FOREWORD

Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi met the President of the European Council, Mr. Herman Van Rompuy, on 14th November 2014 on the sidelines of the G-20 Summit in Brisbane, Australia. This was in the year when we are celebrating ten years of the “Strategic Partnership” among the two largest democracies in the world, India and the European Union (EU).

The India-EU “Strategic Partnership” was launched in 2004 at the 5th India-EU Summit in The Hague by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, the Dutch Prime Minister Dr. Jan Balkenende, who held the Rotating Presidency of the European Council, and the President of the European Commission, Dr. Romano Prodi.

Earlier, Prime Minister Shri Atal Behari Vajpayee, Portuguese Prime Minister Mr. Antonio Guterres and the President of the European Commission, Dr. Romano Prodi held the 1st India-EU Summit in Lisbon in 2000.

Ambassador G.J. Malik, who as Third Secretary was one of our first diplomats to reach Belgium, suggests in his autobiographical work, “A Sikh Diplomat”, that the decision to set up a Mission in Brussels was to reciprocate Belgium’s gesture of sending Prince Eugene de Ligne as the first West European Ambassador in Delhi in late 1947 [“not a single West European country had an Ambassador in New Delhi – the United Kingdom had a High Commissioner but France and the Netherlands only had Charge d’Affaires”].

Be that as it may, the decision to establish the Embassy in Brussels in early 1948 was a most prescient one as in 1956 the city hosted the International Conference on the European Common Market and then become the headquarters of the European Economic Community.

Contacts between India and the European Coal and Steel Community and the European Economic Community started soon after the formation of these entities. Indeed, in this volume we are happy to reproduce the facsimile of a letter sent by our High Commission in London to them as early as 1957.

In 1962, India became one of the first Asian countries to establish diplomatic ties with the European Economic Community when Ambassador K.B. Lall presented his credentials to Mr. Walter Hallstein, the first President of the Commission of the European Economic Community. Completion of fifty years of diplomatic ties with the European Union was another compelling reason to document this rich history.

Bilateral relations between India and the EU were significantly enhanced and taken beyond trade and economic cooperation after the signing of a Cooperation Agreement in 1994. The European Parliament constituted a Delegation for Relations with India in 2007. Today, the European Union is India's largest trading partner and one of the largest sources of Foreign Direct Investment in India. India is among the EU's ten largest trading partners and Indian corporates are increasingly investing in Europe.

This publication is not the official history of India's relations with the European Union, starting with the establishment of the Embassy in Brussels, but a tracing of the legacy of the Strategic Partnership. It seeks to showcase the significant events of history pertaining to India's vibrant relations with the EU through graphics in the form of rarest of photographs to texts of key documents pledging bilateral cooperation. The book, in particular, presents snapshots of high-level visits from India to Brussels and of our leaders and Ambassadors who have made outstanding contributions to our partnership with the EU over the years.

For me the imperative to bring out this publication also has a strong personal connection.

My father, Shri S.S. Puri, had served as Ambassador of India to Belgium, Luxembourg and the EEC in the early 1980s. My following in his footsteps would make the Embassy name-board doubly singular. It already had a unique feature - Ambassador K.B. Lall's name being noted twice.

Moreover, Namrita, my wife, recalled a piece in the EASA Annual by Ms. Laila Tyabji on the setting up the Embassy in Brussels in 1948 by her father, Ambassador Badruddin Tyabji, while the Embassy's name-board began with Ambassador K.K. Chettur's arrival in 1954. This added hugely to my quest for the history of the Brussels Mission.

My children, Nooria and Sukrit, enthusiastically joined me in the excitement of working on this publication and are the source of many of the ideas that have gone into its making.

I would like to thank all those who were involved in this project, especially:

- ◉ Ms. Laila Tyabji, for confirming that it all began in 1948, and for permission to reproduce extracts from her father's autobiography, "Memoirs of an Egoist"
- ◉ National Archives of India, including Joint Secretary and Director General Shri V. Srinivas, and Assistant Director Shri Tassadque Hussain
- ◉ Photo Division of the Government of India – the archives on its website are an incredible source for landmark photographs – especially Shri Asish Maitra
- ◉ MEA archives - Joint Secretary Neena Malhotra
- ◉ The Archives of the European Union and, in particular, Mr. Hatto Kaefer, Chief of the Unit and Ms. Jocelyne Collonval, Archivist
- ◉ The audio-visual archives of the European Union – an amazing resource which has photographs of all Ambassadors who have been accredited to the EU and from high level meetings
- ◉ The websites of the European Union that contain all important documents and speeches
- ◉ Officials of the EEAS, in particular Ms. Maria Castillo-Fernandez and Mr. Peter Nagy, and the EU Mission in Delhi who helped locate photos and contacts of EU Heads of Mission
- ◉ Head of the EU Mission in Delhi and so many of the former Heads of the EU's Delhi Mission who sent us photographs of their presenting credentials

- ⊙ Mr. Alexandero Spachis, former EU Head of Mission in Nepal, who had also served in the EU Mission in Delhi
- ⊙ Ambassador P.M.S. Malik and Mr. Kiran Malik (UK)
- ⊙ Ambassador Shivshankar Menon
- ⊙ Shri Ramu Damodaran, Mrs. Myna Menon and Mr. Vijay Raghavan (New York)
- ⊙ Shri A.S. Bhasin, MEA historian
- ⊙ Joint Secretary (XP) Shri S. Akbaruddin and Director (XP) Shri Biswadip Dey
- ⊙ Shri E.P. Teki, Consultant, PD Division, MEA – without his stepping in, it would not have been possible for us to complete this book
- ⊙ Macro Graphics Pvt. Ltd. and its team members Shri Jeevan Singh Adhikari and Shri Khemchandra Sahu, who did all the design and art work for the Coffetable Book
- ⊙ And, above all, my colleagues in the Mission for their enthusiastic participation and immense contribution without which the publication would not have been possible
 - Deputy Chief of Mission Renu Sharma
 - Counsellor Pooja Kapur, Counsellor Ankan Banerjee, First Secretary Dr. Praphullachandra Sharma, Second Secretary Soumya C.
 - My Personal Secretaries Shri Rohit Babbar and Shri K. Chakrapani
 - Assistants Shri Manish Kumar and Shri Amar Nath Sharma
 - Our long serving local staff with their uncanny ability to recall momentous events, Ms. Gerda Smaers, Mr. K. Parthasarthy, Mr. R.S. Dhillon, Mr. Devender Babbar, Mr. K.S. Gyani, Mr. Satnam Singh and Mr. Azmat Syed Maqbool. Special mention needs to be made of Ms. Daniela Godinho, who painstakingly gathered much of the material and put it all together.

Memoirs of an Egoist” by Ambassador BADRUDDIN TYABJI

111 Boulevard St. Michel nowadays ►

“In the course of my duties as India’s representative on the IARA (Inter Allied Reparation Agency, headquarters of this organization was in Brussels), I paid a couple of visits to Germany. In Berlin, the head of our military mission was Khub Chand, a member of the UP cadre of the ICS. Khub Chand had been given the honorary rank of Major General in his capacity as head of the Indian military mission in Berlin.” [Ambassador Tyabji on his other duties in Brussels]

“I thought I was fortunate in having in the de Lignes, the local representatives of the country to which I was being accredited, persons of refinement and a great deal of experience. But their ideas of what an Embassy should be were extremely old-fashioned. I was therefore led on by them to negotiate for the renting of a large mid-nineteenth century mansion in Brussels for our Embassy there. The house we had taken, 111 Boulevard St Michel, belonged to Lady Phipps, widow of a former British Ambassador. She was, I think, of Russian origin but had lived in Brussels for many years. After an uncomfortable few months stay at 111 Boulevard St Michel, we were lucky to find two small houses (within ten minutes walk of each other) on the newly constructed and fashionable Avenue Franklin Roosevelt. One of them we took for our residence and made the other our Chancery.”

CREST.

To His Majesty the King of the Belgians.

Great and Good Friend,

Being desirous of maintaining and strengthening the cordial relations which exist between our two countries, I have decided to accredit to Your Majesty as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, Shri Nedyam Raghavan, a distinguished citizen of India. The qualities which distinguish him assure me of the care which he will take to acquit himself of the high Mission which is entrusted to him so as to obtain Your Majesty's confidence and thus merit my approbation. It is in this conviction that I request Your Majesty to receive him with Your usual graciousness and to attach faith and complete credit to all that he will say to You on my behalf and specially when he will convey to Your Majesty the assurance of my high esteem and my constant friendship.

"4 September 1961

London (AFP),

The Government of India has decided to transfer to Brussels, Headquarters of the Institutions of the Common Market, the post of General Commissioner for Economic Affairs in Europe which was, until now, based in London.

This decision has been taken due to the increasing interest of India in the Common Market subsequent to the UK request for accession.

The present General Commissioner for Economic Affairs in Europe is Mr. M.T. Swaminathan who will soon finish his term. His successor will start functions in Brussels.

The Indian Diplomatic Service has had two General Commissioners for Economic Affairs: the one in London – which will be transferred to Brussels – and the one in Washington, created to promote American investments in India, and which has just been extinguished with India's third quadrennial plan coming into force."

Excerpt from the Joint Declaration of the 1st India-EU Summit

The first Summit between the EU and India was held in Lisbon, Portugal on 28th June 2000. The EU was represented by the Prime Minister of Portugal Antonio GUTERRES in his capacity as President of the European Council assisted by the Secretary General/High Representative for Common Foreign and Security Policy Javier SOLANA, and the President of the European Commission Romano PRODI. India was represented by Prime Minister Shri Atal Behari VAJPAYEE.

The Portuguese Ministers Jaime GAMA (Foreign Affairs) and José Mariano GAGO (Science and Technology) and Vitor RAMALHO (deputy Minister for Economy), the European Commissioners Christopher PATTEN (External Relations), Pascal LAMY (Trade) and Philippe BUSQUIN (Research), as well as the Indian Ministers Jaswant SINGH (External Affairs), Yashwant SINHA (Finance), Murasoli MARAN (Commerce and Industry) and Pramod MAHAJAN (Information and Technology) also participated in the Summit.

The Summit agreed on the following Declaration

On this historic occasion, we resolve that in the 21st century the EU and India shall build a new strategic partnership founded on shared values and aspirations characterised by enhanced and multi-faceted co-operation.

We, based on the shared universal values of democracy and the respect for human rights, rule of law and fundamental freedoms, stress our commitment to promote socio-economic development and prosperity, as well as international peace, stability and security. We also derive strength from our traditions of diversity, plurality and tolerance.

We are convinced that the process of economic reform and liberalisation in India leading to enhanced and sustained growth on the one hand, and gradual integration and enlargement of the EU on the other, provide us with an excellent opportunity to launch a new phase of constructive and mutually beneficial partnership.

We reaffirm our commitment to the strengthening and deepening of our consultations and enhancing our co-ordination on bilateral, regional and multilateral issues of common concern

EU-India Partnership in the 21st Century

1. We believe that the EU and India must rise to the occasion to work together towards a world in which the aspirations of our people can be fulfilled. To this end, we re-affirm our commitment to democracy, the respect of human rights and fundamental freedoms as well as the promotion of peace, stability and security, and the encouragement of socio-economic development and prosperity.
2. Based on our common shared values we recognise the need to build a coalition of interests in order to meet the challenges of the 21st century. The EU and India are important partners in the shaping of the emerging multipolar world.
3. It is in this context that we resolve to enhance our political dialogue, to promote mutual understanding and to improve co-ordination on political and economic issues of bilateral, regional and multilateral dimensions.

Excerpt from the India-EU Strategic Partnership Communication presented at the 5th India-EU Summit

1. INTRODUCTION

India is changing, dramatically and fast. Its democracy is healthier and more vibrant than ever, as the recent general elections demonstrated. India is increasingly engaging with other players on the world stage and has made great progress in foreign and domestic policy issues.

In recent years, the relationship with the European Union (EU) has developed exponentially in terms of shared vision, goals, and challenges. This Communication identifies the challenges, opportunities and expectations for international, economic and development policies between the EU and India. It suggests areas for future strategic co-operation and a streamlining of the institutional architecture. The full analysis and the detail of proposals contained in this Communication are set out in the attached Commission Services document.

1.1. India today: the state of play

India is an increasingly important international player and regional power. It has considerably strengthened relationships with the US, China and ASEAN. Its huge size and economic and military clout make it the major power in South Asia. Peace talks with Pakistan will, if successful, bring enormous benefit to the whole region. India's economic growth has also been impressive, and the economy has benefited greatly from market-oriented and open policies. But these benefits have not been spread evenly amongst its citizens - the large majority of the population still live on less than $2 a day and some regions have sped ahead of others, India is also a country of great ethnic, religious and cultural diversity.

Relations with the EU have strengthened since the first EU-India Summit in Lisbon in 2000, with ever more meetings at all levels – including business and civil society - and extensive dialogue and cooperation on political, geo-political and multilateral issues, economic and trade questions.

2. A STRATEGIC PARTNERSHIP: ANALYSIS AND PROPOSALS

The EU and India already enjoy a close relationship, based on shared values and mutual respect. A new strategy should be guided by the following objectives: to promote peace, stability, democracy, human rights, the rule of law and good governance, inter alia by fighting terrorism and illicit trafficking; to co-operate on fighting poverty, inequality and social exclusion, and on sustainable development, environment protection, and climate change; and to enhance economic interaction and secure a strengthened international economic order.

2.1. Improving International Cooperation

2.1.1. Multilateralism

Since the EU and India are increasingly seen as forces for global stability, the focus of relations has shifted from trade to wider political issues. Both are supporters of the multilateral system and already cooperate effectively in the UN and other fora. This should be reinforced by a strategic alliance for the promotion of an effective multilateral approach.

The EU and India should co-ordinate and harmonise positions in the preparation, negotiation and implementation of major multilateral conventions and conferences (on security, trade, environment, development and human rights) and facilitate bridge building with other United Nations (UN) members.

The EU and India should also hold continuous dialogue on organisational and institutional restructuring and reform of the United Nations, in particular as regards the UN High-Level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change and on the implementation of its likely outcome. Work should be reinforced to promote effective multilateralism, especially on implementation of international obligations and commitments and the strengthening of global governance.

2.1.2. Conflict prevention and post-conflict reconstruction

India is an important partner in conflict prevention and post-conflict reconstruction. The EU should therefore explore means of formalising regular cooperation and further engaging India in this area.

Discussions between senior officials should develop specific initiatives in the following areas: training for the civilian components of peace-keeping missions; seminars and other activities designed to facilitate conflict prevention or post-conflict management; joint support of UN conflict prevention and peace-building efforts, including as regards improved analytical capacities, comprehensive preventive strategies and greater co-operation between EU and Indian components of UN peacekeeping missions.

Consultation should take place before major UN debates on peacekeeping, conflict management and in the preparation of major peace conferences. The EU and India could also co-sponsor a UN conference on conflict prevention, peace-building and post-conflict management. It would also be worth initiating a dialogue on the contribution of regional integration to conflict prevention.

2.1.3. Non-Proliferation of weapons of mass destruction

We should seek to increase cooperation on the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, where the EU and India have very similar positions. This could include expert meetings to reinforce the consistency and effectiveness of export control measures, in particular for dual use goods. Political dialogue on non-proliferation should also be reinforced.

2.1.4. The fight against terrorism and organised crime

The EU should cooperate more concretely with India in the fight against terrorism and organised crime, including in UN fora. The Council could reflect on including India in its list of 'priority countries' for a 'strategic cooperation agreement' with Europol. The EU should also increase technical cooperation, through experts meetings and exchange of information and expertise in security-related areas such as money laundering, drug trafficking and chemical precursors. A dialogue should be initiated on document security, civil aviation and maritime security.

Your Excellency,

I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Government of the Republic of India have appointed as their Representative to the European Economic Community Shri K. B. Lall, who will have the honour of presenting this letter of credence to you. Shri K. B. Lall has the personal rank of Ambassador.

The Government of the Republic of India desire to establish by this step formal relations and to provide for the development of cooperation between India and the European Economic Community.

I have the honour to request the European Economic Community to receive Shri K. B. Lall as the Indian Representative and to arrange for him to be accorded such facilities as may be proper and necessary for the discharge of his duties.

I have the honour to be, with the highest consideration,

Your Excellency's obedient servant,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Speech of Ambassador K. B. Lall at the Presentation of his Credentials to the President of the E.E.C., Mr. Walter Hallstein on March 2, 1962

Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure to have the privilege of presenting to you letters from His Excellency Shri Jawaharlal Nehru, the Minister of External Affairs of India, accrediting me as the head of the Indian Mission to the European Economic Community.

The presentation of these credentials marks the establishment of formal diplomatic relations between the Community and the Government of India. This seems to us an event of some importance because it is the first time that relations of this character are being established between the Community and a developing country in Asia.

The people and the Government of India have been greatly impressed by the progress which the member countries of the Community have made since the Community came into being. Yours is a splendid example of what can be achieved in partnership and co-operation.

We in India have been striving, over past years, to achieve, through democratic processes and by the increasing application of science and technology, an adequate rate of all round balanced growth so as to improve the living and working conditions of our people and provide new opportunities for social and economic progress. In this endeavour we have received valuable aid and assistance in diverse ways from some of the member states of the Community: financial accommodation, technical collaboration and increasing supplies of investment goods have made a significant contribution to our industrial growth and to the diversification of the Indian economy. The investment programme and the targets of production envisaged in our Third Five Year Plan and the broadening requirements of our economy in subsequent years - will demand of our people even greater efforts than before and will provide wider opportunities for closer economic relations between the Community and my country.

We have naturally watched with interest the role played by the Community in strengthening the economy of its member states and fostering their capacity to contribute to economic expansion and social progress both at home and abroad. The establishment of diplomatic relations between India and the Community is an indication of the growing awareness of the possibilities which the progress of the Community holds out not only for the prosperity of its own peoples but also for the expansion of international trade, and for the acceleration of economic growth and social progress in developing economies.

My Government is fully aware of the sympathetic interest which you, Mr. President, and the members of your Commission have in the problems of development not only in Europe and Africa but also in other parts of the world including Asia. You, Mr. President, have, on several occasions, emphasised that to help foster sustained growth in developing countries, the member states of the Community will need to provide them not only credit and technical assistance but also growing outlets for the raw materials and processed goods which these countries can export. Now that the member states of the community are moving towards a common commercial policy, we have every hope that the perspective in which you view these problems will facilitate adjustments and adaptations directed towards securing continuing expansion in trade exchanges between the Community and developing countries including India.

It is a matter of concern to my Government that, at present, the composition and magnitude of Indian exports to the Community neither reflect recent developments in our productive capacity nor satisfy, to the extent they could, the growing demand for industrial and consumer goods within the member states. It will be the earnest endeavour of my mission to seek access for Indian products to the Community on a widening basis so as to facilitate increasing inter-change of goods and services between member states of the Community and India.

With the current negotiations for the entry of the United Kingdom into the Community, your concern with our problems, Mr. Presidents will have inevitably increased. In this connection, I venture to invite your attention to the pattern of economic relations which have grown, over a period of time, between India, on the one hand and members of the commonwealth, more particularly the United Kingdom, on the other. The foreign exchange earned by the export of Indian products to the markets of the Commonwealth and the facilities which India enjoys for promoting the sale of its new manufactures in the United Kingdom constitute a vital resource for the country's economic progress. The apprehension that the enlargement of the Community may restrict rather than enlarge outlets for exports from developing countries, needs to be removed. The Government of India trust that while searching for solutions to protect the interests of Commonwealth countries, it will be possible for the Commission to direct its thoughts towards concerting a purposeful programme which will convince millions of people struggling to devise means for a better life and to make their contribution to the expansion of international exchanges that their efforts will receive a powerful stimulus from the new arrangements which are being forged in Europa.

I take this opportunity to assure you, Mr. President, that it will be the earnest endeavour of my Mission to explore with the Community and its member states ways and means of expanding economic activities and developing closer and mutually fruitful relations between the Community and my country.

Address made by President Mr. Hallstein on the occasion of the presentation of the Credentials by Ambassador K. B. Lall on March 2, 1962

I/1985/62-F

Address * made by President HALLSTEIN on the occasion of the presentation of his letters of credence by His Excellency Ambassador Krishen Behari LALL, Head of the Indian Mission to the European Economic Community. -2 MAR 1962

Mr. Ambassador,

It is with very special pleasure that I receive from your hands the letters by which your Government accredits you as Head of the Indian Mission to the European Economic Community.

The need for closer contacts between India and the Community made itself felt some time ago. There had previously been exchanges of views between the staff of the Commission and officials of your Government both in Brussels and in New Delhi. On several occasions, one of them quite recent, your Government's Embassy to His Majesty the King of the Belgians has been kind enough to provide an opportunity for conversations on subjects of common interest to the Community and to India.

It is obvious that the gradual establishment of the European Economic Community and the important negotiations at present going on with Great Britain will make it even more advisable for us to be able to engage in rapid discussions on matters of importance, and I look forward to their being fruitful.

It is the privilege and the heavy responsibility of your Government, Mr. Ambassador, to guide the destinies of a great country, a great people. Your country is today in the midst of a fascinating experiment. It wishes to prove to the world that prosperity is a goal which can be reached without failing to maintain respect for human values. To break through the vicious circle of poverty you have not hesitated to undertake programmes and to make plans of a boldness which enthalls us.

I hope, Mr. Ambassador, that you will find in your work with the Community much evidence of good will to help you attain the objectives being pursued by your country.

I hope, too, that the information you bring us will lead us to an even better understanding of the problems facing your country. I need not repeat here that the European Community is in no way an entity which intends to live in and for itself. By its nature it must seek the answer to problems of development in expansion - expansion of trade, which should make it possible to earn the money needed to pay for imports with which to equip the developing countries; expansion of the finance available to enterprises in these countries which welcome European capital; expansion of the technical assistance which must supply the human basis for economic development.

This, Mr. Ambassador, is obviously a vast task, and its difficulties must not be minimised. Mutual understanding is necessary between those in your country and those over here who are responsible for seeing that this task is brought to a successful conclusion. I know how familiar you are with the Community and with the way it works, and I am happy to find in you a partner with whom the Community will be able to embark on fruitful co-operation.

Mr. Ambassador, I extend to you a cordial welcome among us here, and I wish you every success in carrying out your important and noble mission.
