conference is over.

12. In the overall context of Indo-Pakistan relations I have deemed it important enough to be reported to you.

Yours sincerely,

S.K. Singh

Shri K.P.S. Menon
Foreign Secretary
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi.
Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s nuclear bomb.

The Pakistan Prime Minister has claimed in the USA that Pakistan neither had the capability nor the intention of manufacturing nuclear weapons. This assertion is quite contrary to what Gen. Zia has been saying in the past. Only a few months ago, Gen Zia told the Time Magazine (March 30, 1987) in an interview that “you can virtually write today that Pakistan can build a bomb whenever it wishes”. In fact, as far back as November 1981, Gen Zia claimed in an interview to a Turkish daily that Pakistan did have the capability to manufacture the nuclear bomb. Indeed, Dr. A.Q. Khan, flaunted as the “Father of the Pakistani Bomb”, went a step further in an interview with the Observer, London (March 1, 1987) and boasted that “Pakistan has the Bomb”. On several other occasions, Dr. A.Q. Khan indicated that Pakistan had the capability to manufacture the bomb. Thus, the claim of the Prime Minister of Pakistan about Pakistan’s nuclear capability is contrary to the assertions of both President Zia and the Chief of Pakistan’s nuclear enrichment programme.

The true nature of Pakistan’s so called ‘peaceful nuclear programme’ has been further exposed by the recent arrest in the USA of Arshad Pervez, who has been charged with the attempted illegal smuggling to Pakistan of 50,000 lbs. of maraging 350 Steel and an additional quantity of Baryllium. It is well known that maraging 350 Steel is used in making centrifuges for uranium enrichment plants and beryllium has application in fabricating internal components (neutron reflectors) of nuclear weapons. There is little doubt about the fact that maraging steel and beryllium were meant for Pakistan’s military nuclear establishment. In fact, even Arshad Pervez has identified as his client’ as one Brigadier Inam ul Haq, a Pakistani military officer said to be working in a firm called, Multinational Corporation, Lahore. Brig. Inam ul Haq is conveniently absconding though Pakistan had agreed to launch proceedings against him.

The case of Arshad Pervez is only the latest in a long series of revelations about clandestine procurement of nuclear materials, components, designs, and technologies by Pakistan for its nuclear weapons programme. We are all aware of nominal conviction of Nazir Ahmed Vaid, a Pakistani national in the USA in 1984 for attempted illegal export to Pakistan of 50 krytrone, which are high speed electronic switches used in nuclear weapons triggers. As in the Pervez case Vaid also had definite links which were established by documentary evidence with Pakistan’s military nuclear establishment. The Vaid episode was widely viewed as the “Smocking Gun” which left little doubt about Pakistan’s intention to acquire nuclear weapons. More recently, we have seen reports about Pakistan’s continuing efforts to steal components and designs with the help of a West German firm for setting up a second enrichment plant. Less than 3 months ago, two Californian residents, Mr. & Mrs. Mandel, and a Hong Kong businessman were indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in California for illegal export to Pakistan of sophisticated electronic equipment which could be used in the nuclear weapons programme.

We have seen reports in the press about an insinuation made by the Pakistan Prime Minister that there was a link between India and Arshad Pervez. The Pakistan Prime Minister has reportedly claimed that Pervez had visited India earlier this year. Our preliminary enquiries do not show any evidence of Pervez having come to India earlier this year. However, even if he had passed through India, it is utterly ridiculous to suggest that India would assist him to smuggle highly controlled nuclear material to Pakistan for its weapon oriented nuclear programme. We certainly desire good relations with Pakistan but have no intention of assisting the latter in its feverish quest for nuclear weapons through clandestine procurements abroad. Arshad Pervez has been arrested in the USA after meticulous investigations by the Department of Justice and was specifically charged with attempting to smuggle nuclear material to Pakistan in contravention of U.S. Laws. Mr. Junejo’s insinuation that India was thereby trying to encourage the US Congress to block the aid package to Pakistan, is therefore, an insult to the competence and capability of the U.S. Department of Justice and to the intelligence of the U.S. Congress and the American people.

In response to further queries about Prime Minister Junejo’s comments that Pakistan had no intention of manufacturing nuclear weapons, the Spokesman stated that in a recently published book the Pakistan’s former Minister of Information and Broadcasting Maulana Kausar Niazi who is presently a senator had revealed that the entire Pakistani nuclear programme both with regard to reprocessing and enrichment were conceived in the early 1970 (well before India’s PNE), as being weapons oriented. The Spokesman also indicated that recent attempts by Pakistan to drag India into incidents involving smuggling of nuclear components and materials to Pakistan from North America and West Europe were essentially meant to divert attention on the obvious weapons orientation of Pakistan’s nuclear programme.

Spokesman also said that India’s policies on nuclear disarmament were guided by global and not regional consideration.
A word on our nuclear programme and Pakistan's that is currently being discussed in many areas. We feel there is little to compare between the two. India has the capability, but we have demonstrated, like I said, that we are not willing to turn that capability into a weapon system. We have demonstrated our resolve and our strength. Our capability is our own, built up by our scientists, by our own research, by own material, basically by our own technology. All our installations are in the civilian sector. They are in one way or another hauled across both the Houses of Parliament in almost every session. Nothing is really hidden about our nuclear weapons programme. Not even our worst enemies and critics have accused us of having a nuclear weapons programme. A capability – yes, a programme – no. if you compare that with Pakistan's nuclear programme, the whole programme is in the military sector. There is nothing open to civilians. There is nothing open to be questioned in Parliament. The programme has not had a history of being developed by their own scientists and by their own technology. It is a programme which has been clandestinely brought out from other countries, sometimes by sending people who have brought technology, sometimes by just pilfering technology sometimes by smuggling materials. Well, all possible devious means have been used to build that programme. The programme is entirely military. There is no civilian outlet for their products. Now, we are told to compare these two. How can we? And the basic question is, how can you compare India, which has done things honestly and openly, with Pakistan, which has done things in the most devious and hidden ways? There can be no equating the two, there can be no comparison. We must focus on our own problems; and our problems on the nuclear weapon issue cannot be limited to just our western border; they go much beyond, and in fact, they are global, and we must see them in that light. We must focus very firmly on the relevant issue; and the relevant issue is global nuclear disarmament and complete nuclear disarmament, with all countries – those with nuclear weapons as well as those without – involved in that process because all countries have an equal stake in the prevention of a nuclear war.

There is no freedom from a nuclear threat today because it reaches out well beyond the boundaries under any treaty or the boundaries of any country. The only possible freedom is that of co-existence between all the systems in all the countries. There cannot be nuclear weapon zones and nuclear weapon free zones. Like I said, there can only be one nuclear weapon free zone and that is the whole globe. To achieve disarmament, it is essential first to have a moratorium on all testing and then to have a comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

There is an inherent contradiction between, on the one hand, negotiating for nuclear disarmament across a conference table and, on the other hand, escalating your technologies in developing nuclear weapons, increasing their power or their capability or their reach. To resolve that contradiction, we need an immediate halt to vertical proliferation.

1866. Media Briefing by Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office expressing concern on reported offer of Soviet N-Subs to India.

The Foreign Office spokesman in Islamabad on January 14, 1988 expressed the fear that the Soviet offer to supply India with three nuclear powered submarines would help the Indian Navy for the first time to acquire nuclear fire capability.

At his press briefing, he pointed out that the nuclear reactors of the submarines would be outside independent international safeguards.

In the course of his statement on the reported offer of three nuclear powered submarines to India, the spokesman said that, besides arming India disproportionately to its legitimate defence needs, the Soviet offer was no less regrettable because it would heighten the Indian threat to other countries in South Asia, betraying an extraordinary disregard for the imperatives of peace and security in this region.

"India's acquisition of nuclear submarines highlights its headlong militarization manifest already in its amassing of missiles, aircraft, artillery, tanks and warships. It also reveals a desire to project power and influence well beyond India's frontiers and is incompatible with the aim of denuclearizing the Indian Ocean. "The reckless expansion of Indian military power, totally disproportionate to its legitimate defence needs, cannot but intensify perceptions of insecurity in the neighbourhood"."

The spokesman also stated: 'No less regrettable is the Soviet decision to supply nuclear submarines in addition to the arsenals of offensive weapon systems it has provided to India over the years. This unbalanced policy aids and assists in heightening the threat to other countries in South Asia and betrays an extraordinary disregard for the imperatives of peace and security in this region.
The world has a right to expect a greater sense of responsibility from a superpower”.

He refuted Press reports suggesting that Pakistan had been assured of $ 1 billion worth of assistance as quid pro quo for the French failure to honour its agreement to supply a nuclear reprocessing plant in the 1970s. He said the matter was nowhere nearer a settlement, although Pakistan was pursuing with France the compensation question.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1867.  Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs denying India’s collusion with Israel to attack Pakistan’s nuclear facilities.

New Delhi, June 24, 1988.

Our attention has been drawn to a news item broadcast by Pakistan Radio this morning about the possibility of an Indo-Israel collusion to attack Pakistan’s nuclear facilities. We have in the past pointed out that the Pakistan media have been in the habit of spreading baseless allegations on this and other questions.
The present allegation is also similarly baseless, motivated and mischievous.
We have also recently denied reports suggesting that India is appraising its ties with Israel. The truth is that Pakistan insist on indulging in spreading false propaganda against India, at a time when Pakistan itself is furiously engaging in pursuing a nuclear weapons oriented programme.

The Government of India is constrained to point out that the item in question is part of a systematic and continuous process of dis-information and propaganda against India. We have noted a pattern in several recent instances where deliberate lies were publicized as ‘news’ reports. We repeatedly see instances of distorted, mischievous, motivated and tendentious reporting.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Speech by the Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs at the National Seminar on “Recent Trends in Pakistan and its Nuclear Capability” organized by the Indian Centre for Regional Affairs at the India International Centre.

New Delhi, August 6, 1988.

My Chairman and Friends,

It gives me great pleasure in inaugurating the 2 day National Seminar on ‘Recent Trends in Pakistan and its Nuclear Capability’, which has been organized by the Indian Centre for Regional Affairs. The subject of the seminar is highly topical and of particular interest to India. The Indian Centre for Regional Affairs must, therefore, be commended both for the choice of the subject for the Seminar and for its timing. It is also most refreshing to note that the seminar is not merely confined to intellectuals from the Delhi area but envisages much wider participation on a truly national basis. This will, I am sure, give a much greater balance to the proceedings as intellectual exchange of this type restricted to Delhi – based resource persons can sometimes be much too inbred.

With President Zia’s dissolution of the Junejo Government and the National Assembly and his subsequent announcement of non party elections on 16 November 1988, the internal situation in Pakistan is in flux and somewhat uncertain. The current uncertainty in Pakistan stems basically from the fact that most of the Opposition Parties led by the PPP appear, at this stage, to be united in their opposition to President Zia. They seem, nevertheless to be ready to participate in the general elections even on a non party basis. It will be interesting to see as to how President Zia will manage them and the evolving situation in the country to his advantage. The situation of flux in the country is further aggravated by sentiments of provincialism, ethnic rivalries and religious schisms. Superimposed on these is the economic factor which should not be lost sight of. While Pakistan has been experiencing a commendable rate of growth in recent years, there are inherent structural weaknesses in the economy which could have a bearing on the long term political evolution in the country.

The relative prosperity associated with the first decade of Gen. Zia’s rule has run into problems. While Pakistan with a per capita income of US $ 410 seems to be well ahead of many developing countries, the basic structural weaknesses in the economy are now showing up. The Economic Survey of 1987-88 reveals a downturn in the economy with the GDP showing a growth rate of 5.8 % in 1987-88 and 5.7% in 1986-87 against an average growth rate of 6.5 % during the period since 1977-78. The other major problem confronting the Pak economy is the fall in remittances from $ 3 bn in 1984 to an anticipated low of $ 1 bn in 1992.
the balance of payment position remains weak in spite of exports growing at 27% in Dollar terms due to an over liberal policy on imports of consumer and capital goods. Defence expenditure increased by 6.7% in the current budget constituting 36.7% of current expenditure and debt servicing Rs. 47.52b accounting for 39.3% of current expenditure. I do hope that in the discussions during this seminar which will largely bear upon internal political developments in Pakistan, the less glamorous economic aspects will not be entirely lost sight of.

While the internal situation in Pakistan is in flux, its external environment is also passing through a process of change. In this context I have particularly in mind the evolving situation in Afghanistan, the expectation of Super Power detents and the prospects of an end at last to the Iran Iraq war. There and many permutations and combinations of how the situation in Pakistan could be affected by the changing external environment and the extent to which the ruling elite in Pakistan could use these changes to their advantage. I am confident that this seminar will dwell on these aspects as well.

Though the seminar is on ‘Recent Trends in Pakistan and its nuclear capability”, I wonder if you can altogether exclude from your discussions the pressing issues of India-Pakistan relations? Let me, therefore, briefly dwell upon the current status of our relations with Pakistan, which, unfortunately, are far from satisfactory. We have nothing but friendship for the people of Pakistan. We are convinced that it is in the interest of peoples of India and Pakistan to live in peace and amity. We have, therefore, made a number of proposals to Pakistan, including offer a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation and an Agreement on Non attack on Nuclear Installations, expansion of private trade, exchange of books, periodicals and films, and easing of travel restrictions. However, our strenuous efforts to give a greater positive content to our relations with Pakistan have been set at naught by Pakistan’s negative attitude. While Pakistani leaders never tire of talking of their ‘peace offensive’ vis-à-vis India, there is, unfortunately, a wide chasm separating their professions and actual behaviour.

Pakistan has been extending support to terrorist activities directed against us, pursuing an aggressive and clandestine nuclear weapons programme and stalling on people to people contacts.

The Government of Pakistan have repeatedly assured us, including at the highest level, that they would not support separatist activities in India. However, reports continue to pour in about their continued involvement in such anti Indian activities. Frankly, it is not possible for us to pretend that it can be business as usual with Pakistan even though it was working against the unity and integrity of our country. This message has been conveyed very clearly to Pakistan.

We also continue to receive very disturbing reports about Pakistan’s pursuit of an aggressive and clandestine weapons oriented nuclear programme. It is becoming more or less certain from these reports that Pakistan has acquired a nuclear weapons capability. The non peaceful dimensions of Pakistan’s nuclear programme are of paramount concern to India’s security. We have made it known that any acquisition of nuclear weapons by that country would completely change our security environment and force us to review our options.

I would be most interested in the conclusions and findings of the Seminar which could also usefully focus on developments in Pakistan.

In conclusion I would like to wish the Indian Centre for Regional Affairs the very best for the future in the organization of such activities and all success to this seminar.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1869. Agreement on the Prohibition on Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities between the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

[This agreement was adopted as a confidence building measure to avoid nuclear mishaps in the sub-continent. This came in the background of mutual recriminations on the alleged pursuits by each country to attain nuclear weapon status.]

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, hereinafter referred to as the Contracting Parties,

Reaffirming their commitment to durable peace and the development of friendly and harmonious bilateral relations;

Conscious of the role of confidence building measures in promoting such bilateral relations based on mutual trust and goodwill;

Have agreed as follows:

Article 1

1. Each party shall refrain from undertaking, encouraging or participating in, directly or indirectly, any action aimed at causing the destruction of, or damage to, any nuclear installation or facility in the other country.
2. The term ‘nuclear installation or facility’ includes nuclear power and research reactors, fuel fabrication, uranium enrichment, isotopes separation and reprocessing facilities as well as any other installations with fresh or irradiated nuclear fuel and materials in any form and establishments storing significant quantities of radioactive materials.

Article II

Each Contracting Party shall inform the other on 1st January of each calendar year of the latitude and longitude of its nuclear installations and facilities and whenever there is any change.

Article III

This Agreement is subject to ratification. It shall come into force with effect from the date on which the Instruments of Ratification are exchanged.

Done at Islamabad on this Thirty First day of December 1988. in two copies each in Hindi, Urdu and English, the English Text being authentic in case of any difference or dispute of interpretation.

Sd/-
K.P.S. Menon
Foreign Secretary
For the Government of Republic of India

Sd/- Humayun Khan
Foreign Secretary
For the Government of
the Islamic Republic Of Pakistan
Media briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying Indian Prime Minister’s charge that Pakistan had imported nuclear material from West Germany.

The spokesman of the Foreign Office on February 4 expressed surprise and concern at the statement by Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in Bombay on February 3 wherein he is reported to have said that West Germany had supplied nuclear technology and tritium to Pakistan, which could be used for increasing the yield of a nuclear bomb by four to 10 times. Mr. Rajiv Gandhi is also reported to have stated that, in view of this, India would have to seriously consider what can be done to defend its security.

Expressing regret at the timing and the content of Mr. Gandhi’s statement, the spokesman noted that the two countries had made a good start towards the easing of tensions and the normalization of relations after bilateral meetings between Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and Mr. Rajiv Gandhi. The discussion between the two Prime Ministers had culminated in signing of the agreement that no country will attack nuclear installations of the other country which was a step in the right direction, he added.

He reiterated that Pakistan had not imported any sensitive nuclear material or technology from the Federal Republic of Germany. “Even the German authorities themselves have stated that no plant for the separation of tritium was exported to Pakistan”. On the other hand, there had been reports in the Press about India having received large quantities of heavy water of Norwegian origin through clandestine means. Similarly, there have been Press reports in West Germany to the effect that India had imported 95 kilograms of extremely pure beryllium metal which can be used for making 20 hydrogen bombs.

Pakistan, however, had refrained from commenting on these press reports, despite its deeply felt concern about India’s nuclear intentions, he added.

The spokesman noted that it was unfortunate that such baseless allegations had been leveled. These unfounded accusations could only serve to mar the atmosphere of trust and confidence which Pakistan has sought so assiduously to build between the two countries.

He expressed the hope that the Indian leadership would desist from efforts to cast doubts over Pakistan’s nuclear programme which was geared only to peaceful purposes.

The spokesman’s attention was drawn to the Press statement by US
Congressman Stephen Solarz on January 30 about the nuclear programme of Pakistan, wherein he is reported to have said that Pakistan had reacted favourably to a proposal under which the USA would sell nuclear reactors to Pakistan for peaceful nuclear energy and in return Pakistan would agree to accept full scope safeguards on all its nuclear facilities, including existing ones.

This was not the position of Pakistan, he said and added that Pakistan needed nuclear reactors to meet its energy requirements and was on record that such reactors would be placed under IAEA safeguards. He recalled that Pakistan’s nuclear reactor at Karachi (KANUPP) was already under IAEA safeguards.

However, the question of signing the NPT and accepting full scope safeguards or agreeing to inspection verification of Pakistan’s nuclear facilities was a separate issue. Pakistan was not prepared to accept any discriminatory treatment in this regard. The cause of non proliferation in this region could only be promoted through non discriminatory and equitable measures. It was in this context that Pakistan had proposed a regional approach to the nuclear issue and had made a number of proposals in this regard, he added.

The spokesman said that Pakistan would be prepared to consider any constructive ideas/proposals as long as they were equitable and non discriminatory and did not impinge on Pakistan’s sovereignty.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Press Release issued by Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi carrying text of the Letter to the Editor of the Washington Times by Pakistan Ambassador in the United States clarifying his statement at the interview to a TV station.

New Delhi, February 16, 1989.

[According to Press Release issued by the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi, Pakistan’s Ambassador in the United States Mr. Jamsheed Marker has addressed a letter to the Washington Times clarifying his statement regarding Pakistan’s nuclear programme made by him recently during an interview with the Public Broadcasting System. Washington Times was the first newspaper which took note of the interview]

Following is the text of his letter:

'I wish to clarify any misperceptions about Pakistan’s nuclear programme that may have been created on account of the item carried in your newspaper on 5th February.

— Pakistan’s nuclear programme is entirely peaceful and geared to meet the country’s energy requirements.

— Pakistan has offered to sign the NPT and accept full scope safeguards or agreed to verification/inspection of its nuclear facilities provided the issue is addressed on a regional basis.

— Pakistan sincerely believes that the cause of nuclear non proliferation in the South Asian region can only be promoted through non discriminatory and equitable measures.

The following are some of the relevant remarks made by Ambassador Marker of Pakistan in his interview of 11th February on US TV:-

1. "We are not working on a nuclear weapon and we don’t expect the aid to be cut".
2. 'I explained that we do not possess a nuclear weapon and we do not intend to possess one.
3. "We are exercising a nuclear option, let me put it that way, and we will not renounce this option, unless we get safeguards in terms of equality of treatment".
4. 'It’s right to say that we are one of the ‘threshold States’... we have deliberately chosen not to take the final step because—"

In response to a query as to what would be the final step, he stated, ‘it would be nuclear explosion. To build a bomb and test it or whatever’. [There is a basic contradiction in Ambassador Marker’s assertions that Pakistan is not working on a nuclear weapon and that it is a ‘threshold state’. The contradiction is even stronger when Ambassador Marker states that Pakistan has deliberately not taken the final step in making the bomb when he defines the final step as ‘nuclear explosion’ or test. However, Ambassador Marker’s assertion that Pakistan is a ‘threshold state’ is not all that different from statements made earlier by President Zia. In this context, reference may be made to Dr. A.Q. Khan’s interview to the Observer which was published on 1st March 1987 wherein he stated, ‘They[Big] — While Pakistan has offered a number of proposals such as declaring South Asia as a nuclear free zone and an offer of bilateral inspection to our neighbour, India. We would be prepared to consider any constructive idea/proposal as long as it is not discriminatory and does not impinge on our sovereignty."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Powers, etc.) told us that Pakistan could never produce the bomb and they doubted my capabilities, but they now know that we have done it'. Similarly, President Zia in an interview to Time magazine (13th March, 1987) stated 'you can virtually write today that Pakistan can build a nuclear bomb whenever it wishes. What is difficult about a bomb? Once you have acquired the technology, which Pakistan has, you can do whatever you like'. Thus, apart from the use of the term ‘threshold state’, Ambassador Marker’s statement is in tune with statements made about two years ago by President Zia and Dr. A.Q. Khan. It reflects the fact that Pakistan has finally acquired nuclear weapon capability and short of actually testing the bomb has taken all other steps.]

It has been argued that Ambassador’s Marker’s statement might have been a slip of tongue and could jeopardize the US aid programme for Pakistan. The ‘slip of tongue’ theory may, however, be discounted since Ambassador Marker was a top notch diplomat. Pakistan’s motivation in making this statement was perhaps to assert parity with India. This theory is corroborated also by Mirza Aslam Beg’s proud announcement of Pakistan’s recent missile tests.
1872. Remarks by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi that Pakistan’s nuclear programme was nuclear weapons oriented.

New Delhi, April 2, 1989.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi said that he “is 100 percent convinced that Pakistan's nuclear programme is weapon-oriented”. He was speaking to journalists in an informal conversation on the sidelines of an International Editors’ Seminar organized by the Times of India in New Delhi on March 18-19, 1989 to mark its 150th anniversary. In his talk with the journalists Pakistan and Pakistan related issues dominated. He was blunt about Pakistan’s nuclear programme when he said he was “one hundred percent convinced that it is a nuclear weapons programme.”

◆◆◆◆◆

1873. Media remarks of the Spokesman of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on cooperation between India and Pakistan on nuclear issues.

Islamabad, December 5, 1989.

Pakistan expects the new Indian government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh to cooperate in order to keep the region free from nuclear weapons, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Islamabad on December 5, 1989.

Concerns have been expressed in the past by both sides, India and Pakistan, over the possibility of nuclear dangers in the region, the spokesman said at a new briefing.

Asked to comment on an interview Mr. Singh gave to KHALEEQ TIMES, in which he spoke of the nuclear issues, the spokesman said: “we have taken note of the interview wherein he has talked about the need for a restraint in this field.

“Pakistan is participating in no nuclear race, as it neither has, nor does it want to develop nuclear weapons. However, concerns have been expressed on both sides on this subject”, he added.

He listed seven proposals which Pakistan has made over the years since 1974-when India exploded a nuclear device—to check nuclear proliferation in the region. Pakistan would still like India to respond to these proposals in order to ensure that the region stays nuclear-free, he added.
He said the proposals which Pakistan made are:

Declaring the region as a nuclear free zone;

A joint declaration to renounce development and preparation of nuclear weapons;

To put all nuclear installations in India and Pakistan under inspection of Vienna based International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA);

Joint inspection by Indian and Pakistani experts of all nuclear installations in the two countries;

Simultaneous signatures by India and Pakistan on the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty; and Renunciation of nuclear testing—or signing of a nuclear test ban treaty.

Replying to questions, the spokesman said India has replied to none of the proposals so far. Pakistan, he said, would like India to discuss these proposals with Islamabad. Asked whether the nuclear question was discussed by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi when he visited Pakistan in December 1988, and July 1989, he said the question did come up, but he could not say whether the subject was discussed in great detail. The two sides did conclude the agreement on not attacking each other’s nuclear installations, he added.

He said there is a difference of approach between the two countries on the nuclear question. India, he said, would like to see the nuclear weapon states first to destroy their nuclear arsenals and only then try to persuade non nuclear nations. Pakistan, on the other hand, has taken the position that the destruction of all nuclear weapons by the nuclear states will take a long time. Islamabad is of the view that, in the short run, the smaller countries should adopt a regional approach to prevent nuclear proliferation.

The spokesman said Pakistan also has its suspicions regarding the Indian nuclear programme. Such suspicions should be put to rest in order to tackle the nuclear question in its proper perspective.

He told a correspondent that the two sides have yet to exchange lists of their nuclear installations which will be covered by the agreement on non attack on nuclear installations.
1874. Statement by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia.

New Delhi, June 7, 1991.

When asked for Government of India's reaction to a reported proposal made by the Pak. PM about a 5-nation multilateral consultation on nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia, the Spokesman responded that ‘our attention has been drawn to report on the suggestions made by Mr. Nawaz Sharif, the Prime Minister of Pakistan on the question of nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia. We find nothing new in these suggestions. They are a rehash of the well worded Pakistani posture adopted by them for the past several years.

The Pakistan Prime Minister has specifically suggested that USA, the Soviet Union and China should consult and meet with India and Pakistan to arrive at an agreement for keeping the South Asian region free of nuclear weapons. Pakistan has been moving a resolution on Nuclear weapons- Free Zone in South Asia for the past several years while at the same time relentlessly pursuing its clandestine nuclear weapons programme. Now that there is overwhelming evidence regarding the true nature of Pakistan’s nuclear programme, merely repeating the proposal at this stage must be viewed as propaganda exercise and a tactic by Pakistan for diverting international pressure to give up its nuclear weapons programme.

India’s views on the creation of regional Nuclear Weapons Free Zones are well known. Given the global reach of nuclear weapons, it is illusory to seek security through regional arrangements, particularly where the security interests of all the concerned states are not taken into account in defining the region. That is why India has proposed an Action Plan for the Ushering in of a Nuclear Weapons Free World. India has always been and is prepared to enter into consultations with Pakistan or any other country to work for programme for the elimination of nuclear weapons in a time bound framework, which includes commitments to be given by nuclear capable countries, not to cross the threshold.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The Pakistani Foreign Office spokesman, while commenting on Indian rejection of the Pakistani proposal for resolving the issue of nuclear proliferation in the region, has said that Pakistan would not be deterred by the Indian stand. He said Pakistan has made a sincere effort in this respect and it will pursue the initiative. Commenting on the Indian suggestion for a nuclear free world, the spokesman said that it would take ages to achieve it. ‘we believe in a step by step approach. A nuclear free world is an ideal solution, but so is the total disarmament on which discussions have been going on for years but the objective remains to be achieved,” he said.
Indian reaction to the Pressler Amendment adopted by the US Congress.

New Delhi, June 14, 1991.

In response to questions on US House of Representatives action on the Pressler Amendment, the Spokesman said on, 14.6.91, that:

We have heard reports that during discussions of the Foreign Aid Authorisation Bill 1992 -- 93, the US House of Representatives has passed an amendment extending the coverage of the Pressler Amendment to include India.

We are disappointed at the tenor and content of the debate in which there is a tendency to gloss over the main issue that while India has followed a consistent policy of not acquiring nuclear weapons. Pakistan has single mindedly pursued a clandestine nuclear weapons programme by willful violation of US laws. Attempts to equate India with Pakistan in this manner therefore seem misplaced. We hope that US Congressmen will see this aspect in proper perspective in future debates on this issue.

India's nuclear policy is founded on twin objectives: that nuclear weapons are abhorrent and must be eliminated and that credible security can only be provided if this issue is addressed globally. It goes without saying that the presence of nuclear weapons in our neighbourhood is a matter of vital security concern.
1876. Message from High Commissioner J.N. Dixit to Foreign Secretary Muchkund Dubey.

Islamabad, July 1, 1991.

Additional Secretary INAMUL HAQ (also Acting Foreign Secretary in absence of SHAHARYAR at Male) called me to the Foreign Office at 1300 hours today (1st July) and said that Pak Government had taken note of view expressed by our Foreign Secretary Shri Dubey that the 6th June, 1991 suggestions of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif for regional nuclear non proliferation were only in a public speech and that no formal communication on the matter has been sent by the Government of Pakistan to the Government of India.

2. INAMUL HAQ said that the point is well taken and, therefore, the Government of Pakistan is now conveying Prime Minister’s suggestions formally to the Government of India through me.

3. He then handed over a note verbale, the text of which is attached. He also handed over a copy of the speech made by Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif at the National Defence College on 6th June which has already been forwarded to you.

4. The enclosed note makes two points:

(a) that the Government of India should consider the proposals outlined on page 12 of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s speech; and

(b) that the newly installed Government of India would seriously study this proposal in all its aspects and would, in due course, convey its response to the Government of Pakistan.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Statement made by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External affairs following the Indo-Pak Agreement on Prohibition of Attack Against Nuclear Installations and Facilities.

New Delhi, January 1, 1992.

Pursuant to the Agreement on Prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities, signed at Islamabad on 31st December, 1988, India and Pakistan today (1 January, 1992) exchanged the list of nuclear installations and facilities to be covered under this Agreement.

Pakistan daily the NEWS on January 5 claimed that it had conducted a probe on the list supplied by India and suspected it to be incomplete. It said that Indian list was silent on several large and sensitive installations spread throughout India. Out of dozens of outfits of India, only four, Tarapur I and II, Rajasthan I and Rajasthan II are under the safeguards of the Vienna based IAEA. The Paper claimed that the sources familiar with the issues characterized it 'as a diplomatic subterfuge and a ploy'. Interestingly official sources in Islamabad at the same time maintained that the lists were not 'public' documents. But the paper gave a list of facilities claiming it to be a complete list which contained the following facilities:

INDIAN NUCLEAR FACILITIES

The following is the list of Indian nuclear facilities:

1. Reprocessing plants: (a) Trombay—Bhabha Atomic Research Centre, (BARC), capacity: 30 metric tons of spent fuel per year; (b) Tarapur, capacity: 100 metric tons of spent fuel, 135-150 kg plutonium per year; (c) Kalpakkam, capacity: Laboratory scale (ii) 125 metric tons per year.

2. Uranium conversion(UF6): 9a) Trombay, Bhabha Atomic Research Centre, capacity: 185 metric tons; (b) Hazira, capacity: 110 metric tons per year.

3. Enrichment plants: (a) Trombay/BARC, capacity: pilot scale (100) centrifuges.

4. heavy water: (a) Nangal, capacity: 14 metric tons per year; (b) Baroda, capacity: 45 metric tons per year; (c) Tuticorin, capacity 49 metric tons per year; (d) Talcher, (e) Kota, capacity: 85 metric tons per year (f) Thal-Vaishet, capacity: 110 metric tons per year; and (g) Manuguru.

5. Fuel Fabrication: (a) Hyderabad, capacity: 80 metric tons per year for Rajasthan, Madras, Tarapur, Narora and FTBR; (b) Trombay BARC, capacity: 135 tons per year.

6. Uranium purification (UO2): (a) Hyderabad.

7. Uranium resources/active mining sites/uranium mills reasonably assured reserves: 46,090 metric tons currently active. Site: Juduguda.

8. Research Reactors: 9 a) Apsara, Trombay BARC; (b) Cirus, Trombay/BARC (heavy water/ national uranium, 40 MWT), capacity, sufficient for experimental, enrichment programme, BARC; (c) Zerlina; (d) Purimia II, Trombay BARC (Uranium 233); (e) Kranium 233, 30 KWT; (g) Dhruva (formerly R-5), Trombay BARC; and (h) FBTRC, Kalpakkam (fast breeder/plutonium and natural uranium 42 MWT, 15 MWe).

9. Power reactors: (a) Tarapur; (b) Tarapur II; (c) Rajasthan I; (d) Rajasthan II; (e) Madras I; (f) Madras II; (g) Narora-I (heavy water/natural uranium); (h) Narora-II (heavy water/natural uranium); (i) Kakrapar I; (j) Kakrapar II; (k) Kaiga I, Karnataka; (l) Kaiga II, Karnataka; (m) Rajasthan III, Kota; (n) Rajasthan IV, Kota.

However the High Commission of India in Islamabad in a Press Release categorically refuted the veracity of the news item.
The exchange was carried out simultaneously at Islamabad and New Delhi. India’s Foreign Secretary, Mr. J.N. Dixit handed over the Indian list to Pakistan’s High Commissioner, while the list of Pakistani nuclear installations and facilities was handed over by Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shaharyar M. Khan, to India’s Acting High Commissioner in Islamabad.

1878. Remarks of Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan on Pakistan’s nuclear capability.

Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan said in Washington on February 7 that Pakistan now has the components and knowhow to assemble at least one nuclear explosive ‘device’, making the first time the confirmation publicly of the extent of the country’s nuclear programme.

Mr. Shaharyar’s admission came after meetings with US administration and Congressional officials in which he reiterated Pakistan’s pledge not to explode such a device or transfer nuclear technology to other Islamic States or Third World countries that have sought to obtain it. ‘The capability is there,’ he told reporters and editors during a 45 minute interview with WASHINGTON POST, adding that his country possesses ‘elements which, if put together, would become a device’.

He confirmed that these elements include potential weapons ‘cores’ fashioned form highly enriched uranium, a material commonly used to sustain a nuclear explosion. He said he was speaking candidly to ‘avoid credibility gaps’ that he suggested were created by senior officials of the previous Pakistani governments.

Those officials repeatedly denied that Pakistan had made any effort to produce the components of a nuclear device, but the USA did not believe them and cut off roughly $ 573 million in aid over the issue in 1990.

The Foreign Secretary said the current leadership in Islamabad had ‘inherited the problem’ of what to say or do about the nuclear weapons and decided to set the record straight so that it could come to a clear understanding with Washington about the barriers to a resumption of the US financial aid.

He said he had not been told how many nuclear devices could be assembled in his country from existing components. But he said his government last year permanently froze the production of highly enriched uranium and weapons’ cores.
Washington had demanded these measures as conditions for resuming aid, and Mr. Shaharyar Khan said the Bush administration, though initially skeptical, has accepted Pakistan’s assurances on this score. But he also stressed his government would only comply with a third US condition for the resumption of aid requiring destruction of the weapon cores in order to ‘revise’ the Pakistani capability if a similar step is undertaken by neighbouring India.

Pakistan has been reluctant to curtail its nuclear programme because Pakistanis see it as a counterbalance to India’s demonstrated nuclear ability. He said he had explained to the USA officials that India also would have to limit its nuclear effort to avoid a ‘public perception problem’ among the Pakistanis that they had been unfairly singled out.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1879. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Foreign Office on Pakistan’s nuclear capability.

The Foreign Office spokesman said in Islamabad on February 19 that Pakistan had acquired ‘a certain tactical capability’ in the process of its nuclear programme but this capability was being used for peaceful purposes.

Addressing to newsmen at his weekly Press briefing, he said that this decision was taken at the highest political level. Newsmen had sought his comment on Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan’s recent interview to WASHINGTON POST that Pakistan had assembled at least one nuclear device before freezing this capability.

The spokesman said the Foreign Secretary had in another interview to APP described certain portions of his interview in the USA as wrong.

When his attention was drawn to Mr. Shaharyar’s interview to a Rawalpindi-based daily on his return from the USA on February 15, he said that certain portions of this interview also were incorrect.

In this connection, he particularly referred to the issuance of certificate by US President George Bush enabling Pakistan to receive the US aid suspended two years ago under the Pressler Amendment and said the timings of the issuance of the requisite certification were wrong. ‘Mr. Shaharyar neither spoke of aid resumption in October nor in the next four or five months’ he added.
But that part of the interview was correctly reported in which Mr. Shaharyar was quoted as saying that an important US official will visit Pakistan in next April to continue talks to resolve the nuclear issue, he said. However, he could neither give the name of the official nor the exact date and duration of his visit.

The spokesman noted that the arrival of the US official should not be made something extraordinary. The nuclear issue being in the melting pot, talks between the USA and Pakistan would continue to take place. Already three rounds had taken place in seven months and preparations for the fourth were under way. The two sides were doing so because they had decided to continue to talk on this ticklish issue until it was satisfactorily resolved, he added.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1880. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Consultations between Pakistan and Japan on nuclear issues etc.

Islamabad, February 13, 1993.

The Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman said on February 13 that it had told a visiting Japanese delegation that India had the capacity to produce 200 plutonium based nuclear weapons.

Addressing journalists at an impromptu briefing in Islamabad, he said this had been conveyed to Mr. Mitsuro Donowaki, Japanese Ambassador for Arms Control and Disarmament, at talks held in the Foreign Office in Islamabad on February 11. These talks were held within the framework of the discussions held in Tokyo in December between the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Japan, he added.

‘Pakistan underlined the threat of nuclear proliferation in South Asia which arises primarily from the vast stock of unsafeguarded plutonium in India’s possession, with which it can manufacture nearly 200 bombs,’ he added.

The spokesmen said the Japanese were reminded that India had crossed the non proliferation ‘line’ prescribed in the Non Proliferation Treaty by exploding a nuclear device in 1974; ‘therefore, to secure India’s adherence to the NPT in its nuclear programme would obviously need to be rolled back,’ he added.

He said there was an extensive discussion of the security situation in South Asia, in particular the brutal Indian campaign of suppression in Kashmir, the anti-Muslim violence which followed the destruction of Babri Masjid and India’s ‘inflexible’ position on all other bilateral issues.
He also said that Pakistan informed the visiting Japanese delegation of its proposals to promote non proliferation in South Asia on an equitable and non discriminatory basis.

The spokesman said that the Japanese side had expressed certain ideas for enhancing the objectives of non proliferation in South Asia, which Pakistan had promised to examine very carefully and with interest. He declined to detail the Japanese proposal, except for describing them as 'ideas of considerable novelty'. He, however, added: ‘Two or three ideas were voiced, some more appropriate than others’.

He said that Pakistan was very happy to hold consultations with Japan for the promotion of peace, security and non proliferation in South Asia because Japan is a major Asian country with which it enjoys very close, friendly and friction free relations and because Japan has adopted a position on the non proliferation issue which is equitable and non discriminatory vis-à-vis Pakistan and India.

This equitable approach continued to be reflected in the Japanese position adopted during the talks. Both countries agreed that the issue of non proliferation in South Asia was linked to the regional security environment. Japan had also taken note of the importance of ensuring that the objective of non proliferation in South Asia should be pursued on a basis which is fair to all regional states and which does not prejudice their security interests, he added.
1881. Press Conference of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on Pakistan's nuclear programme.

Addressing a Press conference in Karachi on November 20. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said that Pakistan's atomic programme was frozen in July 1990 but added it would not be rolled back. She linked non proliferation with the solution of the Kashmir issue with India and other issues Pakistan was confronting with its neighbour.

She said ‘Pushing Pakistan will not solve the problem and as far as rollback is concerned, it is impossible and not feasible as it will not help in securing non proliferation. (She also spoke on the same issues while laying the foundation stone of the Karachi Institute of Radiology and Nuclear Medicine (KIRAN) at Ojha Institute of Chest Diseases).

Elaborating her point with reference to the Pressler Amendment, she said the amendment was aimed at a non proliferation regime in South Asia. With the ban on aid to Pakistan unilaterally the USA has given India a free hand. Pressler puts a ban on Pakistan alone then why should India stop its programme. We are not in favour of this unilateral action, she said, adding that Pakistan had given a number of proposals in this respect which were rejected out of hand by India.

She said that her government was prepared to tackle outstanding issues with India on a bilateral basis but was also ready to sort out matters multilaterally if India so desired. The first and foremost issue which was to be solved is the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. “When this issue is solved then other issues like non proliferation, human rights, regional arms control and reduction in troops can be solved”, she emphasized.

“These were very important issues which could not be solved by punishing Pakistan,” she said, adding: ‘These issues can only be resolved by exercising parity and adopting a regional approach’.

To settle the issue with the USA, the Prime Minister said. ‘We are trying to convince our American friends that if you penalize Pakistan alone, non proliferation will not be achieved in the region’. She added that Pakistan was trying to tell them that it was being victimized. ‘I want an open debate on this issue’.

The Pressler Amendment said that countries possessing a nuclear device would not receive US aid. But the US government is talking about A. B and C capabilities. She added. Ms Bhutto then explained the three categories: “If you have A, B and C capabilities you can make a nuclear device. A stands for uranium enrichment; B for metal plating capability and C for the ability to develop the core. This is a very strange categorization. This interpretation of the Pressler Amendment lacks legalistic sense,” She added. Ms Bhutto explained that Pakistan had the capability but had not gone beyond the threshold by marrying the three categories.

She admitted that Pakistan’s nuclear programme was capped and frozen in July 1990 during her previous stint in power ‘before the IJI government took over.’ Caretaker Prime Minister Moeen Qureshi had also informed the nation about it in his statement. She was also very critical of the politicization of the nuclear programme by politicians. “Pakistani politicians have damaged the programme of national security to be made into a political football. I will not allow the programme to suffer or sustain any damage” she said adding “Time will come when I will tell what was done to this programme since 1977”.

“Our commitment to nuclear non proliferation cannot be unilateral. There will be no rollback in our peaceful nuclear programme, nor will we accept discriminatory restrictions on research and development”, the Prime Minister explained, and added “unfortunately Pakistan’s peaceful nuclear programme has been constantly put under pressure and been subjected to hostile and vicious propaganda and unjust discrimination.”

The Prime Minister said that Pakistan would continue with its efforts towards establishing an equitable, non discriminatory and non proliferation regime in South Asia. “In fact the Pressler Amendment which today bars assistance from the USA to Pakistan is a veto in Indian hands”, she observed, adding that it has been found that the Pressler Amendment instead of supporting the idea of nuclear non proliferation has by giving India a veto, damaged all regional initiatives.

She said that being a citizen of this world she believe that nothing could be more terrible than a nuclear holocaust. “It is the duty of all of us to work for a world which is free from the threat of a nuclear war or conflict,” Ms Bhutto said and that Pakistan would welcome any proposal or initiative put forward from any quarter for achieving this cherished goal and will continue its endeavour to remove any apprehension or misgivings about the peaceful usage of nuclear energy.
1882. Statement by Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to the Pakistan Atomic Energy Council on Pakistan’s determination to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on January 15, 1994 said that Pakistan firmly believed in going ahead with making fuller peaceful use of atomic technology.

Addressing members of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Council in Islamabad on January 15 on the occasion of its annual meeting she said. ‘The Islamic democratic and Awami government fully supported achieving excellence and advancement of technology be it simple technology or high technology’.

It was the elected Prime Minister the late Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who had first started the atomic project in Pakistan, which was now being implemented “Late Z.A. Bhutto had 25 years ago, given an autonomous status to PAEC and sought cooperation of the USA to start PINSTECH and other atomic projects. Now with the Chinese cooperation my government is completing the Chashma Nuclear Power Plant after 25 years,” she added.

Ms Bhutto said that there were some undue misgivings about ‘our peaceful nuclear programme’ and hoped Pakistan would very soon be able to remove these misgivings.

She expressed her determination to make Pakistan an enviable progressive and developed state, where there was no brain drain and upcoming scientists as others took pride in working within the country rather than going abroad for better prospects, as had been the trend over the past.

Paying tributes to PAEC scientists for working selflessly and single mindedly without looking for any reward or popularity, Ms. Bhutto said the Federal cabinet had given assent to an over Rs. 1 billion comprehensive science and technology policy. The government believed that it was imperative to implement this ambitious national policy, so as to ensure rapid economic development of Pakistan she added.

The Prime Minister said the government was firm and believed in the peaceful use of atomic technology. The present government attached high priority to the energy sector. The work on 300 MW Chashma plant acquired during 1988-90, would be completed soon. This plant is a symbol Of Pakistan-China friendship. Upon its completion it would not only lessen energy problem but acquaint Pakistani engineers with the designing and preparation of nuclear power plants. She hoped the energy crisis would be over on the completion of the Ghazi Barotha dam. Hubco and the Nuclear Power Plan.

She said the nation could be proud of PAECs achievements like locally producing fuel for the Karachi Nuclear Power Plant production of certain important spare parts, up-gradation of PINSTECH research reactor and providing facilities for development of nuclear power. Its ideas of locally producing nuclear power plant and designing of thermal power plant deserved special attention. The development of new agricultural varieties with the application of nuclear technology had benefited the national economy she added.

She said it was encouraging to note that the Institute of Bio technology and Genetic Engineering had come into operation at Faisalabad. The endeavours of the Commission in nuclear medicine and radio therapy were laudable, she added.

Ms. Bhutto said PAEC should utilize its technical and scientific knowledge for the advancement of computers. Information technology and micro electronics and should extend cooperation with other scientific and technical institutions of the country in the same respect.

1883. Suo Moto Statement by Minister of State for External Affairs Salman Khurshid in Lok Sabha on Pakistan’s Nuclear Capability.

We have carefully noted the statement by the former Prime Minister of Pakistan that Pakistan possesses an atomic bomb. This is the first ever such explicit statement by a Pakistani leader who occupied the highest office of Government. Pakistan can no longer maintain a stand of ambiguity about the intentions and true purpose of its nuclear weapon programme.

We have consistently held the view for long that Pakistan is pursuing a weapon oriented nuclear programme. The surreptitious evolution of Pakistan’s nuclear weapon programme from its infancy and its clandestine development have naturally engaged our close attention all along.

We are dismayed that Pakistan not only has advanced its nuclear weapon programme to an intended conclusion but also is holding out to India a nuclear threat in settling its outstanding differences with us. This is a matter of grave concern to us.
The international community must concertedly act to ensure that Pakistan behaves as a responsible member in the comity of nations. Indeed, there has been international concern expressed over Pakistan’s emergence as a nuclear weapon state. Pakistan should be forthwith compelled to abandon its nuclear weapons programme and agree to conduct itself within limits. Recent reports indicate that Pakistan is continuing to pursue its nuclear weapon programme and is clandestinely procuring materials for this purpose from whatever source available. The reality today is that Pakistan is becoming a serious threat to international peace and stability. Pakistan’s deplorable record of aiding and abetting international terrorism and subversion combines with its open threat to use nuclear weapons as an instrument of policy.

We are taking all necessary steps to mobilize the international community over the threat posed by Pakistan as a State Sponsoring terrorism with a declared intent to use nuclear weapons for resolving to differences with India over J&K.

I assure the House that the Government will maintain the utmost vigilance on this matter and will act with decisiveness and firmness in thwarting any danger to this country’s national security.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1884. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on reported move on India testing a nuclear device.

Taking a serious note of reports that India is all set to conduct another nuclear test, Pakistan says it will be a grave setback to non proliferation efforts in South Asia and jeopardize peace and stability in the region.

Commenting on reports published in NEW YORK TIMES on December 15 the Foreign Office spokesman said Pakistan has consistently endeavoured to promote the goal of nuclear non proliferation in South Asia. It will have a negative implication for the ongoing efforts in the conference on disarmament to conclude a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

General sentiments in Pakistan are that should India explode another device, Islamabad should follow suit as it has the nuclear capability. Mr. Munir Ahmad Khan, who was Chairman of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission (PAEC)
NUCLEAR said that another nuclear test by India will have grave consequences both at the regional and international levels. It will also undermine worldwide efforts to reduce and eliminate nuclear weapons.

He said Pakistan will be under tremendous pressure to respond, meaning that it could be the beginning of an overt nuclear arms race in the subcontinent. Pakistan cannot remain quiet this time as India has exploded its first device in 1974. Everyone knows about Islamabad’s basic nuclear basic nuclear capability. He added. ‘The testing will destroy the existing delicately balanced restraint on nuclear matters which exist in the subcontinent’.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Meanwhile Pakistan’s Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs George Clement told the National Assembly on December 17 that the government would ‘evaluate its options if India carried out another nuclear bomb explosion in Rajasthan’. He was responding to a call attention notice in the House, and assured it that ‘Pakistan is fully alive to the ramifications of such a development and would adopt an appropriate policy to safeguard its security. He maintained that the nation is fully prepared to meet conspiracies of the enemy against the security of the country.’ He said the Pakistan Government is seriously concerned at reports that India may be preparing to carry out a nuclear weapons test. Pakistan he added is in contact with all its friends and has conveyed its concern and seriousness of the situation. Mr. George Clement said Pakistan is consistently promoting all efforts to ensure nuclear non proliferation in South Asia. He said Pakistan understands that a nuclear weapon test by India would cause a serious setback to the goal of non proliferation. It would destabilise the South Asian region and seriously compromise the prospects of concluding a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. He remarked that Pakistan is concerned at India’s ambitious nuclear and ballistic missile programme. On December 20th the Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali on return from New Delhi said: “I have told Delhi in clear terms that India will be responsible solely for the consequences of its conducting another bomb test.” He said he had made it clear at the recent seven nation South Asian ministerial conference that Pakistan would respond to the Indian progress on the missile issue within the parameters of the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR). He said India’s alleged plan to test its Prithvi surface to surface missile was also unacceptable as Islamabad would not allow Delhi to gain an edge in missile development. The Minister told newsmen in Islamabad that Pakistan’s fears of a nuclear test by India were based on the US intelligence reports about unusual activity at the Pokhran reactor site in the desert state of Rajasthan. Meanwhile Indian External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee denied on December 19 that India had any plans to carry out a nuclear test. But the Pakistani Foreign Minister said that the Indian denial had no credibility and stressed that the missile proliferation by India would cause tension in the region.
1885. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s statement alleging that India was preparing for a nuclear test.

New Delhi, December 23, 1995.

The recent Pakistan Foreign Office statement is a familiar example of anti-India propaganda, seeking to exploit reports that have come out in some quarters alleging that India was preparing for a nuclear test. We have authoritatively responded to these reports.

Pakistan’s statement tries to divert attention from Pakistan’s on nuclear weapons programme. Pakistani spokesmen have themselves claimed that their country has made nuclear weapons and the nature and orientation of Pakistan’s programme is by now well documented. It is this programme which poses a real danger to regional and global peace and stability and is a source of constant and grave concern to the international community.

India has also been compelled to draw attention to Pakistan’s reckless pursuit of acquiring conventional arms, including force multipliers, from diverse sources far beyond its legitimate defence requirements. These acquisition have a destabilising influence in the region. They compel us to bear the burden of additional expenditure on our defence needs. The world community must bring to bear the weight of its influence on Pakistan to return to the path of negotiation and responsibility.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1886. Response of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to reports that India may detonate a second nuclear device.

Islamabad, January 9, 1996.

Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said in Islamabad on January 9 that in case India actually detonated its second nuclear device, ‘we have taken into consideration what our response will be.’ ‘It will be a considered and measured response’, the Prime Minister told a group of Japanese journalists. But it will be absolutely tragic for the sub-continent with India actually detonating its nuclear test, she added.

She said ‘Some people say that perhaps India wants to detonate this test to see whether Pakistan actually has the knowledge and the capacity to convert its knowledge into nuclear reality. While taking a decision, we have to take all these facts into consideration. But I hope time will never come when we will make such a decision.

She expressed her confidence that world opinion will convince the Indian leadership that we are at the brink of the 21st century and we should better enter the century with peace. 'I will, therefore, place importance on the stated position of the Indian authorities that there will be no test'.

'We should better enter the next century by ending destruction' Ms Bhutto said adding, 'the 21st Century should be a century of peace'.

Responding to a query that the Leader of the Opposition had in the past claimed that Pakistan possessed a nuclear device, the Prime Minister said 'I think this was not the viewpoint of Nawaz Sharif when he was Prime Minister while in the opposition, he says many things to sensationalise them, to attract the crowd to get newspaper headlines. We have to differentiate between his statements, while in office and in the opposition', she replied.

Pakistan, Ms Bhutto said, 'has never denied that it has certain knowledge but because we believe in non proliferation, we have never turned or used this knowledge into creating a nuclear device. It is our policy today to continue on the path of non proliferation. By doing so we will not make devices, not to detonate devices, not to export any nuclear technology and we have shown tremendous responsibility and restraint'.

'The successive governments in Pakistan and not only my government, have reached the conclusion to exercise restraint restraint should be the hallmark of our country’s characteristic and despite provocations from India we have shown such restraint. But we believe that any threat by India at this stage would put a severe strain on our policy', Ms. Bhutto asserted.
Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on supplies of critical nuclear technologies to Pakistan by US Government.

New Delhi, March 15, 1996.

1. Government of India have been closely following reports on Pakistan’s acquisition of 5,000 specialized ring magnets from China, for use in gas centrifuges to enrich uranium for Nuclear Weapons. Government of India remains greatly concerned about the clandestine Nuclear Weapons Programme Pakistan has been pursuing for two decades. Pakistan’s role in smuggling nuclear weapons material, equipment and components is well documented, and widely known to the world community. It is also well known that Pakistan remains engaged in clandestine procurement of ballistic missiles from other countries.

2. These facts have been brought to the attention of the US Government on a number of occasions. Our concerns regarding supplies of critical nuclear technologies to Pakistan have also been conveyed to the concerned countries, including China.

3. Continuing nuclear acquisitions by Pakistan, and acquiescence or grant of waivers from the operation of non-proliferation sanctions on the part of those who claim to have a special responsibility in this regard, despite the accumulated evidence of such clandestine activities, only serves to underscore the irrelevance of the current Non-Proliferation Regime. The NPT apart from being discriminatory is fundamentally flawed as is evident from its acquisitions by Pakistan from NPT member states.

4. It is abundantly clear the world community needs complete elimination of nuclear weapons in a time bound frame-work, and not merely non-proliferation control of a particular kind symbolized by instruments like the NPT or the working of the Nuclear Suppliers’ Group.

On April 2, 1996 India expressed its further concern on reports that Pakistan had acquired blue prints from foreign sources for building a nuclear bomb, which it was pointed out provided another confirmation of the “relentlessness and duplicity with which Pakistan pursed its clandestine nuclear weapons programme. The Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs while briefing the media of this development warned that “it is dangerous for regional peace and stability to equip such a country with substantial quantities of conventional weapons.” He expressed the hope “that the countries which propose to do so will take heed of the warnings which are emanating from the recent reports regarding Pakistan’s acquisition of materials for its nuclear weapons programme.”

Islamabad, September 12, 1996.

Regretting that the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) has brought no dividends to South Asia, Pakistan declared on September 12 that it reserved the right to respond adequately to any nuclear escalation by India.

The Foreign Office spokesman told the weekly news briefing that in view of its security concerns, Pakistan cannot accept unilateral commitments and is not in a position to sign the CTBT.

He said that Pakistan cannot remain oblivious to the threats posed to its security, which are intensified by the Indian position on the treaty.

The spokesman said that Pakistan deeply regretted India’s veto of the CTBT in the Conference on Disarmament at Geneva and its negative vote on the treaty in UN General Assembly.

“It is evident that India’s opposition to the treaty emanates from its nuclear ambitions and its reluctance to forgo further development of its programme, which poses a direct threat to Pakistan’s security.”

He said that Pakistan has noted that some major powers have tried to accommodate India’s negative position and have even tried to explain, if not justified, in terms of its ‘security concerns’. He said this approach was counter-productive.

◆◆◆◆◆
As announced by the Prime Minister this afternoon, today India conducted three underground nuclear tests in the Pokhran range. The tests conducted today were with a fission device, a low yield device and a thermonuclear device. The measured yields are in line with expected values. Measurements have also confirmed that there was no release of radioactivity into the atmosphere. These were contained explosions like the experiment conducted in May 1974. These tests have established that India has a proven capability for a weaponised nuclear programme. They also provide a valuable database which is useful in the design of nuclear weapons of different yields for different applications and for different delivery system. Further, they are expected to carry Indian scientists towards a sound computer simulation capability which may be supported by sub-critical experiments, if considered necessary.

The Government is deeply concerned, as were previous Governments, about the nuclear environment in India’s neighbourhood. These tests provide reassurance to the people of India that their national security interests are paramount and will be promoted and protected. Succeeding generations of Indians would also rest assured that contemporary technologies associated with nuclear option have been passed on to them in this the 50th year of our Independence.

It is necessary to highlight today that India was in the vanguard of nations which ushered in the Partial Test Ban Treaty in 1963. Due to environmental concerns, Indian representatives have worked in various international forums, including the Conference on Disarmament, for universal, non-discriminatory and verifiable arrangements for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction. The Government would like to reiterate its support to efforts to realize the goal of a truly comprehensive international arrangement which would prohibit underground nuclear testing of all weapons as well as related experiments described as ‘sub-critical’ or ‘hydro-nuclear’.

India would be prepared to consider being an adherent to some of the undertakings in the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. But this cannot obviously be done in a vacuum. It would necessarily be an evolutionary process from concept to commitment and would depend on a number of reciprocal activities.

We would like to reaffirm categorically that we will continue to exercise the most stringent control on the export of sensitive technologies, equipment and commodities - especially those related to weapons of mass destruction. Our track record has been impeccable in this regard. Therefore we expect recognition of our responsible policy by the international community.

India remains committed to a speedy process of nuclear disarmament leading to total and global elimination of nuclear weapons. Our adherence to the Chemical Weapons Convention and the Biological Weapons Convention is evidence of our commitment to any global disarmament regime which is non-discriminatory and verifiable. We shall also be happy to participate in the negotiations for the conclusion of a fissile material cut-off treaty in the Geneva based Conference on Disarmament.

In our neighbourhood we have many friends with whom relations of fruitful cooperation for mutual benefit have existed and deepened over a long period. We assure them that it will be our sincere endeavour to intensify and diversify those relations further for the benefit of all our peoples. For India, as for others, the prime need is for peaceful cooperation and economic development.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1890. Statement made by Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub in the Senate.

Islamabad, May 12, 1998.

The news of resumption of nuclear testing by India has not come as a surprise to us. For the past 24 years, Pakistan had consistently drawn the attention of the international community to India’s nuclear aspirations.

We had also pointed out the duplicity surrounding India’s political pronouncements and its clandestine nuclear weapons programme.

The Prime Minister of Pakistan had recently drawn the attention of the international community particularly states permanent members of the United Nations Security Council regarding Indian plans to induct nuclear weapons.

Pakistan’s repeated reminders to the international community particularly to the leaders of states permanent members of the Security Council unfortunately did not receive the attention that they merited.

The international community has, in fact, by adopting a dismissive approach encouraged India to achieve its nuclear aspirations.

The responsibility for dealing a death blow to the global efforts at nuclear non-proliferation rests squarely with India.
Pakistan reserves the right to take all appropriate measures for its security.
The Prime Minister has assured the people of Pakistan that Pakistan’s defence would be made impregnable against any Indian threat be it nuclear or conventional.

Talking to reporters in Parliament House after his statement, Mr. Gohar said Pakistan might not sign the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) if India, after conducting the nuclear tests, agrees on its ratification. “Pakistan will review its earlier stance of signing the CTBT if India does it in the changed security environment of the region,” he said. Pakistan, he said, was never ready for unilateral ratification of the CTBT but the nuclear test by India had changed the whole scenario and had forced Pakistan to have a fresh look at its earlier stance.

He said Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad had called the envoys of five permanent Security Council members to the Foreign Office and discussed the changed security situation in the region. Brushing aside an impression that the government was caught unaware about Indian nuclear tests, he said they had closely monitored the tests carried out by India. “The Indian cabinet might not have the minutest details that we have,” he repeatedly said, adding that they were also aware of the tremendous activity going on in the Pokhran area for the past many days. Responding to a flurry of questions whether Pakistan would go for the nuclear test in response to Indian explosions, he said it was for the cabinet to decide. However, he said, Pakistan’s nuclear technology was better than that of India. Asked whether Pakistan would also have to carry out five tests to match the Indian capability, he said like the missile technology Pakistan was ahead of India in nuclear technology as well. In reply to a question whether Pakistan can brave the economic sanctions in case if decided to go nuclear, he said: “Pakistan is a self reliant country.” He recalled that at the time of creation of Pakistan there was a lobby which had been propagating that it would not survive and would soon collapse. Responding to a question about the warning being given to Pakistan by the USA to refrain from conducting a nuclear test, he said these were double standards. He reiterated that Pakistan would adopt an interdependent course of action. It reserved the right to give an appropriate reply to Indian threats.
1991. Message from Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the leaders of the G-8 countries.

Excellency,

The nuclear testing by India of a whole range of weaponry, including systems which are Pakistan specific has multiplied manifold the immediacy and the magnitude of threat to our security.

Besides fundamentally altering the precarious strategic balance, which contributed to the maintenance of a tenuous peace, this Indian action has raised the possibility of aggressive military acts against Pakistan.

You would certainly agree that overt weaponization by India is yet another manifestation of the highly irresponsible and reckless action taken by India to escalate tensions in the region in recent weeks.

The BJP government has already made its aggressive designs against Pakistan a fundamental article of its policy agenda. In recent days, it has taken steps to implement its designs including military action across the Line of Control in Kashmir.

In the face of these ominous developments which pose an immediate threat to our security, we cannot be expected to remain complacent.

I had, in April 1998 drawn your attention to the consequences that would ensue from India’s induction of nuclear weapons. We are disappointed that our warnings were not heeded. The latest events have proven us completely right.

We are once again being asked to exercise restraint at an extremely critical juncture on matters involving national security and survival.

I trust that you would recognize and be receptive to Pakistan’s legitimate needs for self-defence.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

Muhammad Nawaz Sharif
Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan
1892. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub in the Senate on India's nuclear tests.

Mr. Gohar said in a statement, which he read in the Senate that India's latest nuclear tests were designed to perfect battlefield tactical arms which were a threat to New Delhi's neighbours. He asserted: "Indian actions pose immediate and grave threats to Pakistan's security and these will not go unanswered."

The statement said the government would "take all the steps it deemed necessary for national security, which were within its sovereign rights for self-defence."

He said: "India is now admittedly testing the whole range of nuclear weaponry, including battlefield tactical nuclear weapons which are Pakistan-specific."

"The news of the carrying out of two further nuclear tests corroborates our assessment and provides further confirmation, if any were needed, about India's consistent pattern of irresponsible behaviour," he said.

The Statement said: "The blind pursuit of intrinsic and inherent hegemonic impulses, reflected so often in Indian behaviour and ignored largely by the international community, despite Pakistan's repeated efforts and emboldened India to throw all cautions to the wind.

"The invoking of mandatory sanctions under the US laws against India hardly constitutes an effective response to Indian provocative actions or compensates for errors of judgment; which have seriously disrupted the regional strategic balance.

"Pakistan once again reiterates that responsibility for consequences that will inevitably ensue would lie squarely with India and those colluded and acquiesced in the weaponisation of India's nuclear programme."

Talking to reporters in Parliament House, he said Pakistan might not sign the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) if India, after conducting the nuclear tests, agrees on its ratification. "Pakistan will review its earlier stance of signing the CTBT if India does it in the changed security environment of the region," he said. Pakistan, he said, was never ready for unilateral ratification of the CTBT but the nuclear test by India had changed the whole scenario and had forced Pakistan to have a fresh look at its earlier stance.

He said Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad had called the envoys of five permanent Security Council members to the Foreign Office and discussed the changed security situation in the region. Brushing aside an impression that the government was caught unaware about Indian nuclear tests, he said they had closely monitored the tests carried out by India.

“The Indian cabinet might not have the minutest details that we have,” he repeatedly said, adding that they were also aware of the tremendous activity going on in the Pokhran area for the past many days.

Responding to a flurry of questions whether Pakistan would go for the nuclear test in response to Indian explosions, he said it was for the cabinet to decide. However, he said, Pakistan's nuclear technology was better than that of India. Asked whether Pakistan would also have to carry out five tests to match the Indian capability, he said like the missile technology Pakistan was ahead of India in nuclear technology as well.

In reply to a question whether Pakistan can brave the economic sanctions in case if decided to go nuclear, he said: “Pakistan is a self reliant country.”

He recalled that at the time of creation of Pakistan there was a lobby which had been propagating that it would not survive and would soon collapse.

Responding to a question about the warning being given to Pakistan by the USA to refrain from conducting a nuclear test, he said these were double standards. He reiterated that Pakistan would adopt an interdependent course of action. It reserved the right to give an appropriate reply to Indian threats.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1893. Media briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office to developments attending on the detonation of nuclear device by India.

The Foreign Office spokesman said on May 14 that Pakistan has been advised restraint by foreign powers which ignored and dismissed Islamabad's warnings and encouraged India to “go ahead and cross the Rubicon” leading to the “irreversible situation.”

Replying to questions about the Indian nuclear tests, he said the Federal cabinet at its three-hour meeting on May 14 resolved to meet the unprecedented threat to Pakistan disregarding any external pressures which might be “unilateral, selective and discriminatory” in matters pertaining to national security and sovereignty.
[This was the first official Press briefing after the Indian explosions on May 11 and May 13 at Pokhran in Rajasthan firing range.]

He said the Indian nuclear tests demonstrated “operationalisation of India’s grandiose ambitions” to be counted as an additional member to the exclusive Nuclear Club of Five and its hegemonic designs. It also showed India wish “to ride on its nuclear status” to claim a seat in the UN Security Council as its new permanent member.

The spokesman, replying to repeated questions from newsmen, seeking in “unambiguous” language what might be Pakistan’s response to the India nuclear explosions, said in what he described as “advisedly (cautionary) words”, that while contemplating on Pakistan’s response, “we have tried to take into account all dimensions of the unprecedented and unparalleled threat to the region”.

“Pakistan in terms of action will keep in view the threat it faces to its national security and interests”, he said adding: “We will give a well considered, sober, mature and comprehensive response.”

He, however, recalled that the cabinet at its meeting had reaffirmed its resolve to take all necessary steps within its sovereign rights for self-defence and said there should be no doubt about the effective defence preparedness to respond to the emerging situation.

Asked whether Pakistan still remained committed to its known position that it would sign the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) of 1996, if India does so, the spokesman said the Indian nuclear tests had irrevocably altered the strategic environment and changed the strategic balance in the region and rendered all nuclear non-proliferation instruments and efforts “irrelevant”. It was now for the entire world to contemplate how to contend with the changed scenario, he added.

Asked what would be the fate of stalemated talks between the Pakistan and Indian Foreign Secretaries in the changed political scenario, the spokesman replied: “The (Pakistan) Prime Minister’s initiative for resumption of negotiations with India stays as part of our foreign policy”. A dialogue is always useful, he said and believed that a meeting between Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee was likely to take place when they attend the next SAARC summit in July in Sri Lanka.

The spokesman said that Pakistan would welcome a dialogue with the Americans “who are our friends” to convey to them Pakistan’s natural concerns on the present regional situation. A high-level US team of officials headed by Assistant Secretary of State Strobe Talbot is due in Islamabad for talks with Pakistan Foreign Ministry and government leaders.
He said Pakistan had been in contact with the Chinese leaders who were the most trustworthy of this country’s friends. He said envoys of all the OIC, SAARC member countries and some other states had been briefed by the Foreign Office.

The spokesman, however, made no direct response when asked whether was it not odd that hardly any “brotherly” state of the OIC or SAARC denounced Indian nuclear threat which the government in Islamabad directly aimed against Pakistan and to destabilize the region.

The spokesman said there was no intention to recall the Pakistan High Commissioner from Delhi. He was asked whether Pakistan intended to follow Australia and New Zealand which recalled their envoys as a protest against Indian tests.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1894. Resolution unanimously adopted by the Pakistan Senate.

The Senate of Pakistan,

Meeting in a session.

Having comprehensively deliberated on the issue of resumptions of nuclear testing by India;

Determining that India’s decision to opt for overt nuclearisation carries grave implications for global and regional peace and security;

Regretting that Pakistan’s repeated warnings about India’s possession of nuclear weapons and its long standing designs to go nuclear were not heeded to by the international community.

Recalling that Pakistan has steadfastly condemned international double standards and discriminatory pressure which were totally unjustified.

Further determining that the consequences ensuing from India’s nuclear tests and weaponisation have dealt a fatal blow to the global non-proliferation regime, including NPT, CTBT and yet to be negotiated FMCT.

Affirming the determination of the Government, the Oppositions Parties and the people of Pakistan not to submit to Indian hegemony and to safeguard national security, whatever the costs.
1) Resolve the people of Pakistan will be steadfast in their support to any step that the Government of Pakistan will take after taking the whole nation into confidence in response to the new challenges and threats to national security.

2) Condemns the adamant stand of India to continue to pursue its aggressive designs and lust to acquire nuclear weapons to establish its hegemony in the region.

3) Urges the Government to work towards a national consensus based on political harmony and take such steps in consultation with all major political parties as are necessary to meet any eventually arising from the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons or conventional weapons by India.

4) Supports the Government in its firm resolve to reject any unilateral or discriminatory pressures from any quarter on matters pertaining to Pakistan's national security.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1895. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Foreign Office on latest Pakistan reaction to India’s nuclear tests.

Islamabad, May 14, 1998.

(a) The Pak Cabinet had a 3 hour long meeting in the morning in which it carried out an in-depth assessment of the situation arising out of Indian nuclear tests. All aspects of national security were comprehensively discussed. Pakistan has resolved to take all necessary steps in the interest of national security.

(b) The Cabinet decided not to yield to any pressure from any quarter. The Pakistani response is in consonance with the threat that the country is facing. The Cabinet expressed satisfaction at Pakistan’s defence preparedness.

(c) There is a clear and present danger to Pakistan. International non-proliferation efforts have been shattered. A new strategic situation has arisen. Balance of power in the region has been tilted. Asymmetry has been exacerbated. “The tests reflect the operationalisation of the Indian grandiose ambitions and hegemonic designs. They want to ride piggy back into the Security Council Club”.
(d) Replying to a question on whether Pakistan will go for a nuclear test, Spokesman Tariq Altaf stated that Pakistan will determine its own security needs. “We will give a well-considered, sober and comprehensive response.”

(e) On the New York Times report of today indicating that preparations are being made by Pakistan for a nuclear test at Chagai in Balochistan as early as Sunday, the Spokesman replied: “I wonder what the American intelligence was doing before May 11”.

(f) On the Russian, French and British decision not to impose sanctions on India, he said that sanctions are irrelevant. “You are trying to shut the door when the horse has bolted”.

(g) On whether Pakistan will review its stand on CTBT, he said that these instruments have become irrelevant. It is for the international community to consider how to deal with the new situation. We will take a fresh look at the situation.

(h) Regarding the visit of an American delegation to Pakistan tomorrow, Mr. Altaf said that this is an opportunity for Pakistan to explain to them the dangers that have been posed by the Indian tests. “We will inform them of our own national security concerns. We will lay our cards bare before them.”

(i) In response to a question regarding the messages the US is sending, he said, “we have been advised restraint not just by the US but by many other countries of the world.”

(j) On the future of Indo-Pak talks the Spokesman said, “This was an initiative taken by Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and it remains a plank of our foreign policy”.

(k) Asked whether Pakistan intends to recall its High Commissioner from Delhi, he replied in the negative.

(l) At the end of the briefing, in response to persistent queries by journalists about any precipitate action Pakistan is considering, Mr. Tariq Altaf replied: “We have to take everything into account. We have to consider everything before taking any precipitate action. Please have trust in your government’s capacity to take the right decision. In this situation we have to be careful”.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
1896. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to some Heads of State on Indian nuclear tests.

Excellency,

I am sure that you have been following the developments in our region since the nuclear tests conducted by India on 11 and 13 May 1998. Even before the dust settled at Pokhran, the Indian nuclear test site, New Delhi has raised demands that “Islamabad should realize the change in the geo-strategic situation in the region” and threatened that India will “deal firmly and strongly with Pakistan”.

Thus it is clear that overt Indian nuclear weaponisation has seriously upset the strategic balance in the region and emboldened India to make a naked assertion of her hostile intentions towards Pakistan.

In the background lie the two main planks of the ruling Bharatiya Janta Party (BJP)’s agenda. Long before it came to power the party had set for itself the goals of: i) overt nuclear weaponisation and ii) resolution of the Kashmir problem by use of force. One has been accomplished; the other is now being actualized. The seriousness with which the BJP has so far pursued its anti-Pakistan agenda leaves no room for complacency.

New Delhi feels secure in its belief that the world would signal the same helplessness towards her resort to use of force for a final resolution of the Kashmir problem as it has shown earlier in the face of the Indian overt nuclear weaponisation.

In pursuance of my policy for promotion of peace and stability in the region I had taken an initiative for resumption of dialogue with a view to achieving a peaceful solution of the Kashmir dispute and improvement of relations with India. The Indian leaders have, instead, responded with atomic tests and threatened to use nuclear weapons. Following upon that we are now faced with escalating threats of provocative actions. This is in keeping with the Indian record of aggression against Pakistan. Consequently, the tension in the region has been raised to a dangerous threshold.

We believe India is now bent upon creating conditions of extreme instability in the area. This situation is fraught with dangers. Indian nuclear missiles of various ranges project power in the region and beyond.

In this critical hour we have no doubt that the international community will take effective steps to restrain India from its bellicosity. Realizing the gravity of the situation I trust it necessary to focus your attention on the immediacy and magnitude of the threat posed to our security by the Indian aggressive agenda.
Please accept, Excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Mohammad Nawaz Sharif)
Prime Minister

1897. Interview of Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub with the BBC.

Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub said on May 16 that nuclear test by Pakistan “is just a matter of timing and the Government of Pakistan will choose as to when to conduct the test.” To question whether the test was certain, Mr. Gohar said, “it is very close to certain but the timing is our choice.”

In an interview with BBC, Mr. Gohar told the world that his country was almost certainly going to carry out a nuclear blast in response to India’s five tests. The only thing to be decided is the timing of the explosion, he said and added the question was not if but when.

He said Pakistan was weighing up how much international community intended to hurt India for conducting five nuclear tests this week. From Islamabad’s point of view, he said, sanctions announced so far were mild.

Asked whether there had been any change in Pakistan’s nuclear policy, Mr. Gohar replied: “No change whatsoever. The impression that everybody is trying to give is that of a bang-for-a-bang or tit-for-tat response. That’s never been our policy.”

He added: “We have to make a very measured and calculated decision.”

Responding to another question, he said: “We explained to the high-powered US delegation our security concerns, the geo-political situation and how the imbalance has been tilted in India’s favour.”

Mr. Gohar said: “We are calculating our position like a chartered accountant as to what will be the impact of all these sanctions on India.”

If Pakistan was not going to conduct a test of its own, then what other sort of response could it give? To this question he said: “That is precisely what I said. It is as to ‘when’ and that is the situation as it stands.”
He added: “I did not say we are going to have a bang in the next few days or that very moment. No, that is not the situation. The situation is that we are assessing the entire gambit of the situation as to how sanctions against India will work”.

“We seemed to have come to a rough calculation that if things stand as they are and if the sanctions against India last about a year, there would be a loss of $23 billion,” he said and added: “We have to assess and we are in that process as to what effect these sanctions will have on Pakistan.”

He said: “We had been having sanctions and embargoes since 1965. So, the situation remains exactly where it is. We have the advantage to conduct a test as and when we like.”

Replying to a query, Mr. Gohar said: “The G-8 summit was itself divided on Indian nuclear blasts. So, it depends on how President Clinton would be able to phrase his words in the resolution, if there is any, against India. We feel encouraged right now but from all points of view the world reaction (to India’s blasts) has been very mild.”

Replying to yet another question, the Foreign Minister maintained that the US sanctions against New Delhi certainly did not satisfy Islamabad. “Some major US companies, which said that they are reconsidering investment in India, are not government-owned; they are private. Shareholders want profits from the investment they make. We have to see where that money will be invested,” he added.

“These companies and corporate tycoons would be after the government to dilute these sanctions as much as possible as happens all over the world,” he said.

Asked if he was not simply convinced that sanctions will be hard enough or long enough to persuade Pakistan no to conduct a nuclear test, Mr. Gohar said “Precisely not. India would not be struck so hard. We have calculated it. It is just a matter of time.”

To a query if he meant a test was likely, he said: “The question is when you conduct it.”

“A nuclear test by Pakistan is certain,” he added.

He dispelled the impression that Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s statements in last two days were conflicting. “The Prime Minister has certainly said that Pakistan will act responsibly and will not take any hasty decision but he also did not rule out a nuclear test,” Mr. Gohar added.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
Pakistan’s disappointment at the response of G-8 to Indian Nuclear Tests.

Islamabad, May 18, 1998.

Pakistan accused on May 18 India of spreading a rumor about a Pakistani nuclear test during the G-8 summit in Birmingham and thus “insulted” the leaders of the eight industrialized nations.

The Pakistan Foreign Ministry summoned ambassadors of the G-8 countries and conveyed to them Pakistan’s deep disappointment at the muted ‘response’ to last week’s Indian nuclear tests, an official statement said.

The Foreign Ministry told them that the Indians had made a ‘crude attempt on May 17 to slow confusion at the G-8 summit’ to shift the focus away from India by spreading a rumor that Pakistan had carried out a nuclear test.

“India thus insulted the G-8 leaders some of whom even raised at the summit,” the diplomats were told.

Pakistan told the ambassadors that although the G-8 statement claimed to have enhanced and strengthened non-proliferation regimes and international peace the fact was that the five Indian tests had left the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty “in shreds”.

The Indian move “irrevocably damaged peace and security in the region,” the Pakistani statement said.

It was emphasized to the diplomats that “the policy of appeasement was always counter-productive since it encouraged and emboldened habitual transgressors,” the statement said.

Pakistan appreciated the efforts of some of the G-8 leaders who advocated a stronger outcome of the summit, it said.

But it was ‘regretted’ that others had chosen to ‘dilute’ the G-8 statement, it said, adding: “It appeared that these countries were influenced by narrow economic interests, despite a clear record of Indian military adventurism in the region and its hegemonistic designs.”
1899. Extract from the Statement by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sheriff on nuclear tests.

"Since that day (When India conducted nuclear tests), the world around has suddenly undergone a qualitative change. We have to contend with new realities, heightened dangers and an imminent threat to our security. Since May 11 we are living under the dark shadows of Indian nuclear saber rattling.

The fundamentalist Indian leadership bared its teeth even before the dust settled at Pokhran. The Indian leaders couldn't contain themselves a minute longer. Immediately they raised the demand that Islamabad should realize the change in the geo strategic situation in the region.

The open message was that Pakistan should abandon its principled policy to support the indigenous struggle of the people of Kashmir for their right of self determination promised to them by India itself and the world community through the UN Security Council resolutions…

The Indians have spurned the peace initiative (from Pakistan) and answered with atomic tests… and gone to the extent of threatening to use nuclear weapons. Statements emanating from Indian leaders virtually amount to nuclear blackmail by India to impose a military solution in Kashmir.

Overt Indian nuclear weaponisation has seriously upset the strategic balance in the region and emboldened India to make a naked assertion of hostile intentions towards Pakistan.

India has repeatedly committed aggression against us. The Indian missile and nuclear programme has never been a secret. For their own reasons and in spite of its vast range and sophistication, the western world has never before expressed any concern at the Indian nuclear programme…

We are being asked to show restraint. Have we not always shown utmost restraint for all those years since we had the nuclear capability? What did we earn in return for this restraint? Discriminatory and punitive measures were imposed on us. And in a manifestly unjust and unfair approach, Pakistan was penalized for every Indian escalatory step on the nuclear and ballistic ladder.

The talk of sanctions is not only familiar to us but it also does not rattle us. We have learned to live with these punitive measures. Our legitimate need for security is still being ignored. This fills us with apprehension even now. We have made clear to all our friends and well wishers that we are not seeking any bargains..
India defiance on the other hand has even now attracted some sanctions and more understanding; some have even offered endorsement. No amount of condemnation has changed the magnitude of the threat posed to Pakistan. Practically the sanctions mean little and change nothing. The reality on the ground remains.

The balance of power in the region has been violently tilted. Under these circumstances, our undivided focus must be on the preservation of our national security interests.

Apart from threatening Pakistan India is now blackmailing the world by offers of bargain on the CTBT. We believe that the Indian actions have rendered the non proliferation regime and instruments such as the NPT (Non Proliferation Treaty) and the CTBT irrelevant.

The Indian tests have posed new challenges and dilemmas in the field of non proliferation. Fresh thinking is now needed on these issues…

We have not taken any action in haste. We have not behaved in a tit for tat manner. We have not let any madness engulf us. Ladies and gentlemen, whatever decision we eventually take will be in our supreme national interest.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1900. Briefing by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the foreign media on Indian nuclear tests.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I extend to you a warm welcome and that is in spite of the heat of the season as well as of May 11. Since that day the world around us has suddenly undergone a qualitative change. We have to contend with new realities heightened dangers and an imminent threat to our security.

Since May 11, we are living under the dark shadow of Indian nuclear saber rattling. The fundamentalist Indian leadership, bared its teeth even before the dust settled at Pokhran, the Indian leaders could not contain themselves a minute longer. Immediately they raised the demand that ‘Islamabad should realize the change in the geo-strategic situation in the region’. The open message was that Pakistan should abandon its principled policy to support the indigenous struggle of the people of Kashmir for their right of self determination promised to them by India itself and the world community through the United Nations Security Council Resolutions.

You would recall that I had initiated dialogue with India with a view to resolving all the issues through peaceful means. The Indians have spurned the peace initiative and answered with atomic tests across our border and gone to the extent of threatening to use nuclear weapons. Statements emanating from Indian leaders virtually amount to a nuclear blackmail by India to impose military solution in Kashmir. Overt Indian nuclear weaponization has seriously upset the strategic balance in the region and emboldened India to make a naked assertion of her hostile intentions towards Pakistan.

We are not surprised at the actualization of the Indian hegemonic agenda just as we were not surprised at the conduct of Indian tests. India has repeatedly committed aggression against us.

The Indian missiles and nuclear programme has never been a secret. For their own reasons and in spite of their full awareness of its vast range and sophistication the western world has never before expressed any concern at the Indian nuclear programme. The BJP’s National Agenda clearly spoke of the nuclear option and the induction of nuclear weapons. We could see the writing on the wall. I immediately wrote letters to the leaders of major powers warning them of the impending danger. They chose in disregard of our advice. How should we now understand or interpret their indignation at the Indian nuclear tests? Have they offered any explanation to the world of their own indifference to the Indian nuclear programme and its culmination in tests ranging from low yield to the thermonuclear?

We are being asked to show restraint. Have we not always shown utmost restraint for all those years since we have had the nuclear capability. Our record and commitment to non-proliferation has been impeccable. What did we earn in exchange of the restraint? Discriminatory and punitive measures were imposed on us.

In a manifestly unjust and unfair approach Pakistan was penalized for every Indian escalatory step on the nuclear and ballistic ladder. The talk of sanctions is not only familiar to us but it also does not rattle us. We have learnt to live with these punitive measures.

Our legitimate need for security is still being ignored. This fills us with apprehensions even now. We have made clear to all our friends and well-wishers that we are not seeking any bargains. Can the Pakistani nation afford to barter its independence, security and sovereignty? What is the price for liberty and freedom, dignity and honour?
Indian defiance on the other hand has even now attracted some sanctions but more understanding. Some have even offered endorsement.

No amount of condemnation or sanctions have changed the immediacy or magnitude of the threat to us. Practically sanctions means little and change nothing. The reality on the ground remains.

Pakistan has to contend with that reality and its dark shadow on our security. We have to contend with the Indian threats which may materialize any time. The Indian record of aggression and irresponsible behaviour is a stark reality for Pakistan. Our compulsions are not hidden. The balance of power in the region has been violently tilted. Under these circumstances our undivided focus must be on the preservation of our national security interests.

In this critical hour we are much encouraged by the steadfastness, the moral support of our friend China which is a peace loving country and the only nuclear power which has promised not to use nuclear weapons, under any circumstances, against a non nuclear weapon state. We are also heartened by expressions of support and solidarity by the Islamic World.

I am particularly grateful to President Clinton for his three telephone calls during which he conveyed his strong appreciation and understanding for the threat to Pakistan’s security that has arisen as a result of the Indian Nuclear tests. I also appreciate the concern shown by the other world leaders during their telephonic conversation with me.

Apart from threatening Pakistan India is now blackmailing the world by offers of bargain on the CTBT. We believe that the Indian actions have rendered the non proliferation regime and instruments such as NPT and CTBT irrelevant. The Indian tests have posed new challenges and dilemmas in the field of non proliferation. Fresh thinking is now needed on these issues.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Pakistan is a democratic country. The aspirations of the people of Pakistan provide the guiding path and govern our actions. Our nation has risen to the occasion. There is complete national consensus to respond to the challenges and the threat. This nation has a history of facing challenges and has never submitted to threats. Any misadventure will meet a resolute response. The whole nation has demonstrated a sober and mature approach to this complicated situation. We have not taken any action in haste. We have not behaved in a tit for tat manner. We have not let any madness engulf us. Whatever decision we will eventually take it will be in our supreme national interest.

◆◆◆◆◆
Suo Motu Statement by Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee in Parliament on Indian Nuclear tests.

New Delhi, May 27, 1998.

Sir,

I rise to inform the House of momentous developments that have taken place while we were in recess. On 11 May, India successfully carried out three underground nuclear tests. Two more underground tests on 13 May completed the planned series of tests. I would like this House to join me in paying fulsome tribute to our scientists, engineers and defence personnel whose singular achievements have given us a renewed sense of national pride and self confidence. Sir, in addition to the statement I make, I have also taken the opportunity to submit to the House a paper entitled ‘Evolution of India’s Nuclear Policy’.

2. In 1947, when India emerged as a free country to take its rightful place in the comity of nations, the nuclear age had already dawned. Our leaders then took the crucial decision to opt for self reliance, and freedom of thought and action. We rejected the Cold War paradigm and chose the more difficult path of non alignment. Our leaders also realized that a nuclear weapon free world would enhance not only India’s security but also the security of all nations. That is why disarmament was and continues to be a major plank in our foreign policy.

3. During the 50s, India took the lead in calling for an end to all nuclear weapon testing. Addressing the Lok Sabha on 2 April, 1954, Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru, to whose memory we pay homage today, stated ‘nuclear, chemical and biological energy and power should not be used to forge weapons of mass destruction’. He called for negotiations for prohibition and elimination of nuclear weapons and in the interim, a standstill agreement to halt nuclear testing. This call was not heeded.

4. In 1965, along with a small group of non aligned countries, India put forward the idea of an international non proliferation agreement under which the nuclear weapon states would agree to give up their arsenals provided other countries refrained from developing or acquiring such weapons. This balance of rights and obligations was not accepted. In the 60’s our security concerns deepened. The country sought security guarantees but the countries we turned to were unable to extend to us the expected assurances. As a result, we made it clear that we would not be able to sign the NPT.

5. The Lok Sabha debated the issue on 5 April, 1968. Prime Minister late Smt. Indira Gandhi assured the House that ‘We shall be guided entirely by our self enlightenment and the considerations of national security’. This was a turning point and this House strengthened the decision of the then Government by reflecting a national consensus.

6. Our decision not to sign the NPT was in keeping with our basic objectives. In 1974, we demonstrated our nuclear capability. Successive Governments thereafter have taken all necessary steps in keeping with that resolve and national will, to safeguard India’s nuclear option. This was the primary reason behind the 1996 decision for not signing the CTBT, a decision that also enjoyed consensus of this House.

7. The decades of the 80’s and 90’s had meanwhile witnessed the gradual deterioration of our security environment as a result of nuclear and missile proliferation. In our neighbourhood, nuclear weapons had increased and more sophisticated delivery systems inducted. In addition, India has also been the victim of externally aided and abetted terrorism, militancy and clandestine war.

8. At a global level, we see no evidence on the part of the nuclear weapon free world. Instead, we have seen that the NPT has been extended indefinitely and unconditionally, perpetuating the existence of nuclear weapons in the hands of the five countries.

9. Under such circumstances, the Government was faced with a difficult decision. The touchstone that has guided us in making the correct choice clear was national security. These tests are a continuation of the policies set into motion that put this country on the path of self reliance and independence of thought and actions.

10. India is now a nuclear weapon state. This is a reality that cannot be denied. It is not a conferment that we seek; nor is it a status for others to grant. It is an endowment to the nation by our scientists and engineers. It is India’s due, the right of one sixth of human kind. Our strengthened capability adds to our sense of responsibility. We do not intend to use these weapons for aggression or for mounting threats against any country. These are weapons of self defence, to ensure that India is not subjected to nuclear threats or coercion. We do not intend to engage in an arms race.

11. We had taken a number of initiatives in the past. We regret that these proposals did not receive a positive response from other nuclear weapon states. In fact, had their response been positive, we need not have gone in for our current testing programme. We have been and will continue to be in the forefront of the calls for opening negotiations for a Nuclear Weapons Convention, so that this challenge can be dealt with in the same manner that we have dealt with the scourge of two other weapons of mass destruction – through the Biological Weapons Convention and the Chemical Weapons Convention.
12. Traditionally, India has been an outward looking country. Our strong commitment to multilateralism is reflected in our active participation in organizations like the United Nations. This engagement will continue. The policies of economic liberalization introduced in recent years have increased our regional and global linkages and my Government intends to deepen and strengthen these ties.

13. Our nuclear policy has been marked by restraint and openness. We have not violated any international agreement either in 1974 or now, in 1998. The restraint exercised for 24 years, after having demonstrated our capability in 1974, is in itself a unique example. Restraint, however, has to arise from strength. It cannot be based upon indecision or doubt. The action involved was balanced in that it was the minimum necessary to maintain what is an irreducible component of our national security calculus.

14. Subsequently, Government has already announced that India will now observe a voluntary moratorium and refrain from conducting underground nuclear test explosions. We have also indicated willingness to move towards a de jure formalization of this declaration.

15. The House is no doubt aware of the different reactions that have emanated from the people of India and from different parts of the world. The overwhelming support of our citizens is our source of strength. It tells us not only that this decision was right but also that our country wants a focused leadership, which attends to their security needs. This, I pledge to do as a sacred duty. We have also been greatly heartened by the outpouring of support from Indians abroad. They have, with one voice, spoken in favour of our action. To the people of India, and to Indians abroad, I convey my profound gratitude. We look to the people of India and Indians abroad for support in the difficult period ahead.

16. In this, the fiftieth year of our independence, we stand at a defining moment in our history. The rationale for the Government’s decision is based on the same policy tenets that have guided us for five decades. These policies have been sustained successfully because of an underlying national consensus. It is vital to maintain the consensus as we approach the next millennium. In my statement today and in the paper placed before the House, I have elaborated on the rationale behind the Government’s decision and outlined our approach for the future. The present decision and future actions will continue to reflect a commitment to sensibilities and obligations of an ancient civilization, a sense of responsibility and restraint, but a restraint born of the assurances of action, not of doubts or apprehension. Avoiding triumphalism, let us work together towards our shared objective in ensuring that as we move towards a new millennium, India will take its rightful place in the International community.
Our High Commissioner in Pakistan was called in by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary at 0210 hours (IST) this morning. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary conveyed to our High Commissioner that India was preparing to attack the nuclear facilities of Pakistan. Our High Commissioner dismissed this as an utterly absurd and malicious allegation. Pakistan has also sought to spread this canard in the UN and some important world capitals. In the normal course we would not have lent dignity to this vicious propaganda but as it could be a part of a more nefarious design, we would like to make it clear that India stands committed to uphold its treaty obligations and agreements including the India-Pakistan Agreement on the Prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities. There is no intention, on our part, to heighten tension between India and Pakistan. We see in these Pakistani efforts yet another example of their deep frustration. We are confident that all concerned will reject these crude manifestations of the traditional Pakistani mindset of hostility against India.
1903. Announcement by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif of Pakistan conducting its Nuclear Tests.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif made the announcement in a televised speech on May 28 that Pakistan has detonated five nuclear devices and appealed to the nation to give up luxuries and comforts to face the new challenge to successfully pass through the great test.

This had become inevitable for the security and defence of the country after the five Indian nuclear blasts and the threatening statements by the Indian leaders. He said in his 30 minute address. We have settled score with India by equaling nuclear tests with it.

He said if sanctions are imposed on Pakistan, the country would have to walk on a path of self reliance which will ultimately lead it to road to prosperity. Vibrant nations are always ready for such challenges. We have the capabilities for such a test.

Mr. Nawaz Sharif said after military sanctions were imposed on Pakistan, the country exploded five nuclear tests. And now when economic sanctions will be imposed, it should become self reliant and prosperous economically.

It is an auspicious day, of historic significance. Allah Almighty gave us the courage and determination to take the decision of carrying out the nuclear tests. He said opening his speech to make the second most important announcement after the independence of the country in 1947.

The Prime Minister said when India conducted its first test in 1974, Pakistan was only aware of peace and not nuclear weapons. ‘But the explosion posed new dangers to us and the region. Whenever we drew the attention of the world to tell it that Indian military and nuclear preparations were meant for Pakistan and not China because China despite being a big power has no hegemonistic designs while India has, nobody listened to us. And the world went along India’s stand.

Mr. Nawaz said he had proposed that China, the USA and Russia should rid the region of the nuclear race and Pakistan was not trying to join it. We could have conducted the nuclear test 15/20 years ago, but we did not because we have in view the poverty and backwardness of the region, which needed massive development. We demanded that India should be stopped from the blind nuclear race.

But instead of putting pressure on India, he said sanctions were imposed on Pakistan for a sin which Islamabad had never committed. Still Pakistan did not lose patience as it hoped that the world would impose sanctions on India, but instead Islamabad was told to exercise restraint and show sense of responsibility, he said.

The Prime Minister said that on the other hand India was conducting nuclear explosions and deploying missiles at Pakistan's borders. “We were being asked to learn to live with our heads down. Threats of attack on Azad Kashmir were being given by India. Does such a country deserve to have nuclear weapons?
By conducting five nuclear explosions. Indians forgot civilized norms and how to talk to other countries.”

The world he said, should have blockaded India for such actions and UN Security Council should have imposed effective sanctions so that Delhi should have realized its mistake, but unfortunately, no such step was taken.

It had become inevitable for Pakistan to give a matching response to India.
Whatever we have done is the decision of the people of Pakistan. The nation wanted this great job to be done by me, and I did it.

The Prime Minister said that after the nuclear explosions, India was being asked by foreign countries to sign the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty CTBT on the promise that it will not again conduct nuclear tests and they had thus forgotten the sin Delhi had committed.

But at the same time, we were being urged to show restraint. I am not the representative of a coward peace loving nation. We ran out of patience because of the Indian actions. We are a self respecting nation, which can put its head on the chopping bloc for self esteem.

Mr. Nawaz said he was well aware of the concern of the nation during the past some time. He said he was feeling their pulse. We told the world that we are ready to face the enemy, will not surrender to the threat and pressure of sanctions.
We decided to bravely face difficulties and problems. All the religious, sectarian and political forces upheld the national esteem. We will now have to cope up with the new test successfully. What we could not do during the past 50 year, you decided to get it done by me.

◆◆◆◆◆
1904. Briefing by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad to Heads of Mission stationed in Islamabad.

Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad told the ambassadors and heads of mission based in Islamabad on May 29 that Pakistan had crossed the nuclear threshold with a high sense of responsibility.

He told them: ‘Our nuclear weapons capability is solely for national self defence. It will never be used for offensive purposes.

The ambassadors and heads of missions were called to the Foreign Office in groups (G-8, OIC, SAARC, ECO and others) to be personally briefed by the Foreign Secretary on the rationale for Pakistan’s decision.

He told the envoys that Pakistan proposes that all members of the international community should join it in addressing the implications of nuclearisation of South Asia with a view to evolving effective, non discriminatory, and verifiable measures to promote peace, stability and enhanced confidence in the Indian Ocean and adjacent regions.

In his briefing, Mr. Shamshad said that the decision to weaponise Pakistan’s nuclear programme was dictated by the imperative need to preserve regional peace and security that was gravely threatened by India’s overt weaponisation and the consequential collapse of the existential deterrence.

He said: ‘Indian leadership, after carrying out a whole range of nuclear tests threatened us with nuclear blackmail to impose a military solution on the Kashmir issue. In the face of the magnitude of the threat posed to our security, Pakistan was left with no choice.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
Statement made by the President of the UN Security Council on 29 May 1998 at a Meeting of the Council on India and Pakistan Nuclear Tests.

The Security Council strongly deplores the underground nuclear tests that Pakistan conducted on 28 May 1998, despite overwhelming international concern and calls for restraint. Reaffirming the statement of its President of 14 May 1998 (S/PRST/1998/12), on Indian nuclear tests of 11 and 13 May, the Council strongly urges India and Pakistan to refrain from any further tests. It is of the view that testing by India and then by Pakistan is contrary to the de facto moratorium on the testing of nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and to global efforts towards nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament. The Council also expresses its concern at the effects of this development on peace and stability in the region.

The Security Council reaffirms the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons Treaty NPT and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty CTBT. The Council appeals to India and Pakistan, and all other states which have not yet done so, without conditions. The council also encourages India and Pakistan to participate, in a positive spirit, in the proposed negotiations with other States for a fissile material cut off treaty in Geneva with a view to reaching early agreement.

The Security calls upon all parties to exercise maximum restraint and to take immediate steps to reduce and remove tensions between them. The Council reaffirms that the sources of tension in South Asia should be reduced and eliminated only through peaceful dialogue and not by the use of force or other military means.

The Security Council urges India and Pakistan to resume the dialogue between them on all outstanding issues, including all those that the parties have already discussed, especially matters concerning peace and security, in order to remove the tensions between them and to enhance their economic and political cooperation. The Council calls upon India and Pakistan to avoid any steps or statements that could lead to further instability or impede their bilateral dialogue.

The Security Council will remain seized of the matter.
1906. Announcement by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad of the sixth test conducted by Pakistan thereby completing the current series.

After successfully conducting five nuclear tests on May 28, 1998, Pakistan completed the current series by another nuclear test on May 30. Let me clarify that there was only one test conducted on May 30. All the tests conducted were fully contained. There was no release of radioactivity. The result was as expected, the devices tested correspond to weapons configuration, compatible with delivery systems.

The Prime Minister has congratulated the Pakistani scientists, engineers and technicians on their mastering of complex and advanced technologies through dedicated team work.

I know you are very keen and perhaps a little impatient to throw all your questions at me. But before I open the floor I think it will be useful for all of us, including friends who have traveled from far and wide, to see this whole question of nuclearisation of South Asia in its political indeed I dare say, its philosophical perspective.

To our friends in the western world the nuclear question is uni-dimensional. Their undivided focus has been and remains on non-proliferation as concept. Only the philosophy of the concept as adapted to their own intent and purpose, appeals to them, the all important underlying causes are conveniently ignored.

I would for a moment like to ask you to reflect on the obverse i.e. proliferation in South Asia. India initiated its nuclear programme right after independence and detonated a device as early as 1974. New Delhi then feverishly engaged in a massive nuclear and missile programme to satisfy its grandiose ambitions and hegemonistic designs. Their track record at that point showed aggression against China, wars against Pakistan and a patently illegal contract of Kashmir, accompanied by total denial of the right of self-determination to the people of Kashmir as enshrined in the Security Council resolutions.

The fact of our existence as the neighbour of an expansionist and a hegemonistic power, taught us the inevitable lesson that we must search for security. Contemporary history held only one lesson for us. The answer lay in credible deterrence.

Today we have proved our credibility. There are no doubts left any more. The era of ambiguity is behind us but may I say to you, ladies and gentlemen, that the problem stays.
The high priests of non-proliferation do not scratch below the surface. The symptom is their problem. The disease afflicts us. A whole vast field of the non-proliferation regime has been built up. The desire is to confine everybody within its four walls. But the real causes of insecurity, conflicts and tensions in our region need to be redressed. It is therefore, imperative to find a peaceful and just solution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

Condemnations and sanctions are expression of the injured ego of the powers who arrogate to themselves the high responsibility of keeping the peace and the means to ensure peace in their part of the world. For the rest of the world their interest does not go beyond their own preoccupation with non-proliferation. They would leave the critical question surrounding peace and security to the narrow confines of the 'bilateral context'. They know very well that this is a dark tunnel where sounds reverberate but do not lead to light at the end of the tunnel.

Genuine contribution to peace and security can be made by constructive engagement in the search for permanent solutions. The councils of the world should not be convened to heap more criticism for that will evidently be fruitless but to devise ways and means to address the real issues.

Our decision to exercise the nuclear option was an expression of self defence. In restoring this strategic balance, Pakistan has given only a bare minimum response. It is not our intention to enter into an arms race. The history of the Cold War era shows that such disastrous races are counter productive and definitely not sustainable. The only race we propose to run is for economic development.

Over one billion people of our region do not want and certainly cannot afford to divert their precious resources for a nuclear confrontation in South Asia. We are determined to seek ways and means to cool the temperature and to lower the tensions.

Pakistan has always exercised maximum restraint. We will continue to do so. Our capabilities demonstrated by our six nuclear tests are only for self defence and only to deter aggression. This has been clearly stated by the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister has also affirmed Pakistan's determination to engage in a constructive dialogue with other countries especially major powers to promote the goal of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation in the world.

The Prime Minister has also reaffirmed the government's determination to resume Pakistan - India dialogue to address all outstanding issues including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir as well as peace and security.

We are prepared to enter into discussions with India for taking all steps that are necessary to ensure mutual restraint and equitable measures for nuclear stabilization in our region.
We have already stated at the highest level that Pakistan has not and will not transfer sensitive technologies to other states or entities.

The nuclearisation of South Asia poses new challenges for global non-proliferation. The history of this region tells us that non-proliferation cannot be ensured in a security void.

Compelling security concerns have to be discussed together with measures to promote the goals of non-proliferation. Global non-proliferation regimes can best be promoted by addressing the very factors that impel proliferation.

The new global security order cannot be predicated on trying to freeze the iniquities and ignore injustice.

As a responsible country whose record of restraint and responsibility is impeccable, Pakistan today assures the international community and in particular India of our willingness to enter into immediate discussions to address all matters of peace and security including urgent measures to prevent the dangers of nuclear conflagration.

A press release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs in New Delhi on the same day noted the Pakistani test and said: "We are in the knowledge of Pakistan having conducted one more nuclear test today. The development was expected. Facts are being ascertained. Government’s stand has been made clear by Prime Minister in Parliament .... As is well known, India is already observing a voluntary moratorium. Pakistan has sought to justify its nuclear tests by projecting an alleged threat from India. As Prime Minister has already stated, India does not pose a threat to Pakistan. The Prime Minister also reiterated the offer to hold discussions with Pakistan on a no first use agreement reflecting our desire to maintain peace and stability in the region. Government is watching the situation carefully. Government remains fully prepared to deal firmly and effectively with any threat to India’s national security."
Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on Reaction of the UN Security Council to the Nuclear Tests conducted by Pakistan.

We note with regret that the Security Council, in reacting to the nuclear tests carried out by Pakistan, has made several unwarranted references to India. Much of the Council’s statement is a repetition of the one it issued on 14th May to which we have already given a response on 15th May, 1998. Nevertheless, it would be appropriate to put the developments in perspective.

2. We are astonished that the Council urges India not to conduct any further tests. Prime Minister has repeatedly stated, as widely reported in the media, and confirmed in the suo motu statement delivered in Parliament on 27th May, 1998, that India will observe a voluntary moratorium and refrain from conducting tests. India is also willing to move to a de-jure formulation of this declaration. The Prime Minister has also announced that we are willing to participate in the negotiations on a Fissile Material Cut Off Treaty (FMCT) in the Commission on Disarmament in Geneva.

3. The misleading references in Security Council’s Presidential statement obfuscate the nature of Pakistan’s nuclear and missile programmes, particularly the well documented fact that they are long established and are based on clandestine acquisitions and transfers.

4. India remains firmly committed to a policy of friendly and cooperative relations with all its neighbours, the promotion of peace and stability in the region and the resolution of all outstanding issues through bilateral dialogue and negotiations.

5. As the Prime Minister has stated, we have always desired to pursue the path of peace and of comprehensive and constructive dialogue with Pakistan. This is a manifestation of our national confidence and strength. Our proposals for the modalities of the dialogue as also a range of other proposals are with Pakistan and we await their response. Our dialogue includes peace and security issues including Confidence Building Measures. The international community can rest assured that on our part, there is no desire to heighten tensions and Pakistan faces no threat from India.

6. Our commitment to restraint is evident in the Prime Minister’s statement in Parliament on 28th May, 1998 that the Government is ready to discuss a ‘no first use’ agreement with Pakistan, as also with other countries bilaterally, or in a collective forum. The Presidential Statement ignores India’s security concerns, which go beyond South Asia.
7. On the broad issue of the nuclear environment that forced us to conduct these tests, which the Prime Minister again emphasized in Parliament were not directed against any country. The Prime Minister reiterated our commitment to the complete elimination of nuclear weapons within a specified framework of time. India calls on all nuclear weapon states and indeed the international community to join with it in opening early negotiations for a Nuclear Weapons Convention so that these weapons can be dealt with in a global non discriminatory framework as the other two weapons of mass destruction have been, through the Biological Weapons Convention and the Chemical Weapons Convention.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1908. Interview of Dr. A. Q. Khan with the Observer of London as reported by the Dawn on Pakistan’s nuclear programme. Karachi, June 1, 1998.

Question: what do you say to the claim that the BCCI bank funded Pakistan’s nuclear programme?

Answer: Totally baseless, without any foundation concocted. It is full of lies. All the money came from government funds. We saved money from important projects elsewhere and used it for the nuclear project.

Q: Has Pakistan smuggled components for its nuclear programme?

A: No country can make everything. You have a concept, make a design and then buy whatever is cheap from wherever. If unnecessary restrictions are placed on you, you shop in the open market. We tried to buy planes from the USA. They refused to deliver them and blocked our money. Is this justice? They never accept that our engineers and scientists can do whatever their engineers and scientists can. Why not

Q: What did Pakistan achieve from these tests?

A: This has been a successful nuclear explosion by all definitions. It was exactly as we had planned and the results were as good as we had hoped.

Q: Were they fission or fusing devices?

A: They were all boosted fission devices using Uranium 235. We have been manufacturing this at Kahuta for up to 19 years. The first enrichment was done on 4 April, 1978. The plant was made operational in 1979 and by 1981 we were producing substantial quantities of uranium. Until 1982-83 we were producing low enriched uranium and from 1983 started producing weapons grade uranium which is more than 90 per cent enriched.

Q: How does Pakistan’s nuclear programme compare with India’s?
A: They have used an old technology of plutonium from spent fuel, whereas we have used enriched uranium, which is a much more sophisticated and safe process.

Q: What was the total yield of the tests?
A: One was a big bomb which had a yield of between 30 and 35 kilotons, twice as big as the one dropped on Hiroshima. The other four were small tactical weapons of low yield. None of these explosions was thermonuclear. But we can do a fusion blast if asked.

Q: How long will it take?
A: Much quicker than one expects when the Indian Prime Minister gave a go ahead, their scientists took more than a month. Our scientists took 15 to 16 days.

Q: How many bombs do India and Pakistan have?
A: The numbers are less important than their effectiveness and sophistication. If there is a war you need only a few. Deterrence is the main advantage. Now they know we also have nuclear weapons they will think 10 times before invading us.

Q: Can your programme continue despite sanctions?
A: Yes we can. Sanctions do not affect any programme. We are totally independent and self reliant and make everything here.

Q: Has a change of government ever affected your programme?
A: It is a national project and a national priority and no government ever caused any obstacle.

Q: When were you first able to explode a nuclear device?
A: At the end of 1984. Pakistan never wanted to make nuclear weapons. It was forced to do so. The Indian nuclear explosion in 1974 brought a qualitative change. We kept quiet, but when the BJP assumed power Indian Prime Minister Vajpayee said India is a nuclear weapons state which created a big question of security for Pakistan so we had no other option.
Joint Communiqué issued by Five Permanent Members (P-5) of the UN Security Council on Nuclear Tests.

1. Bearing in mind the responsibility of their countries for the maintenance of international peace and security, the Foreign Ministers of China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom and the United States met in Geneva on 4 June to coordinate their response to the grave situation created by the nuclear tests carried out in May by India and then by Pakistan. The ministers condemned these States, expressed their deep concern about the danger to peace and stability in the region and pledged to cooperate closely in urgent efforts to prevent a nuclear and missile arms race in the sub-continent, to bolster the non-proliferation regime and to encourage reconciliation and peaceful resolution of differences between India and Pakistan.

2. The Ministers agreed that quick action is needed to arrest the further escalation of regional tensions stimulated by the recent nuclear tests. India and Pakistan should, therefore, stop all further such tests. They should refrain from the weaponisation or deployment of nuclear weapons, from the testing or deployment of missiles, capable of delivering nuclear weapons. They should also halt provocative statements; refrain from any military movements that could be construed as threatening and increase transparency in their actions. Direct communications between the parties could help to build confidence.

3. To reinforce security and stability in the region and more widely, the Five strongly believe that India and Pakistan should adhere to the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty immediately and unconditionally, thereby facilitating its early entry into force. The Five also call upon India and Pakistan to participate, in a positive spirit and on the basis of the agreed mandate, in negotiations with other States in the Conference on Disarmament for a Fissile Material Cut-off Convention with a view to reaching early agreement. The Five will seek firm commitments by India and Pakistan not to weaponise or deploy nuclear weapons or missiles. India and Pakistan should also confirm their policies not to export equipment, materials or technology that could contribute to weapons of mass destruction or missiles capable of delivering them, and should undertake appropriate commitments in that regard.

4. The Ministers agreed that the international non-proliferation regime must remain strong and effective despite the recent nuclear tests in South Asia. Their goal continues to be adherence by all countries, including India and Pakistan, to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) as it stands, without any modification. This Treaty is the cornerstone of the non-proliferation regime and the essential foundation for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament. Notwithstanding their recent nuclear tests, India and Pakistan do not have the status of nuclear weapon states in accordance with the NPT.

5. The Ministers concluded that efforts to resolve dispute between India and Pakistan must be pursued with determination. The Ministers affirm their readiness to assist India and Pakistan, in a manner acceptable to both sides, in promoting reconciliation and cooperation. The Ministers pledged that they will actively encourage India and Pakistan to find mutually acceptable solutions, through direct dialogue, that address the root causes of the tension, including Kashmir, and to try to build confidence rather than seek confrontation. In that connection, the Ministers urged both parties to avoid threatening military movements, cross-border violations or other provocative acts.

6. The Ministers also considered what actions the Five could take, individually or collectively, to foster peace and security in South Asia. They will encourage India and Pakistan to adopt practical measures to prevent an arms race. They confirmed their respective policies to prevent the export of equipment, materials or technology that could in any way assist programmes in India or Pakistan for nuclear weapons or for ballistic missiles capable of delivering such weapons. They also undertook to do all they could to facilitate a reduction of tensions between those States, and to provide assistance, at the request of both parties, in the development and implementation of confidence and security building measures. They remain determined to fulfil their commitments relating to nuclear disarmament under Article VI of the NPT.

7. The Ministers viewed their meeting in Geneva as setting in motion a process aimed at strengthening peace and stability in South Asia, at encouraging restraint by India and Pakistan, at promoting the resolution of outstanding differences and at bolstering the international non-proliferation regime. They will remain fully engaged in pursuing these goals, and will work actively to build broad support in the international community for the objectives they agreed today.
1910. Press Statement issued by the Ministry of External Affairs in response to the Statement of P-5 issued on June 4, 1998.

New Delhi, June 5, 1998.

1. We have seen the Joint Communiqué issued by the Foreign Ministers of China, France, Russia, the UK and the USA in Geneva on June 4, 1998.

2. India has a consistent record as a responsible member of the international community, and a pioneer and leading participant in the movement towards global nuclear disarmament. Regrettably, the world is still far from establishing a comprehensive and equitable regime of nuclear disarmament, primarily because the nuclear weapon states have not taken credible and effective steps towards this goal. What has been put in place is a deeply flawed and discriminatory non-proliferation system which has legitimized the possession of nuclear weapons by a few countries and their presence in our neighbourhood. It is this adverse security environment that has compelled us to take the decision to carry out nuclear weapon tests.

3. The P-5 are not unaware that one of the most serious threats to our security has arisen because of the non-observance of the obligations they have undertaken under the NPT. The clandestine transfer over the years of nuclear weapons technology and fissile material to our neighbourhood is well known. Nevertheless the P-5 have declined to take any action to address a serious violation of a treaty provision to which all of them were party.

4. India has not violated any treaty provisions which it has undertaken. Our tests are not directed against any country. We have not raised tensions nor do we intend to do so. India remains strongly committed to a comprehensive, universal and non-discriminatory global nuclear disarmament regime.

5. In keeping with this responsible approach as a nuclear weapon state we have reiterated our commitment to continue observing the strictest control on export of nuclear material or related technologies. We would also draw attention to the significant proposals we have made recently for confidence building measures in the field of nuclear disarmament and for peace and stability in the region and beyond, i.e.: (i) India will observe a voluntary moratorium and refrain from conducting further tests. India is also willing to move to a de jure formulation of this declaration. (ii) India is willing to participate in negotiations on the FMCT in the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva. (iii) India has announced that it is ready to discuss a non-first use agreement bilaterally with Pakistan, as also with other countries, bilaterally or in a collective forum. These proposals provide a reasonable framework for addressing our common concerns.
6. We have also consistently worked to build confidence and promote peace and stability in our region. The initiatives we have taken along with other countries in this area have helped create a climate of cooperation and integration, at both bilateral and multi lateral levels. With Pakistan we have sought to develop a peaceful and cooperative relationship. Direct bilateral dialogue is the only means of achieving this objective. This will facilitate working out the possibilities of mutually beneficial cooperation as well as addressing of outstanding issues on the basis of mutual respect for each other concerns. We intend to continue in a constructive and sustained manner the broad based dialogue process which was renewed at our initiative in early 1997. Subjects for the dialogue have been mutually agreed on and include questions of peace and security, Jammu and Kashmir as well as trade and economic cooperation, people to people and cultural contacts, drug trafficking and cross border terrorism. This process has been under way for over a year now. Our specific and well considered proposals for the modalities for further talks have been with Pakistan since January 1998 and a response from them is awaited. We reiterate once again that there is no room for any outside involvement of any nature whatsoever in this respect.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1911. Prime Minister’s Statement in Parliament regarding UN Security Council Resolution.

New Delhi, June 8, 1998

Sir,

Hon’ble Members are aware of the resolution adopted on 6 June 1998 by the United Nations Security Council. I would like to take the House into confidence on our position on this matter.

2. We regret that the Security Council has acted in a manner in which it has and produced a Resolution which is completely unhelpful in respect of the objectives it seeks to address. The Resolution contains a number of references to nuclear non proliferation. As I had mentioned in my earlier statement in the House, we are a responsible and committed member of the international community. The Resolution urges us not to carry out any nuclear weapon test explosions. For India, such an urging is redundant because we have already instituted a voluntary moratorium. We have also indicated our willingness to explore ways and means of converting this undertaking into a de jure obligation. Further, we have made clear our readiness to engage in multilateral negotiations on a Fissile materials Cut off Treaty in the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva. We cannot, however, be expected to commit ourselves in advance of these negotiations, to unilaterally restrain production of fissile materials. In keeping with our commitment to non proliferation, we maintain the strictest controls over exports of nuclear materials and technologies. Our record in this regard has been impeccable and better than that of some countries who are parties to the NPT or members of the Nuclear Suppliers’ Group or even Permanent Members of the UN Security Council.

3. However, the call made in the Resolution that we should stop our nuclear programmes or missile programmes is unacceptable. Decisions in this regard will be taken by the Government on the basis of our own assessments and national security requirements, in a reasonable and responsible manner. This right, which we claim for ourselves is not something new; it is the right of every sovereign country, and a right that every Government in this country has strongly upheld for the last 50 years.

4. A glaring lacuna in the Resolution is the total absence of a recognition that the non proliferation issue is not a regional issue but has to be dealt with in a non discriminatory global context. We find it unfortunate that the UN Security Council Resolution does not reflect on the judgement of the highest international judicial body – the International Court of Justice, which has questioned the legitimacy of nuclear weapons and called for urgent negotiations for their elimination. In the paper on the Evolution of India’s Nuclear Policy laid on the Table of this House, we have reiterated our commitment to nuclear disarmament. Let me categorically state that unlike other nuclear weapon states who have sought to retain their exclusive hold over their nuclear arsenals, India has no such ambition. Government is committed to initiatives that can open negotiations for a global convention for the elimination of all nuclear weapons. The attempt to project the recent tests by India as a threat to peace and security is totally misguided and grossly out of focus. Such a portrayal of our policy ignores the positive steps announced by Government to which I have already referred, both in the global disarmament framework and the regional context. Our tests were necessary because of the failure of a flawed non proliferation regime, and, therefore, we categorically reject the notion that these have adversely affected either regional or global security.

5. Government have indicated willingness to engage in a meaningful dialogue with key interlocutors on the whole range of nuclear disarmament and non proliferation issues. Last week, Special Envoy Shri Brajesh Mishra visited Paris and London in this regard. He had meetings at the senior most levels in the two capitals. Dialogues with other countries are also planned. These dialogues have to be seen as part of a process, a process that will lead to a better understanding of India’s position.
6. Hon'ble Members are aware that India has always desired a peaceful, friendly, and mutually beneficial relationship with Pakistan based on confidence and respect for each other’s concerns. I have already said on the floor of both Houses, and I would like to reiterate, that a secure and prosperous Pakistan is in India’s interest. Our vision of our bilateral relationship is not confined to a resolution of outstanding issues, but is also directed to the future by seeking to building a stable structure of cooperation, which will benefit the people of both countries. As I wrote recently to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, we must not remain mired in the past, behind us, let us think of the welfare of our children and grand children.

7. We have remained committed to a path of direct bilateral dialogue with Pakistan. this reflects the nations’ conviction and confidence that it is only through direct discussions in a sustained and constructive manner that we can move ahead in our bilateral relationship. I would again like to reiterate our desire for the earliest resumption of the official talks with Pakistan. the subjects for discussions including peace and security, (along with confidence building measures) Jammu and Kashmir, economic and commercial cooperation and cross border terrorism have been identified. Our proposals for the modalities of these talks have been with Pakistan since January this year. We await their response. We have also made it clear once again that there is no place for outside involvement of any nature whatsoever in our dialogue process with Pakistan.

8. Hon’ble Members have expressed strong reservations against attempt to internationalise the Kashmir issue. There is simply no question of India ever agreeing to such internalisation. UN Security Council has chosen to mention Kashmir in its Resolution. This is unacceptable and does not change the reality that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of the Indian Union. I would also like to draw the attention of the Hon’ble Members to the terms in which Kashmir finds mention in the resolution. The UN Security Council has recognized that bilateral dialogue has to be the basis of India-Pakistan relations and mutually acceptable solutions have to be found for outstanding issues including Kashmir. This is in keeping with our position.

New Delhi, June 10, 1998.

We have seen reports regarding a forthcoming meeting of Foreign Ministers of G-8 and other countries. Our reaction to the pronouncements in recent weeks of the UN Security Council, G-8 and P-5 countries makes it clear that India categorically rejects any suggestions for curtailing our nuclear weapon or missile development programmes. These are decisions taken by the Government of India on the basis of its own assessments and national security requirements.

We would urge these countries who claim to speak on behalf of the international community to take note of the unilateral gestures made by India in recent weeks. These include inter alia, the institution of a moratorium on nuclear testing; our

The G-8 Foreign Minister met in London on June 12 and issued a Communiqué which articulated the already pronounced views of these countries. The Ministry of External Affairs reacting to the Communiqué on June 13 inter alia said: "It is unfortunate that the G-8 statement ignores the positive gestures made by Government of India in recent weeks...........Further, India remains committed to developing a framework of peaceful relations with Pakistan through a broad-based and sustained bilateral dialogue. This provides an effective means of identifying the possibilities of mutually beneficial cooperation and resolving outstanding issues through bilateral negotiations. It would also include consideration of CBMs such as our proposal for a no first use agreement. In this process of dialogue, there is no place for third party involvement of any kind whatsoever. These gestures reflect both our desire to further the cause of global disarmament and non proliferation as well as our dedication to promoting peace and stability in the region. It is a matter of regret that the G-8 Foreign Ministers Joint Communiqué has not taken into account these proposals but has instead repeated unrealistic prescriptions, couched in the language of pressure.

India has been a responsible member of the international community and remains strongly committed to the objective of disarmament in general and nuclear disarmament in particular. However, we would like to make it clear that India’s security concerns cannot be viewed in a narrow South Asian construct. Indeed, the pursuit of non proliferation in an arbitrary selective regional context remains the fundamental flaw in the global nuclear disarmament regime. Government of India cannot consider any prescriptions which have the effect of undermining India’s independent decision making. Like any sovereign nation, India will continue to take decisions in this regard on the basis of its own assessment and national security requirements.

The G-8 have professed an interest in the welfare and economic growth of the people of the region. These professions are inconsistent with the actions threatened in the Joint Communiqué.

Independent of the advice of those who claim to bear the responsibilities of the international community, the Government of India is autonomously embarked on a well considered, comprehensive and purposeful programme meant to further genuine non proliferation and global nuclear disarmament, and aimed at building confidence and cooperation in the region. Coercive and intrusive prescriptions are not only ill advised but also counterproductive. Instead of offering homilies, the leading industrial economies should reflect seriously on the proposals made by India in recent week which offer a reasonable framework for dialogue in meeting our common concerns."
willingness to explore ways and means for de jure formalization of this undertaking; readiness to engage in negotiations on FMCT in the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva; maintain and further develop strict export controls on nuclear and related materials and technologies; resume discussions with Pakistan on all issues including our suggestion for a no first use agreement. These gestures and other statements reflect both our desire to further the global disarmament and non proliferation agenda as well as our commitment to pursuing direct bilateral dialogue with Pakistan for promoting security and stability in the region. There is no place for any third party involvement of any nature whatsoever in this process.

Any action on the part of the G-8 which does not take these proposals into account is short sighted and will be counterproductive. We would expect a positive response to our initiatives from those who claim to speak for the International community, rather than prescriptive and coercive suggestions which are neither responsible nor constructive.
1913. Statement by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on the Communiqué issued by Foreign Ministers of G. 8 Countries.

New Delhi, June 13, 1998.

We have seen the ‘communiqué’ issued by the Foreign Ministers of the G-8 countries at their meeting held in London on June 12, 1998.

India’s views on the contents of the communiqué have been clearly articulated in our government’s responses to the declarations issued after the various meetings of the P-5, the G-8 and the United Nations Security Council Resolution. Attention is invited in particular to the Official Spokesman’s statement of June 10, 1998, relating to the latest G-8 meeting.

It is unfortunate that the G-8 statement ignores the positive gestures made by Government of India in recent weeks. These include, inter alia, the institution of a moratorium on nuclear testing; our willingness to explore ways and means for de jure formalization of this undertaking; readiness to engage in negotiations on an FMCT in the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva; maintenance and further development of strict export controls on nuclear related materials and technologies.

Further, India remains committed to developing a framework of peaceful relations with Pakistan through a broad-based and sustained bilateral dialogue. This provides an effective means of identifying the possibilities of mutually beneficial cooperation and resolving outstanding issues through bilateral negotiations. It would also include consideration of CBMs such as our proposal for a no first use agreement. In this process of dialogue, there is no place for third party involvement of any kind whatsoever. These gestures reflect both our desire to further the cause of global disarmament and non proliferation as well as our dedication to promoting peace and stability in the region. It is a matter of regret that the G-8 Foreign Ministers Joint Communiqué has not taken into account these proposals but has instead repeated unrealistic prescriptions, couched in the language of pressure.

India has been a responsible member of the international community and remains strongly committed to the objective of disarmament in general and nuclear disarmament in particular. However, we would like to make it clear that India’s security concerns cannot be viewed in a narrow South Asian construct. Indeed, the pursuit of non proliferation in an arbitrary selective regional context remains the fundamental flaw in the global nuclear disarmament regime. Government of India cannot consider any prescriptions which have the effect of undermining India’s independent decision making. Like any sovereign nation, India will continue to take decisions in this regard on the basis of its own assessment and national security requirements.

The G-8 have professed an interest in the welfare and economic growth of the people of the region. These professions are inconsistent with the actions threatened in the Joint Communiqué.

Independent of the advice of those who claim to bear the responsibilities of the international community, the Government of India is autonomously embarked on a well considered, comprehensive and purposeful programme meant to further genuine non proliferation and global nuclear disarmament, and aimed at building confidence and cooperation in the region. Coercive and intrusive prescriptions are not only ill advised but also counterproductive. Instead of offering homilies, the leading industrial economics should reflect seriously on the proposals made by India in recent week which offer a reasonable framework for dialogue in meeting our common concerns.

Place: New Delhi
Date: 13.6.1998

1914. Letter from Minister of State for External Affairs Mrs. Vasundhara Raje addressed to the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Slovenia, South Africa and Sweden.

New Delhi, June 16, 1998.

1. I am writing to you in connection with the initiative, taken by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Slovenia, South Africa and Sweden, contained in the declaration entitled ‘Towards a nuclear weapon free world: the need for a new agenda. I have carefully read the declaration and find in it a number of valuable suggestions that deserve consideration by the international community.

2. India has enjoyed close bilateral relations with your country, and we have in the past worked together for the cause of global nuclear disarmament in different multilateral forums. We value this association and consider the declaration a timely reminder that despite nearly 100 resolutions of the General Assembly reflecting the will of the international community, decisive steps for creating a nuclear weapon free world still have not been taken.
3. As you are aware, India has been in the forefront of calls for nuclear disarmament. We were the first to call for a complete halt to all nuclear testing as a means of preparing the ground for negotiations for prohibition and elimination of nuclear weapons more than four decades ago. In subsequent years, we put forward, individually and collectively with other like-minded countries, a number of initiatives intended to move the process forward, including an action plan for creating a nuclear weapon free world. This highlights our shared conviction that global elimination of nuclear weapons is the only way to enhance global security. Partial measures for non proliferation will not work. The road map is clear. We have dealt with two other categories of weapons of mass destruction, namely, chemical weapons and biological weapons, by negotiating multilateral treaties that are comprehensive, universal and non discriminatory. We need to adopt a similar approach to deal with nuclear weapons.

4. I am aware of your concern at the recent nuclear tests undertaken by India. I am also aware that your country is a party to the Treaty on the Non Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, a treaty that India has long regarded as discriminatory and not serving her national security interests. India's becoming a nuclear weapon State was inevitable because the non proliferation regime neither led to nuclear disarmament nor prevented proliferation in our region. We are, however, deeply conscious of the fact that lasting global security can only be achieved through global nuclear disarmament. Therefore, notwithstanding our differences in approach, we share a common objective. I would like to assure you that India’s commitment to taking initiatives and supporting initiatives that can lead to genuine forward movement for a nuclear weapon free world remains undiluted.

5. We remain ready to cooperate with you in collective efforts to ensure that the international community will witness the establishment of a nuclear weapon free world in the coming millennium and the establishment of an equitable non discriminatory, non violent and lasting international security order.

◆◆◆◆◆

New Delhi, June 27, 1998.

We have seen the US-China 'Joint Statement on South Asia'. India categorically rejects the notion of these two countries arrogating to themselves, joint or individual responsibility for 'the maintenance of peace, stability and security in the region'. This approach reflects the hegemonistic mentality of a bygone era in international relations and is completely unacceptable and out of place in the present day world.

The statement contains a number of references to nuclear non proliferation and disarmament. It is most ironical that two countries that have directly and indirectly contributed to the unabated proliferation of nuclear weapons and delivery systems in our neighbourhood, are now presuming to prescribe norms for non proliferation. India's own consistent commitment to nuclear disarmament has been made amply clear in the constructive ideas that we have put forward over the years in international fora, in particular the proposals we have made in recent weeks provide a meaningful framework for discussions which will enable forward movement towards a comprehensive, universal and non discriminatory nuclear disarmament regime. We would also like to make it clear that India cannot consider the suggestions contained in the statement for curtailing our nuclear weapon or missile development programmes. India will continue to take decisions in this regard on the basis of its own national security requirements.

India’s desire to develop friendly and peaceful relations and a stable structure of cooperation with Pakistan does not require reiteration. The way of achieving

The Clinton – Zemin statement issued in Beijing on June 27 had inter alia expressed “deep and lasting concern” of the two countries at the developments in South Asia which had put “at risk” the global non-proliferation regime.

The Statement said that their “shared interests in a peaceful and stable South Asia and in a strong global non proliferation regime have been put at risk by these tests... which we have joined in condemning. We have agreed to continue to work closely together within the P-5 the Security Council and with others to prevent an accelerating nuclear and missile arms race in South Asia, strengthen international non proliferation efforts, and promote reconciliation and the peaceful resolution of differences between India and Pakistan.” Pledging their full support for the steps outlined in the P-5 Joint Communiqué of June 4 they chose again to call on “India and Pakistan to stop all further nuclear tests and adhere immediately and unconditionally to the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty (CTBT), to refrain from weaponisation or deployment of nuclear weapons and from the testing or deployment of missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons and to enter into firm commitment not to manufacture weapons or deploy nuclear weapons or the missiles capable of delivering them.” They went on to offer their unsolicited help to India and Pakistan in resolving “peacefully the difficult and long standing differences between them, including the issue of Kashmir.”
these objectives is through direct bilateral dialogue. We look forward to the resumption of this process in which there is no place for any kind of third party involvement whatsoever. Our Prime Minister will be meeting the Prime Minister of Pakistan at the SAARC Summit in Colombo next month. The two Prime Ministers will hold bilateral talks on all issues of mutual interest.

1916. Letter from Permanent Representative of Pakistan at the UN Addressed to the Secretary General submitting Pakistan’s Position and Proposals on Nuclear Crisis in South Asia.

During the visit of your Personal Envoy to Islamabad, several suggestions for effectively addressing the security crisis in South Asia were made by Pakistan. I am enclosing herewith the text of those suggestions, which were also shared with your Envoy.

Alvaro de Soto would have briefed you on his indepth discussions in Islamabad and conveyed to you our sincere desire to cooperate fully with the United Nations to reduce tensions and find a peaceful solution to the root causes, notably the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

We request you to encourage, facilitate and support the development of a comprehensive framework to address the interlinked issues of peace, security, conventional imbalance, confidence building, conventional and nuclear arms control and disarmament in South Asia.

The construction of a regime for nuclear and conventional arms stability in South Asia will require careful and patient efforts to develop a consensus. This is unlikely to be accomplished by India and Pakistan themselves. Nor can such a regime be imposed. It will have to evolve through a combination of simultaneous multilateral and bilateral efforts.

For its part, Pakistan is ready to engage with India and the international community to promote such a process, which in the first instance should accord priority to the avoidance of conflict, the promotion of nuclear and conventional restraint and stabilization between Pakistan and India, as well as the peaceful and just resolution of the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir.
I would be grateful if this letter were circulated as a document of the Security Council.

*************

ANNEXURE

PAKISTAN’S POSITION AND PROPOSALS

— Pakistan favours a serious and sustained endeavour by the United Nations to defuse the security crisis in South Asia, which threatens global peace and security.

— Pakistan wishes to engage constructively with the UN, the international community and India to overcome the security crisis in South Asia.

— Pakistan is committed to the purposes and principles of the UN Charter.

— India’s decision to induct nuclear weapons announced in the national agenda on 18 March, 1998 was executed with lightening speed. India conducted its nuclear tests ranging from thermo nuclear weapons to tactical weapons on 11 and 13 May 1998, declared itself as the sixth nuclear weapon state, affirmed that it had the ‘big bomb’ and then threatened Pakistan with use of nuclear weapons and held out a threat of nuclear blackmail to impose a military solution in Kashmir.

— In the absence of a credible response from international community or any assurances to Pakistan against the nuclear and conventional threats, we were obliged to act in self defence to restore the strategic balance, preserve our security and the maintenance of peace in the region.

— The Prime Minister kept the Secretary-General and the Permanent Members of the Security Council fully informed of the impending breach of peace signaled by the Indian announcement to induct nuclear weapons. Regrettably, our repeated warnings and appeals went unnoticed and unheeded.

— The P-5, the Security Council and the G-8 woke up to the nuclearization of South Asia only after our nuclear tests which had prevented or at least reduced the imminence of a grave breach of peace in South Asia.

— Our position on all aspects of the situation and the warranted approach was reflected in our Security Council statement on 6 June 1998.

— We believe that a comprehensive approach to the inter linked issues of peace, security, confidence building, conventional and nuclear arms control and disarmament must be evolved by the international community.
— We look forward to the institution of a process for peace and rapprochement in South Asia.

— Such a process should be encouraged, facilitated, assisted and monitored by the United Nations.

— The Secretary General will have Pakistan's full support and cooperation.

— The Security Council must play an active role and exercise its authority, particularly under Chapter VI of the United Nations Charter, to prevent the situation in our region from deteriorating further and for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

— Jammu and Kashmir lies at the heart of the problems between India and Pakistan. The denial by India to the Kashmiri people of their inalienable right to self determination, as provided for in the Security Council's resolutions, remains the central issue, that has over the past 50 years engendered conflicts and tensions between Pakistan and India.

— Jammu and Kashmir is not merely a territorial dispute. It involves the Kashmiri people. It also equally involves the United Nations. We have stood by the Kashmiri people in their demand for the implementation of Security Council's resolutions. We have, therefore, stood by the United Nations.

— The Jammu and Kashmir question has legal, security and humanitarian dimensions. These facts are interlinked and require simultaneous engagement. In order to promote a just solution.

— The Kashmiri people by their massive and spontaneous uprising over the past 9 years have rejected Indian occupation. They are demanding their right to self determination, as provided in the Security Council resolutions. These resolutions set the historical perspective and provide a legal basis for the settlement of the Kashmir issue.

— Kashmir has now become a nuclear flash point. Indian leadership has been talking of a 'practice' policy including 'hot pursuit' across the Line of Control. India is violating the Line of Control using heavy artillery. It has caused civilian casualties.

— There is a major Indian military buildup accompanied by an intensification of repression against the Kashmiri people.

— The United Nations also needs to take immediate cognizance of the denial of fundamental human rights to the Kashmiri people and provide humanitarian assistance to the displaced Kashmiri, fleeing Indian oppression.

— Regrettably, the international community has not been able to address effectively the problem of Jammu and Kashmir. It is an international problem which cannot be exclusively relegated to the bilateral plane.

— Pakistan is, however, prepared to engage in a serious, substantive and result oriented dialogue with India, to effectively address the Jammu and Kashmir issue.

— It was at Pakistan’s suggestion that we were able to resume the Foreign Secretary level talks with India last year. These talks broke down due to backtracking by India, on the agreement reached on 23 June 1997 between the two Foreign Secretaries.

— On 11 June 1998, we proposed resumption of Foreign Secretary level talks and invited the Indian Foreign Secretary to come to Islamabad on 20 June 1998.

— India rejected our offer to hold Foreign Secretary level talks prior to the Colombo SAARC summit.

— During the last year, our Prime Minister met Prime Minister Gujral four times. We had hoped that it would be possible to promote a Pakistan - India dialogue for peace and reapproachment in South Asia.

— These hopes have been dashed by policies and actions of the new Indian Government.

— Nonetheless, we intend to persevere with patience to promote a credible, serious and substantive Pakistan - India peace process.

— On 23 June 1998, our Prime Minister sent a letter to Prime Minister Vajpayee affirming his readiness to meet with him during the SAARC Summit at Colombo next month.

— We believe that it is important for Pakistan and India to address the issues of peace and security and Jammu and Kashmir on a priority basis.

— Under the rubric of ‘peace and security’ which is the agreed item on the agenda of talks between Pakistan and India, we have suggested that both sides give urgent attention to the following:

(a) Avoidance of conflict.

(b) Nuclear and conventional restraint and stabilization measures.
(c) Confidence building.
(d) Jammu and Kashmir.
— We have announced a unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests and revived our offer to India to conclude a bilateral test ban agreement, which would be an important step at mutual confidence building.
— We also want to address the Jammu and Kashmir issue in all its aspects.
— We have also proposed the conclusion of a Non aggression Pact between Pakistan and India, on the basis of a just settlement of Jammu and Kashmir dispute.
— The United Nations, particularly the Secretary General and the Security Council, should facilitate the process of peace and rapprochement in South Asia.

The Secretary General should consider taking the following steps in this regard:
(a) Visit the region, particularly Pakistan and India, at an early date.
(b) Appoint a Special Representative for Jammu and Kashmir.
(c) Strengthen and enhance the mandate of UNMOGIP.
(d) Monitor closely violations of the Line of Control and report them on a regular basis to the Security Council.
(e) Create international awareness about the important role UNMOGIP is playing to prevent a major conflagration in Kashmir.
(f) Maintain close contacts with Pakistan and India to assist progress in their bilateral talks which should be reported periodically to the Security council.
— Neither the Council Resolution 1172 nor the G-8 Ministerial Communiqué, address the grave security situation in South Asia on a pragmatic basis.
— We favour a comprehensive approach to the interlinked issues of peace, security, confidence building, conventional and nuclear arms control and disarmament.
— In 1974, India exploded the myth of the ‘Smiling Buddha’. Its first casualty was Pakistan.
— For the next 24 years, Pakistan’s security, indeed its very survival and existence, faced a double jeopardy.
— On the one hand was the threat posed to our national survival by India’s unbridled pursuit of its nuclear and ballistic missile ambitions.

— On the other were the sanctions imposed by our friends in the name of nuclear non proliferation, which increasingly and rapidly even denied us the means of a conventional defence.

— Pakistan’s conduct during these 24 years, attests to the fact that perhaps no other country, ever pursued, more vigorously the goals of nuclear non proliferation.

— Since 1974, Pakistan launched a major diplomatic campaign to prevent nuclear proliferation in South Asia.

— We presented a series of proposals to spare our region from the specter of a nuclear conflict.

— These, inter alia, included proposals for:
  — A Nuclear Weapon Free Zone in South Asia-1974;
  — A joint Indo-Pakistan declaration renouncing the acquisition or manufacture of nuclear weapons-1978;
  — Mutual inspections by India and Pakistan of each other’s nuclear facilities-1979;
  — Simultaneous adherence to the NPT by India and Pakistan-1979;
  — Simultaneous acceptance of full scope IAEA safeguards-1979;
  — A bilateral or regional nuclear test ban treaty-1987;
  — A South Asia Zero Missile Zone-1994;
  — It was India, which vetoed each of these initiatives.

— Regrettably proliferation has taken place in South Asia, which is today nuclearized. Responsibility for this unfortunate development lies squarely on the shoulders of India.

— It is imperative that the international community acts effectively to prevent the dangers of a nuclear conflict in South Asia.

— We do not wish to engage in a nuclear arms race. We are willing to work towards evolving a stable deterrence regime which forecloses the possibility of an arms race.

— The establishment and maintenance of a stable deterrence regime will also require agreement(s) to maintain balance in the level and disposition of conventional forces between India and Pakistan.
We would be happy to enter into discussions bilaterally or together with major Powers for establishing additional confidence building measures.

The construction of a regime for nuclear and conventional arms stability in South Asia will require careful and patient efforts to evolve a consensus. This is unlikely to be accomplished by India and Pakistan themselves. Nor can such a regime be imposed on India and Pakistan by the Security Council or the G-8. It will have to be evolved through a combination of simultaneous and bilateral efforts.

In our view there are four priority ‘regional’ objectives and one ‘global’ objective which can and should be promoted in the context of recent development in South Asia.

The four regional objectives are:

(a) Avoidance of war,

(b) Nuclear stabilization by India and Pakistan,

(c) Conventional balance,

(d) Jammu and Kashmir

Avoidance of war

This is the first priority. The Indian proposal for ‘no first use’ of nuclear weapons is disingenuous. It is designed to make it ‘safe’ for India to use or threaten Pakistan with its conventional superiority. Pakistan has proposed a Non Aggression Agreement, on the basis of a solution of the Kashmir dispute. Perhaps, as a first step, the two countries, could (a) solemnly reaffirm their commitment to non use of force as prescribed by the UN Charter; (b) undertake to create transparency in military preparations; and (c) discuss further CBMs e.g. the creation of a ‘risk’ reduction Centre’ (as between U.S. and Russia).

The UN Secretary General and others should help in de escalating tensions, etc.

Nuclear Stabilization by India and Pakistan

Pakistan is not interested in a nuclear arms race. Pakistan has not declared itself a ‘Nuclear Weapon State’. Of course, as the Indians have noted, the ‘reality’ that India is now a nuclear weapon state cannot be changed by P-5 or Security Council’s rejection of their ‘status’.

Pakistan is prepared to enter into bilateral and/or multilateral dialogue to evolve an agreement for the maintenance of strategic parity and stable deterrence (a nuclear restraint regime) between India and Pakistan, at any agreed level. But we will not accept a position of strategic inequality vis a vis India.

— We must assume that some weaponization has already occurred. The two countries should be encouraged to restrain their build up of warheads to the minimum and refrain from the deployment of missiles.

NPT

India has consistently and vigorously opposed NPT and will obviously continue to do so. Under the circumstances, Pakistan will have to rely on nuclear deterrence. It is important to build comprehensive arrangements for peace and security with India including a conventional arms balance and the resolution of the Kashmir dispute.

— We are for nuclear disarmament and non proliferation.

CTBT

— As regards the CTBT, Pakistan had voted for the Treaty.

— We have decided a unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing. We have offered a bilateral or regional test ban to India as an important confidence building measure, in the first instance.

— India has rejected our offer of a bilateral test ban.

— Our position on CTBT will be shaped by an assessment and analysis of our security requirements in the context of the nuclear and conventional threat posed by India.

FMCT

— FMCT is an issue which should only be discussed in the competent body, namely, the Conference on Disarmament.

— In the CD most members of the G-21 including India, have agreed that FMCT negotiations should be one element of broader negotiations on ‘nuclear disarmament’. Namely, an Ad Hoc Committee with 3 Working Groups dealing with (a) as a first step, a Convention committing all States to the elimination of nuclear weapons; (b) negotiations on a programme for nuclear disarmament; and (c) FMCT, Pakistan supports this approach also.

— The P-5 and those interested in FMCT must first ask India and determine whether it would enter the talks as a nuclear or non nuclear States (since obligations of nuclear and non-nuclear States will be different, for example, on verification and “execution”).
— We also need to evaluate whether India will reverse its nuclear programme, stand still or as threatened, move forward towards full weaponization and deployment of its nuclear capability.

— The Indians have claimed that with the new designs they have tested, they can exponentially enlarge the number and yield of their nuclear weapons with available stockpiles.

Missile Development

— The P-5 and the Security Council have called for a halt in the development of missiles. The indigenous development of missiles is not proscribed by any international agreement and is largely non verifiable. Pakistan cannot accept a situation of inferiority in missile capabilities. India has conducted 20 missiles tests, Pakistan only one.

— This disparity leads to strategic instability and, therefore, increases the risk of conflict.

— We are prepared, however, to discuss the issue of mutual (India-Pakistan) restraint in the production and deployment of missiles.

(c) conventional Balance

— A stable deterrence regime will also require an agreement or agreements, to maintain balance in the level and disposition of conventional forces between India and Pakistan.

— we would be happy to enter into discussions bilaterally with India and/or together with the major Powers to establish new confidence-building measures, ‘command and control’ and monitoring of implementation of CBMs.

— Conventional ‘balance’ between India and Pakistan will be a necessary complement for nuclear stabilization.

— The international community particularly P-5 should persuade India to exercise restraint and forego acquisition of sophisticate weapons systems which will further de-stabilize the situation.

(d) Jammu and Kashmir

— As mentioned before this is a priority objective at the regional level and must be addressed as such.

Preserving the Global Non Proliferation Regime

— Pakistan is aware of the concern that the nuclear tests and weaponization in South Asia could destabilize the entire nuclear non proliferation regime.
We are prepared to work with the international community, to avoid this, but only as part of a comprehensive approach which also addresses our security requirements.

— Pakistan has never transferred sensitive technology. We are pained by irresponsible statements regarding the ‘Islamic bomb’ Such assertions should not become self fulfilling prophecies.

— The Secretary General may rest assured of Pakistan’s fullest cooperation and support in reducing the tensions and risk of conflict in our region.

1917. Media Briefing by Pakistan Foreign Secretary on the talks between US President Clinton and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

[Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif told President Bill Clinton on September 21 that Pakistan cannot take any decision on the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty CTBT in an atmosphere of coercion and sanctions’. We in principle, have never been opposed to the CTBT, but in the given situation, people of Pakistan have to be assured that there is no atmosphere of coercion and sanctions, he said during his meeting with the US President on September 21. Mr. Nawaz was one of the three leaders whom Mr. Clinton met after addressing the UN General Assembly session. The meeting lasted for more than 45 minutes and discussed nuclear non proliferation, the CTBT, peace and security in South Asia etc., in the wake of nuclearisation of the region and stuck up F-16 aircraft. Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad told newsmen that there was an expression of understanding by Mr. Clinton to undo the atmosphere of coercions and sanctions. In fact steps have already been taken for getting a waiver from US laws including Pressler, Glenn and Symington amendments. There is no time frame. But this process will have its own momentum. We have every reason to be satisfied about US earnestness. Mr. Clinton assured support in accordance with the American legal constraints. They will take appropriate steps to serve as a signal to IMF, World Bank and other international donor agencies (to resume assistance). About the unnecessary irritant of F-16 planes for which Pakistan paid long ago. The Prime Minister said Pakistan expects full reimbursement. He underlined the need for early finalization of the assistance programmes of IMF, World Bank and Asian Development Bank.]
Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad briefing the media said, Mr. Clinton appreciated Pakistan position on nuclear and peace and security issues and the overall regional situation, including the Iran, Afghanistan relations. Mr. Clinton recognized the need to make progress in Pakistan-India dialogue and expressed the confidence that it will progress. Mr. Nawaz told Mr. Clinton that Pakistan cannot undertake any unilateral decision on the CTBT which is discriminatory, impinging on its nuclear capability. We will welcome mutually acceptable restraints. Peace and security have been and will remain one of the major subjects of Pakistan India talks when they will resume. He said India has been proceeding with development of its nuclear and missile programmes. We are not interested in nuclear arms race. The only race we want to run with India is the economic development trade and investment and for this purpose we are ready to take all steps. We want resolution of all outstanding issues including the core Kashmir dispute through peaceful dialogue. Mr. Nawaz further told Mr. Clinton that Pakistan was impelled by Indian nuclear tests to detonate nuclear devices and thus restored the strategic balance in the region and averted a catastrophic situation, which had erupted because of the Indian leaders’ statement following their blasts.

He drew Mr. Clinton attention to the fact that instead of punishing Pakistan for restoring strategic balance and averting the catastrophic situation we would have been rewarded. In this sense, we have made a positive contribution that would have been adequately rewarded.

Mr. Shamshad said the meeting was held in a warm and cordial atmosphere, reflecting the personal rapport Mr. Nawaz and Mr. Clinton have developed since their last meeting in September, 1997 in New York and numerous telephonic calls after nuclearization of South Asia.

The discussion focused on matters of mutual interest with the two sides recognizing the need to enhance bilateral relations which have gone through a difficult period because of unilateral sanctions slammed on Pakistan, the Foreign Secretary said. The Prime Minister emphasized the importance in restoring relations, somewhat damaged by unjust and counter productive sanctions. There was recognition to build new bilateral relations of genuine trust and not based on political exigencies and expediencies. Both sides expressed their firm resolve to remove roadblocks in the bilateral relations. Mr. Nawaz thanked Mr. Clinton for taking interest in the security of South Asia. Security and non proliferation issues are interlinked and be addressed in a comprehensive manner.

Pakistan thanked the President for making a reference to the Kashmir dispute in his speech to the UN General Assembly. Mr. Nawaz dealt with the centrality of the Kashmir dispute which he said, was the root cause of all tension in South Asia.
Mr. Nawaz urged Mr. Clinton to play a role in facilitating settlement of this problem. He informed him about the latest situation on the Line of Control. He said he was meeting Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee soon and will seek resumption of dialogue and doing away with the stalemated situation.

Mr. Shamshad said Mr. Clinton assured support for Pakistan-India dialogue and showed his keen interest in playing a role in the context of Kashmir. The Prime Minister informed him of India’s negative attitude. We will remain in touch with the USA to see how and what role they can play.
1918. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs listing its Nuclear Installations.

Islamabad, January 1, 1999.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

No. Ind (Pl)-VIII/6/98 01 January 1999

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the High Commission of India in Islamabad and has the honour to reproduce below the list of nuclear facilities falling within the definition of and as required under the Agreement on the Prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities between Pakistan and India’, signed on 31 December 1988 and ratified on 27 January 1991:-

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Latitude</th>
<th>Longitude</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>i) Karachi (Karachi Nuclear Power Plant)</td>
<td>24 – 51’  66 – 47’ and 1 Kilometer around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ii) D.G. Khan (Chemical Plants around. Complex for Uranium Processing and Refining)</td>
<td>30 – 01’  70 – 36’ and 5 Kilometers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>iii) Kundian (Fuel Fabrication around. Complex)</td>
<td>32 – 24’  71 – 17’ and 2 kilometers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>iv) Rawalpindi (Pakistan Institute around. of Nuclear Sciences &amp; Technology)</td>
<td>33 – 39’  73 – 15’ and 2 kilometers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>v) Kahuta (Dr. A.Q. Khan Research Laboratories)</td>
<td>33 – 36’  73 – 23’ and 2 kilometers around.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The High Commission of India in Islamabad is requested to convey the above information to the Government of India.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission of India
ISLAMABAD

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦ ✦
1919. Note from Ministry of External Affairs listing Indian Nuclear Facilities.

New Delhi, January 1, 1999.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi.

No. J/ 110/11/98 1 January, 1999

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India presents its compliments to the High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan in New Delhi and has the honour to refer to Article II of the Agreement on the prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities between the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan signed at Islamabad on December 31, 1988. The Ministry wishes to convey, in this connection, facilities contemplated under Article II of the above Agreement. The list is as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>S. No.</th>
<th>Facility</th>
<th>Latitude</th>
<th>Longitude</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1.</td>
<td>Bhabha Atomic Research Centre</td>
<td>19° 01' N</td>
<td>72° 55' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.</td>
<td>Indira Gandhi Centre for Atomic Research</td>
<td>12° 31' N</td>
<td>80° 09' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.</td>
<td>Tarapur Atomic Power Station</td>
<td>19° 50' N</td>
<td>72° 40' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.</td>
<td>Rajasthan Atomic Power station</td>
<td>24° 53' N</td>
<td>75° 37' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.</td>
<td>Madras Atomic Power Station</td>
<td>12° 34' N</td>
<td>80° 11' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.</td>
<td>Narora Atomic Power Station</td>
<td>28° 09' N</td>
<td>78° 24' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.</td>
<td>Nuclear Fuel Complex</td>
<td>17° 27' N</td>
<td>78° 35' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.</td>
<td>Rare Materials Plant</td>
<td>12° 30' N</td>
<td>76° 38' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9.</td>
<td>Kakrapar Atomic Power Station</td>
<td>21° 14' N</td>
<td>73° 22' E and 5 kms around</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission For Islamic Republic of Pakistan
New Delhi

◆◆◆◆◆
Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif has said Pakistan will do whatever it can in response to India’s test firing of the Agni II missile.

Addressing a Press conference in Lahore at Governor’s House on April 13, he said India has done what it could and Pakistan will not desist from taking suitable action.

He said Pakistan will not engage itself in diplomatic warfare but it will take all possible measures to secure its frontiers. ‘Pakistan will do what it has to do, he said.

He asked media to mobilize public opinion on Pakistan’s test firing of missiles as they did prior to the nuclear tests on May 28.

In response to a question on relations with India, he said Pakistan-India talks should continue with sincerity for finding a peaceful solution to all disputes, including the Kashmir issue.

India has acknowledged that the Kashmir dispute should be settled through negotiations, he said, but added that as far as Pakistan’s defence capabilities are concerned, these cannot be compromised.

There are no two opinions it is Pakistan’s right to strengthen its defence in accordance with the regional strategic demands.

Pakistan will exercise this right as a sovereign state, Nawaz Sharif vowed.

Mr. Nawaz added that Pakistan does not want an arms race in the subcontinent, but unfortunately the race has already begun.

He said the ongoing talks with India for settling disputes have to continue and should not be mixed up with consolidating the country’s defence. These are two separate issues and should be viewed as such, he said.

Asked whether India deliberately tested its missile at a time when Chinese number two leader Li Peng was in Pakistan so that it sounded a warning to China. Mr. Nawaz said the question should rather be asked of the Indian leadership.

Asked whether Pakistan would assume a new role in the Organisation of Islamic Conference as a nuclear state especially because the Muslim leaderships look up to Pakistan after its nuclear tests the Prime Minister said it would not be a right thing for Pakistan to take upon itself such a role on its own.

It is nice and encouraging to know that the Islamic world gives Pakistan a special status after the country went nuclear, he said.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1921. Address of Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad at the Institute of Strategic Studies.

Islamabad, September 7, 1999.

Mr. Chairman,

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

India's nuclear doctrine announced last month is a logical evolution of India's nuclear ambitions that it pursued since its independence. India developed its nuclear option as a matter of choice and policy consistent with its long held vision as a regional hegemon and a major global power. In contrast, Pakistan has exercised nuclear option only in response to the compulsions of its security environment. It is easy to understand why Pakistan's security concerns are so deep and so constant.

Since its independence, Pakistan has confronted nothing but endemic hostility from India which imposed three wars on us and dismembered our country in 1971. It used military force to occupy Kashmir, Hyderabad and Junagarh in violation of the principles governing the independence and partition of India. It annexed the independent Kingdom of Sikkim and occupied the Portuguese territory of Goa in 1961.

Even now, India is engaged in a brutal war to suppress the right of self determination of the people of occupied Jammu and Kashmir. Despite its propaganda about the so called threat from China, almost all of India’s military assets – an army of 1.2 million, over 700 combat aircraft, a large naval flotilla – are deployed against Pakistan.

For the past fifty years, India has sought, with single-minded devotion, the re-enactment of the Akhand Bharat or greater India dream. It has sought to dominate its periphery and then entire Indian Ocean region, as the first step towards recognition of its stature as a global power.

In contrast, Pakistan's foremost concern has been to safeguard its sovereignty and territorial integrity. We neither seek nor endorse spheres of influence. Territorial aggrandizement has never been our policy, indeed it is an anachronistic concept.

Before coming to power, India's present Hindu fundamentalist leadership had declared that it would conduct nuclear tests and 'induct' nuclear weapons. It also threatened to launch attacks on Pakistan across the Line of Control in Kashmir. The first of these threats was carried out last year. A year later saw the crisis... along the LOC in Kashmir where active conflict continues and now India has outlined its military goals in its nuclear doctrine.

In evaluating the implications, it is essential to be aware of the ambitions of India, and the compulsions of Pakistan. What is clear is that India’s nuclear programme is status driven, ours security motivated. Unfortunately, our friends never paid sufficient attention to the root cause of insecurity and instability in South Asia, the unresolved Kashmir issue which continues to afflict the region with the real prospect of a wider conflict between two nuclear weapon states.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

India’s ambition to acquire nuclear weapons, though often disguised by deceit and hypocrisy, has been no secret. It acquired a research reactor and other nuclear facilities outside international safeguards in the 1960s. It refused to sign the NPT in 1968. It insisted on the legitimacy of ‘peaceful nuclear explosions’. India, meanwhile, diverted nuclear fuel from its ‘civilian’ programme to explode a so called ‘peaceful’ nuclear device in May 1974. Since then, it expanded the scope of its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities and fissile material stocks. Nuclear weapons development was accompanied by the development of nuclear delivery systems, specially ballistic missiles.

Pakistan’s actions in the nuclear and missile fields were taken at each stage, in response to India’s escalatory steps.

Through its research and development programmes, Pakistan was able to acquire the capability for nuclear enrichment and missile technology despite discriminatory embargoes and restrictions. We now have the capability and the potential to respond to India’s escalatory steps.

However, our policies have always been marked by restraint and responsibility. We have been sensitive, in fact responsive, to global non proliferation concerns.

In 1968 when the NPT was being negotiated, Pakistan’s concern was focused on obtaining positive security assurances for non nuclear weapons states. On the other hand, India was pre occupied with its challenge to the global nuclear paradigm which the Treaty was seeking to establish.

Since then, every single non proliferation proposal for South Asia has emanated from Pakistan. After the Indian nuclear test in 1974, we tabled a resolution at the UN, year after year, for a South Asian Nuclear Weapons Free Zone.

We proposed a joint Pakistan-India declaration renouncing the acquisition or manufacture of nuclear weapons in 1978. The same year we suggested mutual inspection by Pakistan and India of each other’s nuclear facilities.

In 1979, we proposed simultaneous adherence to the NPT by Pakistan and India as well as simultaneous acceptance of full scope IAEA safeguards.
We proposed a bilateral or regional Nuclear Test Ban Treaty in 1987, a South Asia Zero Missile Zone in 1994 and a non aggression pact in 1997.

Unfortunately, these proposals which sought to establish a non discriminatory and equitable nuclear weapons free regime in our region were rejected by India and ignored, encouraged to pursue its nuclear weapons programme.

It was only after 1989, when it became clear that we had acquired a nuclear capability, that a regional approach towards non proliferation was endorsed by the major powers. Even then, no sooner had Soviet troops withdrawn from Afghanistan, sanctions were imposed on us. This only further encouraged India to proceed apace with its nuclear and missile development programmes. The objective of non proliferation in South Asia was thus defeated. The fault was certainly not ours.

The nuclearization of South Asia is neither of our making nor of our choice, but it is now a reality that cannot be wished away. Three years ago, Pakistan voted in favour of the CTBT in the UN General Assembly. India opposed it. Never was the threat to our independence, in fact our survival, more pronounced than in the fateful month of May 1998.

India’s nuclear test radically altered the strategic balance in South Asia. Peace was imperiled. We faced nuclear blackmail. The Indian leadership demanded that we must accept the new reality of the changed strategic balance. They even questioned the credibility of our nuclear capability. This posed the risk of a serious and disastrous miscalculation on their part.

We neither had a security alliance nor could we depend on the nuclear umbrella of the major powers. We realized that we were alone in the face of a nuclear India.

It became imperative for us to respond. We restored the strategic balance and established nuclear deterrence. We have no doubt that our tests served the interest of peace and stability in South Asia.

It was Pakistan but India which added the nuclear dimension to the perilous security environment of our region.

India thus irrevocably shattered the objective of a nuclear free South Asia.

Pakistan was obliged to conduct its nuclear tests to maintain the credibility of nuclear deterrence against India. Following the tests we acted with a great sense of responsibility. We emphasized the need to prevent a nuclear and missile arms race. We declared a unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing. We expressed our desire for mutual restraint in the operational deployment of nuclear weapons. We sought to evolve a risk reduction mechanism and to maintain deterrence at the minimum level.
We have always believed that nuclear deterrence could be exercised by Pakistan and India at the lowest possible level. We were, therefore, initially encouraged by Indian statements that it wanted to maintain a position of 'credible minimum deterrence'. However, New Delhi left the interpretation of this concept deliberately vague. Foreign Minister Jaswant Singh asserted that 'credible minimum deterrence' was a dynamic concept and not fixed in time and space. Thus India was again playing the role of a wolf in sheep’s clothing. Its true nuclear and military ambitions were soon to be unmasked.

Following the initiation of our dialogue with the United States last summer, Pakistan developed the concept of three inter related elements to enhance peace and security in South Asia i.e. nuclear restraint and stabilization, conventional arms balance and the resolution of outstanding conflicts and disputes. This concept spelt out, in fairly specific terms, a strategic Restraint Regime which encompassed prevention of nuclear and ballistic missile race, risk reduction mechanism and the proposition that nuclear deterrence should be pursued at the lowest possible level.

The concept of a Strategic Restraint Regime was shared and discussed in our dialogue with the United States both at the political and expert levels. It was also formally proposed to India last October.

The nuclear doctrine announced by India is obviously incompatible with both the idea of 'credible minimum deterrence', as well as the concept of a strategic Restraint Regime'.

The Indian nuclear doctrine reveals New Delhi’s goal of acquiring massive nuclear war fighting capabilities a ‘triad’ of up to 400 operationally deployed ground, air and sea based nuclear weapons. Not all of the five NPT nuclear weapons states possess such a triad. A nuclear force as large as this may be credible but it will certainly not be ‘minimum’.

The announcement of the Indian doctrine has confirmed the concerns which Pakistan has so often expressed to the international community regarding India’s nuclear ambitions. The size of India’s nuclear arsenal, and its operational deployment, would transform it into a threatening ‘first strike’ force against Pakistan and other neighbouring countries. Such massive deployment cannot conceivably be designed purely for deterrence. India’s profession of ‘non first use’ of nuclear weapon is only a façade to justify a second strike capability and large scale acquisition and deployment of nuclear weapons. Also, as we have pointed out, India’s ‘offer’ of a no first use and non use against non nuclear states is not meant to reassure Pakistan or others, but it is primarily aimed at securing for itself the status of a nuclear weapon state.
The world must fully comprehend the near and long term strategic implications of India’s nuclear doctrine. India seeks to develop a massive nuclear weapons capability, but this is not designed to maintain ‘credible deterrence’ against Pakistan, nor is it meant for nuclear deterrence against China. For ‘minimum credible deterrence’ India does not need 150 to 400 nuclear warheads. It does not need sea based and submarine based nuclear capabilities. It does not require huge conventional land, sea and air forces, including aircraft carriers and advanced strike aircraft.

Certainly, deterrence is not India’s desire. India’s plans for developing a vast conventional force coupled with a large nuclear arsenal are aimed at building an offensive, and not a defensive, military capability.

India is feverishly trying to establish, within the next two decades, total military hegemony in South Asia and beyond, control the sea lanes, from the oil rich gulf in the West to the Straits of Malacca in the East, and compete for influence on the global stage with the major powers.

The militaristic dreams of the current Hindu fundamentalist leadership are a reflection of India’s aggressive mythology to which I have already referred. The leadership in New Delhi seem to be living in a time warp. They equate greatness with military prowess. They forget that in today’s integrated world, greatness comes primarily from economic and technological advancement and not from military capability.

These Indian dreams of grandeur constitute a threat to this region, to the world, and indeed to the poor and deprived people of India itself.

India’s planned military programme will be extremely expensive. Estimates of the cost vary widely from 20 billion dollars up to hundreds of billions of dollars. What also needs to be emphasized is that these huge outlays will be in addition to massive military expenditures which India is to incur under the defence supply agreements, for example, with Russia and France and its on going indigenous build up of conventional forces. The manufacture of hundreds of warheads and missiles, the acquisition of satellite early warning capabilities, the development of sea based and submarine based nuclear systems, will all entail huge additional costs.

The development of such a nuclear arsenal by India will oblige Pakistan to take appropriate action to preserve the credibility of its nuclear deterrence posture and the capability for conventional self defence. One recourse is for Pakistan to engage in a nuclear and conventional arms race with India. It will require Pakistan to expend even large resources for defence, further eroding its economic and development goals.
A prevalent theory is that, by pushing Pakistan into a huge military build up, India intends to destroy Pakistan’s economy. An analogy is drawn with that of the Soviet economy which crumbled as a consequence of the Cold War arms race against the United States. The error in this theory is in the assumption that we will, like lemmings, follow India’s militaristic example.

Let me state clearly and unequivocally that Pakistan can and will find ways and means to maintain credible nuclear deterrence against India without the need to match it - bomb for bomb, missile for missile.

Apart from provoking a response from Pakistan, India’s plans may also compel some of the nuclear weapons states, and others in Asia – from the Gulf to the Pacific to respond to the projected Indian military build up. Thus, the pursuit of India’s nuclear doctrine will be highly destabilizing for peace and security across the Indian Ocean region and beyond.

Furthermore, the Indian nuclear doctrine will militate against major nuclear disarmament and non proliferation objectives, including perhaps the CTBT and the Fissile Materials Treaty.

If its doctrine is to be implemented, India will require nuclear warheads to be placed on its short, medium and longer range missiles. It would want to match the other nuclear powers by developing thermonuclear weapons. Unless India has received nuclear weapons designs from clandestine sources, it will need to conduct further nuclear weapon tests to achieve the advanced deployment capabilities it desires. In this context, we have noted that certain preparations made by India last year to conduct additional nuclear tests have not been reversed so far. We hope the guardians of non proliferation will pressure India to reverse these preparations.

The very possibility that India may conduct further nuclear tests creates doubts in Pakistan regarding the advisability of our early adherence to the CTBT. If India does conduct further nuclear tests, this will, once again, oblige Pakistan to respond.

Further nuclear tests by India will completely subvert the CTBT. The first priority for the world must be, therefore to press India – and not Pakistan to sign and ratify the CTBT and to reverse the preparations it has made for further nuclear tests.

India’s intention to manufacture 400 or more nuclear warheads is also of special concern for Pakistan. India will require substantial quantities of fissile material for such a large nuclear force. Under these circumstances, neither India nor Pakistan could accept the conclusion of an FMCT, much less a moratorium on fissile material production.
Other reports suggest that India already possesses sufficient plutonium to build 400 warheads. If it does not, it will have to accelerate fissile material production in its various unsafeguarded facilities to reach the desired level of stocks.

In either event, Pakistan will be obliged to also build up the amount of fissile material in its inventory in order to maintain the capability for credible nuclear deterrence against the anticipated large Indian nuclear force. Therefore, the pursuit of India’s nuclear doctrine will deal a body blow to the prospects of concluding a Treaty – so widely desired – to halt fissile materials production.

The Indian doctrine also envisages the maintenance of ‘highly effective conventional military capabilities’ ostensibly to ‘raise the threshold’ of conventional and nuclear conflict. This argument is, of course, only an ex-post facto justification for the huge conventional arms buildup in which India is already engaged. The growing imbalance in conventional capabilities will accentuate Pakistan’s reliance on nuclear deterrence. This will have the consequence of lowering, not raising, the ‘threshold’ of possible use of nuclear weapons in South Asia. But the choice is not ours to make; it is India’s.

I must remind those countries which have concluded agreements to supply India with technologically advanced and lethal weapons systems – such as new Mirage 2.000s, SU-27s, SU 30s, and S-300 ABM systems – which can be all employed both in the conventional and nuclear mode, that they will be contributing to the destabilization of South Asia. Their actions will have significant negative consequences for Pakistan’s security and for the welfare of the peoples of our entire region.

Pakistan has alerted the major powers and other members of the international community to the dangers posed by India’s nuclear doctrine which graphically sets out New Delhi’s political and military ambitions, nuclear as well as conventional. We appreciate the concerns which have been expressed publicly by some states, and privately by many more, regarding India’s nuclear and military intentions and approach. We do not believe that any major power – even those supplying weapons for profit to India – would go so far as to ‘welcome’, or express ‘understanding’ for the Indian doctrine.

In response to criticism, Indian officials and some of New Delhi’s ‘friends’, have observed that the Indian ‘doctrine’ is as yet only a ‘draft’ for debate and not official policy. In fact, the ‘doctrine’ is the consensus report of the National Advisory Board on Security constituted by the Government of India. It was officially released to the public by the National Security Advisor to the Prime Minister of India.

Too often in the past have we seen the manner in which certain major powers have accepted at face value India’s ambiguous assurances despite Pakistan’s cautionary advice. This happened in the 1960s when we warned that India would secretly divert fuel from the unsafeguarded Cirrus reactor. In 1965, the two superpowers rejected our demarche in the Geneva Disarmament Committee warning against an Indian nuclear explosion. In April last year, just before India conducted its nuclear tests, we were told by high level emissaries of a great power that they had been impressed by India’s self restraint.

Our friends should not be taken in, yet again, by India’s double-talk and sophistry. Its dangerous plans and contentions are writ large for the world to see. Turning a blind eye to these ominous signs will have grave implications.

Pakistan believes that the international community needs to respond in a coherent and determined way to this ‘doctrine’ in order to arrest India’s dangerous plans for nuclear and conventional arms escalation. Specially, the international community needs to ask India to assure its neighbours and the world that:

One: it will not conduct further nuclear tests. Until the CTBT comes into force, Pakistan and India could formalize their unilateral moratoriums into a binding bilateral arrangement;

Two: it will not operationally deploy its nuclear weapons and will keep them in a non deployed mode;

Three: it will not build the hundreds of nuclear warheads as envisaged by its nuclear ‘doctrine’;

Four: it will not produce or possess the large stocks of fissile materials which would enable it to build a large arsenal of nuclear weapons in the future. In this context, steps should be taken to achieve a balance between the unequal stockpiles of India and Pakistan;

Five: it will not seek to create sea based and submarine based nuclear forces;

Six: it will not seek to acquire, develop or deploy anti ballistic missile systems which could escalate the development and deployment of nuclear arms in the region;

Seven: it will refrain from any military related actions in space;

Eight: it will review and restrain its plans for the acquisition and development of advanced aircraft, nuclear submarines and other technologically advanced weapons systems which could accentuate and accelerate the nuclear and conventional arms race in the region;

Nine: it will seriously address and resolve the underlying issues with Pakistan, specially the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, with the active support and involvement of the international community; and Ten: it will enter into negotiations with Pakistan to elaborate a ‘Strategic Restraint Regime’ for South Asia.

In the context of promoting regional military restraint, Pakistan would be greatly encouraged if the international community were to extend its support to our proposal for a ‘Strategic Restraint Regime’ in South Asia.

Also consistent with the objectives of preventing an arms race in this region, those countries which are engaged in the supply of advanced conventional and dual use weapons technology to India should halt their supplies and such cooperation with New Delhi. We appeal, in particular, to Russia and France in this respect.

In order to promote these objectives of peace and stability in South Asia, and to avert the threat posed by India’s nuclear and military plans, Pakistan is maintaining active contacts and consultations with the international community. We shall pursue these consultations at the forthcoming UN General Assembly and in other relevant forums with a view to evolving a broadly agreed approach to deal with the threats to regional and global peace and security emerging from India’s political and military ambitions as revealed in its nuclear doctrine.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1922. Extract from Media Briefing by Pakistan Foreign Ministry regarding Pakistan signing the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT).

Islamabad, September 24, 1999.

Pakistan announced on 23-9-99 that it does not need any advice from any one on the question of Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty and it will not succumb to any pressure on this question.

Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmed announced it while briefly talking to select group of newsmen on the eve of expiry of the deadline for signing the CTBT. Flatly refusing to comment on why Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif had stayed back and not gone to New York for attending the UN General Assembly session, the Foreign Office official said it would be wrong to presume that the Premier was planning to go to the UN for signing the CTBT. ‘If at all Pakistan decides to sign the treaty, it could be signed by any one on behalf of the government and the presence of the Prime Minister there is not required.’
He said the Prime Minister is the best judge either to proceed to New York or not. ‘The decision is that the Prime Minister is not going there.’

To a question, the official said that it was possible to pull out of the CTBT even if Pakistan decided to sign or ratify it. “There is a specific clause that any country can pull out of the CTBT on account of its supreme strategic interests,” he added.

He said Pakistan has also urged the international community to act and it must act immediately. At the same time he urged India to: First, disown the proposed nuclear doctrine; Two, refrain from any further nuclear tests and adhere to the CTBT. For its part, Pakistan remains committed to adhere to the CTBT in an atmosphere free of coercion. Three, undertake not to operationally deploy nuclear weapons on land, air or sea; Four, open negotiations with Pakistan for an agreement to achieve balance in fissile material stocks while both India and Pakistan participate in the Fissile Material Cut off Treaty negotiations expected to commence early next year in Geneva; Five, eschew the acquisition of anti ballistic missile systems and any military related capabilities in space and cut back drastically on its plans to purchase and develop various advanced and destabilizing conventional weapons systems. In this context, Pakistan appeals to those countries which intend to supply these conventional weapons to India to reconsider their policies, he added.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1923. Extract from the Interview to CNN by Pakistan Chief Executive Prevez Musharraf threatening to use nuclear weapons if Pakistan's security was threatened.

*Islamabad, January 4, 2000. (As published in the NEWS)*

The Chief Executive Pervez Musharraf hinted at the possibility of use of nuclear power if Pakistan’s security is threatened, in an interview with CNN, conducted a week ago. The General, when asked in what conditions Pakistan is going to use its nuclear weapons, said: ‘If the security of Pakistan is threatened… that is my short answer’.

Repyling a question regarding Pakistan’s formulating of guiding principal for the use of nuclear weapons, he said: ‘We haven’t worked that principle out, but we have worked surely that Pakistan's security will never be compromised’. Gen. Musharraf said Pakistan wants peace in the region and to settle its outstanding dispute specially Kashmir with India and to resolve the Afghan imbroglio.

He said: “Well, broadly speaking, I would say that the new millennium brings a lot of hopes for Pakistan.” General Musharraf said he was trying to urge India to be realistic and to focus on the main issue of tension between the two countries. He said the main issue of tension is Kashmir, the issue which previously had been sidelined and that is why there had never been any progress on it.

◆◆◆◆◆
1924. Interview of Pakistan Foreign Secretary during his visit to Berlin on the possible use of Nuclear Weapons.

Pakistan will consider using nuclear weapons first if attacked by conventional forces. Foreign Secretary Inamul Haq said on July 20.

‘There is no way Pakistan can hold out any assurance that it will not use any nuclear weapons if its existence is threatened,’ said Mr. Inamul Haq, the highest ranking Pakistani official to visit Germany since nuclear tests in 1998.

‘There is no such assurance on the part of India either,’ he said during a briefing for journalists. Pakistan carried out nuclear tests in May 1998 in response to similar tests from India which drew worldwide criticism and sanctions. India has said it is committed to a no first nuclear use policy.

Mr. Inam said that NATO maintained a first use threat to deter a Soviet attack during the cold war. At the time NATO worried about the possibility of an overwhelming conventional ground attack on Western Europe.

‘Speaking to journalists before a meeting with his German counterpart Wolfgang Ischinger. Mr. Inam defended Pakistan’s development of nuclear weapons.

‘India we believe, is a hegemonic power’, he said, "Our nuclear programme has been a response to our security threat perceptions. Nuclear weapons are weapons of deterrence," he added.

* Reacting to the above statement a Indian Ministry of External Affairs spokesman said there was nothing new in the Pakistani Foreign Secretary’s remarks. “Pakistan does not subscribe to a no first use policy as India does”, he said. “The policy of no first use is one of the central elements of our nuclear posture”, he added.
1925. Reaction of Official Spokesperson to suggestions from Pakistani President on no-war pact and de-nuclearization.

New Delhi, January 24, 2002.

Question: Do you have any comments on the offer of President Musharraf of no war pact?

Answer: There is nothing new in that offer. Pakistan has stated that on many occasions previously and India's position has also been clearly stated. It is necessary for the proxy war waged by Pakistan against India to cease, to stop forthwith. There is a low intensity conflict that has been generated by Pakistan against India, that has to stop and apart from that cross border terrorism and the support to cross border terrorism must stop.

Question: The Pakistan President has made another proposal of de-nuclearization; any comments?

Answer: There is nothing new again in that statement and in fact Pakistan had made similar statements at the very time that it was engaged in the clandestine acquisition of nuclear weapon know-how and technology. So there is nothing new in that statement.

◆◆◆◆◆
1926. Statement of the Official Spokesperson on “Pakistan’s nuclear bluff”.

New Delhi, June 20, 2002.

The spokesperson was asked to comment (20th June) on the recent statement by Pakistan President General Musharraf that India had been unable to call Pakistan’s nuclear bluff, and that possession of nuclear weapons by Pakistan had prevented India from going to war with Pakistan. She was also asked about the recent comment by Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam on the nuclear capability of both India and Pakistan having prevented war between the two countries. In response, the spokesperson said that it was Pakistan that had indulged in loose and irresponsible talk over the last few years, on a number of occasions, in which it had threatened the use of nuclear weapons against India. Given this propensity on the part of Pakistan, the only rational conclusion that could be drawn was that India’s nuclear deterrent had helped effectively forestall Pakistan’s nuclear blackmail.

1. On June 18 the Pakistan President, Pervez Musharraf attempted to highlight the international concern and alleged that India’s “hesitation” to launch a ‘limited war’ demonstrated that strategic balance existed in South Asia and Islamabad’s conventional and nuclear capability deterred New Delhi from attacking it. “International concerns of a nuclear conflict in South Asia, and the hesitation, frustration and inability of India to attack Pakistan or conduct a so-called ‘limited war’, bear ample testimony to the fact that strategic balance exists in South Asia and that Pakistan’s conventional and nuclear capability together deter aggression,” he said at a dinner hosted for Pakistan’s nuclear scientists and engineers. Gen. Musharraf claimed that the theory of deterrence had worked, but did not refer to the decisions taken by his Government, particularly to stop cross-border infiltration of militants, as demanded by India.
1927. Threat of Pakistan President Prevez Musharraf to use nukes.

Interview to Der Spiegel weekly news magazine of Germany. (As reported by the Dawn on July 4, 2002.)

President Pervez Musharraf has “threatened India with the atom bomb” in the event of war over Kashmir whose “blood runs in our hearts”, he was quoted on April 6 as telling Germany’s DER SPIEGEL magazine.

Indian news reports quoted the magazine as saying that Gen Musharraf condemned ‘India’s great power illusion’ and told ‘India to count on the fact that if the pressure on Pakistan becomes too great, then nuclear weapons use as a last means of defence’.

Gen Musharraf’s remarks come barely a fortnight after Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee ruled out any possibility or threat of nuclear war.

But Mr. Vajpayee, during a trip to Shimla last month, had told journalists that ‘India had already declared that it would not be the first to use nuclear weapons and Pakistan has also expressed similar views’.

Indian reports on April 6 said Gen Musharraf’s aggressive comments are unlikely to go down well within the European Union, Britain and the Commonwealth.

◆◆◆◆◆
1928. Press release of the Government of India on the review of the operationalization of India’s Nuclear Doctrine by the Cabinet Committee on Security.

1. The Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS) met today to review the progress in operationalizing of India’s nuclear doctrine. The Committee decided that the following information, regarding the nuclear doctrine and operational arrangements governing India’s nuclear assets, should be shared with the public.

2. India’s nuclear doctrine can be summarized as follows:

   (i) Building and maintaining a credible minimum deterrent;

   (ii) A posture of “No First Use”: nuclear weapons will only be used in retaliation against a nuclear attack on Indian territory or on Indian forces anywhere;

   (iii) Nuclear retaliation to a first strike will be massive and designed to inflict unacceptable damage.

   (iv) Nuclear retaliatory attacks can only be authorised by the civilian political leadership through the Nuclear Command Authority.

   (v) Non-use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapon states;

   (vi) However, in the event of a major attack against India, or Indian forces anywhere, by biological or chemical weapons, India will retain the option of retaliating with nuclear weapons;

   (vii) A continuance of strict controls on export of nuclear and missile related materials and technologies, participation in the Fissile Material Cut-off Treaty negotiations, and continued observance of the moratorium on nuclear tests.

   (viii) Continued commitment to the goal of a nuclear weapon free world, through global, verifiable and non-discriminatory nuclear disarmament.

3. The Nuclear Command Authority comprises a Political Council and an Executive Council. The Political Council is chaired by the Prime Minister. It is the sole body which can authorize the use of nuclear weapons.

4. The Executive Council is chaired by the National Security Advisor. It provides inputs for decision making by the Nuclear Command Authority and executes the directives given to it by the Political Council.
5. The CCS reviewed the existing command and control structures, the state of readiness, the targeting strategy for a retaliatory attack, and operating procedures for various stages of alert and launch. The Committee expressed satisfaction with the overall preparedness. The CCS approved the appointment of a Commander-in-Chief, Strategic Forces Command, to manage and administer all Strategic Forces.

6. The CCS also reviewed and approved the arrangements for alternate chains of command for retaliatory nuclear strikes in all eventualities.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1929. Joint statement issued on the conclusion of the India-Pakistan Expert Level Talks on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures.¹

New Delhi, June 20, 2004.

In accordance with the agreement between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan in February 2004, Expert Level talks on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures were held in New Delhi from 19-20 June 2004.

On June 19, at the end of the first day’s talks the Spokesman of the MEA made the following statement:

“We have already circulated the agreed Press Statement on India-Pakistan expert Level Talks on Nuclear CBMs. I will read that out and give some additional information on the rest of the meetings during the day.

“The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. Both sides approached the talks in a positive framework, aimed at taking the process forward, and making them result oriented.

The two delegations identified areas of convergence, including in the context of multilateral fora. They also exchanged views on their respective security concepts and nuclear doctrines, and agreed to elaborate and work towards CBMs.

The discussions will continue tomorrow.”

In addition, the delegation from Pakistan paid courtesy call on the External Affairs Minister Mr. K. Natwar Singh, National Security Advisor, Mr. J.N. Dixit and on the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shashank. EAM and the other interlocutors welcomed them and encouraged the delegations to continue their work in a result-oriented framework.

Conscious of their obligation to their peoples and the international community,

Committed to work towards strategic stability,
1930. Joint statement issued at the end of the second round of India-Pakistan Expert Level talks on Nuclear CBMs.

In accordance with the agreement between the Foreign Ministers of Pakistan and India in September 2004, the second round of the Expert Level talks on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures was held in Islamabad on 14-15 December 2004. The Indian delegation was led by Ms. Meera Shankar, Additional Secretary (UN), Ministry of External Affairs. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Tariq Osman Hyder, Additional Secretary (UN&EC), Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The visiting Indian delegation called on the Foreign Minister of Pakistan Mr. Khurshid M. Kasuri.

2. The two sides held discussions in a cordial and constructive atmosphere, in the framework of the Lahore MoU of 1999 and the Joint Statement of 20 June 2004. Both sides reiterated their desire to keep working towards elaboration and implementation of Nuclear CBMs, within the agreed framework.

3. Detailed consultations were also held on the early operationalization of the decisions taken during the last round of Expert Level talks on Nuclear CBMs held in New Delhi on 19-20 June 2004, especially on the upgradeation of the existing hotline between the DGMOs, and the establishment of a dedicated and Agreed on the following:

* The existing hotline between the DGMOs would be upgraded, dedicated and secured.
* A dedicated and secure hotline would be established between the two Foreign Secretaries, through their respective Foreign Offices to prevent misunderstandings and reduce risks relevant to nuclear issues.
* Both countries will work towards concluding an Agreement with technical parameters on pre-notification of flight testing of missiles, a draft of which was handed over by the Indian side.
* Each side reaffirmed its unilateral moratorium on conducting further nuclear test explosions unless, in exercise of national sovereignty, it decides that extraordinary events have jeopardised its supreme interests.
* Both countries would continue bilateral discussions and hold further meetings to work towards the implementation of the Lahore MoU of 1999.
* Both countries will continue to engage in bilateral consultations on security and non-proliferation issues within the context of negotiations on these issues in multilateral fora.
* Both countries called for regular working level meetings to be held among all the nuclear powers to discuss issues of common concern.

both sides agreed to report the progress of the talks to the respective Foreign Secretaries who would meet on 27-28 June 2004.
secure hotline between the two Foreign Secretaries. These measures are, inter alia, intended to prevent misunderstanding and reduce risks relevant to nuclear issues.

4. Both sides agreed the future periodic Expert Level talks on Nuclear CBMs would discuss, review and monitor the implementation of Nuclear CBMs as called for by the Lahore MoU of 1999.

5. They also agreed to report the progress made in the present round of the talks to the respective Foreign Secretaries, who are scheduled to meet on 27-28 December 2004, and decide on the date and venue of the next Expert Level meeting on Nuclear CBMs.

New Delhi, August 6, 2005.

The India-Pakistan Expert Level Dialogue on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures was held in New Delhi on 5-6 August 2005. The Indian delegation was led by Ms. Meera Shankar, Additional Secretary (UN), Ministry of External Affairs. The delegation of Pakistan was led by Mr. Tariq Osman Hyder, Additional Secretary (UN & EC), Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The visiting Pakistani delegation also called on the Foreign Secretary Shri Shyam Saran.

2. The present round of discussions is the third meeting held between India and Pakistan at the level of experts on the subject of nuclear CBMs, under the Composite Dialogue process. The two sides continued to hold wide-ranging discussions in a cordial and constructive atmosphere, including on their respective security concepts and nuclear doctrines.

3. The two sides reached an understanding on the proposed Agreement on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles. The proposed Agreement commits both sides to pre-notify in a structured format flight testing of ballistic missiles, with the objective of enhancing mutual confidence and engendering predictability and transparency of intent. The Experts have jointly recommended the agreed text of the proposed Agreement to the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan for formalization.

4. In pursuance of the MoU of 21 February 1999, which inter alia provided for undertaking national measures to reduce the risks of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons under their respective control, the Indian side handed over a draft of such a proposed Agreement.

5. The two sides emphasized the importance of early operationalization of the hotline link proposed to be established between the Foreign Secretaries, through their respective Foreign Offices, to prevent misunderstandings and reduce risks relevant to nuclear issues. In this connection, discussions on related technical parameters were held. Details about implementation and testing schedules were exchanged. It was agreed that the hotline link will be established in September 2005.

6. The two sides also agreed to report the progress made in the present round of the talks to the respective Foreign Secretaries, who will decide on the date and venue of the next Expert Level meeting on Nuclear CBMs.

1. Speaking to journalists at the end of the talks Ms. Meera Shankar leader of the Indian delegation said that the hotline between the foreign secretaries of India and Pakistan would supplement the existing hotline between the two DGMOs, utilized to smoothen irritants on the Line of Control.

Islamabad, October 3, 2005.

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, hereinafter referred to as the Parties:-

Recalling the Memorandum of Understanding of 21 February 1999;

Committed to adopt appropriate measures aimed at preventing misunderstandings and misinterpretations and promoting a stable environment of peace and security between the two countries;

Have agreed as follows:-

Article-1

Each Party shall provide to the other Party, advance Notification of the flight test that it intends to undertake of any land or sea launched, surface-to-surface ballistic missile.

Article-2

Each Party shall notify the other Party, no less than three days in advance of the commencement of a five day launch window within which it intends to undertake flight tests of any land or sea launched, surface-to-surface ballistic missile.

Article-3

Each Party shall issue appropriate NOTAMs and NAVAREAs through their respective authorities.

Article-4

The bilateral Pre-Notification shall be conveyed through the respective Foreign Offices and the High Commissions, as per the format annexed to this Agreement.

Article-5

Each Party shall ensure that the test launch site(s) do not fall within 40 kms, and the planned impact area does not fall within 75 kms, of the International Boundary or the Line of Control on the side of the Party planning to flight test the ballistic missile.

Article-6

Each Party shall also further ensure that the planned trajectory of the ballistic missile being flight tested shall not cross the International Boundary or the Line of Control between India and Pakistan and further, it shall maintain a horizontal distance of at least 40 kms from the International Boundary and the Line of Control.

Article-7

The Parties shall treat the bilateral Pre-Notification exchanged under this Agreement as confidential, unless otherwise agreed upon.

The Parties shall hold consultations, on an annual basis, or more frequently as mutually agreed upon, to review the implementation of the provisions of this Agreement, as well as to consider possible amendments aimed at furthering the objectives of this Agreement. Amendments shall enter into force in accordance with procedures that shall be agreed upon.

Article-9

This Agreement shall enter into force upon signature by the two Parties.

Article-10

This Agreement shall remain in force for a period of five years. It will be automatically extended for successive periods of five years at a time unless one or both Parties decide otherwise.

Article-11

A Party may withdraw from this Agreement by giving six months written notice to the other indicating its intention to abrogate the Agreement.

In witness whereof the undersigned being duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, have signed this Agreement.

Done at Islamabad on 03 October 2005 in two originals, each text being equally authentic.

Shyam Saran
Foreign Secretary
For Government of the Republic of India

Riaz Mohammad Khan
Foreign Secretary
For Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan
ANNEXURE

Format for Pre-Notification
For Ballistic Missile Flight Tests

The Government of ........hereby notifies to the Government of .....that it will conduct a flight test of a land or sea launched, surface-to-surface ballistic missile within the period of....... to.........

The test launch site, the planned impact area and the planned trajectory of the ballistic missile conform to the provisions of Article 5 & 6 of the Agreement between the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles.
Joint Statement on the 4th Round of Pakistan-India Expert Level Dialogue on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures (CBMs).

Islamabad, April 26, 2006.

The fourth round of Pakistan-India Expert Level Dialogue on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures was held in Islamabad on 25-26 April 2006. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Tariq Osman Hyder, Additional Secretary (United Nations), Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Mr. K.C. Singh, Additional Secretary (International Organizations), Ministry of External Affairs, led the Indian delegation to the talks. The visiting Indian delegation also called on the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Makhdum Khushro Bakhtyar.

The two sides held discussions in a cordial and constructive atmosphere, in the framework of the Lahore MoU of 1999. As mandated by Foreign Secretaries the two sides continued consultations on security concepts and nuclear doctrines to develop measures for confidence building. They reiterated their desire to keep working towards further elaboration and implementation of Nuclear CBMs within the framework of the Lahore MoU, with the objective of promoting a stable environment of peace and security between the two countries.

The two sides expressed their satisfaction on the signing of the Agreement on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles and the operationalization of the hotline link between the two Foreign Secretaries. These measures are, inter alia, intended to prevent misunderstanding and reduce risks relevant to nuclear issues. The two sides expressed their satisfaction on the signing of the Agreement on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles and the operationalization of the hotline link between the two Foreign Secretaries. These measures are, inter alia, intended to prevent misunderstanding and reduce risks relevant to nuclear issues. The two sides expressed their satisfaction on the signing of the Agreement on Pre-Notification of Flight Testing of Ballistic Missiles and the operationalization of the hotline link between the two Foreign Secretaries. These measures are, inter alia, intended to prevent misunderstanding and reduce risks relevant to nuclear issues.

The two sides held detailed discussions on the draft text of an agreement, the objective of which is to reduce the risk from accidents relating to nuclear weapons, and agreed to work towards its finalization.

Both sides discussed modalities for further securing the Foreign Secretaries hotline.

Both sides agreed that future periodic Expert Level talks on Nuclear CBMs would discuss, review and monitor the implementation of Nuclear CBMs as called for by the Lahore MoU of 1999. They also agreed to report the progress made in the present round of the talks to the respective Foreign Secretaries who will decide on the date and venue of the next Expert Level meeting on Nuclear CBMs.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1934. Agreement between the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Republic of India on reducing the risk from accidents relating to nuclear weapons.

New Delhi, February 21, 2007.

The Government of Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Government of Republic of India hereinafter referred to as the Parties:

Recalling the Memorandum of Understanding signed at Lahore on 21 February 1999 between the two countries;

Recognizing that both Parties have national measures including Command and Control structures to guard against accidents related to nuclear weapons;

Recognizing that the nuclear dimension of the security environment of the two countries adds to their responsibility for avoidance of conflict between the two countries;

Committed to the objective of global and non-discriminatory nuclear disarmament;

Conscious of the need for adopting measures aimed at promoting a stable environment of peace and security between the two countries;

Have agreed as follows:-

Article-1

Each Party shall maintain and improve, as it deems necessary, existing national measures including organizational and technical arrangements, to guard against accidents related to nuclear weapons under its control.

Article-2

The Parties shall notify each other immediately in the event of any accident relating to nuclear weapons, under their respective jurisdiction or control, which could create the risk of a radioactive fallout, with adverse consequences for both sides, or create the risk of an outbreak of a nuclear war between the two countries. In the event of such an accident the Party within whose jurisdiction or control the accident has taken place will immediately take necessary measures to minimize the radiological consequences of such an accident.

The obligation of a Party to notify shall be in respect of only such accidents which may result in an international transboundary release that could be of radiological safety significance or have security implication for the other Party.

Article-3

In the event of occurrence of an accident of the type referred to in Article-2 of this Agreement:

(i) Each Party shall act in such a manner as to reduce the possibilities of its actions being misinterpreted by the other Party;

(ii) In case of likely impact of the accident on the other party, the first Party shall inform the other Party forthwith with relevant information.

Article-4

The Parties shall make use of the hotline links between the two Foreign Secretaries and DGMOs or any other appropriate communication link as mutually agreed upon between their Governments for transmission of, or request for, urgent information in situations relating to the implementation of this Agreement. The Parties may also make use of any other communication channels, including diplomatic channels depending upon the urgency of the situation.

Article-5

Information obtained by a Party pursuant to this Agreement shall not be disclosed to a third Party without the prior consent of the other Party except where it concerns environment, public health or safety.

Article-6

This Agreement shall not affect the rights and obligations of the Parties under existing international agreements to which they are a Party.

Article-7

The Parties may hold consultations, as mutually agreed upon, to review the implementation of the provisions of this Agreement as well as to consider possible amendments aimed at furthering the objectives of this Agreement. Amendments shall enter into force in accordance with procedures that shall be agreed upon.

Article-8
This Agreement shall remain in force for a period of five years. Upon agreement by the Parties, the Agreement may be extended for successive periods of five years at a time. A Party may withdraw from this Agreement by giving six months written notice to the other indicating its intention to terminate the Agreement.

In witness whereof the undersigned being duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, have signed this Agreement.

Done at New Delhi on February 21, 2007 in two originals, in English language, each text being equally authentic.

K.C. Singh
Additional Secretary
For Government of the Republic of India

Tariq Osman Hyder
Additional Foreign Secretary
For the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

1935. Joint Statement on India-Pakistan expert-level dialogue on Nuclear Confidence Building Measures (CBMs).

New Delhi, October 19, 2007.

The fifth round of India-Pakistan expert-level talks on nuclear and missiles related CBMs, begun in June 2004 as part of the Composite Dialogue process, was held in New Delhi on 19 October 2007. Shri K. C. Singh, Additional Secretary (International Organizations), Ministry of External Affairs led the Indian side while the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Khalid Aziz Babar, Additional Secretary (UN&EC), Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Discussions focused on a review of the implementation of existing agreements on CBMs and on disarmament and non-proliferation related issues of mutual interest in multilateral forums as provided for in the Lahore Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) of 1999. They were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. The two sides agreed to meet in Islamabad next to carry forward the dialogue and the process of confidence-building in the nuclear and missile area.
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

SECTION - V

JUNAGARH
1936. Extract from the Press Note issued by the Dewan of Junagad on the question of the attitude of Junagadh State in the future Constitutional set-up of India after August 1947.

Junagadh, April 11, 1947.

A certain section of the Gujarati press has of late been indulging in a variety of imputations and speculations regarding the attitude of Junagadh State in the future constitutional set-up of India. These imputations and speculations are incorrect and misleading. What Junagadh pre-eminently stands for is the solidarity of Kathiawar and would welcome the formation of a self-contained group of Kathiawar Stats. Such a group while providing for the autonomy and entity of individual States and their subjects would be a suitable basis for cooperation in matters of common concern generally and coordination where necessary. In view of this clear attitude of Junagadh State the newspapers’ surmises are without foundation.*

* On April 22nd, 1947 Junagadh Darbar published a communiqué reporting a speech delivered two days earlier by Dewan (Khan Bahadur Abdul Kadir). In his speech he inter alia said: “He (the Dewan) once again emphasized the attitude of His Highness and his Government in regard to the constitutional set-up which was clearly defined in the press note of April 11. Junagadh stands for the solidarity of Kathiawar and would welcome the formation of a self-contained group of Kathiawar States with sufficient safeguards for autonomy and entity of individual units. In fact His Highness has addressed a letter to his brother princes of Kathiawar on this subject. In another speech delivered on May 15th 1947 the Dewan said “May I repeat and state once more that His Highness and his Government are very keen on the formation of a self-contained group of Kathiawar States, for which His Highness has moved very earnestly and briskly in the quarters concerned. His Highness has addressed his brother princes in Kathiawar and he knows that they have the greatest regard for him. I may incidentally mention that we have officially informed our attached units that they will be at liberty to adopt any course for their preservation and progress after the termination of Paramountcy in June 1948 or earlier.”

Karachi, September 12, 1947.

Pakistan Government have accepted Junagadh States request to accede to PAKISTAN and have signed a standstill agreement with that State. It is reported Junagadh are not receiving their supplies of food grains, coal, petrol etc. Arrangements may kindly be continued to supply States quota on these and other commodities regularly as hitherto.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1938.  Telegram from Prime Minister of India to the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 12, 1947.

We have just seen reported in the press a communiqué issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs that a standstill agreement between Pakistan and the Junagadh State was signed on September 9. We have also seen a report that terms of the Instrument of Accession for States wishing to join the Dominion of Pakistan were settled by the Pakistan Government at their meeting on 9th September.

2.  On 21st August our Ministry of States addressed a letter to the High Commissioner for Pakistan in Delhi asking for indication of policy in respect of accession of the Junagadh State. The High Commissioner was subsequently reminded on 6th September. No reply has been received so far.

3.  It has all along been understood that a State is free to accede to either of the two Dominions; but the choice of a State in regard to accession must, in our opinion, necessarily be made with due regard to its geographical contiguity. Junagadh is nowhere contiguous to the Pakistan Dominion. It is surrounded on all sides by the States which form part of the Indian Dominion except where it is flanked by sea. Further there is within the State boundaries considerable territory which forms part of States which have acceded to the Indian Dominion. There are likewise pockets of the Junagadh territory within States which have acceded to the Dominion of India.

4.  The population of Junagadh according to the 1941 census is 6.71 lakhs of which no less than 5.43 lakhs (or eighty per cent) are Hindu. This large majority of the population of the State has made it clear to the Ruler of Junagadh in no uncertain terms that they are opposed to Junagadh acceding to the Dominion of Pakistan and that they wish that the State should accede to the Dominion of India. Even the Junagadh State itself issued notifications from time to time stating that it stands for the unity and solidarity of Kathiawar (vide notification dated April 11 and April 22, 1947). All the Kathiawar States, barring, three small ones, have now joined the Indian Dominion.

5. The Dominion of India would be prepared to accept any democratic test in respect of the accession of the Junagadh State to either of the two Dominions. They would accordingly be willing to abide by a verdict of its people in this matter ascertained under mutual supervision. If however the Ruler of Junagadh is not prepared to submit this issue to a referendum and if the Dominion of Pakistan in utter disregard of the wishes of the people and principles governing the matter enter into an arrangement by which Junagadh is to become a part of the Federation of Pakistan, the Government of India cannot be expected to acquiesce in such an arrangement.

6. We therefore hope that no hasty action in regard to the acceptance of the accession of Junagadh would be taken by the Pakistan Government.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1939. Minutes of the meeting of the Indian Cabinet relating to Junagadh State.

New Delhi, September 17, 1947. (5.P.M.)

Case No. 278/47/47.

Relations with Junagadh State

Present

The Prime Minister.
The Minister for Home, I & B and States.
The Minister for Education.
The Minister for Transport and Railways.
The Minister for Defence.
The Minister for Commerce.
The Minister for Communications.
The Minister for Health.
The Minister for Law.
The Minister for Finance.
The Minister for I & S.
The Minister for W.M. & P.
The Minister for Relief & Rehabilitation.
The Secretary, Ministry of States.
The Secretary to the Cabinet.
The Deputy Secretary to the Cabinet.

Minutes

The Prime Minister explained that a telegram had been received from the Pakistan Government stating that the latter had agreed to a request from the Junagadh State to accede to the Pakistan Dominion. The States Minister gave a picture of the background and explained how this action on the part of Junagadh and Pakistan vitally affected the Indian Dominion.

Decision

The Cabinet approved the following proposals:-

(1) Troops of the States which have acceded to the Indian Dominion and of India should be suitably disposed round Junagadh and in the territory of the sub-States situated in the midst of Junagadh which have acceded to India. No troops should occupy or remain in Junagadh territory.

(2) The Secretary, States Ministry, on behalf of the Government of India, should visit Junagadh and explain to the Nawab and the Dewan of the State the implications of their proposed accession to Pakistan.

(3) Economic measures such as the discontinuance of supplies of diesel oil, coal and petrol from the territories of the Indian Dominion and of the acceding States, should also be taken.

◆◆◆◆◆
1940. Telegram No. 251 from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

From : Governor-General PAKISTAN
To : Governor-General INDIA repeated Prime Minister India and Prime Minister PAKISTAN.

Understand that there are large troop concentrations along the borders of JUNAGADH and other states in Kathiawar which have acceded to PAKISTAN. Trust this information is incorrect. Any encroachment on Junagadh Sovereignty or its territory would amount to hostile act. Kindly ensure that Indian Dominion troops or troops of States acceding to India do not violate Junagadh territory, under any pretext whatsoever.

1941. Telegram No. 34-GG from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, September 21, 1947.

From Prime Minister India to Prime Minister Pakistan.

Please convey the following message from Governor-General India to Governor-General Pakistan.

Reference your telegram 251 dated September 19th regarding Junagadh. Information about large troop concentrations around Junagadh not correct. For some time reports about possibility of Junagadh’s accession to Pakistan Dominion in the teeth of opposition from its Hindu population of over 80% had given rise to serious concern and apprehensions to local population and all surrounding States which have acceded to Indian Dominion. Large scale military preparations of Junagadh and supply of arms and ammunition to its Muslim subjects with the obvious intention of terrorizing the people of the State as well as bordering States accentuated this uneasiness and Government of India received appeals for suitable action both from the people and these States. The Government of India have therefore sent a small force of troops as a very natural precautionary counter measure, particularly as most of our acceding States in the affected area have no armed forces of their own.
2. As regards accession of Junagadh to Pakistan your attention is invited to our telegram addressed to Prime Minister, Pakistan, and delivered personally at the Government House, Karachi, by Lord Ismay on September 12 explaining fully the Government of India's position regarding Junagadh. Pakistan Government have neither acknowledged receipt of our message nor replied to this and our previous dispatches on the subject. Instead Pakistan Government have unilaterally proceeded to action which it was made plain the Government of India could never, and do not acquiesce in. Such acceptance of accession by Pakistan cannot but be regarded by the Government of India as an encroachment on Indian sovereignty and territory and inconsistent with the friendly relations that should exist between the two Dominions. This action of Pakistan is considered by the Government of India to be a clear attempt to cause disruption in the integrity of India by extending the influence and boundaries of the Dominion of Pakistan in utter violation of principles on which partition was agreed upon and effected. In these circumstances I hope it will be possible for you to prevail upon the Government of Pakistan to reconsider their attitude in regard to the accession of Junagadh, but if the matter is not reconsidered the responsibility for consequences must, I am compelled to inform you, rest squarely on the shoulders of the Pakistan Government. The Government of India are, however, still prepared to accept the verdict of the people of Junagadh in the matter of accession, the plebiscite being carried out under joint supervision of Indian and Junagadh Governments.

◆◆◆◆◆

1942. Telegram No. 276 from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

Junagadh has wired a protest against alleged accession of MANGROL to Indian Dominion. Similar reports have been current in newspapers for some time past. We have ignored them so far because it is inconceivable that Indian Dominion would let MANGROL accede to India when MANGROL is only a vassal of Junagadh which has already acceded to PAKISTAN. If reports are correct MANGROL Dominion must make it clear that it will under no circumstances accept this and similar other encroachments if any on historical tradition and constitutional rights of Junagadh.

◆◆◆◆◆
1943. Telegram No. 350 –PR to Nawab of Junagadh (Repeated to N.M. Buch, Regional Commissioner, Rajkot) from the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, September 22, 1947.

Government of India understand that your Highness forces have occupied Babariawad. Your Highness is aware of our acceptance of accession of Babariawad to Indian Dominion announced on eleventh September. Presence of your troops in Babariawad has resulted in many Mulgirassias leaving the State. Further we understand that your agents in Babariawad are coercing the Mulgirassias to withdraw their accession to Indian Dominion. The Dominion Government take the gravest view of these activities. We would therefore be grateful if your Highness would issue necessary orders at once that these forces should be withdrawn and that the Mulgirassias are not subjected to any kind of harassment or molestation. I am further to point out that the Sheikh of Mangrol has acceded to Dominion of India and this Government wish to draw your attention to fact that no Junagadh force or Police should enter or occupy or remain in Mangrol territory. I shall be grateful if this telegram could be acknowledged immediately.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1944. Telegram No. RC/I from Regional Commissioner, Rajkot, to the Indian Ministry of States.

Rajkot, September 22, 1947.

From Buch to Menon (Secretary of the Ministry of States)

Following letter delivered from SHEIKH SAHIB MANGROL this morning.

“On invitation from Mr. Menon I came to see you at residency about 10 a.m. September 20th. With regard to our talk it was conveyed to me that I shall get my full independence together with my Sovereign rights in regard to my non-Jurisdictional Villages also. In view of new prospects, in haste, without full considering the consequences and Constitutional implications I signed Instruments of Accession. As Mr. Menon was leaving immediately I did not even get one hour to ponder over matter. On my return to UTARA I found myself most awkwardly placed and I honestly believe that I should not have signed instruments of Accession. I also consulted my advisers and we all fully agree that Instrument of Accession should not have been signed and we also believe it might lead to some serious and grave consequences. I hereby renounce Instruments of Accession which I have signed this morning. If Mr. Menon would have been here I would have done it personally but as he is away, I formally renounce Instrument of Accession before you and my signature on it may kindly be regarded as withdrawn. As the Instrument of Accession that I signed this morning is not placed before His Excellency the Governor-General for Dominion Indian Union and Dominion India has not accepted it I request you to kindly convey renouncement my Accession and withdrawal of my signature signed on Instrument of Accession.

The note which I have signed separately may also be kindly regarded as renounced and withdrawn."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1945.  Telegram from Dewan of Junagadh to the Indian Ministry of States.

Junagadh, September 23, 1947.

Your telegram No. 350-PR, September twenty-two to His Highness Nawab Saheb had added to our surprise. Both Babariawad and Mangrol are integral parts of Junagadh territory and their accession to Indian Union not valid. No single case of harassment has occurred in Junagadh territory in spite of provocative means employed by neighbouring States and Indian States Department. Our forces in Babariawad is intended to maintain law and order and to protect state property and buildings. Attitude of Indian States Department is tantamount to invasion of Junagadh which forms now part of Pakistan. Mangrol made to sign accession on September Twenty without sufficient time to consider and realizing his position as part of Junagadh Territory has renounced it within an hour on same day in writing to Regional Commissioner at Rajkot Mr. N.M. Buch as States Secretary had meanwhile left for Bombay. He withdrew accession while document was still in hands of States Secretary who was on his way to Bombay and long before it reached Delhi or Governor General. As I explained personally to Mr. V.P. Menon the question can be settled between two Dominions who are pledging to maintain harmony between themselves and in their respective territory. Complete tranquility prevails in Junagadh. I again repeat unless it is intended to invade part o Pakistan two Dominions representatives can meet and settle disputed questions. Any impartial committee welcome to see things throughout Junagadh territory where every soul is given due protection and no harassment of any kind exists.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1946. Telegram No. C/19 from Regional Commissioner, Rajkot to the Indian Ministry of States.

Rajkot, September 23, 1947.

Following telegram dated September 22\textsuperscript{nd} from De Souza Junagadh to Professor OZA Rajkot intercepted and withheld.

Begins:

Please publish: understood MANGROL has withdrawn proposed accession to Indian Union because of peculiar constitutional and political complications involved. Withdrawal communicated to Regional Commissioner Indian States Department, Rajkot—immediately after presentation of proposal to V.P. Menon who had meanwhile left for Bombay. Later MANGROL conveyed withdrawal to V.P. Menon also. Oza is Associated Press Representative.

End.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

New Delhi, September 23, 1947.

Please refer to your letter dated 18\textsuperscript{th} September regarding your difficulties in the event of Junagadh trying to cut off food and other supplies to Kodinar taluka. You can rest assured that in such an eventuality the Government of India will help you in every possible manner including movement of supplies along the sea coast. In fact Junagadh dare not do this as Junagadh itself has so many islands in our own territories which could be cut off should they try such a game with Kodinar. Secondly our telegram dated 14\textsuperscript{th} September referred to military assistance from Baroda but surely it could not be interpreted so as to say that Baroda would not co-operate with the Dominion Government in the matter of stoppages of supplies which would be used by Junagadh to harass the local population and the adjoining acceding States. Anyhow this matter has already been set right by the latest instructions which I understand His Highness has sent from England directing full co-operation with the Indian Dominion in the Kathiawar campaign. With kind regards.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1948. Minutes of the Meeting of the Cabinet regarding Relations with Junagadh State.

New Delhi, September 24, 1947.

Subject: Case No. 285/49/47. Relations with Junagadh State.

Present
The Prime Minister.
The Minister for Home, Information and Broadcasting and States.
The Minister for Education.
The Minister for Transport and Railways.
The Minister for Defence.
The Minister for Commerce.
The Minister for Communications.
The Minister for Health.
The Minister for Finance.
Secretary, Ministry of Law.
Secretary-General, Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations.
Secretary, Ministry of States.
The Chief of Staff, India.
The Deputy Chief of Staff, India.
The Principal Private Secretary to the Prime Minister.
The Secretary to the Cabinet.
The Deputy Secretary to the Cabinet.

Decision
The Cabinet approved the proposal that a brigade group consisting of troops of the Indian Army and the forces of acceding States should be suitably disposed in Kathiawar territory for the protection of the States which had acceded to the Indian Union. In particular a suitable number of troops should be sent in the Mangrol and Babariawad.

The Cabinet approved the draft directive to the Commander of the Kathiawar Defence Forces with the following changes:-

Para 4. - The words “by rail” to be inserted after the words “except in so far as may be necessary for the passage”.

Para 5. – The words “or the State forces under your Command” to be inserted after the words “Should an act of war be committed against you”.

The Cabinet further decided that a press note should be prepared by the States Ministry in consultation with the Secretary General, External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Ministry, for issue after the Prime Minister had approved. This note should give briefly the reasons, historical background as regards Junagadh and neighbouring States and explain the action that the Government of India were taking. Copies of this press note should be sent to the Pakistan Government and our High Commissioner in Pakistan, just before its release to the Press. Copies should also go to the United Kingdom High Commissioner at Delhi, our High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, our United Nations Organization Delegation in the United States and our Embassy in Washington.

◆◆◆◆◆

1949. Demi Official letter from C.C. Desai, Additional Secretary, Ministry of States to L.K. Jha, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce, Government of India.

New Delhi, September 24, 1947.

(Copy to Y.N. Sukthankar, Esquire, Secretary, Ministry of Transport)

I enclose herewith a telegram intercepted at Rajkot offering the sale of two American boats to Junagadh Durbar by one Punjabi of Bombay. In view of the decision of Junagadh to join Pakistan and to encroach upon Indian territory, we must prevent this transaction. I have already spoken to you on the telephone and requested for immediate action to see that the boats are detained in Bombay. The next step to be taken is to see that they are made available for the use of the Indian Government. They may be required on the Kathiawar coast during the next few days. Would you, therefore, kindly have action taken and let us know when they can move for our own work. The States Ministry would also like that strong action should be taken against Mr. Punjabi for this attempt to facilitate the movements and communications of a foreign State.

2. I have already spoken about this matter to Hon’ble the Commerce Minister as well as to Sukthankar, Transport Secretary.

◆◆◆◆◆
1950.  Telegram from Ruler of Mangrol to Government of India regarding his renouncing the accession to the Dominion of India.

Mangrol, September 25, 1947.

Having signed instrument of accession under extraordinary circumstances I renounced soon after that on the same day. If Mr. Menon had been here for one hour more I would have done it before him. As he had left immediately for Bombay I gave my written renouncement and withdrawal to the Regional Commissioner Mr. Buch to be conveyed immediately to the States Department Delhi on the same day, 20 September 1947. I still stand on my final Decision of renouncement and withdrawal and under the circumstances there is no need whatsoever for sending any police or military for any purpose in my territory and any such action on the part of the Indian dominion would be regarded an act of highhandedness.

Repeated: to Regional Commissioner, Rajkot.

Copy: forwarded to:

(1) Hon’ble Minister for States
(2) Secretary, Ministry of States
(3) Ministry of External Affairs
(4) Principal Private Secretary to Prime Minister for information.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1951. Press Communiqué issued by the Ministry of States regarding the situation arising out of the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 25, 1947.

In view of the wide public interest manifested in the situation in Kathiawar created by the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan, the Government of India consider it desirable to explain the effect of such accession and their own policy.

The State of Junagadh is situated in the midst of other States which have acceded to the Dominion of India, and its territories are interlaced with the territories of these States. For example, inside Junagadh itself, there are territories of the States which have acceded to the Dominion of India; similarly islands of Junagadh State territory exist inside Bhavnagar, Nawanagar, Gondal and Baroda. The railway and posts and telegraphs services of Junagadh are an integral part of the Indian system; the railway police, telegraphs and telephones are administered by the Dominion of India. The State has population of approximately 671,000, of whom about 543,000 or 81 per cent are non-Muslims.

Although, theoretically, the termination of Paramountcy left the Indian States free to accede to either of the Dominions, it has always been recognized that, in practice, this freedom would be exercised with due regard to the facts of geography. This was made clear by His Excellency the Governor-General of India at the Conference which he held with the representatives of the States on the 25th July and this has been the essence of the accession policy pursued by the Government of India.

A representative of Junagadh was present at this Conference and participated in its discussions. In his public statements, His Highness the Nawab has adhered to the principle of the solidarity of Kathiawar. Junagadh, however, never attempted to negotiate the terms of accession with the Dominion of India. On the other hand, without any warning, it was announced that the State had acceded to the Dominion of Pakistan and that this accession had been accepted. Prior to the announcement, there were indications that Junagadh intended to accede to Pakistan. The Government of India immediately represented to the Government of the Dominion of Pakistan that the matter should be decided according to the wishes of the people of the State. No reply was received either to this or to a subsequent communication. The Government of India, therefore, decided to depute Mr. V.P. Menon, Secretary, Ministry of States, to Junagadh with a personal massage to His Highness the Nawab. The Dewan convoyed to Mr. Menon His Highness’ inability to see him. He could only see the Dewan who made the suggestion that the matter should be discussed at a Conference with the representatives of the Dominions of India and Pakistan at which Junagadh should also be represented.

The suggestion for a Conference has not been followed up, either by the Dominion of Pakistan or by the State of Junagadh. Meanwhile, the Government of India have received representations from several acceding States and areas in Kathiawar that they apprehend danger to their security and that large numbers of Hindus are fleeing from the Junagadh State. In any case, it is clear that the accession of Junagadh to the Dominion of Pakistan must, in view of the geographical situation of the State and the interlacing of its communications with the surrounding States which have acceded to the Dominion of India, must be a source of constant friction between Junagadh and the surrounding States, between Junagadh and the Dominion of India and ultimately between the Dominions of India and Pakistan.

The Government of India are determined to find a solution of this problem. Their sole aim is to see tranquility maintained throughout Kathiawar. This can only be achieved if relations between all the States are harmonious and the relationship of Junagadh to either of the two Dominions is left to be determined by a free expression of the will of the people of the State. To ascertain these wishes, the Government of India have suggested a referendum. They adhere to that suggestion. They are and will always be willing to find a solution of this complicated and delicate problem by friendly discussion with the Dominion of Pakistan and the State of Junagadh. They have an obligation to protect the interests of the States within and around Junagadh which have acceded to the Indian Dominion. This responsibility they will fully and faithfully discharged.

Ministry of States,
New Delhi.
September 25, 1947
1952. Telegram No. 311 from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, September 25, 1947.

Following from Prime Minister PAKISTAN to Prime Minister India.

Please convey following message from Governor-General PAKISTAN to Governor-General India.

2. Reference your telegram No. 34-GG, dated September 21st. Representations of Indian Dominion including one sent to us through Lord Ismay totally misconceived and untenable. The position of Indian States is very clearly defined and it has been repeatedly accepted that after lapse of paramountcy every Indian state is independent and sovereign and free to join PAKISTAN or Indian Dominion. You are now trying to import fresh criteria into this matter limiting free exercise of choice by States.

3. The division of British India agreed upon between Congress and Muslim League has nothing whatever to do with this as question of States was dealt with quite separately and stands on a different footing. In these circumstances you will agree that Junagadh like any other State was entitled and free to join PAKISTAN and has done so.

4. We are really astonished at view expressed by you which contains a threat to Dominion of PAKISTAN that "such acceptance of accession by PAKISTAN cannot but be regarded by Government of India as an encroachment on India’s sovereignty and territory and inconsistent with friendly relations that should exist between the two Dominions”. Indian Dominion has no rights of sovereignty, territory or otherwise over Junagadh. We entirely fail to understand how accession of Junagadh to PAKISTAN can be regarded as an encroachment upon India’s sovereignty and as inconsistent with friendly relations between the two Dominions.

5. Regarding your suggestion for a PLEBISCITE this was a matter between Ruler constituted authority and people of Junagadh.

6. We note that concentration of troops in adjacent States is only intended as a precautionary measure to meet any possible trouble that may occur in those States that have acceded to India Dominion. We are informed authoritatively by Junagadh that your allegation that Junagadh has made large scale military preparations is totally unfounded. In the very nature of things it is absurd to imagine that Junagadh can have aggressive designs on neighbouring States. All that Junagadh desires is to be left alone in peace.

7. On the contrary our information is that people from outside are fomenting trouble in internal affairs of Junagadh. The Jam Saheb’s latest statement is misleading and mischievous and in many respects devoid of truth. On the face of it, is a piece of clumsy propaganda by him and involves a direct threat of resorting to violence against the Moslem subjects of the adjoining States. As a result panic stricken Moslems from adjoining States who are threatened by Hindu rulers and their Hindu subjects are pouring into Junagadh for safety. His gratuitous advice to Moslems and Junagadh that it is in their interest that Junagadh should join India Dominion is wholly uncalled for. There are many objectionable features of this statement by the Jam Saheb which we need not go into detail in this context. The Government of India should however take steps to stop such incitement to violence by a State that has acceded to the Indian Dominion.

8. I am repeating separately to you copy of a telegram received today from the Dewan of Junagadh which speaks for itself. According to my information from all sources account given therein is substantially correct. The cumulative effect of all facts stated above make PAKISTAN Government feel India Dominion by their policy and action are infringing sovereignty of PAKISTAN.

9. Your statement that India had been sending despatches on the subject to which PAKISTAN had given no reply is incorrect. When the matter was last raised with PAKISTAN High Commissioner he explained quite correctly to Sardar Patel the PAKISTAN Government’s policy on the subject and no further communication was considered necessary.

10. The alleged telegram from Prime Minister, India to Prime Minister of PAKISTAN dated 12th September was brought by Lord ISMAY. It does not bear any number or certificate to the effect that its issue had been authorized. Indeed it was gathered from Lord ISMAY that Minister concerned had refused to sign the telegram. In the circumstances it was felt that no notice could be taken of the telegram until it was formally and officially communicated to us.

**********

Telegram No. TOR. 1630 from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Indian Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, September 25, 1947.

From Prime Minister PAKISTAN to Prime Minister India.

2. Below is text of telegram referred to in Para. No. 8 of telegram No.311 sent today.

3. Your telegram No. 350 September 22nd to His highness the Nawab, has added to our surprise. Both BABARIWAD and MANGROL are integral parts of Junagadh territory and their accession to Indian union is invalid. No single case of HARASSMENT has occurred in Junagadh territory in spite of provocative means employed by neighbouring States and India States Department. Our force in BABARIWAD is intended to maintain law and order and to protect State property and buildings. Attitude of Indian States Department is TANTAMOUNT to invasion of Junagadh which forms now part of PAKISTAN. Mangrol made to sign an accession on September 20th without sufficient time to consider and realising her position as part of Junagadh territory has renounced it within an hour on same day in writing to Regional Commissioner at Rajkot Mr. Buch as States Secretary had meanwhile left for Bombay. He withdrew accession while document was still in hands of States Secretary who was on his way to Bombay and long before it reached Delhi or Governor General. As I explained personally to Mr. Menon the question can be settled between the two Dominions who are pledged to maintain harmony between themselves and in their respective territory. Complete tranquility prevails in Junagadh. I again repeat unless it is intended to invade part of Pakistan the two Dominion representatives can meet and settle disputed questions. Any impartial committee welcome to see things throughout Junagadh territory where every soul is given protection and no harassment of any kind exists.

1953. Press Communiqué issued from the Ministry of States
New Delhi, September 25, 1947.
F. No. 26-PR/47

Press Communiqué.

In view of the wide public interest manifested in the situation in Kathiawar created by the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan, the Government of India consider it desirable to explain the effect of such accession and their own policy.

The State of Junagadh is situated in the midst of other States which have acceded to the Dominion of India, and its territories are interlaced with the territories of these States. For example, inside Junagadh itself, there are territories of the States which have acceded to the Dominion of India; similarly islands of Junagadh State territory exist inside Bhavnagar, Nawannagar, Godal and Baroda. The railway and posts and telegraphs services of Junagadh are an integral part of the Indian system; the railway police, telegraphs and telephones are administered by the Dominion of India. The State has a population of approximately 671,000, of whom about 543,000 or 81 per cent are non-Muslims.

Although, theoretically, the termination of Paramountcy left the Indian States free to accede to either of the Dominions, it has always been recognized that, in practice, this freedom would be exercised with due regard to the facts of geography. This was made clear by his Excellency the Governor-General of India at the Conference which he held with the representatives of the States on the 25th July and this has been the essence of the accession policy pursued by the Government of India.

A representative of Junagadh was present at this Conference and participated in its discussions. In his public statements, His Highness the Nawab has adhered to the principle of the solidarity of Kathiawar. Junagadh, however, never attempted to negotiate the terms of accession with the Dominion of India. On the other hand, without any warning, it was announced that the State had acceded to the Dominion of Pakistan and that this accession had been accepted. Prior to the announcement, there were indications that Junagadh intended to accede to Pakistan. The Government of India immediately represented to the Government of the Dominion of Pakistan that the matter should be decided according to the wishes of the people of the State. No reply was received either to this or to a subsequent communication. The Government of India, therefore, decided to depute Mr. V.P. Menon, Secretary Ministry of States, to Junagadh with a personal message to His Highness the Nawab. The Dawn conveyed to Mr. Menon His Highness’ inability to see him. He could only see the Dewan who made the suggestion that the matter should be discussed at a Conference with the representatives of the Dominions of India and Pakistan at which Junagadh should also be represented.

The suggestion for a conference has not been followed up, either by the Dominion of Pakistan or by the State of Junagadh. Meanwhile the Government of India have received representations from several acceding States and areas in Kathiawar that they apprehend danger to their security and that large numbers of Hindus are fleeing from the Junagadh State. In any case, it is clear that the accession of Junagadh to the Dominion of Pakistan must, in view of the geographical situation of the State and the interlacing of its communications with the surrounding States which have acceded to the Dominion of India, must be a source of constant friction between Junagadh and the surrounding States, between Junagadh and the Dominion of India and ultimately between the Dominions of India and Pakistan.

The Government of India are determined to find a solution of this problem. Their sole aim is to see tranquility maintained throughout Kathiawar. This can only be achieved if relations between all the States are harmonious and the relationship of Junagadh to either of the two Dominions is left to be determined by a free expression of the will of the people of the State. To ascertain these wishes, the Government of India have suggested a referendum. They adhere to that suggestion. They are and will always be willing to find a solution of this complicated and delicate problem by friendly discussion with the Dominion of Pakistan and the State of Junagadh. They have an obligation to protect the interests of the States within and around Junagadh which have acceded to the Indian Dominion. This responsibility they will fully and faithfully discharge.

Ministry of States
New Delhi
September 25, 1947.

1954.  Letter from Samaldas Laxmidas Gandhi, President, Junagadh Provisional Government to the Ministry of States, Government of India.

September 26, 1947.

I have the honour to address this communication on behalf of the Provisional Government of the People of Junagadh.

The accompanying Proclamation establishing my Government states the reasons which have compelled the people of Junagadh to adopt this course.

The Provisional Government has been appointed by the people of Junagadh at a public meeting held in Bombay on the 25th instant. Under the auspices of Junagadh Prajamandal and attended by them in thousands.

All the six Minister of the Provisional Government are holding responsible positions in life, leaders of public opinion, four of them having large stakes in Junagadh state.

You are aware that more than a lac of people have already migrated from the Junagadh state. At the instance of the state authorities thousands of foreign Muslims are infiltrating the state territory and they as well as the local Muslims are being armed to terrorise the people.

I have no doubt that Dominion Government will agree with the people of Junagadh that they were fully justified in disowning allegiance to the Nawab of Junagadh and in proceeding to appoint their own Government.
I claim that the Provisional Government is the truly representative Government of the People of Junagadh and my Government will be prepared at any time to prove its representative character by a free vote of the people of Junagadh to be taken under conditions which may be decided hereafter to insure a free vote to determine the will of the people of Junagadh.

I therefore, beg to request the Government of India with all the emphasis at my command to accept my Government as the truly representative Government of the People of Junagadh and to issue an instrument of accession to them for accession of the Junagadh State to the Government of India under the terms of the Proclamation.

I also, have to request you to render us full assistance (1) to discharge our responsibility to the people of Junagadh in saving them from the yoke of the despotic Nawab, who has forfeited all claims to the allegiance of his subjects,
(2) to rehabilitate the people of Junagadh who have been compelled to migrate
(3) to establish complete law and order in the state.

I am deputing Mr. U.N. Dhebar and C.C. Shah to personally convey the loyalty of my Government to the Dominion of India and to secure their recognition and assistance on behalf of my Government and the People of Junagadh.

***********

Declaration by the Subjects of Junagadh State - Formation of Provisional Government.

Whereas the Nawab of Junagadh has, against the declared wishes of an overwhelming majority of his subjects and under the influence of the agents of the Dominion of Pakistan, executed on 15th September 1947 an Instrument of Accession whereby the state is declared to have acceded to the Dominion of Pakistan;

And whereas the Dominions of Pakistan has accepted the said Instrument of Accession in disregard of such declared wishes and in defiance of all natural ties which bind the people of Junagadh (82% of whom are non-Muslims) to the people of Kathiawar and to the Dominion of India and in breach of the understanding on the basis of which certain parts of India were allowed to seceded and form into a separate state of Pakistan; namely, that only contiguous areas predominantly inhabited by Muslims were to be included into the dominion of Pakistan, with the free and willing consent of the people inhabiting those areas;

And whereas by his said act of executing the Instrument of Accession the Nawab has purported to transfer the allegiance of the subjects of his State against their will to the Dominion of Pakistan so as to compel them to be nationals of Pakistan which is a state foreign to them and formed with the object of providing a national home for Muslims.

And whereas before and after the said purported Accession the authorities of the state under the guidance of the agents of Pakistan, and in the name of the Nawab armed a section of the Muslims of the state with a view to terrorise the subjects of the state and to preventing them from claiming self-determination and voicing their antagonism to the Accession with the result that more than a hundred thousands of the subjects have already left and many more are leaving the state every day and the state authorities are infiltrating the state territories with Muslim refugees of other areas.

We the subjects of Junagadh state hereby declare that by transferring the allegiance of his subjects against their will to Pakistan and preparing for a reign of terror to coerce them to acquiesce in such transfer, the Nawab has forfeited his claim to the allegiance of his subjects;

We hereby further declare that the Dominion of Pakistan in accepting the said Instrument of Accession of the Nawab has violated the principle of self-determination as also the aforestated understanding on which Pakistan was agreed to be formed and that therefore the said Instrument of Accession is null and void and not binding on the subjects of the state or the territories thereof;

We further declare in exercise of our inherent right of self-determination our decision to accede to the Dominion of India and to join the territories of Junagadh State with the contiguous territories of the Dominion of India;

We further declare our firm and solemn resolve to adopt all such means and to take all such steps as may be necessary or incidental to the State of Junagadh formally acceding to the Dominion of India and forming and remaining an integral part thereof.

In furtherance of our said solemn declaration and resolve we hereby appoint a Provision Government consisting of:

1. Samaldas Laxmidas Gandhi
2. Durlabhji Keshavji Khetani
3. Bhavanishanker A. Oza;
4. Suragbhai Kalubhai Varu, (President),
5. Manilal Sunderji Doshi,
6. Narendra Pragji Nathvani, with all power, authority and jurisdiction heretofore vested in and exercised by the Nawab of Junagadh prior to 15th September, 1947, over and in relation to the said State of Junagadh and all territories thereof and we hereby authorize our said Provisional Government to take immediate steps for implementing and carrying out our said declaration and resolve and to exercise all power, authority and jurisdiction hereby conferred upon them.

And we hereby solemnly pledge our allegiance to the said Provisional Government and through it to the Dominion of India and call upon all the subjects of Junagadh State wherever resident to carry out loyally the orders and directions of the said Provisional Government.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1955. Demi Official letter from the Governor General of India Mountbatten of Burma to Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel.

New Delhi, September 27, 1947.

No. 20/11 27th September, 1947

I enclose a copy of a signed note from Lord Ismay referring to paragraph 10 of telegram No. 311* of the 25th September from the Governor-General Pakistan to the Governor-General India, in which an allegation was made on which I have already given you my opinion merely on my relative opinion of the characters of Mr. Jinnah and Lord Ismay.

With reference to Lord Ismay’s paragraph 2, I consider that this deliberate lie should be refuted, and I would be grateful if the draft of the refutation could be shown to him before it is dispatched.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the Prime Minister.

***********

Note of Lord Ismay to the Governor-General, dated 27th September 1947.

With reference to paragraph 10 of the attached telegram* I have already stated categorically that Mr. Liquate Ali Khan left Karachi for Lahore for conversations with the Prime Minister (Nehru) before I could have a word with him. Consequently the word ‘Junagadh’ never crossed my lips from the time I left Delhi to the time I returned. Therefore to say that “it was gathered from Lord Ismay that Minister concerned had refused to sign the telegram” is an absolute lie, without any shadow of foundation whatsoever. Not only is it an absolute lie, but it seems a most mischievous attempt to cast aspersions on my bona fides.

* Please see Document No.1952.

2. Should it be thought necessary to refute this deliberate lie—because there can be no question whatsoever of any misunderstanding on this point—I would be most grateful if I might be shown the terms of the refutation before it is dispatched, since my personal honour is engaged.

1956. Demi Official letter from Governor General Mountbatten of Burma to Secretary, Ministry of States V.P. Menon.

New Delhi, September 28, 1947.

Herewith a copy of the letter I have written to the Prime Minister about Junagadh, since you were present when I drafted it, this is a copy for your personal information. I am so glad that you agree with what I have proposed. You will notice one slight difference and that is, that I have recommended the notification should be sent to other members of the Commonwealth (since Jinnah supported this course himself) and since no action is required by them and we shall not get any of the back-wash, we might otherwise get from Russia and the others at United Nations Organisation.

I am so glad that you opened your heart to me in saying that you would feel dishonoured if the States whose accession to us is undisputed were left unprotected, for I too would feel dishonoured. However I hope that my proposal will prove the right solution.

***********

Demi Official letter from Governor General Mountbatten of Burma to Prime Minister Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru.

New Delhi, September 28, 1947.

I have been thinking over the question of Junagadh which you told me last night was going to be discussed at a special meeting of the Cabinet at 5.30 p.m. today, Sunday. You know the basic principle on which I am working, which can be quickly restated as follows.

“In the present inflamed condition of India and Pakistan any act taken by either dominion which would involve soldiers of the two dominions shooting against each other, might well start a war which would be the end of India during our lifetime. Further, India's international position and prestige, demands that she should not commit an act that might be regarded as responsible for precipitating this war".

I have however a corollary to state, which I think I did not make clear last night. "If any part of Indian territory including of course Indian States who have acceded to the Dominion of India, and whose accession is not in dispute, consider their security threatened by a state which has acceded to Pakistan, then the honor of India demands that this state should be granted the protection to which their Instrument of Accession entitles them".

The difficulty in the case of Junagadh, is the fact that some of the small Indian states which have acceded to us, can only be reached by crossing Junagadh territory. Fortunately, some of Junagadh territory can only be reached by crossing Indian territory. I would consider it a perfectly proper proceeding if a military column were to proceed across Junagadh territory to provide a garrison for Indian territory which was inside Junagadh, provided that two conditions were fulfilled

(a) that the column moved under the White Flag of truce, carrying written instructions which could be shown to Junagadh officers that they were to proceed only to Indian territory, and on no account to violate Junagadh sovereignty. Further more, that the column received orders on no account to open fire, except in the final case of self-defence.

(b) that due notification was sent to the authorities, in this case the Government of Pakistan, and Junagadh, and I strongly recommend that a copy of this notification should be forwarded either through the various High Commissioners to the other Dominions of the Commonwealth, or if the cabinet prefer to United Nations Organisation. In the latter case, it is well to remember that there are countries like Russia who always seem to delay matters. In this connection, it should be remembered that there are a lot of Nations in United Nations Organisation who might wish to take this opportunity of fishing in troubled waters. On the other hand, I do feel that our position would be strengthened if some other authorities were also informed of this notification, and on the whole I personally think the other members of the Commonwealth would be best. I suggest that in this notification, a full admission should be made of the reciprocal rights of Junagadh (and Pakistan) forces to cross Indian territory if they wish to proceed to outlying Junagadh territory.

As regards the disputed state of Mangrol and Babriawad; I personally have no doubt that we are legally entitled to accept their accession to India, but it must be realised that this has been publicly disputed by Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan in his recent statement. I therefore suggest that we should notify Pakistan and Junagadh that we are prepared to go to arbitration in the case of these two states, but that in the meanwhile, to ensure that their inhabitants are not improperly interfered with, they should withdraw all Junagadh and Pakistan forces forthwith.

Personally, I entirely agree with the continuation of the military plans and precautions which we have had under discussion. I also renew my recommendation that we should make every endeavour to set up an adequate Intelligence Organisation in that area forthwith, and that up to a dozen Intelligence Officers or agents should be sent to the area to make sure that we are furnished with reliable and up-to-date information.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1957. Meeting of the Cabinet held on Sunday, the 28th September, 1947 at 5:30 p.m.

Case No. 296/51/47.

Junagadh Situation

Present
The Prime Minister.
The Deputy Prime Minister.
The Minister for Education.
The Minister for Transport and Railways.
The Minister for Defence.
The Minister for Communications.
The Minister for Health.
The Minister for W.M. & P.
The Minister for Relief & Rehabilitation.
The Minister without Portfolio.
The Secretary General, Ministry of E.A. & C.R.
The Secretary, Ministry of States.
The Principal Private Secretary to the Prime Minister.
The Secretary to the Cabinet.
The Deputy Secretary to the Cabinet.

The Secretary, States Ministry, read out the telegram [Document No.1952] dated 25th September of the Pakistan Government on Junagadh. This telegram repeated the assertion that Junagadh had every right to join Pakistan regardless of its territorial location, alleged that Junagadh had only peaceful intentions and argued that India should stop what it called incitement to violence from States that had acceded to India. It contained a petty and indeed frivolous legalistic argument about the message carried by Lord Ismay, attributed to the latter a statement which had been refuted by him as a mischievous lie, and referred to conversation between the Pakistan High Commissioner and the States Minister, which had never in fact taken place.

The Secretary, States Ministry, read out a draft reply [Document No.1956] which refuted the two untrue statements on questions of fact and, regarding Junagadh, referred to the press statement [Document No.1953] issued by India, on the 26th September, which expressed fully India's views on the subject. The draft reply was approved in principle by the Cabinet after discussion, and it was agreed that the Prime Minister should send it after such drafting changes as he considered necessary.

The general situation in Junagadh was also discussed. The Cabinet agreed to consider it further at a subsequent meeting.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1958. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

No.8093 29th September, 1947

Your telegram No 311 dated the 25th September [Document No.1952] Message from Governor-General Pakistan to Governor-General India regarding Junagadh.

2. The Government of India take strong exception to the tone of the message. Discourtesy neither resolves differences between Governments nor is it compatible with established diplomatic usage.

3. The position of Indian Dominion in regard to accession of Junagadh is clearly set out in the Government of India’s press statement [Document No. ....] text of which was telegraphed to you on 25th September and they have nothing to add to it.

4. As regards your reference to Press Conference held by His Highness Maharaja of Nawanagar, it may be mentioned that he was only voicing the sentiments of Rulers of Gujarat and Kathiawar. In a Conference held in Bombay on 26th September, these Rulers wholeheartedly endorsed the view expressed by his Highness the Jam Saheb in his Press Conference.

5. Government of India must point out that report of situation conveyed in paragraph 7 of your message is totally incorrect. They have made very careful enquiries into position in Junagadh, and have unimpeachable evidence that not only have a large number of non-Muslims left Junagadh on account of insecurity of conditions there but also that there has not been single instance where a Muslim from adjoining States had to leave to Junagadh for reasons of safety.

6. With reference to paragraph 10 of your telegram, I am to point out that the States Ministry had, on the 6th September, enquired from your High Commission here whether any reply had been received to their letter of August 21st regarding Junagadh. The High Commissioner replied on the 12th September that he was still awaiting your instructions. The Pakistan High Commissioner then went to Karachi and only returned on the 26th September. Your High Commissioner never discussed and, indeed, owing to his absence could not have discussed this question with Sardar Patel.

7. As regards paragraph 11 of your telegram, the facts are these. Lord Ismay was going to Karachi. The message from the Prime Minister of India to the Prime Minister of Pakistan, which would otherwise have been telegraphed was given to him to ensure safe and speedy delivery. It needed neither number nor certificate. Had Lord Ismay been able to deliver it to the Prime Minister of Pakistan in person, he would have explained how he happened to be entrusted with it. Since Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan had left Karachi for Lahore before Lord Ismay could see him, message in question could not be delivered to the Prime Minister of Pakistan personally. Lord Ismay has seen Para 11. He totally denies having said that the “Minister concerned had refused to sign the telegram” and says that from the time he left New Delhi until his return to this city, the word ‘Junagadh’ did not cross his lips. The statement attributed to him is, therefore, devoid of foundation. The Government of India can only express their profound surprise and regret that the honour of a person of his integrity and long record of distinguished public service should have been impugned.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1959. Letter from Governor General of India Mountbatten to Deputy Prime Minister and Home Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and his reply.

New Delhi, September 29, 1947.

Government House
New Delhi

29 September 1947.

My dear Deputy Prime Minister,

I noticed in the Press a day or two ago that Liaquat Ali Khan claimed that "Babariawad consists of a group of Jagirdars under the undisputed sovereignty of the Ruler of Junagadh" and that "Mangrol has voluntarily placed itself in the position of a vassal of Junagadh and has no separate entity as a State."

I know, of course, that we hold a very different view on both matters, and that as regards Mangrol, Sir Walter Monckton unequivocally upholds our view.

Nevertheless, I wonder if there is any method, such as reference to some impartial tribunal, which could settle this matter once and for all. The reason behind this suggestion is that I feel that if we are going to put troops into either of the disputed areas, we must be sure that in doing so we are acting with unchallengeable correctitude.

I will take this up later today if we can arrange a meeting.

Yours very sincerely

Mountbatten of Burma

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel

**********

Reply of Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel to Governor General.

New Delhi 1 October 1947

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

Please refer to your Excellency's letter dated 29 September 1947 regarding Babariawad and Mangrol. Although Liaquat Ali Khan claims that "Mangrol has voluntarily placed itself in the position of a vassal of Junagadh and has no separate entity as a State," the facts are quite the reverse. The Sheikh of Mangrol himself issued a Gazette Notification on 15 September stating unequivocally that he was independent of Junagadh and that his State was quite distinct and separate from Junagadh. He further went on to say that he would announce his policy regarding the accession shortly. He followed up this notification by sending his Legal Adviser to Delhi to negotiate accession to the Indian Dominion. On advice being telegraphed by him to the Sheikh Sahib at Mangrol the latter went to Rajkot, had further full discussion with Menon and eventually signed the Instrument of Accession. All this would not have happened if it was true that Mangrol had "voluntarily placed himself in the position of a vassal of Junagadh." We have accepted the accession of Mangrol and it is Junagadh and Pakistan who claim the Mangrol had no right to accede apart from Junagadh. Thus, if I may say so, the boot is on the other leg, and it is really for Pakistan to seek arbitration in support of its claim against Mangrol. I do not see how, after having accepted the accession of Mangrol, we can ourselves suggest arbitration, an implication of which would be that we have accepted accession without being quite sure as to the correct status of Mangrol. The same principle applies to Babariawad.
JUNAGARH

2. If, however, Pakistan wishes and suggests arbitration, we shall be prepared to consider the request, but I am quite clear in my mind that the approach for arbitration must in both cases be made by Pakistan and not by us.

Yours sincerely
Vallabhbhia Patel

H. E. the Governor-General Government House,
New Delhi

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1960. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, September 30, 1947.

No.14-B

Reference your Ministry of States communiqué [Document No.1953] on Junagadh. Pakistan Government regret to observe the position taken by India Government regarding the question of Junagadh's accession. India Government's conclusion that the only solution is to refer the question of Junagadh's accession to a plebiscite based on reasons with which we cannot agree. Junagadh Government was free to accede to Pakistan and has done so and it is not open to the India Government to dictate or interfere with Junagadh State in the matter of its accession. The immediate point at issue is that the apprehensions on both sides regarding the security of their respective frontiers should be removed. We have been and still are willing to negotiate and come to a satisfactory solution of this problem. Meanwhile it is understood that all supply and communication lines with Junagadh have been suspended at India Government's instance resulting in complete economic blockade of Junagadh. We must emphasise that negotiations however well meaning cannot be successful until economic and military threat to Junagadh is removed and peaceful atmosphere restored.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1961. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, (not dated)

Dewan Junagadh reports that in spite of Junagadh's accession to Pakistan Indian Dominion continues to exercise jurisdiction over Railways within Junagadh State territory. This cannot now be considered valid and you are requested to arrange for immediate retrocession of jurisdiction to Junagadh. The matter may be treated as immediate and information of action taken given both to Junagadh State and to us.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1962. Report by Secretary, Ministry of States, V. P. Menon on his visit to Junagadh.

September 1947.

I left Delhi by air on 18.9.1947 accompanied by His Highness the Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanagar and Mr. Buch and reached Rajkot the same evening. On arrival I sent an immediate telegram to His Highness the Nawab Saheb of Junagadh as follows.

"I have arrived today in Rajkot from Delhi with a most important message to deliver to your highness personally from Government of India and I as their representative desire to see your Highness tomorrow morning. I shall leave Rajkot at 8 O'clock tomorrow morning and would be in Junagadh at about 11 o'clock. Regards."

2. I had discussions on the situation first with Brigadier Smith and Colonel Houghton, officers in command of our battalion in Rajkot, and then with our Inspector-General of Police and the office in charge of the Central Armed Police Detachment at Rajkot. On the 19th I proceeded by car to Junagadh, accompanied by the Regional Commissioner, Mr. Buch, and the Deputy Regional Commissioner, Mr. Banesinhji. We were cordially received and the Inspector General of Police, Junagadh, Khan Bahadur Naqvi, met us outside Junagadh and escorted us to the Guest House. Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto, the Dewan of Junagadh, came to see us at the Guest House. I told him that I had been sent by the Indian Dominion Cabinet to deliver an important message to His Highness personally. The Dewan said that His Highness had received my telegram but he had been in bed for the past ten days and was not fit enough to see anyone; and even the Dewan had been unable to meet him for four days. I again emphasised to the Dewan that the message was most important and meant to be delivered personally to the Nawab and that I would like to see His Highness for a few minutes even if he was indisposed. The Dewan said that His Highness' condition was such that it was absolutely impossible for him to see me. I may add that this did not come to me as a surprise as I had been warned at Rajkot that the Nawab would avoid meeting me.

3. I had a long talk with the Dewan. I pointed out to him the geographical position of Junagadh, the fact that the overwhelming majority of the population was non-Muslim and desirous of joining the Indian Union, the existence within Junagadh territory of pockets of States which had acceded to India and of Pockets of Junagadh territory in our areas. Junagadh State was so situated that by acceding to Pakistan a pocket of foreign territory was created right inside Kathiawar. This situation could not be tolerated and was not in the interest of the people as suggested by Junagadh State in the announcements made at the time of accession. Junagadh had never made any attempt to negotiate with the Indian Dominion and till the very last day proclaimed their belief in the solidarity and integrity of Kathiawar.

4. The Dewan said that his Constitutional Adviser, who attended the Delhi conference on 25 July, advised the State that its interests lay in its acceding to Pakistan. Similar advice was given by Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan who was also consulted by the State. (I have no doubt myself that the deciding factor in Junagadh's accession to Pakistan was Sir Muhammad Zafrullah's advice). The Council of Ministers of the State which, according to the Dewan, consisted of members of all communities, came to the unanimous decision that the State should join Pakistan. It was apprehended that the Congress Government would soon find itself unable to resist the inroads of extreme Communist views, and Junagadh had not been treated properly lately. I pointed out that neither of these arguments could bear any scrutiny. If communism was to pervade the neighbouring territories, neither Junagadh nor even Pakistan could escape the influences permeating from these areas, particularly when Junagadh's situation was such that it was surrounded on all sides except on the sea front by States acceding to us. Apart from the fact that the fears entertained were themselves groundless, accession to one Dominion or another could not make any difference in this matter. Junagadh's representatives never discussed the matter at Delhi. In reply to the Dewan's argument that the Junagadh representative was not given a hearing at the Delhi conference, I pointed out to the Dewan that far from this being the case, the Junagadh representative asked a number of question at the conference of the 25th and that these questions were fully answered by His Excellency the Viceroy. I myself saw the Junagadh representative separately and had full and frank talks with him. I asked whether the Constitutional Adviser was present in Junagadh since I could then confront him with this. The Dewan said that he (Khan Bahadur Nabi Bux) was no longer in Junagadh service.

5. The Dewan complained about various orders passed stopping supply of commodities to the State. I pointed out that no action was taken at all till Junagadh informed the Government of India definitely that it had decided to accede to Pakistan.

6. During the course of the discussions Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto regretted the decision that India was to be divided, but agreed that

(i) he had made a mistake in not making a further approach to the Government of India before finally making an announcement regarding accession;

(ii) there was now no doubt that the majority of the population of the State was for joining the Indian Dominion although their opinion was greatly influenced by the passions raised and the virulent writings in the Gujarati Press;

(iii) the interests of Junagadh, the premier State in Kathiawar, were bound up with the rest of Kathiawar; and

(iv) personally he would favour the proposal that the issue should be decided by a referendum.

7. At the same time, the only two ways of dealing with the situation which had now been created were either the use of force or by proceeding in a constitutional manner. In his opinion only the second alternative was possible. The suggestion he had to make was that discussions should now be held between the two Dominion Governments at which he should also be invited. He would be quite prepared to tell this conference that his views were those summarized above. He suggested however that if his personal opinion was at all known outside, his position in Junagadh would become untenable and he might not be able to be of any help.

8. I asked him plainly whether if the Pakistan Government took up the stand that Junagadh must stick to its accession to Pakistan and that no referendum should be held, he would be prepared to hold a referendum despite Pakistan. Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto's answer was that he knew that Jinnah was an obstinate man but he himself would in such circumstances be willing to hold a referendum, though he could not commit the Junagadh Government in this matter.

9. I pointed out to the Dewan with all the emphasis at my command the serious consequences likely to accrue from Junagadh's accession to Pakistan and the fact that the Indian Dominion cannot, after agreeing to the partition of the country, further allow pockets of foreign territory to be created within its own territory. I told him that I would make a report to the Cabinet on my return to Delhi.

10. We then left Junagadh and reached Rajkot in the afternoon. At Rajkot I had discussions with H.H. the Maharaja Jam Saheb who had come over from Jamnagar, Brigadier Smith, Col. Houghton and other officers at Rajkot, and a number of rulers and Talukdars of Kathi States and public men, including Mr. Dhebar and Mr. Rasiklal Parikh. At 8 p.m. I held a Press conference where I pointed out that I had gone to Junagadh to see the Nawab Sahib under instructions from the Cabinet, that I was unable to see H.H. on account of his indisposition but was cordially received and met by the Dewan with whom I had discussions. The Dominion Government was fully alive to the needs of the situation. On my raising the matter, the Junagadh Dewan had assured me that the Nawab was determined to protect and look after the interests of his Hindu subjects who should not feel panicky. I would submit my report to the Cabinet, but I could give an assurance that the Government of India was fully determined and prepared to protect the States and areas which had decided to accede to it.

11. There is no doubt that there is considerable panic among non-Muslims in Junagadh and Hindus in large numbers are leaving the State. The Kathi States and areas round about and in the middle of Junagadh territory are feeling nervous and want arms as well as protection. The Jam Saheb had already sent some of his troops to Gondal and Jetpur States at their request.

12. Junagadh State has recently moved additional police and troops, rather less than 200 strong, to Babariawad, whose accession we have accepted recently. More men, nearly 200 again, are reported to be ready to go to their assistance from Una. We have nearly 150 men, of whom 120 belong to the Central Armed Police, and 30 to other police, at Dedan. They have not moved into Babariawad as they apprehend conflict and would like support from the military. I discussed the whole situation with our Army officers. Their view is that, instead of dispersing our forces in Babariawad, Blikha and other pockets in Junagadh, the better course would be to concentrate our troops at one place. If there was any resistance in Babariawad or elsewhere the battalion could proceed there. The battalion is not yet complete and some men and equipment, as well as transport, have yet to arrive. I thought it would be best if Brig. Smith and I flew over to Bombay with the Jam Sahib, in order to have an opportunity of discussing the whole situation with General Richardson.

13. On the 18th evening I also sent telegrams to the Khan Sahib of Manavadar and the Sheikh of Mangrol asking them to see me on the 19th at 5 p.m. The Dewan of Manavadar came as Khan Sahib was suffering from boils. I told him, however, that I wished to see the Khan Sahib himself. Accordingly the Khan Sahib came to see me the next morning in spite of his indisposition. I told him that the position of Manavadar was identical with that of many States which had acceded to the Dominion of India and asked him for a clarification of his attitude. He replied that he had already entered into a standstill agreement with Pakistan and had asked that Manavadar should accede to the Pakistan Dominion. I explained to him that from the point of view of the Indian government it was intolerable that pockets of foreign territory should be created in Indian soil. I found him puzzled and quite unable to argue his own case. Apparently I was later told that before he came to see me he had a telephonic talk with Karachi and had been advised to stand firm. I asked that his final decision one way or the other should be communicated to me the next morning. He promised to think about the whole question and come and see me again on the 20th at 11 o'clock. I have been informed that he tried to put a call through to Karachi.
immediately he left me, but that this call was stopped by the postal authorities. Eventually the Khan did not come to see me as promised.

14. Mr. Bapubhai Buch saw me on behalf of Mangrol. Junagadh considers that Mangrol is its vassal. The State consists of 42 villages, in 21 of which the Sheikh of Mangrol exercises full jurisdiction. In the other 21 the administrative arrangements are carried on jointly with Junagadh. This is an arrangement which had been recognized by the paramount power. On 15 August, however, Mangrol declared its independence and Junagadh issued a Press note in a Gazette Extraordinary on 18 September which reads as follows:

"The Sheikh Sahib of Mangrol, who has been a vassal of Junagadh for many generations, has intimated that he has declared independence. This declaration is entirely unconstitutional and illegal and has not been recognized by the Ruler of Junagadh who will take such steps as may be necessary to enforce his rights over his dependency. It is hoped that the Sheikh Sahib will realize the wrong step he has taken and will withdraw his decision to avoid any unfortunate or unpleasant consequences."

15. My interview with the Sheikh of Mangrol has an interesting history. On the day that I left for Rajkot the Sheikh had sent his constitutional adviser to Delhi to see the Prime Minister. When I told Mr. Bapubhai Buch that I wanted to see the Sheikh himself, he replied that the Sheikh is not allowed to travel by car through Junagadh territory and that although he was very anxious to meet me, his car would be stopped by the Junagadh authorities. I accordingly sent him a car with the Nawanagar name-plate. The Sheikh came to see me and showed me a telegram from his constitutional adviser from Delhi strongly advising him to accede to India. The only condition which he made was that we should recognize his independence of Junagadh. I assured him that this would be in accordance with the new constitutional set-up, since with the lapse of paramountcy and its obligations Junagadh could no longer enforce its sovereignty. He then dictated a letter and signed the Instrument of Accession and the Standstill Agreement. It appears that he has now made out that he put his signature without a full realization of the implications of accession. This is clearly absurd. I think what must have happened was that the Junagadh State officials intercepted him on his way back to Mangrol and forced him to write in this strain. But however this may be, we have taken action as soon as I arrived back in Delhi yesterday to announce Mangrol's accession to the Dominion of India and the Dominion Government's acceptance of this accession.

16. We left for Bombay with the Jam Saheb on the 19th. In Bombay a number of press representatives were waiting for us. I told them that from the point of view of Government I had nothing to add to what I had told pressmen in Rajkot.
but I asked the Jam Saheb to give them a talk explaining the point of view of the Kathiawar States. This was widely reported in the Bombay press.

17. We had a discussion with Gen. Richardson, General Officer Commanding, Southern Command. With his permission His Highness the Jam Saheb was also present at these discussions. Gen Richardson told us that he was not particularly strong in personnel and equipment but he did not see any difficulty from the military point of view in tackling the Junagadh problem provided there was no flare-up in Bombay and Ahmedabad. I promised to speak to the Home Minister, Bombay, about this. I impressed on Gen. Richardson the need for hundred per cent co-operation from everyone in pursuance of whatever decision Government may take.

18. After dinner we had discussions with several representatives both of the Congress and of the Indian States Peoples Organisation in Kathiawar. I may say that these persons represent practically the brains trust of the Kathiawar world. They were one and all emphatic that we have not done enough to secure a sense of safety in Babariawad and that the Junagadh issue was a most vital one on which if we gave in, the whole prestige of the Government would suffer badly. I explained generally how the matter stood. I also outlined to them the course of action which they would be well advised to take. They went away quite satisfied.

19. On the 20th morning I met Mr. Morarji Desai, Home Minister. He told me that he would be able to hold the position in Bombay and Ahmedabad provided the arms and ammunition which the Provincial Government have asked for were supplied immediately. I have since spoken about this to Home Minister and understand that this has been done. Mr. Desai also informed me that both the Bombay Govt. and the Bombay public were concerned that we should take a firm line in this matter. The position of the Bombay Government will also to a great extent depend on our attitude in the Junagadh affair. He asked me to mention this to the Cabinet with as much emphasis as I could.

20. Incidentally I may mention two points in relation to Kathiawar. In the first place a number of railway police personnel in Rajkot have been kept on even though they have opted for Pakistan. This has greatly affected our economic boycott of Junagadh since our control measures were being enforced with a great deal of laxity. Also several P&T officials who had opted for Pakistan continued to work in this area with the result that they tapped our telegraphic messages and passed them on to Junagadh State. I issued immediate instructions that everyone who had opted for Pakistan should be relieved of his duties at once and early arrangements should be made to send them to Karachi. This has been done. I may also mention that though the Deputy Inspector-General has 31 years of service he has not got sufficient initiative.
21. Again several States are sending sugar, petrol etc. into Junagadh thereby greatly diminishing the effect of our economic boycott. Mr. Buch, our Regional Commissioner, is fully aware of this position and will take strong measures to counter this. The whole of our economic measures will now require to be co-ordinated and a definite plan of action laid down. This would be looked into immediately. We have already issued instructions that aeroplanes should not stop at Junagadh and Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto was complaining to me about this when I met him. I understand that Pakistan has supplied some amount of coal to Junagadh but that no soldier has yet been brought into Junagadh territory. The sloop Godavari is however standing by. Pakistan has informed Junagadh that all assistance will be rendered to the State if there is a conflict with the Indian Government.

22. To sum up, I think it will be correct to say that there is complete unanimity of opinion in Kathiawar that we should take adequate action to prevent Junagadh from becoming a part of Pakistan. The rulers of States, the organisations of the States subjects and the Congress are all agreed in this matter. Hindus in Junagadh are very apprehensive. Taking a general view it may even be that the whole of Kathiawar will disintegrate if we yield on this issue.

23. At the last meeting of the Cabinet it was decided that we should keep our troops in our own territory or in States which have acceded to the Dominion of India. Our business then would be to repel any offensive action that Junagadh might take against us. This decision requires, I think, to be reconsidered in the light of my visit to Junagadh. If our battalion is spread out in scattered areas, it is bound to weaken its striking power and this may prejudicially affect any military operations that we may have to carry out, should they be forced on us. The Junagadh military and police forces under the command of Mr. Harvey Jones are already right inside Babariawad and the latest information is that Mr. Harvey Jones is trying to persuade the Mulgirasias to change their accession from the Indian Dominion to Junagadh and Pakistan. In view of the fact that the Sheikh of Mangrol has since been influenced by the Junagadh authorities I have no doubt in my mind that the Junagadh forces will also enter and occupy Mangrol. Both these will be hostile acts. It is for the military authorities to consider the measures that are necessary to repel these attacks on our acceding States and to maintain our integrity. If I may make a suggestion, it is essential that military and naval action should be co-ordinated. It is absolutely necessary to have one more battalion sent to Rajkot at once. Secondly, two of our sloops should be kept in the territorial waters of Mangrol. It would certainly have a steadying effect on the Sheikh of Mangrol. The presence of one reconnaissance plane operated from Rajkot in that locality will also facilitate our action.

25. From the international point of view our case would have to be prepared separately, but I have no doubt in my mind that our action would be fully justified because the offensive action is not taken by us but by Junagadh State. It is obviously essential that if any action is forced on us, we should take quick and effective measures. I would therefore suggest to H.M. that a cabinet meeting should be held at once to consider this matter and that the C-in-C should be invited to be present at this meeting.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1963. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs

Karachi, October 1, 1947.

No.156. 1

In view of Junagadh State’s accession to Pakistan Dominion with particular reference to communications it is proposed by the Post and Telegraph Branch of Pakistan Government to take over charge of Post and Telegraph in Junagadh. It is requested that immediate instructions may be sent to Superintendent Post and Telegraph at Rajkot to hand over charge of Junagadh system to an officer nominated by Director Post and Telegraph, Karachi, Sind and Baluchistan circle. Kindly confirm by return that instructions have accordingly been issued.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1964. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, October 2, 1947.

No.411. 2

2nd October, 1947

Your telegram No. 8093, dated September, 29th, 1947 [Document No.1958]

2. We regret to note that you have taken exception to the tone of our message and consider it discourteous. We have carefully examined the message and have failed to find in that communication anything to which you could justifiably take exception and we regret that you have not pointed out the portions to which you object. In our opinion our message contained nothing but a free and frank statement of facts.

3. Paragraph 3 of your message. We have already replied to your message which you issued to Press regarding accession of Junagadh and have stated that we totally disagree with you.

4. Paragraph 4. Your statement that Jam Sahib was expressing sentiments of Rulers of Kathiawar in Press statement objected to by us in no way meets our point. Whether Jam Saheb was expressing his own views or was voicing sentiments of others the fact remains that it was a most objectionable statement and likely to lead to trouble; and since Nawanagar has acceded to India we expect India Dominion to see that such statements are not made.

5. Paragraph 5. We regret to have to say that your statement regarding position in Junagadh is wholly incorrect. In one of his letter the Dewan has stated as follows: “But strangely enough the mussulmans from neighbouring states entering Junagadh are not allowed to bring anything with them except their clothes and movements of moslem subjects of Junagadh in the neighbouring states are being watched and in Gondal some were actually killed”.

Part II :

Following are extracts from message in yesterday morning’s TELEPRINTER “the Provincial Government of Junagadh struck its first blow against Junagadh’s authority when members of Volunteer Corps accompanying Provisional Government took possession of Junagadh State House in centre of Rajkot this afternoon. Armed young men are now guarding entrances and exits to Junagadh House over which TRICOLOUR flag flies”. “A few hours after Junagadh house was taken over the Provisional Government renamed it as AZAD Junagadh House and announced that House would be their Headquarters”.

“When youthful volunteers of Provisional Government sealed walls of Junagadh House this afternoon they had in their possession a letter from the President of Provisional Government Mr. Samaldas Gandhi asking those in charge of House to surrender peacefully. There were, however, only some servants taking charge of house—some ten of them—who were taken into custody”.

“In the absence of Mr. Samaldas Gandhi who was held up in Jamnagar, Mr. Durlabhji Khetani Vice-President of Provisional Government unfurled the flag. Following him other ministers of Provisional Government — BHAWANI SHANKOZA, NATWANI and S.K. VARU —BALWANT RAJ MEHTA, Vice-President of All India States Peoples Conference and Mr. JETHALAL Joshi President of Rajkot Praja Mandal told the gathering that the people of Kathiawar who had always been at the helm of struggles for freedom must not now lag behind in this struggle”.
Part III :-

This attempt to set a parallel Government for Junagadh in your territory cannot but be described as an unfriendly act towards Pakistan. It is regrettable that SUBVERSIVE activities against Junagadh state are not only being carried out but actually encouraged by certain authorities. Crimes against person and property of Junagadh state subjects are being committed in adjoining areas of Indian Dominion. To permit your subjects or subjects of any state which has acceded to Indian Dominion to carry on these subversive activities constitutes a breach of constitutional and international obligations imposed on India Government. We may also point out that some of actions of India Government to HARASS the Junagadh state have emboldened such people e.g. in clear violation of Standstill Agreement with Pakistan. India Government has stopped all communication, mail, telegraphic and telephonic between Junagadh state and outside world and an attempt is being made to starve state into submission. We trust that with a view to avoiding further deterioration in situation India Government would take immediate action not only to restore Junagadh property which has been usurped at Rajkot but would also lift boycott of Junagadh territory.

6. There seems to be some misunderstanding. Mr. V.P. Menon Secretary States Department of India Government wrote a Demi Official letter to our High Commissioner on August, 21st, 1947.

Part IV :-

On same date our High Commissioner met Sardar Patel and held discussions with him about Junagadh. Our High Commissioner explained that the decision of Pakistan Government with regard to the legal and constitutional position regarding accession of states to either dominion was as laid down in August 11th public statements. He subsequently informed us of this. As position explained by High Commissioner to Sadder Patel was in accordance with the declared policy of Pakistan Government it was not considered necessary to send further confirmation. At that time Junagadh had not acceded to Pakistan. A number of States including Junagadh were negotiating with Pakistan. They were told of constitutional position and no attempt was made by us to persuade them to join one or other Dominion. Besides it would be improper to negotiate with Indian Dominion question of accession of Junagadh without Junagadh being a party to it. The moment Junagadh, freely and of its own accord, decided to join Pakistan Dominion official communications to that effect were sent by us to your Government but not until then.

7. It was never intended to impugn honour and integrity of Lord Ismay who is held in high esteem by everyone. In fact we were making use of his authority to explain what actually had happened. The fact that message that he brought was un-numbered and unattested was noticed and he was naturally questioned about it. In reply he said that minister who had handed it over to him did not sign it. We merely conveyed these facts to you and do not see any grounds for accusing us for impugning honour and integrity of Lord Ismay.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1965. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs

New Delhi, October 2, 1947.
No. 223/Primin 72

From Prime Minister, India for Prime Minister, Pakistan.

In conversation yesterday regarding Junagadh and connected matter I informed you that it was our intention to issue a communiqué to the public and that we were anxious to find a peaceful and amicable solution of this problem. I pointed out that the presence of Junagadh forces in Babriawad was an act of aggression and a constant irritant to the people of the neighbouring states which have acceded to the Dominion of India. It appears that Junagadh troops have also gone to Mangrol and thus a further act of aggression has been committed. It is difficult for any conversations to be carried on in a peaceful atmosphere if armed forces occupy disputed territories. I have urged upon you, therefore, to have the Junagadh forces both in Babariwad and Mangrol withdrawn immediately. I trust that steps will be taken to this end without delay. This will relieve the present tension and enable us to proceed towards finding an amicable solution in consonance with the wishes of the people of the territories affected. As I have already informed you, a detachment of troops is being sent by us to Porbandar in response to the requests made by our acceding states in Kathiawar for protection. Certain state forces in Kathiawar will also guard frontiers. They have instructions not to enter the territory of Junagadh.

I shall be grateful for an early reply. I shall await your reply before issuing a press communiqué.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
New Delhi, October 3, 1947

Junagadh

Mr. Nehru said that although Junagadh was legally entitled to accede to Pakistan, the Government of India was not prepared to accept accession owing to the geographical complications caused by the fact that the other Kathiawar States and Junagadh were inextricably interlaced. Thus there were Junagadh islands in Indian territory and Indian islands in Junagadh territory. In addition there was the complication of Mongrol and Babariawad, both of whom the Nawab of Junagadh claimed to be his feudatories. The Government of India, after consulting legal opinion, did not accept this claim. Junagadh had put troops into both these States, and the other Kathiawar States had thereupon demanded the protection to which they were entitled from the Government of India.

He (Mr. Nehru) had had a long talk with Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan about this. They had both expressed their determination to settle the matter amicably. Mr. Nehru had suggested that the Junagadh troops should forthwith evacuate Mongrol and Babariawad, and Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan had said that he would consider doing so. Mr. Nehru added that the Government of India proposed to send troops to Porbandar to assure the neighbouring States of their safety. It had originally been their intention to announce the dispatch of these troops to Pakistan and to the world at large, but on further consideration he (Mr. Nehru) had decided that, as a first step, he would send a telegram to Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan reminding him of their conversation and asking him to expedite the withdrawal of Junagadh troops from Mongrol and Babariawad.
1967. Second Meeting of the Defence Committee held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, the 4th October, 1947.

Present
His Excellency the Governor-General.
The Prime Minister.
The Deputy Prime Minister.
The Minister for Defence.
The Minister of Finance.
The Minister without Portfolio.
The Commander-in-Chief, Indian Army.
The Flag Officer Commanding, Royal Indian Navy.
The Air Marshal Commanding, Royal Indian Air Force.
The Principal Private Secretary to the Prime Minister.
The Secretary, Ministry of States.
The Cabinet Secretary.
The Joint Secretary, Cabinet.
The Conference Secretary to the Governor-General.
*The Commander-designate, Kathiawar Defence Force.

(*Present for Item 1 only.)
The items discussed were:-

1. Junagadh.

2. British Officers.

Item 1. – Junagadh

The paper* before the meeting, which had been prepared by the Chiefs of Staff in accordance with a decision reached at a previous meeting, contained:-

(a) An Appreciation of the situation involving the dispatch of forces to Kathiawar for the purpose laid down by the Cabinet.

(b) A Directive to Brigadier Gurdial Singh, Indian Army, who had been selected to Command the Kathiawar Defence Force.

* C.O.S. 1/47
 Item 2. (1st) Meeting of the (Provisional) Defence Committee, held on Tuesday, the 30th September, 1947.
(c) A draft press communiqué to be issued to the Press on the 4th October, 1947.

All the members of the Committee remarked on the excellent standard of preparation and presentation of this paper.

Minor amendments to the Communiqué were suggested and agreed. It was decided that this should be issued that evening.

It was agreed to make the following amendment to the Appreciation:

(i) The words “from Junagadh State” should be deleted from Paragraph 1 (a).

(ii) Appendix B should be amended to show that Sardargadh and Bantwa were among those States which had acceded and were friendly; and by adding reference to the disputed states of Mangrol and Babariawad.

The Contiguity of Porbandar and Mangrol.

The Chiefs of Staff stated that they had been informed by the ex-Dewan of Mangrol, who was now State Adviser, that Mangrol was not contiguous to Porbandar; the two states were six miles apart via the coast road. On the other hand Mr. V.P. Menon said that the Ministry of States had received a telegram from the Maharaja of Porbandar to the effect the two states were contiguous. The importance of discovering which of these two views were correct was emphasized; the Officer Commanding the Porbandar detachment should be asked to find out and report.

The Prime Minister’s conversation with the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

The Prime Minister recalled that it had been intended that the Government of India should issue a further statement on the Junagadh position four or five days previously. However, the matter had been discussed between himself and Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan on 1st October and the draft statement, together with a telegram which it had been intended to send to the Government of Pakistan, were now somewhat out of date. He had suggested to Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan at this meeting that the disputed territories of Mangrol and Babariawad should be free from aggression from either side. On the same day, however, news had been received that Junagadh forces had entered Magrol. Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan had promised to look into this.

The Governor-General said that he had thought that Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan, in the course of his conversations with the Prime Minister, had appeared visibly shaken when told that Sir Walter Monckton, who had been Constitutional Adviser to Mangrol for some years, had given his view that the State was free to accede to India. Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan had said that he would have to consider the legal position afresh. The Prime Minister had suggested the possibility of a plebiscite in Junagadh to Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan; and the latter had given the impression that he would not be altogether averse to one taking place so long as this was made a generally accepted principle.

The Governor-General also confirmed that Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan had, during the course of these conversations, declared that it was not the intention of Pakistan to send troops to Junagadh.

Telegrams between the Governments of India and Pakistan.

The Prime Minister stated that he had, the day after seeing Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan, sent him the following telegram:

> "In conversation yesterday regarding Junagadh and connected matters I informed you that it was our intention to issue a communiqué to the public and that we were anxious to find a peaceful and amicable solution of this problem. I pointed out that the presence of Junagadh forces in Babariawad was an act of aggression and a constant irritant to the people of the neighbouring states which have acceded to the Dominion of India. It appears that Junagadh troops have also gone to Mangrol and thus a further act of aggression has been committed. It is difficult for any conversation to be carried on in a peaceful atmosphere if armed forces occupy disputed territories. I have urged upon you, therefore, to have the Junagadh forces both in Babariawad and Mangrol withdrawn immediately. I trust that steps will be taken to this end without delay. This will relieve the present tension and enable us to proceed towards finding an amicable solution in consonance with the wishes of the people of the territories affected. As I have already informed you, a detachment of troops is being sent by us to Porbandar in response to the requests made by our acceding States in Kathiawar for protection. Certain state forces in Kathiawar will also guard frontiers. They have instructions not to enter the territory of Junagadh. I shall be grateful for an early reply. I shall await your reply before issuing a press communiqué".

The Prime Minister went on to say that he had just received a further telegram from the Government of Pakistan, which was not in reply to the one above but which dealt with a previous one sent by the Government of India. This reply from Pakistan reiterated the opinion that the speech made by the Jam Sahib of Nawanagar was objectionable; alleged that Muslims entering Junagadh were not allowed to take in their belongings with them; described as an unfriendly act the setting up of a Provisional Government at Rajkot; regretted what were described as "certain subversive activities"; referred to an alleged stoppage of telegraphic and telephonic communications from Junagadh; asked that any boycotts in force should be lifted and that the property of Junagadh in Rajkot should be restored; referred to a letter which Mr. V.P. Menon was alleged to have sent to the Pakistan High Commissioner on 21\textsuperscript{st} August, and a supposed interview between the Deputy Prime Minister and the Pakistan High Commissioner that day; and finished up by saying that it had never been intended to impugn the honour and integrity of Lord Ismay.

The Governor General said that he understood that Lord Ismay, who had spent the previous night in Karachi, had intended to take up this latter point himself. He pointed out that this latest telegram from Pakistan was not based on the conversations which the Prime Minister had had with Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan, who had probably not been consulted in the drafting of it.

Two further telegrams from the Pakistan Government were then considered. One asked that there should be immediate retrocession by the Government of India of their jurisdiction over the railways in Junagadh State territory. The other asked that the Posts and Telegraphs of the State should be handed over immediately to the Pakistan government.

The Governor General pointed out that under clause 7 of the Indian Independence Act, either the Ruler of Junagadh or the Government of India had the right to denounce the Standstill Agreements over communications which had been made. The Minister without portfolio said that the sense of the provision to sub-clause (b) of this Clause was that agreements in force before 15\textsuperscript{th} August should be given effect to the maximum extent possible until they were denounced by the Ruler of the State or by the Dominion concerned. He pointed out that, if it was agreed to hand over the Posts and Telegraphs to Pakistan, this would be tantamount to recognition of the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan by India.

The Prime Minister said that the Government did not admit Junagadh's right to accede to Pakistan, and could not therefore agree to handing over the Posts and Telegraphs to Pakistan. He mentioned that there was also a Meteorological Station in Junagadh from which the Government of India personnel had been withdrawn and which had been handed over to Junagadh by error.

During further discussion of the replies to be sent to the various telegrams from the Government of Pakistan, the following points were made :-

(a) The Government of India was not interfering with the Provisional Government; the Government of Pakistan should not interfere either; the issue should be left to the people of Junagadh to decide;
The Government of India should again insist on the withdrawal of Junagadh forces from Babariawad and Mangrol; if this demand was finally refused, it would have to be decided what action India was to take.

Mr. Menon undertook to draft, for dispatch by the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, a reply to the three telegrams from Pakistan under discussion.

The Grounds for Challenging the Accession of Junagadh to Pakistan

The Prime Minister reiterated that the Government of India’s policy was not to recognize the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan. The main ground on which this policy was based was that accession had not been in accordance with the will of the people.

The Minister without portfolio said that he did not consider that the language used in the Indian Independence Act necessarily admitted even the legal right of Junagadh to accede to Pakistan. At any rate it was possible to argue that it did not. It was to be noted that the word “States” rather than “Rulers of State” was used in the relevant part [Clause 2 (4)] of the Act.

The Deputy Prime Minister said that he agreed that the main ground for challenging Junagadh’s accession to Pakistan was that it was in violation of the will of the people. But there were other strong factors – for example, the geographical situation of the State and the fact that it was interlaced with territory belonging to India and to States which had acceded to India. Furthermore, the accession did not fit into the general principle on which the division of India had been effected. The relevant clause of the Indian Independence Act should be interpreted in the light of that background.

The Governor-General suggested that the grounds for challenging the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan should be made the subject of a note by Constitutional lawyers.

Referendum in Junagadh

The Prime Minister stated that the Government of India held the view that the correct solution for Junagadh was to find out the desire of the people of that state by a free expression of their will.

The Deputy Prime Minister pointed out that the Provisional Government had declared their willingness to abide by the result of a referendum in Junagadh. He also recalled that the Dewan of Junagadh had given his personal opinion in favour of a referendum in the presence of Mr. V.P. Menon and two other witnesses. But the present Government of Junagadh had never claimed that it represented the will of the people.
The Prime Minister pointed out that a referendum could only be held under the authority which was in control of Junagadh.

The Legal Position of Babriawad and Mangrol

Mr. Menon gave his view that the accession of both Babariawad and Mangrol to India were founded on a strong legal case. In the case of the former, the lapse of Paramountcy had had involved the lapse of the whole of the treaty which had been in force between Junagadh and Babariawad; and the position had reverted to what it had been in 1863.

The Governor General recalled that Pakistan still challenged the legal basis for those accessions; he asked whether the question could be referred to any court for decision.

The Deputy Prime Minister gave his view that, if the Government of India supported Babariawad and Mangrol militarily, the question of Junagadh itself would speedily be settled.

Military Action to be Taken in Certain Contingencies

(a) The Minister without Portfolio suggested that the possibility of interference by Pakistan, in the event of the Provisional Government obtaining control of parts of Junagadh territory, must be reckoned with. The acceptance by Pakistan of Junagadh’s accession implied that Pakistan had undertaken responsibility for the defence of the State.

During discussion, it was considered unlikely that there would be any interference by Pakistan so long as only the nine pockets of Junagadh territory surrounded by other territory were concerned; and that some time would elapse before the Provisional Government might start to move into the main Junagadh territory itself. No decision on the action to be taken if Pakistan interfered in the latter circumstances could be taken at the present stage.

(b) The Committee considered that, if Junagadh forces were sent to the “outlying” pockets of Junagadh territory, it would be best not to stop them but to let them go through, and isolate them in these pockets. The Commander of the Kathiawar Defence Force should then refer to the Chiefs of Staff for further orders.

(c) Mr. Menon asked what action it was considered should be taken if Junagadh troops forcibly occupied Post Offices, etc. The Governor General suggested that any attempt at such action should result in communications being immediately cut off.

(d) The Governor General proposed, and it was agreed, that the Chiefs of Staff should direct the Commander of the Kathiawar Defence Force to formulate a plan to occupy Babariawad and Mangrol with the object of avoiding an exchange of shots, as far as possible.

(e) The Committee considered that it was highly improbable that the Company Group being sent to Jafarabad would be attacked by Junagadh forces. It was pointed out that Jafarabad was a dependency of a State which had acceded to India. If Junagadh were to attack it, there would be every justification for taking full measures.

The Main Kathiawar Defence Force

The Commander-In-Chief, Indian Army, reported that the Brigade Group was likely to be in position within 10-14 days.

It was agreed that the Chiefs of Staff should draft a further press communiqué concerning the command and concentration of this force.

The Committee :-

(i) approved C.O.S. 1/47, as amended in discussion;

(ii) directed the Chiefs of Staff to amend the draft communiqué attached to C.O.S. 1/47 according to the decisions taken in discussion, and to forward it to the Minister for Defence for issue that evening:

(iii) directed the Chiefs of Staff to instruct the Commander of the Porbandar detachment to find out whether Porbandar was contiguous to Mangrol; and to report at the next meeting;

(iv) directed the Secretary, Ministry of States, to prepare, for the Prime Minister’s approval, a draft reply to the three telegrams from the Government of Pakistan which were considered at the meeting;

(v) directed the Ministry of States to arrange for the preparation by Constitutional lawyers of a note setting out in detail the grounds on which the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan was challenged by India;

(vi) directed the Chiefs of Staff to instruct the Commander, Kathiawar Defence Force, to prepare a plan for the occupation of Babariawad and Mangrol, in case this was ordered, with the object of reducing to a minimum any exchange of shots with Junagadh forces in these territories;

(vii) directed the Chiefs of Staff to prepare, for consideration by the Minister of Defence and the Prime Minister, a further communiqué for issue to the press concerning the command and concentration of the Kathiawar Defence Force.
1968. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

No. PRIMIN. 90. 5th October, 1947

From Prime Minister, India, for Prime Minister, Pakistan.

Reference correspondence resting with your telegram No.411 dated 2nd Oct. [Document No.1964] Junagadh. We regret that we cannot accept either your arguments or your conclusions regarding accession of Junagadh to Pakistan.

2. You have suggested that, since Nawanagar has acceded to India, Indian dominion should control the utterances of the Ruler of the State. The Junagadh issue has aroused wide public interest and we do not see why the Ruler of a State directly interested in the future of Junagadh should, merely by reason of his accession to Indian Dominion, be restricted from giving free expression to his views.

3. As regards Provisional Government of Junagadh, we wholly deny suggestion that it has been set up or encouraged by Government of India or any authority subordinate to them. This Provisional Government appears to be the spontaneous expression of popular resentment against Junagadh accession, and the proper way to deal with it is to have a referendum as we have repeatedly suggested.

4. Factual position as explained in paragraph 6 of your telegram of 2nd October does not appear to us to answer in any way to point made in paragraph 6 of our telegram No. 8093 dated 29th September [Document No.1958]. We are glad to note that Pakistan Government never intended to impugn honour and integrity of Lord Ismay. The facts set out in paragraph 7 of our telegram of 29th September appear to us to have fully justified our protest.

5. We shall now deal with the main issue. In your telegram No. 14-B dated 30th September [Documents No.1960], Pakistan Government state that they have been and still are willing to enter into negotiations for a satisfactory solution of the problem of Junagadh. We regret to say that the requests of the Pakistan Government which we specify later and the entry of Junagadh troops into Mongrol are not in harmony with desire for friendly negotiation. Entry of Junagadh forces into Mangrol constitutes a unilateral act of aggression. The requests of Pakistan Government that we should arrange immediately for retrocession of jurisdiction over railways within Junagadh State to authorities of the State and for immediate issue of instructions to hand over Junagadh posts and telegraphs system to Pakistan authorities prejudge the whole issue of the validity of accession of Jundagadh to Pakistan. As we have repeatedly stated, we do not recognize this accession. We cannot, therefore, but protest against the entry of Jundagadh forces into Mangrol and decline either to retrocede jurisdiction over railway to Jundagadh or to hand over our posts and telegraph system to Pakistan authorities. The only basis on which friendly negotiations can start and be fruitful is reversion of Jundagadh, Babariawad and Mongrol to the status quo preceding the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan. The alternative to negotiation is a referendum or plebiscite by the people of Junagadh. This method was accepted to determine the fate of parts of British India; there is no reason why it should not be applied to settle the future of Junagadh.

6. In our telegram No. PRIMIN 72 dated 2\textsuperscript{nd} October [Document No.\ldots\ldots\ldots], we have asked that the forces which had occupied Mangrol and Babariawad should be withdrawn immediately. We have received no reply to that telegram. The situation is fraught with dangerous possibilities and we must once again press for the withdrawal of those forces. In the meanwhile, we consider it necessary to make without any further delay a public statement explaining the position and a press communiqué [Document No.1970] will be issued tomorrow. In this communiqué we are reiterating our desire for an amicable settlement of this issue in accordance with the wishes of the people who should be the final arbiters in the matter.

1969. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs

New Delhi, October 5, 1947.

No. 442. 5\textsuperscript{th} October, 1947.

Please give following message from Liaquat Ali Khan to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

Begins.

Reference our discussion in Delhi on October 1\textsuperscript{st}, 1947 regarding Junagadh. We are prepared to ask Junagadh to withdraw troops from BABARIAWAD and not to send any troops to MANGROL on assurance that first India or any State that has acceded to Union of India will not send troops into Junagadh, Mangrol and Babariawad similar Talukas such as SARDARGARDH and BANTVA and where such troops have been sent they will be withdrawn.
simultaneously with withdrawal of Junagadh forces and secondly that question whether Babariawad and Mangrol are free to accede either dominion notwithstanding Junagadh's claim to suzerainty over them would be referred for independent legal opinion to a counsel whose name may be agreed upon between two Dominions. If this is acceptable to you we shall issue instructions to Junagadh immediately on receipt of your confirmation. This would I hope pave the way for a satisfactory and amicable settlement of various outstanding questions relating to discussion, conditions and circumstances in which Plebiscite should be taken by any State or States at our next meeting.

Ends.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

New Delhi, October 5, 1947.

The effect of the accession of the Junagadh State to Pakistan and the policy of the Government of India to deal with the situation thus created were set out in a press communiqué dated the 25th September 1947 [Doc. No.1953]. The Government of India remain of the opinion that, in the circumstances in which it was made, they cannot accept the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan. They disagree entirely with the claims and contentions of Pakistan in regard to Babariawad and Mangrol. They consider that the stationing of Junagadh Forces in Babariawad and Mongrol, both of which have acceded to the Indian Dominion, is an unjustified and provocative act of aggression, and must ask that these forces be withdrawn.

2. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan have declared their determination in the joint statement issued on the 20th September 1947 to rule out war, and the government of India, true to this declaration, have no desire to take any steps which might aggravate an already difficult situation. It is their wish to find a solution to this problem by friendly discussion with the Dominion of Pakistan and the State of Junagadh. That solution must necessarily be one which enables the Government of India to discharge their responsibilities to the States acceding to the Indian Dominion.

3. The Government of India have an obligation to protect the interests of those states which have acceded to the Indian Dominion and this responsibility they shall fully and faithfully discharge. In view of the policy adopted by the Junagadh
State and in particular the acts of aggression in relation to Babariawad and Mangrol, a number of States in Kathiawar which have acceded to the Indian Dominion have specifically asked for help and protection from the Dominion of India. In response to these requests the Government of India have decided to send a detachment of troops to Kathiawar. These troops will proceed immediately to Porbandar. Other armed forces belonging to the States acceding to the Dominion of India will also be employed for guarding the frontiers between Junagadh and other States. The purpose of this dispatch and allocation of Dominion troops is to reassure the people of the States which have acceded to the Dominion of India and to convince them that the Government of India will do all that lies in their power to protect their legitimate interests. The Government of India are most anxious that all possibility of conflict between their forces and the forces of the States cooperating with them on the one hand, and the forces of Junagadh on the other, should be avoided. It is, therefore, necessary that Junagadh forces should at once be withdrawn from Babariawad and Mangrol. It is also necessary that these forces should make no attempt to reach islands of Junagadh territory by passing through the territories of states which have acceded to the Indian Dominion. As a reciprocal measure of precaution the forces of the Dominion of India and the acceding States have been instructed not to enter to territory of Junagadh, or to seek passage through Junagadh territory, even to reach those States within Junagadh which have acceded to the Indian Dominion. Instructions have also been issued not to enter, for the present, Mangrol or Babariawad territories, although the Government of India hold that these territories belong to the Indian Dominion and have to be protected.

4. The Government of India wish to reaffirm that all they seek is an amicable settlement of the Junagadh issue and of the connected issues of Babariawad and Mangrol. Any decision involving the fate of large numbers or people must necessarily depend on the wishes of these people. This is the policy which the Government of India accept in its entirety and they are of the opinion that dispute involving the fate of any territory should be decided by a referendum or plebiscite of the people concerned. This is a method at once democratic, peaceful and just. They suggest, therefore, that the issues regarding Junagadh should be decided by a referendum or plebiscite of the people of the State. Such a referendum or plebiscite should be held under impartial auspices, to be determined by the parties concerned. The Government of India, therefore, invite the Pakistan Government to comply with their suggestion and the deadlock that has arisen in regard to Junagadh should be resolved by a plebiscite or referendum of the people of the state.

Ministry of States
New Delhi, 5th October 1947.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1971. Demi Official letter from Regional Commissioner Rajkot
N.M. Buch to Secretary, Ministry of States V.P. Menon.

Rajkot, October 7, 1947.

No. RC–76
7th October, 1947.

I enclose the usual police report which is fairly colourless (not included here).

2. There have been a number of feelers from Junagadh in the last two or three days. The Maharaja of Porbandar has already seen Additional Secretary at Bombay. A message was sent to Mr. Samaldas Gandhi of the Junagadh Provisional Government at Rajkot by the Dewan of Junagadh asking him to come over to Junagadh to see him and promising full protection and courtesies.
Mr. Samaldas Gandhi has sent a message that he would be prepared to see the Dewan either at Rajkot or Jetalsar or some other place outside Junagadh.
The Maharaja of Morvi has also sent a personal letter to the Nawab of Junagadh asking him to reconsider. It seems that there is a great deal of nervousness in Junagadh itself but the Jamiat people who now-a-days wield a lot of power are trying to keep up the show. The formation of the Provisional Government followed by the management placed on Bantwa and Sardargadh and the news of the landing at Porbandar have all contributed to a return of confidence amongst Hindus and a certain amount of nervousness amongst Muslims. The latest communiqué from Delhi is also considered reassuring by the public.

3. Certain Rulers viewed the formation of the Provisional Government and the Jam Saheb’s extremist pronouncements with misgivings. The Kathiawar Political Conference however in its resolution two days ago and the local leaders have assured the Princes that the formation of Provisional Government for Junagadh was under quite exceptional circumstances and other Rulers need have no fears.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
From Jawaharlal Nehru to Liaquat Ali Khan.

Many thanks for your message of October 5th. You will have seen from Press Communiqué issued by us on October 5th that clear instructions have been issued to forces of India and our acceding States not to enter Junagadh territory or to seek passage through Junagadh territory even to reach States within Junagadh which have acceded to the Dominion of India or to enter Babariawad or Mangrol. We hope you will now ask Junagadh to withdraw at once its forces from Babariawad and Mangrol which have acceded to Indian Dominion.

2. You have put forward a suggestion for resolving position of Mangrol and Babariawad whose right to accede independently is questioned by you, but you have not touched the main issue of Junagadh itself. In our opinion it is essential to reach a settlement on this fundamental issue first. We are glad that you are agreeable to our discussing conditions and circumstances under which a plebiscite or a referendum should be held to ascertain the wishes of the people. Once this is settled in Junagadh it would be comparatively an easy matter to dispose of the subsidiary issues of Mangrol and Babariawad.

3. The case of Sardargarh and Bantwa to which a reference has been made in your message is quite separate from that of Junagadh. These two estates previously came under the Attachment Scheme of 1943. The Attachment Scheme came to an end with the lapse of Paramountcy on August 15, 1947. In deference to the generally expressed desire of the Talukdars and the people of these attached States including Sardargarh and Bantwa, the Scheme of Attachment was replaced by a system of direct relationship with the Government of India. This decision was announced in the Government of India’s communiqué of August 13, 1947.
1973. Press Note issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Junagadh.

Karachi, October 8, 1947.

The Government of Pakistan have carefully studied the two press notes recently issued by the Government of India on Junagadh States accession to Pakistan and regret to note that the case has been misunderstood both as to the legal position and facts. As the public in Pakistan have lately shown a great deal of interest in this matter it is desired to relate correct factual position. The authentic constitutional pronouncement on the position of Indian States after the lapse of British Paramountcy is contained in the Cabinet Mission Memorandum on States, Treaties and Paramountcy dated May 12, 1946. According to this document on the lapse of Paramountcy every Indian State becomes independent and sovereign and free to join either Pakistan or India. This position has throughout been accepted by the Pakistan Government both in theory and practice as the corner stone of its policy with regard to States.

This policy has been publicly announced by the Qaid-i-Azam and repeatedly reaffirmed by Cabinet Ministers and never once has it been departed from. The Dominion of India, however, appears to hold the view that it has the right to influence the choice of the States by various methods.

Junagadh and other smaller Kathiawar States, such as Manavadar, Sardargarh etc. which have acceded to the Pakistan Dominion have done so voluntarily and freely. They had full legal right to do so and the Pakistan Government cannot recognize anybody's right to interfere with their free exercise of this right.

Blockade Alleged

Certain interested parties, are however, determined to force these states to change their decision and to that end have used and are using all possible weapons at their command. For nearly one month Junagadh and other States have been the victims of a complete economic blockade including stoppage of essential food supplies, coal, petrol and postal and telegraphic communications.

Troops have also been sent to the borders of the State and simultaneously attempts are being made to disrupt Junagadh administration from within. All this is being done on the ground that the accession of Junagadh is a threat to other Kathiawar States. This proposition is patently absurd and does not bear examination.

The Government of India claim that Mangrol and Babriawad have acceded to India and therefore, they have a right to protect their interests. The correct legal position is that neither Mangrol nor Babriawad have any independent constitutional status and, therefore, are not free to accede to any Dominion on their own initiative. In fact both are part and parcel of Junagadh State. Apparently the sole object of the attempt to rope them in is to provide a semblance of justification for interference of the Indian Dominion in the matter of accession of Junagadh.

Pakistan's Attitude

The Government of Pakistan have made it quite clear that there can be no argument in regard to the legal right of Junagadh and other States to accede to Pakistan. In the interest of maintenance of good relations between the two Dominions, however this Government have offered to help in finding a solution to the situation which has been created in Kathiawar by the various measures undertaken by the Government of India.

Accordingly, the Government of Pakistan have informed the Government of India of their willingness to refer for legal opinion such subsidiary matters as the legality or otherwise of Mangrol and Babriawad's accession to the Indian Union and to concrete measures for allaying the apprehensions of both sides regarding the security of their respective frontiers.

They have, however pointed out that a condition precedent to any attempt at an amicable settlement is the immediate withdrawal of all troops by the Government of India from Sardargarh and Batva and other small taluqas in the area. Pakistan undertakes on its side to advise Junagadh to withdraw simultaneously such Junagadh forces as may be present in Babriawad and not to send any troops to Mangrol, without prejudice to the claim to suzerainty which Junagadh has over them.

The Pakistan Government have also informed the Government of India of their willingness to discuss conditions and circumstances in which a plebiscite should be taken by any State or States.

New Delhi, October 10, 1947.

Army HQ India Exercise PEACE Instruction No. 1

1. The object and the conduct of Exercise PEACE, your tasks and the composition of your force are given in the Directive and the Appreciation of the Situation in Kathiawar, already issued to you.

2. The arrangements made for the concentration of your force are as in Indian Army letter No. 6911/1/A/MO2, of 6 Oct. 47, copy of which has also been issued to you.

3. In the execution of your task you will also plan for the following:-
   (a) To be prepared to move into BABRIAWAD.
   (b) To be prepared to carry out a peaceful entry into MANGROL should it become apparent that the inhabitants will welcome our forces. Jog Col has already been ordered to carry out recess without entering JUNAGADH or MANGROL territory to report on the situation in MANGROL and where the WESTERN boundary of MANGROL lies.

4. In the event of JUNAGADH Forces crossing INDIAN State territory into JUNAGADH “pockets”, you should let them do so and then take steps to prevent their leaving these “pockets” by taking action on the borders or the “pockets” without your forces entering them, at the same time reporting the incident to Army Headquarter for further orders.

5. You, your subordinate commanders and troops will have NO relations with the Provisional Government of JUNAGADH.

6. You will ensure that all isolated detachments of your force, e.g. detachments in JAFRABAD and PORBANDER are provided with wireless communication.

Naval Support

7. The Royal Indian Navy are ensuring that one or more ships are always handy in case any isolated detachment gets into trouble. You will inform the Naval Liaison Office on your Staff of your requirements as regards Naval assistance.

Air Support

8. No. 8 Royal Indian Air Force Squadron with 8 TEMPEST aircraft under command of S/Ldr. P.S. GILL has been stationed at KHAMBALIYA to provide the following facilities :-
(a) Reconnaissance less photo reconnaissance for the Naval and Land Forces.
(b) Demonstration flights to instill confidence into the local inhabitants.
(c) Special flights such as dropping of leaflets or messages.
(d) One HARVARD aircraft has been provided for communication facilities.

9. F/Lt. G.B. SINGH, Officer i/c Visual Control Post, has been posted to work in conjunction with your Headquarter at RAJKOT.

10. (i) Representatives of the Ministry of States are being accredited to you and to the Forces at PORBUNDAR and at JAFRABAD. You will ask Mr. BUCH, the Regional Commissioner for the Government of INDIA at RAJKOT, for your further requirements.

(ii) The duties of the Representative of the Ministry of States are to:

(a) Advise the Commanders on all Political and Civil matters.
(b) Assist the Commanders in obtaining information about the Local situation.
(c) Assist the Commanders in the local purchase of stores and in the hiring of local transport when necessary. As far as possible, arrangements and payments for local purchase, hiring, etc., will be made through the Representatives of the Ministry of States.

11. You will inform this HQ by immediate signal as soon as you are in a position to take over Command of the following:

(a) JOGCOL
(b) JAFCOL
(c) The Force being concentrated on NORTHERN border of BABRIAWAD.
(d) The Force being concentrated JETPUR – DORAJI area.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1975. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.
Karachi, October 11, 1947.

Please refer to Paragraph No. 5 of our immediate telegram No. 411 of 2nd October [Doc. No.1964] in which we had detailed certain illegal activities of so called Provisional Government of Junagadh. Regret to say further reports of unlawful and subversive activities including physical violence to Deputy Commissioner of Police, Junagadh have been received. We strongly protest against Government of India’s indifference to these subversive and unconstitutional activities going on in territory of State which has acceded to them. Continuance of an organization of this character in territory of a State which has acceded to the Indian Union is contrary to all International usage. We hope therefore Government of India take immediate and strong measures to suppress so called Provisional Government.

1976. Demi Official letter from C. C. Desai, Additional Secretary, Ministry of States to N.M. Buch, Regional Commissioner, Rajkot.
New Delhi, October 15, 1947.

No. F-26-PR/47. 15th October, 1947

Here are a few copies of the directive issued by the Army Headquarters to Brigadier Gurdial Singh who must have taken over as Commander, KATHIAWAR Defence Force. Copies may be distributed to His Highness the Jam Saheb, His Highness of Probandar, Pattani and Civil Liaison Officers. While forwarding the copy you should explain that in so far as direction 4 is concerned subsequent instruction to you is that any attempt on the part of Junagadh Police or Military to cross our frontier must be resisted and stopped as it would amount to a violation of our sovereignty and invasion of our territory. We cannot accept any argument on the part of the Junagadh forces that they want to cross our frontier to reach some of their islands. If however, any of the Junagadh forces are in the pockets, they should be prevented from passing through our territory so as to enter Junagadh mainland in virtue of this particular direction. It will be necessary to add this explanation in view of the possibilities mentioned by me in my letter of yesterday’s date.
1977. Meeting of the Cabinet held on Wednesday, the 15th October, 1947, at 5 p.m.

Case No.327/54/47

Junagadh Situation

Present
The Prime Minister.
The Minister for Home, Information and Broadcasting and States.
The Minister for Education.
The Minister for Transport and Railways.
The Minister for Defence.
The Minister for Commerce.
The Minister for Communications.
The Minister for Law.
The Minister for Finance.
The Minister for Industry & Supply.
The Minister for Works, Mines & Power.
The Minister for Relief and Rehabilitation.
The Joint Secretary to the Cabinet.
The Deputy Secretary to the Cabinet.
The Under Secretary to the Cabinet.

The Prime Minister observed that he had discussed the Junagadh situation with the Pakistan Prime Minister on the 1st October. At that time he had also mentioned to him about the dispatch of Indian troops to the adjoining parts of India with strict instruction not to enter Junagadh territory even for the purpose of transit into States or areas which had acceded to India. It had been explained to the Pakistan Prime Minister that India in turn expected Pakistan to withdraw all Pakistan or Junagadh forces from Mangrol or Babriawad. The Pakistan Prime Minister had appeared to be agreeable to this arrangement. On the following day as also on the 7th October telegrams [Doc. No.1972 ] had been sent to the Pakistan Government asking for the withdrawal of Junagadh or Pakistan armed forces from Mangrol and Babriawad but no reply had been received so far. He had been informed that some Junagadh forces had that day crossed our territory at Jetpur to enter a Junagadh pocket. Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar was now on a visit to Junagadh. This state of affairs was unsatisfactory and a telegram was again being sent to Pakistan asking for the removal of troops.

◆◆◆◆◆
1978. Demi Official letter from Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister, to Governor General Viscount Mountbatten of Burma

New Delhi, October 15, 1947.

No. P.M. 76. 15th October, 1947

You will remember that when Liaquat Ali Khan came here last we discussed the Junagadh matter with him and pressed upon him to withdraw the troops from Babriawad and Mangrol. He was more or less agreeable to this. We assured him, at the same time that we did not wish to cross the Junagadh territory, as we were anxious to avoid any possibility of conflict. In order to settle this question of Junagadh, we invited Pakistan to agree to a referendum or plebiscite.

The next day I sent him a telegram to this effect and urgently asked for the withdrawal of the Junagadh troops from Babriawad and Mangrol. This was 2 weeks ago.

On the 5th October we issued a press statement which you will remember. In this it was clearly stated that our forces were not to enter Junagadh territory or to seek passage through that territory or to enter Babriawad or Mangrol. We sent another telegram to the Prime Minister of Pakistan again asking for the withdrawal of Junagadh forces from Bariawad and Mangrol. No answer to this has come yet. It is exactly two weeks today since this proposal was put to Liaquat Ali Khan and approved of by him.

Meanwhile we are informed that the Junagadh troops have crossed the territory of another acceding state of ours in order to go to some other place. This is not only a further act of aggression, but also, in the circumstances, appears to be a deliberate flouting of our proposals.

All this is rather difficult to swallow and we can hardly sit by watching these developments. The smaller States of Kathiawar are getting nervous and rather frightened and have appealed to us for help. None of them is safe from this kind of aggression.

This matter will have to be considered by us very soon. I am, meanwhile, sending a telegram to Liaquat Ali Khan, a copy of which is enclosed.
1979.  Telegram from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Prime Minister of Pakistan at Lahore.

New Delhi, October 15, 1947.

For Prime Minister, Pakistan from Prime Minister, India.

When I met you in Delhi on October 1st, we discussed the Junagadh affair and I suggested that the first thing we should do is to keep away troops of both parties from disputed territory in order to avoid any possibility of conflict. I informed you that we proposed to instruct our forces not to enter Junagadh territory and I suggested to you that Junagadh forces should be withdrawn immediately from Babriawad and Mangrol. You appeared agreeable to this proposal. The next day I sent a telegram to this effect to you. On the 5th October we issued a press communiqué in which it was clearly stated that we had issued clear instructions to our forces not to enter Junagadh territory or to seek passage through Junagadh territory even to reach States within Junagadh which have acceded to the Dominion of India or to enter Babriawad or Mangrol. On our part we have fulfilled the undertakings we gave you. We asked you again in that telegram to have the Junagadh forces withdrawn from Bariawad and Mangrol.

To that telegram we have had no answer and Junagadh Government have not yet withdrawn their troops from Mangrol and Babriawad. Today we have received a report to the effect that Junagadh troops have made another incursion into Indian Dominion territory at Jetpur. Jetpur State which has acceded to the Indian Dominion has drawn our attention to this and protested against aggression.

You will appreciate that fifteen days is a long time to wait for a reply to an urgent request, and the fact that meanwhile further incursions take place does not encourage the conclusion that you desire an amicable settlement. An immediate reply is requested as to whether Junagadh troops are going to be withdrawn from Mangrol and Babriawad and further are going to refrain from any incursions on Dominion territory. The undertaking we gave not to enter Junagadh territory was based on reciprocal action on the other side.
1980.  Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, October 19, 1947.

No. 601. 19th October, 1947.

For Prime Minister India.

Your telegram 332/PRIMIN/162 dated 16th October regarding Junagadh. It seems you did not receive our Express Telegram dated 5th October [Doc. No.1969] which dealt with issues raised in your telegram under reply. For your information it is reproduced below:

Begins:

Most Immediate. Please give following message from LIAQUAT ALI KHAN to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. Reference our discussion in Delhi on 1st October 1947 regarding Junagadh. We are prepared to ask Junagadh to withdraw troops from BABRIAWAD and not to send any troops to MANGROL on assurance that firstly that India or any State that has acceded to Union of India will not send troops into Junagadh, MANGROL and BABRIAWAD and similar TALUK such as Sardargarh and BANTVA and where such troops have been sent they will be withdrawn simultaneously with withdrawal of Junagadh forces and secondly that question whether MANGROL and BABRIWAD are free to accede to either Dominion notwithstanding Junagadh’s claim to suzerainty over them would be referred for independent legal opinion to a counsel whose name may be agreed upon between the two Dominions. If this is acceptable to you we shall issue instructions to Junagadh immediately on receipt of your confirmation. This would I hope pave the way for satisfactory and amicable settlement of its various outstanding questions relating to Junagadh and I hope we shall be able further to discuss condition and circumstances in which PLEBISCITE should be taken by any state or states at our next meeting. Ends.

3. You will see from this telegram that prompt answer was actually given and we were in fact on the point of reminding you that you had not sent a reply to it. You will also notice that we agree to ask Junagadh to withdraw troops from Babriawad and not to send any troops to Mangrol on assurance that India or any State that had acceded to Union of India will not send troops into Junagadh, Mangrol and Babriawad and similar Talukas such as Sardargarh and Bantva and where such troops have been sent they will be withdrawn simultaneously with withdrawal of Junagadh and that on presumption that conditions in our telegram will be acceptable to you we did specifically advise Junagadh accordingly. We are now making enquiries to find out what action Junagadh has taken. We trust that you will take immediate reciprocal action to withdraw... your forces from Sadargarh, Bantva etc. and not occupy any areas from which Junagadh withdraws its forces.

With regard to alleged incursion of Junagadh troops into Jetpur we have no information whatsoever and we are making immediate enquiries.

We also would like to know if you agree to refer question raised in our telegram quoted above whether Mangrol and Babriawad are free to accede to either Dominion notwithstanding Junagadh’s claim to suzerainty over them for independent legal opinion to a Consul whose name will be agreed upon between the two Dominions. We share with you your desire for an amicable settlement of various questions relating to Junagadh.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1981. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan
Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, October 20, 1947.

No. PRIMIN – 183. 20th October, 1947

For Prime Minister, Pakistan from Prime Minister, India.

Your telegram No. 601, dated the 19th October. Your message of 5th October was received and was replied to in my telegram No PRIMIN-98, dated 7th October. I repeat that telegram for your information and will be grateful for urgent reply.

Please see Document No.1972

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, October 20, 1947.

No. PRIMIN-193. 21st October, 1947

For Liaquat Ali Khan from Jawaharlal Nehru

Please refer to my telegram No. Primin-183, dated yesterday as well as my telegrams Nos. 90, dated 5th October and 162, dated 15th October. Position now as I understand from our correspondence as well as from what the Governor-General has told us is that you agree to a plebiscite or a referendum in Junagadh subject to details being settled between us. As regards Mangrol and Babriawad it is also agreed that Junagadh troops should be withdrawn. We undertook not to send Indian Union troops to Junagadh territory or to Mangrol and Babriawad pending final decision.

In your telegram No. 601, dated 19th October you stated that you will advise Junagadh accordingly. The position as regards Sardargarh and Bantva is completely different as we have pointed out to you previously.

It appears that your directions to Junagadh have not been carried out and Junagadh troops and police are still in position in Mangrol and Babriawad. Further reports show that Junagadh authorities have been taking oppressive action against people of Babriawad. They are commandeering crops, issuing exacting orders in respect of other property, reaping harvests, breaking open into houses and looting property. Rations and other necessities of life have been stopped. Attempt is being made to force the Chief of Babriawad to renounce accession to Indian Union and substitute it by accession to Pakistan. You will appreciate that it is impossible for us to tolerate any longer such acts of aggression and oppressive action and we have been urgently asked by the Chiefs and people of Babriawad to protect them. We are in honour bound to give this protection by such action as may be considered necessary.

We would have welcomed your presence in Delhi in order to discuss details regarding plebiscite in Junagadh and other connected matters. If it is possible for you to come here soon we shall be grateful. I understand however from Governor-General India that your health is not good. I am sorry to learn this and trust that this is not serious. In case you are unable to travel, I propose to send our States Secretary V.P. Menon to meet you at Lahore. An immediate answer will be appreciated.

♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦
1983. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, October 23, 1947.

No.625. 23rd October, 1947

Your telegram No. 358-PS Primin. (183), dated October, 21st.

The legal position of Junagadh’s accession to Pakistan on which you invited our views in your telegram No. PRIMIN 98, dated October 7th has already been fully stated in our press note published on October 8th, 1947 a copy of which was sent to your High Commissioner in Karachi.

2. Your statement in connection with Sardargarh and Bantva does not explain reason why your troops have occupied these two Taluks and why they have not been withdrawn as requested by us.

3. Recent reports from Junagadh show that Indian troops are still being moved about in Junagadh territory over Junagadh railways causing great deal of panic among peaceful population. It is further reported that India is increasing strength of Dominion police forces on railway stations within Junagadh territory causing serious embarrassment to administration. This is clearly contrary to your promises and subsequent assurances that your forces will not seek passage through Junagadh territory. Our protest that administration of all communications in Junagadh should now be transferred to Pakistan has not been heeded.

4. We have already asked Junagadh to withdraw its forces from Bantva. As regards Mangrol the Sheikh who was here recently has personally confirmed our previous information that no Junagadh forces are posted on Mangrol territory.

5. With regard to question of Plebiscite the Prime Minister Pakistan told you that he was going to discuss this matter with you at his next meeting. He is at present at Lahore and your telegram is being referred to him.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1984. Demi Official letter from H.V.R. Iengar, Principal Private Secretary to Prime Minister to Captain R.V. Brockman, Private Secretary to the Governor-General of India.

New Delhi, October 23, 1947.

No. D/S/620. 23rd October, 1947

I enclose, for His Excellency's information, a copy of the telegram [Doc. No. 1983] received today (after the defence committee meeting was over) from Karachi on the subject of Junagadh.

2. As desired by the Defence Committee this morning, I rang up the Prime Minister of Pakistan at Lahore on the question of V.P. Menon going there tomorrow. I was told that Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan had asked for the whole matter to be considered in the Pakistan Cabinet and he was waiting for their decision. He had not received a copy of the telegram sent to us and I read it over to his Secretary and pointed out that it did not cover the question of V.P. Menon's visit. I have been promised a reply on this point from Lahore during the course of today.

3. I then pointed out that the Governor-General had been informed by Lord Ismay that London had not yet received the views of the Pakistan Government on the question of closing down the Supreme Commander's Headquarters by the end of November. I was told, in reply, that the matter has been considered in the Pakistan Cabinet, that a draft reply has been sent down to Lahore and that the Prime Minister of Pakistan will telegraph the reply simultaneously to London and to Delhi in the course of today.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆
1985.  Minutes of the Cabinet held on Thursday, the 23rd October, 1947, at 5 p.m.
New Delhi.
Case No. 345/56/47

Present
The Prime Minister.
The Deputy Prime Minister.
The Minister for Food.
The Minister for Education.
The Minister for Transport & Railways.
The Minister for Defence.
The Minister for Commerce.
The Minister for Communications.
The Minister for Health.
The Minister for Law.
The Minister for Finance.
The Minister for Industry & Supply.
The Minister for Works, Mines & Power.
The Minister without Portfolio.
The Principal Private Secretary to the Prime Minister.
The Joint Secretary to the Cabinet.
The Under Secretary to the Cabinet.

Plebiscite in Junagadh

The Prime Minister stated that he had sent a telegram to the Prime Minister of Pakistan inviting him to come to Delhi for discussions on the question of a plebiscite in Junagadh. In the telegram it had been stated that if the Prime Minister of Pakistan could not come to Delhi we could send Rao Babadur V.P. Menon to see him at Lahore. A reply had now been received that the Prime Minister Pakistan was unable to come and that Rao Bahadur V.P. Menon could go to Lahore but in that case the discussion would be at secretarial level only.

In the circumstances it was agreed, that there was no point in sending Rao Bahadur V.P. Menon to Lahore.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1986. Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, October 24, 1947.

No. 649. 24th October, 1947

From Liaquat Ali Khan to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

Your telegram No. 364--PRIMIN-193 of October 21st received yesterday. The position as summed up by you in regard to a PLEBISCITE or referendum in Junagadh appears to be due to misunderstanding. Our position was and still is that we are prepared to discuss conditions and circumstances in which a Plebiscite or referendum should be held in any state or states. You must have no doubt realized that Junagadh is not the only state regarding which this question arises and that is why we advisedly said “Any State or States”. We suggest therefore that Menon should come to Karachi for a preliminary discussion with Ikrmullah, Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and States to be followed subsequently if necessary by a discussion at Cabinet level.

2. We strongly repudiate that any aggressive action against the people of MANGROL or BABRIAWAD has been taken by Junagadh. Your blockade of Junagadh despite our protests has driven people to verge of starvation and they have been in some cases reduced to cutting unripe crops to feed themselves.

3. No attempt has been made to force the chief of BABRIAWAD to renounce his alleged accession to Indian Union. Our case is that BABRIAWAD like MANGROL has no right of accession at all. Latest reports from Junagadh indicate that not only you have not evacuated Sardargarh and BANTVA but have even sent your troops to occupy MANAVADAR which has already acceded to Pakistan. Surely you would not deny that we are also honour bound to protect States which have acceded to us but in view to your assurances that you would like to have a peaceful settlement of whole thing we have refrained from any act which might make such a settlement difficult. If press reports are to be believed you have put in whole brigade in Kathiawar and round about Junagadh. It may interest you to know that we have not sent a single soldier. A peaceful settlement is only possible if you give up your present aggressive attitude and withdraw your forces from territories in question in order to restore state of affairs which prevailed when Junagadh acceded to PAKISTAN.

♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦

October 25, 1947.

Indian Union Forces occupied Amrapur Thana, Khijadia and several other villages, all Junagadh territory. They disarmed loyal state police and took them prisoner along with some other people. One revenue Havildar was bayonetted. Such aggression is unwarranted, illegal and unconstitutional and may entail complications and repercussions with disastrous consequences for all concerned. Strongly protest against this movement of forces and aggressive action and request they be withdrawn immediately.

◆◆◆◆◆

1988. Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs

New Delhi, October 26, 1947.

No. 398- PRIMIN-226.

From Jawaharlal Nehru to Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan.

Your telegram No. 649 of 24th October. It is, and always has been, our view that where there is a dispute plebiscite or referendum should be held in any State or States in order to ascertain the wishes of the people. Our suggestion that Menon should go to Lahore was meant only to explain this to you and was influenced solely by considerations of your health. The holding of such referendum or plebiscite in Junagadh is matter of practical urgency because of circumstances which we have already fully explained to you. We are prepared to discuss with you at any time conditions and circumstances in which plebiscite or referendum should be held. We do not think that visit by Menon to Karachi for preliminary discussion with Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and States will very helpful, as this important matter can be settled only at Ministerial level.

2. As regards paragraphs 2 & 3 of your telegram, we do not agree with your statements. As already stated difficulties have arisen owing to Junagadh aggression. We have desired and still desire to settle Junagadh issue by peaceful means and a reference to the people of Junagadh.

◆◆◆◆◆

October 26, 1947.

No Junagadh forces have passed through Indian territory. On contrary hostile forces directed against Junagadh have been and being allowed by you passage through Indian territory to enter Junagadh villages as evidenced by occupation of Amrapur and other villages outlying Junagadh’s main territory. If our forces cannot pass through neighbouring states or Indian territory to protect our outlying islands I fail to understand how Indian territory could be used to base attacks on Junagadh by hostile or revolutionary forces having origin and support in Indian Union or how Indian forces pass through Junagadh State to Indian Union Islands inside Junagadh territory. In fact your forces from Bilkha went through Junagadh State territory to Rajkot by lorries on October 25th. I trust you will take every step to prevent forces of disorder from Indian Union being directed against Junagadh.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1990.  Extract from the Note recorded by the Governor General of India Lord Mountbatten on his meeting with the Governor General of Pakistan Mohammad Ali Jinnah.

Lahore, November, 1947.

[The only other person present was Lord Ismay, the Staff Officer of Lord Mountbatten]

Introduction

In the course of 3½ hours of the most arduous and concentrated conversation, Kashmir took up most of the time; Junagadh took next place and Hyderabad the least. We darted about between these three subjects as well as talking about the over-all policy affecting States. I have divided this note into four parts, although this was not necessarily the order in which the subjects were discussed nor of course were all the remarks made consecutively.

* * * *
Part III: Junagadh

I read out to Mr. Jinnah the following extract from a statement made by Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan, which had been published in the Statesman of Friday, 21 September:

"The correct position is that the Indian Independence Act of 1947 has left all Indian States completely free to join either one Dominion or the other or to enter into treaty relations with either. Legally and constitutionally there can be no question of putting limitation on this right of the States. Muslim League leaders before August 15 and the official spokesmen of the Pakistan Government thereafter have publicly declared their agreement with this view; and have since rigorously stood by it. No objection has been raised by Pakistan to any State acceding to the Dominion of India."

I asked Mr. Jinnah if he still stood rigorously by his Prime Minister's statement. He looked somewhat uneasy but admitted that it represented the legal position. I told him I would revert to this when talking about Kashmir, but in the meanwhile wanted to know what he proposed to do about Junagadh.

He admitted that there was no sense in having Junagadh in the Dominion of Pakistan, and said that he had been most averse from accepting this accession. He had in fact demurred for a long time, but had finally given way to the insistent appeals of the Nawab and his Dewan.

I told him that in the case of Babariawad and Mangrol, it was clearly the wish of the people that they would be in the Dominion of India, and that they had in fact signed instruments of accession to that effect. How then could he refuse them the right of accession? He said that Mangrol's accession had been forced on him, and withdrawn almost before the ink was dry. In any event he had persuaded the Nawab of Junagadh to accept legal arbitration.

I told him that the Government of India would not have minded the position so much if Junagadh had played the game and not interfered internally in these small States; but that they were oppressing the people, imposing fines and removing their grain. I pointed out that repeated telegrams had been sent protesting at this. Mr. Jinnah denied this, and stated categorically that neither Pakistan nor Junagadh had sent any soldiers or armed police into these States.

I told him that we had definite information that Junagadh had sent armed police into both of them, and that they were oppressing the people. Pandit Nehru had telegraphed to Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan about this, and the latter had undertaken to ask Junagadh to withdraw the forces.
When they had failed to do so, the Government of India had telegraphed, a few days back, saying that we would have to protect the interests of these States if the Junagadh forces were not withdrawn. Since they had not been withdrawn, India were going to put in forces to protect their interests, subject to a plebiscite being subsequently held in these States about final accession. They would go in under a flag of truce, with loud-hailers and inviting the cooperation of Junagadh authorities.

Mr. Jinnah lamented that the Government of India had not invited the co-operation of Pakistan beforehand. I pointed out that they had in fact been unable to enforce their own order and that so far as I was aware, Indian forces had been sent into these States that very day.

New Delhi, November 1, 1947.

In the communiqués issued by the Government of India on September 25 and October 5, 1947, they made clear their attitude in regard to the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan. They also made it clear that the military and police forces stationed by Junagadh in Babriawad and Mangrol should be withdrawn at once since these States had acceded to the Dominion of India. These forces have not been withdrawn.

The Government of India received reports that Junagadh authorities were taking oppressive action against the people of Babriawad as, for instance, by commandeering crops, issuing exacting orders in respect of other property, breaking into houses and looting. Food and other necessaries of life were stopped, and attempts were made to force the Chiefs of Babriawad to denounce their accession to the Dominion of India and substitute it with accession to Pakistan.

On October 21, the Prime Minister, India, informed the Prime Minister, Pakistan, that it was impossible for the Government of India to tolerate this state of affairs any longer and that they were in honour bound to take measures for the protection of territories which have acceded to India and had been promised by them protection from outside interference. In fulfillment of these commitments, they have taken over the administration of these areas. They have instructed their Regional Commissioner at Rajkot to invite the local officials of Babriawad to co-operate in the administration, if they so desire, as observers. As regards Mangrol, the Regional Commissioner has been instructed not to disturb the existing administration of the Sheikh.

Troops entered these territories under a flag of truce, equipped with loud hailers over which the identity of the occupying forces was made known to the people. The occupation was peaceful and was greeted with rejoicing by the local population. Messages of thanks for deliverance have been received from the people as well as the Talukdars of Babriawad and Mangrol.

As regards Junagadh, the policy of the Government of India was indicated in their communiqué referred to above and they propose to stand by it.

Ministry of States
New Delhi,
November 1, 1947.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Junagadh, November 8, 1947.

Communique

For the last few days the Junagadh Government has been anxiously watching the situation created by disorderly forces operating from outside who now threaten to destroy life and property and inflict heavy hardships on His Highness’ subjects. In a message from Karachi His Highness has particularly expressed a desire to the Dewan that all bloodshed of his beloved subjects should be avoided.

The position was also explained to the Junagadh public at a meeting held last evening at Dewan’s residence and it was approved that the Indian States Department should be approached to assist the Junagadh Government in the preservation of law and order pending an honourable settlement of the issue involved in Junagadh’s accession. The Regional Commissioner Rajkot has therefore been asked to make arrangements as above.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

November 8, 1947.

Very grateful for granting interview to our representatives. We accept your advice but distressed to find I am not allowed sufficient time to bring back Nawab Sahib from Karachi and take steps for people's government. Being pressed by circumstance we have asked Regional Commissioner, Rajkot to assist in preserving law and order and avoiding bloodshed against aggressive elements from outside without prejudice to honourable settlement of issues involved. His Highness from Karachi wires to avoid bloodshed at any cost of his beloved subjects and has invited me to meet him at once Karachi to discuss situation. (Repeated to His Excellency Lord Mountbatten, Mahatma Gandhi, Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister of India, Hon'ble A.K. Azad and the Governor General and Prime Minister of Pakistan.)

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

November 8, 1947.

After discussion with Samaldas Gandhi at Rajkot on November 7, Captain Harvey Jones, Senior Member of the Junagadh State Council brought certain proposals for the consideration of the Council. The Council is prepared to accept them under protest but before a final decision could be communicated through Samaldas Gandhi, it was thought necessary to ascertain the opinion of the leading members of the public. A meeting was, therefore, held this evening and the views of the leaders were unanimously expressed that instead of handing over the administration to the Indian Union through the so-called Provisional Government it should be directly given over to the Indian Union through the Regional Commissioner, at Rajkot, particularly with a view to preserving law and order which is threatened by aggressive elements from outside. This arrangement is sought pending an honourable settlement of several issues involved in Junagadh accession.

2. The Junagadh Government, therefore, have requested that in order to avoid bloodshed, hardship, loss of life and property and to preserve the dynasty, you should be approached to give your assistance to the administration. We have already wired to his Excellency Lord Mountbatten, Mahatma Gandhi, Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister of India, Hon’ble A.K. Azad and the Governor-General and Prime Minister, Pakistan. I hope you will kindly respond to this request.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1995. Telegram from the Ministry of States, Government of India to Regional Commissioner, Rajkot.

New Delhi, November 9, 1947.

Letter of Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto, Dewan of Junagadh, dated 8th November addressed to you and brought personally by Harvey Jones, Senior Member of the Junagadh State Council and Member-in-Charge of Junagadh State Forces offering immediate surrender of Junagadh Administration has been considered by the Government of India. They consider that in view of the unanimous request of the Junagadh State Council supported by the public of Junagadh whose views were ascertained by the Council at a meeting held in Junagadh on 7th November and also in view of the complete breakdown of the administration resulting in chaotic condition in the States you should take over the administration forthwith and ensure peace and order at the earliest possible moment. Pakistan Government is being informed from here.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1996. Telegram from Regional Commissioner, Rajkot (Camp) Junagadh to Ministry of States.

November 9, 1947.

Junagadh occupied peacefully at eighteen hours this evening. Camping in Upperkot. Jai Hind.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1997.  Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, November 9, 1947.

Repeated: Regional Commissioner, Rajkot.

No. PRIMIN-322. 9th November, 1947.

For Prime Minister, Pakistan.

Our Regional Commissioner at Rajkot was approached yesterday by Harvey Jones, Senior Member of the Junagadh State Council and Member-in-Charge of Junagadh State Forces with a letter from Junagadh Dewan Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto appealing to the Government of India to take over Junagadh administration. This request was made in order to save state from complete administrative breakdown and pending honourable settlement of several issues involved in Junagadh accession. Sir Shah Nawaz stated in this letter that he had already telegraphed to you to this effect. We have considered this request and with a view to avoiding chaos in the State and its repercussion have agreed to take over administration of Junagadh with immediate effect. We have issued instructions to that effect to our Regional Commissioner, Rajkot text of which runs as follows:

“Buch from Menon. Letter of Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto of Junagadh, dated 8th November addressed to you and brought personally by Harvey Jones, Senior Member of the Junagadh State Forces offering immediate handing over Junagadh administration has been considered by the Government of India. They consider that in view of the unanimous request of the Junagadh State Council supported by public of Junagadh whose views were ascertained by the Council at a meeting held in Junagadh on 7th November and also in view of the complete breakdown of the administration resulting chaotic condition in the State you should take over the administration forthwith and ensure peace and order at the earliest possible moment. Pakistan government is being informed form here.”

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1998. Minutes of an Emergent Meeting of the Cabinet held on Monday the 10th November, 1947, at 10:30 a.m.

Developments in Kashmir and Junagadh.

Case No. 392/61/47

Present
The Prime Minster.
The Deputy Prime Minister.
The Minister for Food & Agriculture.
The Minister for Commerce.
The Minister for Communications.
The Minister for Law.
The Minister for Health.
The Minister for Works, Mines & Power.
The Minister for Relief & Rehabilitation.
The Minister without Portfolio.
The Joint Secretary to the Cabinet.

The Prime Minster referred to the recent rapid developments in Kashmir and Junagadh and stressed the importance of carefully watching and following the developments in both places as they not only affected India’s external relations with Pakistan but had attracted considerable international attention.

Junagadh

The situation in Junagadh was generally discussed and the following decisions were taken:-

(1) The Government of India couldn’t agree to a joint Pakistan-India plebiscite in Junagadh.

(2) India could agree to a plebiscite under an independent body like the United Nations Organisation, and

(3) In any case it was desirable to go ahead with the plebiscite in Junagadh expeditiously.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
1999.  Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, November 10, 1947.

No. PRIMIN-324.  10th November, 1947.

For Prime Minister Pakistan.

Continuation my telegram Primin-322 of November 9th. Junagadh. In view of special circumstances pointed out by Junagadh Diwan our Regional Commissioner at Rajkot has taken temporary charge of Junagadh administration. This has been done to avoid disorder and resulting chaos. We have however no desire to continue this arrangement and wish to find a speedy solution in accordance with the wishes of the people of Junagadh. We have pointed out to you previously that final decision should be made by means of referendum or plebiscite. We would be glad to discuss this question and allied matters affecting Junagadh with representatives of your government at the earliest possible moment convenient to you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

2000.  Telegram from Prime Minister, Pakistan, Lahore.

Lahore, November 11, 1947.

For Prime Minister, India, from Prime Minister, Pakistan.

Your telegram No. PRIMIN-322 of Nov. 9th and subsequent telegram of Nov. 10th informing us that your government had taken charge of administration of Junagadh were received by me on Nov. 10th.

You are aware of the fact that Junagadh has duly acceded to Pakistan Dominion. It would therefore have been clear to you that neither the Dewan nor for that matter the Ruler himself can negotiate any settlement either temporary or permanent with Indian Dominion. Pakistan Government has given no authority to Dewan to negotiate with you and we emphatically challenge India Dominion’s right to enter Junagadh territory. Your action in taking over State administration and sending Indian troops to the State without any authorisation from Pakistan Government and indeed without our knowledge is a clear violation of Pakistan territory and breach of international law.
2. India Government’s activities on accession of Junagadh to Pakistan have all been directed to forcing the State to renounce accession and all kinds of weapons have been used by you to achieve this end. Conditions have been carefully and deliberately created by your Government in and around the State which have made the running of administration impossible. In the circumstances your plea of having taken over Junagadh administration in order to avoid disorder and resulting chaos cannot be accepted.

3. With regard to your suggestion of a conference between representatives of two dominions and Nawab of Junagadh you know fully well that we have always been prepared to discuss these and other matter arising out of problems of accession to either Dominion. It is obvious, however, that there is no point in having a conference when you have already occupied our territory by military force. The only conditions under which we can usefully attend the discussions would be immediate withdrawal of Indian troops, reinstatement of Nawab’s administration and restoration of normal conditions in and around the borders of Junagadh including the stoppage of activities of so called Provisional government.

4. We consider your action in taking charge of Junagadh administration and in sending Indian troops to occupy Junagadh to be a direct act of hostility against Pakistan Dominion. We demand that you should immediately withdraw your force, relinquish charge of administration to rightful Ruler and stop people from Union of India invading Junagadh and committing acts of violence.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Karachi, November 11, 1947.

In view of the latest developments in Junagadh culminating in the occupation of the State by the Armed Forces of the Indian Dominion it is necessary to give an up-to-date account of events.

Junagadh is a small state with an area of approximately 4,017 square miles and a population of about 800,000. It formally acceded to Pakistan on September 15, 1947. The Ruler of the State is a Muslim whose dynasty has ruled for over 300 years. The State has a seaboard with 16 ports of which at least two are ports of calls for steamers. By sea route Junagadh is approximately 300 miles from Karachi.
India's Objections
As soon as it was known that Junagadh was acceding to Pakistan, the Indian Government raised objections on the ground that Junagadh was not physically contiguous to Pakistan and that its population was predominantly Hindu. They further alleged that the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan was calculated "to cause disruption in the integrity of India by extending influence and boundaries of Pakistan" and was "an encroachment on India's sovereignty and territory and was inconsistent with friendly relations that should exist between the two Dominions.

Simultaneously with these protests, in reply to which Pakistan clearly restated its well-known attitude -- the Government of India sent detachments of Indian troops to the borders of Junagadh and encouraged neighbouring Hindu States which had acceded to India, to do likewise.

Economic Blockade
At the same time, in an attempt to starve the Junagadh State into submission a rigorous economic blockade, involving stoppage of all vital supplies including food, cloth and coal, into the State territory was imposed by the Indian Dominion, through whose territory the only railway line leading to Junagadh passes. Lines of communications, including telegraph, which were still being held by the Dominion of India in accordance with the general standstill agreement between the two Dominions, were operated in such a manner that it became impossible for the State or the Muslim population of Junagadh to communicate with the outside world. Pakistan's request to handover the communications within the State to Pakistan were ignored. Side by side, a strong Press campaign calculated to disrupt the morale of the State administration and to create panic among the population was launched both inside and outside the State.

Pakistan's Protest
On September 18, the Pakistan Government protested to the Government of India against sending troops to the borders of Junagadh and warned them that any encroachment on Junagadh territory would amount to a hostile act against Pakistan. In reply, the Government of India assured the Government of Pakistan that information about large troops concentration around Junagadh, was not correct, though it was admitted that they had sent a small force of troops as a counter-measure to "large-scale military preparations of Junagadh and supply of arms and ammunition to its Muslim subjects." Needless to say that there was no truth whatsoever in these allegations as later events have proved to the world.

Meanwhile, apparently in order to gain some semblance of justification for an otherwise completely untenable case, the Government of India persuaded certain feudatory Chiefs and Jagirdars within the State of Junagadh to sign Instruments of Accession with the Dominion of India, in spite of the fact that they had no independent status to do so and their accession followed automatically that of Junagadh whose vassals they were. These comprised a number of mulgirassia jagirdars of Babariawad, who are Hindus, and the Chief of Mangrol, who is a Muslim but who had some old standing grievance against the Nawab of Junagadh.

Accession by threat

In the first case, accession was obtained by promises of future independence and in the latter by both promises and threats. The fact that the Sheikh of Mangrol renounced his accession within an hour or two of his signature and before the Instrument had been signed by the Governor-General of India, in token of his acceptance was totally ignored.

Another line of attack was adopted by setting up the so-called "provisional government" with headquarters first at Bombay and later at Rajkot, which claimed the right to liberate the so called oppressed non-Muslim population of Junagadh State. To Pakistan's protests in this connection the Government of India, at first gave most unsatisfactory and evasive replies and subsequently gave no reply at all.

In the correspondence which passed between the two Dominions in the last week of September 1947, the Government of India's attitude remained unhelpful, though, for tactical reasons, they expressed their view that the only solution to the dispute was holding a referendum or plebiscite of the population under the supervision of the Government of India and the Junagadh State.

Premiers' Meeting

About this time at a meeting between the Prime Ministers of the two Dominions suggestions were made that the whole affairs might be settled by discussion, although legally and constitutionally the accession of Junagadh to Pakistan was unexceptionable. In an endeavor to help find a peaceful solution, the Pakistan Government readily expressed their willingness to such a discussion and even offered to discuss conditions and circumstances in which a plebiscite or referendum should be held on any state or states.

It was however, pointed out that unless troops were withdrawn by the Government of India and aggressive attitude abandoned, no useful purpose could be served by a discussion. This the Government of India never clearly agreed to do and in fact continued to bring in more troops.

Meanwhile the so-called "provisional government" began operating extensively with a large trained body of men using automatic and modern weapons including
